Depend upon it, therefore, that the new Boundary Treaty is one upon which we may fairly congratulate both England and America. The peaceful relations already springing out of it are full of fruitful promise of good: a large amount of irritation is already allayed—a cordial spirit of goodwill has suddenly sprung up between the two people—and the banquet given at New York to our able and excellent Minister has set the seal of friendship upon the bond of peace.

THE ORATION AT CHRIST'S HOSPITAL.

CHRIST'S HOSPITAL.

Christ's Hospital is one of the large massive buildings that grace the interior of London. It is situated to the north-west of St. Paul's, at the head of Newgate-street. The building, of itself, is a rich and magnificent pile; and is built on the former site of a monastery of Franciscans, or "Grey" Friars. This order of Christians was established in the beginning of the thirteenth century by the famous Francis of Assisi; and was formally confirmed by a bull of Pope Honorius III., in 1224. Many valuable donations, at various times, were bestowed upon this establishment, and, in consequence, great additions were made to the edifice. Amongst others, Sir Richard Whittington, the honoured and famous Mayor of London, added one room, as a library, to the monastery. This room was one hundred and twenty-nine feet in length, and thirty feet wide; it was called throughout with wainscot; and was furnished with twenty-eight desks and eight double settees of the same material; it was supplied with books three years afterwards, at an expense of £556 10s. The monastery continued to flourish for more than three centuries, during which it was held. As many distinguished persons are said to have been interred in the monastery as have been buried in Westminster Abbey. One writer, alluding to this fact, computes the number of monuments erected to the memory of distinguished persons as follows:—four queens, one duke, four duchesses, three earls, two countesses, eleven barons, four baronesses, three lord mayors, thirty-six knights, and two bishops, besides many other mementos with which it was adorned. After the Reformation the convent was formally surrendered into the hands of Henry VIII. As might be conceived, the result was destructive to the after sacredness of the church; for the building, an immense and splendid pile, some three hundred feet in length, and eighty-nine feet broad, was, in the first instance, used as a warehouse for the goods found in the prizes taken at sea from the French! and its rich and beautiful ornaments and elegant furniture, sacred utensils, records, &c., were destroyed during this period of violence and desecration. When, at last, age and disease had frightened the ruthless king out of many of those sanguinary traits of his character, he sought to atone for a life of impiety; and made over the church of Grey Friars, and the hospital of St. Bartholomew, in Smithfield, to the mayor and commonalty of London, for the relief of the numerous poor who were shorn of their usual support by the dissolution of the Catholic religious houses. Henry, after this, erected the two parishes of St. Nicholas, in the Shambles, and St. Ewen into a new parish, under the name of Christ Church; and to this he appointed the church of the old monastery to serve as the parish church. He endowed it with lands to the value of 500 marks yearly. It does not, however, appear that the first "defender of the faith" had his intention of bestowing the revenue of the monks upon the poor carried religiously into effect. The intention had been, by royal order, proclaimed at St. Paul's Cross by Ridley, bishop of Rochester; but, some years after, this excellent prelate—then removed to London—found himself constrained, in a discourse which he preached before the King, to direct the attention of his hearers to the deplorable destitution of large classes of the population, and to call upon those in authority to devise some means for relieving them. So soon as the service was concluded, the King sent for Ridley, and, receiving him alone in his closet, made him sit down, and forced him, "in spite of his teeth," according to the phraseology of an old chronicler, to remain covered in the royal presence. He then entered into conversation with him, stated how deeply he had been impressed with his sermon, and declared his determination, in consequence, of devising measures wherewith to remedy the evil as far as should be in his power. The result was that Ridley received his Majesty's commands to enter immediately into communication upon the subject with the mayor and the other city authorities. Upon full and careful consideration, the poor, to be provided for, were divided into three classes. These were:—first, the poor by impotency, including orphan children, the aged, the blind, the lame, and the diseased; second, the poor by casualty, including the wounded soldier, the decayed householder, and persons suffering under acute bodily ailments; and third, the thriftless poor, including rioters, vagabonds, and idlers. To the orphans, enumerated in the first class, were assigned the house of the late Grey Friars. Since the period of its institution the revenues of this hospital have been, from time to time, greatly augmented; and, at present, the annual income cannot be less than £40,000. The management of Christ Hospital is vested in the body of governors, viz., the lord mayor and court of aldermen, in right of their offices; of twelve common councilmen chosen by lot; and of all benefactors to the amount of £400 and upwards. The hospital affords maintenance to upwards of one thousand boys, who are admitted on presentations from the governors, to the number of one hundred and fifty annually. The greater number of the buildings have been renewed since the foundation of the hospital, and scarcely any part of the old monastery remains. We last week presented our readers with a portrait of a Blue Coat Boy dressed in full costume. This dress is of antique origin, and, according to Mr. Brayley, is the full costume or garb of the ancient fathers or monks. Mr. Brayley describes the dress as follows:—"What is called the coat was the ancient tunic; this is of a dark blue cloth, fitted close to the body, but with loose skirts. The under coat, or 'yellow,' as it is technically termed, was the sleeveless or under tunic of the monastery. The girdle round the waist was, likewise, a monastic appendage, but the breeches are a subsequent addition.* Yellow worsted stockings, a very small, round, flat cap of black worsted, and a neckband complete the dress."

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

FRANCE.—The King of the French was expected on Sunday at St. Cloud, previous to going to Fontainbleau, unless the wetness of the season should prevent the royal family spending the vintage at the latter place. The revolution in Servia is still the principal news. It seems that Prince Michael refuses the terms offered him by the successful insurrectionists. The four European consuls remonstrate in his favour; whether the Russian consul does so sincerely is much doubted. But the victorious insurrectionists have published a proclamation, announcing that it was their intention, and that of the people, merely to come to Belgrade to present their grievances to the Ottoman commissary, and that, not being able to prevent them doing so, Prince Michael fled, and abandoned the country without a chief or a government. In this state of things, the primates of the people were forced to organize a provisional Government, which the Commissary and Commandant of the Porte approved. At the head of this provisional Government were Petronicwitsch and Wucthish. All people and authorities were summoned to obey them, until such time as the Porte should decide. The four consuls had interfered in favour of Prince Michael and the family of Obrenowitsch, but Schekib Effendi repulsed the consuls as merely commercial agents, and asserted the right of the sultan to re-constitute the government of Servia as he pleased. Most of the German Potentates who met at Cologne have regained their homes. The King of Prussia was, by the last accounts, inspecting the projected fortifications of Rastadt.

SPAIN.—Madrid papers and letters of the 18th, together with Barcelona journals of the 19th, are wholly devoid of interest.

MADRID, Sept. 18.—About three weeks since a commission was formed by order of the Spanish Government to inquire into the utility of a project submitted on the part of a British company by Mr. Henry Misley, for the purpose of rendering available to the state, for the reconstruction of its navy, the valuable oak timber of the magnificent royal forests of Santander, Galicia, &c. The company offer to furnish the Government for an indefinite number of years with all the materials necessary for the construction and arming of seven ships of war, including steamers, per annum; receiving in exchange a proportionate number of oak trees, which the Government are to furnish at the usual selling price of the part of the country where they are situated. The company only proposes to cut two or three per cent. per annum of the trees marked fit for the purpose by a Government engineer, so that copsewood may arise, and to plant nurseries for their replacement, beginning in the splendid forests of Liébana, in Santander, where some of the oldest and largest oaks in the world are to be found. They offer to erect saw-mills, railroads, common roads, canals, slips, stores, foundries, &c., to be given up to Government, on a valuation, at the conclusion of the contract; engaging also to allow five per cent. per annum additional on the value of the timber taken, till the first year's price be doubled, and further to allow of two per cent. per annum on the cost of the iron material fabricated for the equipment of the vessels, until the cost of the manufactured metal be brought down to three per cent. They propose to obtain the other materials of construction, provision, and ammunition in Spain by public contract, and to deliver an account of the same to the Government, as well as the wages of shipwrights, labourers, soldiers, and sailors employed, at the actual cost, and a half per cent. commission thereon. They will establish, on account of the Government, wherever it may please, a manufactory of naval steam-engines; furnish the royal docks and workshops with the newest models and most approved machinery; and instruct the pupils whom the Government may wish to employ in the maritime steam service. During the first and second years the company will furnish the royal arsenals with sufficient timber to provide materials for construction in future years; and at the same time engage to furnish 14 vessels-of-war (in fulfilment of the strict terms of the contract), to be fitted up in British ports. They demand the exclusive right of cutting in the royal forests; also of cutting timber fit for ship-building in forests appertaining to the pueblos of Spain—paying, of course, according to valuation; to be guaranteed and protected in all things by the state, which shall furnish soldiers to the company for all defensive purposes. The company offer to employ these troops in their productive works, and pay, feed, and clothe them, while so occupied; guarantees to be exchanged; accounts to be settled once a year, and all misunderstandings to be arranged by arbitration. Such is the project for raising Spain once more to the rank of a naval power in Europe. It is already taken up and warmly defended against the narrow envious spirit of Espanolisme, which would crush it as a "foreign invention," and, if the matters of "the guarantees" can be satisfactorily arranged, we may expect to see Spain again in possession of an Armada on the waters. The royal oak woods in Galicia, which furnished the unfortunate "Invincible," in the days of Philip II., are now inaccessible only for want of a road, and this the Government has not resources to make! In fact, without the help of foreigners the oaks of Spain might rot from age to age on their mountains. In the forest of Liébana alone it is stated that from 22 to 24 millions of cubic feet of oak fit for ship building exist. In the Sierras de Segura alone 48 millions are reckoned on; and throughout Spain it is calculated that there are fully 200 millions of cubic feet suitable for naval purposes. This is but one of the many materials of national wealth yet waiting the hand of enterprise to turn to good account in Spain.

SAN SEBASTIAN, Sept. 25.—Much speculation and many inquiries have been caused by a sudden Government order for all the disposable muskets in this place to be sent to Cadiz. The Nervion, 14-gun brig, lately stationed at Passages, has sailed for the capital of Andalusia with the required arms, and her captain, before she left, proceeded to Madrid for instructions. Some quidnuncs have decided that the arms are for the Philippine Islands, others speak of Cuba, and many mention Monte Video, or Andalusia. The general opinion in these provinces is, that another outbreak is at hand. The melancholy intelligence of the loss of the emigrant ship Pauline Rose, off Monte Video, has reached this place: she had 250 Basque emigrants on board, of whom only 40 were saved.

PORTUGAL.—Lisbon, Sept. 19.—The past week has offered little of interest worth communicating. A partial change of Ministry has taken place, the re-modelling of which has served more for polemical controversy in the different journals than of any real utility to the State. In other countries a suspension of hostilities during a ministerial crisis is ever observed. Here it is quite the reverse. Calumny is heaped upon those who retire from office, as well as upon those who are about to commence their disagreeable career—all are alike victims of its baneful and rank breath. On the 14th a project was presented by Senhor Mousinho Albuquerque, signed by a number of Deputies, containing the necessary measures to be adopted for the immediate forming of roads throughout the kingdom, as the means of increasing the public revenue, by giving a stimulus to commerce, and of facilitating the transport of detachments of troops to all parts of the country, for the suppression of robberies and depredations of the most heinous nature, which every day furnishes accounts of.

The Lisbon mail of the 19th inst. brings news of the reconstruction of the Portuguese ministry, in such a manner as appears to secure the confidence of all moderate men; so that we may hope to see more efficient measures adopted for the support of credit, and for the promotion of useful reforms—amongst the foremost of which the reform of the tariff stands prominently in the first rank. If the finances can be placed on a safe footing, so as to restore national credit, there will be less difficulty in reducing the tariff; but, without this preliminary step, we must confess we have little faith in the result of the negotiations for reciprocal concessions in the commercial intercourse between this country and Portugal.

GERMANY.—Stuttgardt, Sept. 22.—The Zollverein has now been sitting some weeks in the capital of Wirtemberg, and as yet no final decision has been come to as to the reported increase of the tariff of the League. The expectation that the duties on British yarns, cottons, and woollens will be increased has not yet been realised, for a strong difference of opinion reigns on this question amongst the representatives of the union, now sitting in daily consultation at the Ministry of Foreign Affairs. It is anticipated that the prohibitive cry will not go very far at present, but fears are entertained that the future may be compromised to the detriment of English interests. Although there is every ground to hope that the Congress now sitting here will not come to any very hostile decision against English manufacturers and merchants, still it is impossible to entertain any delusion as to the unfriendly feelings with which German politicians regard our naval mercantile preponderance, and the union will find very great difficulties to stem the popular torrent which is setting in for the exclusion of our productions from the German markets.

The King of Prussia has had a gold medal struck in his own dominions, for the purpose of presentation to the most distinguished artists who may come under his especial approval. It is of solid gold, weighing 30 dwts., and is very tasteful in its arrangement. One of these has been bestowed upon Mr. Benjamin Wyon, in testimony of his Majesty's approval of the gold medal struck in commemoration of his visit to England, and sponsorship of the Prince of Wales. This is the second mark of royal approbation received by our countryman from the Prussian dominions.

THE HAGUE, Sept. 25.—The banns of marriage of the Hereditary Grand Duke of Saxe Weimar and of the Princess Sophia of the Netherlands were published to-day for the first time. It is expected that a programme of the festivities on this joyful occasion will shortly be published. Accounts from Surinam of the 9th of July have been received here, which were extremely favourable. The inhabitants of the colony were greatly surprised at the statements given in some Dutch papers of a rebellious spirit which they pretend exists there. Surinam is as tranquil as can be wished, and of seditious writing and agitators there is no trace whatever.

HANOVER, Sept. 20.—Yesterday evening, for the first time since the Queen's death, the King appeared in the theatre, when the opera of Fidelio was performed. The joy of the public at seeing their sovereign after so long an interval, and just on his recovery from a severe illness, was expressed in loud acclamations on his Majesty's entrance. He, however, did not appear to be well, and stayed only till the end of the first act.

DENMARK.—ELSINORE, Sept. 18.—The ship William, Captain Coppen, from Dundee, which cleared out here to-day on her voyage from Dundee to Narva, picked up near Lindesnas nine Russian sailors, part of the crew of a Russian ship of the line, who had been drifting about at sea for four-eight hours on logs of wood. The captain saw the ship of the line at the distance of three miles, and observed some men who had clambered up the sides. A Norwegian steamer was going to save the people, but it was probable that the greater part of the men comprising the crew were drowned.

RUSSIA.—ST. PETERSBURG, Sept. 13.—The Emperor set out to day on an extensive tour in the interior of the empire. We learn that his Majesty goes post to Moscow, thence to Wosnessonsk to review the troops assembled there, thence to the ports of the Black Sea, particularly Odessa and Sebastopol, whence he will return by way of Warsaw and St. Petersburg.

Sept. 16.—We have received here the melancholy news that the greater part of the city of Kasan has been destroyed by fire. It is stated that 1200 houses, 400 of which were of stone, 12 churches, the extensive magazine, and the university are reduced to ashes. The details have not yet come to hand. The second St. Petersburg insurance company is a great loser by this fire. The shares, which were lately sold at 410 to 415 rubles, are now sold at 230 rubles. Several houses, and 40 warehouses with goods, have been destroyed by fire in the city of Idsoiloff.

SMYRNA AND MALTA.—The British corvette, Beacon, Captain Graves, arrived at Smyrna on the 30th Aug. This officer had completed the survey of the coast of the Cyclades, and was shortly to proceed on a similar mission to Candia. The new Catholic church built in the village of Boudja, and placed under the protection of France, was inaugurated on the 4th by the Archbishop Massabini, in presence of the French Consul-General and an immense concourse of people from Smyrna and the environs. The accounts from Malta of the 16th ult. announce the arrival there on the 13th, from Beyrout, of Lord Castlereagh and suite in the Phœnix steamer. Lieutenant Place, of the Queen, had lately been tried by court-martial and honourably acquitted. The squadron was expected to go to sea in a few days.

TURKEY.—CONSTANTINOPLE, Sept. 7.—Selim Bey, the commissioner of the Porte, arrived here from Syria on the 30th ult. In his report on the state of the Lebanon, he accuses the Maronite Patriarch of coercing the inhabitants, by imprisonment and other violent means, in order to obtain their suffrages in favour of the appointment over them of a member of the house of Shehab. These accusations, however, are a mere echo of those that have been brought against Selim Bey, and there is no end to the mutual recrimination in the affair. Baron Sturmer, the Austrian Internuncio, left Constantinople in a steamer, for Trieste, on the 1st instant. In his final audience with the Sultan, he presented him with a memorial, in which he complains, in the strongest manner, the abandonment of the principles of the Hatti Sherif of Guchané. Izzet Pacha, the late Grand Vizier, has been appointed to the Government of Adrianople, and Sayd Pacha will be sent to Angora. There are several other unimportant changes in the internal administration of the empire. The measures of Patronowics, the ex-Minister of Milosch, for organising a popular movement against the existing Government in Servia, have been completely successful. On the arrival of Shekib Effendi (the Turkish commissioner) at Belgrade, Protics, the ex-Minister of the Interior, had sent a summons to each of the seventeen districts of which Servia is composed, directing them to send deputies with instructions on their part to complain of the incendiary proceedings of the individuals who had been lately recalled from exile, and among whom is Patronowics himself, and to present an numerous petition for their banishment once more and for ever from the country. On receiving these instructions the municipal heads of fifteen out of the seventeen districts (which it appears are altogether under the influence of Patronowics) immediately sent deputations, consisting of large bodies of men, who were directed to proceed to Shekib Effendi, and instead of petitioning as they had been desired, to urge in the strongest manner, not only the dismissal of the present Ministry, but the deposal of Prince Michael himself. At the departure of the Tatar, now five days ago, these deputations were flocking from all quarters into Belgrade, and this simultaneous demonstration will be decisive, it is anticipated, of the fate of the Administration. M. Wachinhoff, the Russian Minister, is said to have been taken by surprise, and to be now quite at a loss how to conduct himself. The result must be the overthrow of Russian influence in Servia, and the consequent loss of the vantage-ground afforded by it for the encouragement and spread of disaffection and revolt throughout European Turkey.

GREECE.—PATRAS, Sept. 7.—Nothing of importance is there to communicate except that the editor of the Age having written in his paper an article against the Bavarians, some officers of that nation, in the service of Greece, entered, in the most insolent and arbitrary manner, the house of the editor, and, with their swords drawn, demanded of him the name of the writer of the article, and, not being able to take the whole of the article, seized a small piece of it, which happened to be on his table. The editor being opposed to their unjust demand they walked off. But this case being made known in the capital there was a considerable excitement among the people, and some of the soldiers repaired to the editor's house, offering him their valour and protection. The curiosity which this illegal action of the German officers has caused among the Greeks is much greater than it was before, and, indeed, one may easily conclude, from the existing circumstances, that unless the Bavarians leave altogether Greece, something of a serious nature will happen between the contending parties. There is another case, rather curious, which is, that some thief has stolen a writing desk of Mr. Christides, the Minister of the Interior, in which he had all his secret correspondence, and about 600 drachms in money. This has caused, of course, a great agitation to the Minister, fearing he some day his secret correspondence should come to light, while he wished it to remain in darkness. The Turks, according to the accounts from the frontiers, seem to collect or send troops to Old Arta, Epirotglia, and Larissa. Their intentions are not yet known, but one may suppose that they have no other object but Greece. Government, however, has done nothing, and made no increase to the already existing force on the frontier. The ministry of Christides is doing nothing; all affairs are at a stand still, and nothing is doing in Greece, while the misery of the people is going on increasing. The people of Greece much desire to get rid of a Ministry, which although it has been the work of boast of M. Piscatory in France in having replaced the English C. of Mavrocordate by it, it has proved incapable of governing Greece. The negotiations pending it Constantinople about the commercial treaty have made no progress whatever; nor is there any hope of doing anything under the present administration of the Ottoman Porte.

* Mr. Brayley seems to be in error; the breeches here alluded to were, and are still, worn by the fathers.

NAVAL AND MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

PORTSMOUTH, Sept. 25.—The Imaum, fitted for the receiving depot at Jamaica, and to receive the pendant of Commodore Byng, sailed this day under the temporary command of Lieutenant Joseph Mosley.

The Royal George yacht, Captain Lord Adolphus Fitzclarence, leaves Woolwich to-morrow for this port; on her arrival she will take her former moorings, and be dismantled during the approaching winter. Commander F. Wood and Lieutenant Fanshaw are to receive their promotion from the yacht, the former to the rank of post captain, and the latter as commander.

The Salamander, steam-frigate, Commander Hammond, is hourly expected at Spithead from Woolwich, to embark the Right Hon. Henry Ellis, for Rio Janeiro. The Salamander will continue on the South American station.

The Curacoa corvette, Captain Jenkin Jones, is looked for the early part of next month from the Pacific, having on board a considerable freight on merchants' account.

The Satellite, 16, is expected to be fitted immediately for commission at this port, as also the new brig-sloop Icarus.

The Jaseur, 16, Commander R. A. Wilmot, arrived at Spithead this morning from Leith; she will come into harbour to-morrow, to be paid off, having been upwards of three years in commission.

Ships in Harbour.—The St. Vincent, the Victory, the Excellent, the Orestes, the Nautilus, the Bellona, the Austrian frigate, and the Echo steamer.

At Spithead. The Warspite, the Jaseur, and the Abo, Russian corvette.

NAVAL PROMOTIONS AND APPOINTMENTS.—Commander—Edward Burt, to the out-pension, Greenwich Hospital. Lieutenants—Henry H. Budd, to the rank of Commander; Joseph Martin Mottley, from the Caledonia, to command the Imaum, vice Stewart, appointed to the Victory; Samuel Morrish, John Strettell, and W. T. Rivers (additional), to the Illustrious; J. H. Maxwell, to the San Josef, vice Budd, promoted; H. Jenkins, to ditto, vice Thurtell, whose time is expired. Purser—W. H. Stone, to the Illustrious (actual), vice Mason, invalided. Master—G. B. Hoffmeister, to the Jupiter. Mates—W. H. Steward, of the Illustrious, and W. L. Lambert, of the Electra, to the rank of Lieutenant, and both to the Victory; G. Hancock, H. B. King, and C. A. Lodder, to the Excellent. Volunteers, first class—C. H. Parker, to the Excellent; G. Viscount, to the Vanguard; J. T. Baker and George Holden, to the Hower.

The Lightning steam-vessel, Lieut.-Commander George Snell, left Woolwich on Sunday for Hamburg, with the Earl of Wilton, Lord Charles Wellesley, Sir William Young, and several members attached to the British Court on board, having full powers to invest the King of Saxony with the Most Noble Order of the Garter, the object of their mission to the continent.

Captain F. F. Simmonds, of the 2nd West India Regiment, has been appointed Major of Brigade to the troops serving in the northern and midland districts. He is to be stationed at Leeds, the head-quarters of Major-General Brotherton. The following staff appointments in the West Indies have also recently taken place, viz.:—Lieutenant Torrens, of the 47th, and Lieutenant Minty, of the 1st West India Regiment, to be Fort Adjutants; the former at St. Kitt's, and the latter at St. Lucia.—United Service Gazette.

BAY OF BISCAY.—Some English capitalists, according to the Railway Monitor, have it in contemplation to form a line from Bordeaux to Vigo, Bilbao, and Santander, and so form a communication with Falmouth, Southampton, and London.

THE NAVY. The following paragraph appears in one or two of our morning contemporaries:—"SHEERNESS, Saturday, Sept. 24.—Three first-rate, three second-rate, and four third-rate men-of-war are ordered to be brought forward at this yard, ready for commissioning. India and China are reported as the destination of some of them." The truth of the matter is that we believe to be as follows.—Some months ago the Lords of the Admiralty ordered estimates to be prepares, for them at the principal dockyards, showing the expense of putting a number of ships of the line in such a state of repair and forwardness as to be ava lable for immediate commissioning, should circumstances make it necessary that a larger naval force should be employed in active service, or should any foreign nation refuse to allow us to be relieved or want such repa rs as can be done only in our English dockyards. Their lordships, having obtained the estimates from the authorities, have it, we believe, in contemplation, although nothing has yet been definitively settled, to do away with the system of having what is foolishly called "demonstration ships," and to bring forward in lieu of them ten ships of the line of the three largest classes, viz., Sheerness, Portsmouth, and Plymouth, to be denominated "advanced ships of the ordinary." It is understood that these ships are always to be kept in such a state of readiness for commission and proceeding to sea, as regards their hulls, that they shall neither require docking nor caulking, nor any work to be performed on board of them, on being ordered for service, except to adapt the ports to the guns, and to take down any temporary ordnance fittings, such as gunkeepers' cabins, ordinary galleries, &c. To meet this intention the ships selected for advanced ships will be regularly docked in turn from time to time to clean their bottoms, properly cleaned, &c., as necessary, whether they may be in such a state as to proceed to sea when ordered, without risk of waiting to be docked for either a year or two. Should these intentions of the Board of Admiralty be ultimately acted upon, of which there is little doubt, a bona fide force of 30 sail of the line, the majority comprised of new ships, will always be ready for service on any emergency. This force, not being commissioned, will be no additional expense to the country, and the constant overhauling that the ships will have in their turn will preserve them from that decay which many fine ships in ordinary have heretofore suffered; and in the long run will amply compensate for the much greater cost that is required to be expended upon them to keep them in a properly efficient state: while the inestimable advantage will be gained of having such an unsinking fleet ready equipped in the space of two or three days or a fortnight. We are conarmed in the above statement by our private correspondence from Plymouth, which states that the St. George, 120, the Royal William, 120, the Royal Adelaide, 110, the Albion, 90, the Canopus, 80, the Clarence, the Bombay, the Foudroyant, the Wellesley, and the Impregnable, line-of-battle ships, are likely to be brought forward there as "demonstration ships."

DARTMOUTH, Sept. 25.—Her Majesty's revenue cutter Royal Charlotte having recently struck upon a sunken rock, off Stoke Church, which is not laid down in any chart, and received so serious an injury as to render her unfit for position. No damage was sustained by the cutter, which was laid on shore for inspection.

BY ARE accounts from the Cape of Good Hope we learn that her Majesty's ship Fly, commanded by – Blackwood, Esq., and her Majesty's schooner Bramble (tender to the Fly), were lying in Simon's Bay on the 9th July, but would shortly proceed to Torres Straits, to survey that passage, according to instructions.

The ship Earl Grey, on her way to Hobart Town with the head quarters of the 99th regiment, under the command of Major Last, are red at Devonport on Sunday evening last—all well.

CHURCH, UNIVERSITIES, &c.

OXFORD, Sept 24.—The vacant fellowship in Jesus College, occasioned by the death of the late Rev. Philip Aubin, will be filled on Wednesday next This fellowship was founded by Charles I., for a native of Guernsey or Jersey. The late Dr Prosser, Dean of Westminster, has bequeathed £1,000 to this University to found a Theological Professorship, and £2000 to Oriel College for an exhibition. The newly created Archdeaconry of Lindisfarne has been conferred on the Rev. E. T. Bigge, Fellow of Merton College. The Rev. H. Hughes, of Trinity College, has been presented to the incumbency of the new church, Gorton-square, London. The Duke of Devonshire has presented the Rev. R. P. Hall, of Brasenose College, to the perpetual curacy of Buxton, Derbyshire. Mr. L. W. Buck has presented the Rev. J. R. Whyte, late of Oriel College, to the rectory of West Worlington, Devonshire. The Rev. D. R. Godfrey, late of Queen's College, has been elected head master of Devonport Classical School. There were 37 competitors. The trustees of the Rev. D. J. J. Cookes have presented the Rev. H. W Cookes, of Worcester College, to the valuable rectory of Astley, Worcestershire. The Rev. G. J. Davie, of Exeter College, has been appointed curate of Brasted, Kent. The Lord Bishop of Winchester has presented the Rev. J. M. Sumner, of Balliol College, to the rectory of North Waltham, Kent. The Lord Bishop of Salisbury has instituted the Rev. R. C. Fell, of Queen's College, to the vicarage of North Matravers, in the Rural Deanery of Dorchester, and Archdeaconry of Dorset.

THE CHURCH.—The following appointments have taken place.—The Rev. W. T Hobson, M.A., of Corpus Christi College, to the rectories of Streley and Bilbrough: value £353. The Rev. J. Gore, M.A., of Chri. College, to the vicarage of Shalbourne, in the counties of Berks and Wilts: value £371. The Rev. J. Dean, M.A., of Jesus College, to the rectory of Ewenny, with the curacy of St. Brides, annexed, in the county of Glamorgan, and diocese of Llandaff: value £686. The Rev. P. Cann, M.A., of Pembroke College, to the perpetual curacy of Broadwood-Widger, with the rectory of Virginstow annexed, in the county of Devon: value £548. The Rev. H. Pigg, B.A., of Pembroke College, to the perpetual curacy of St. Paul's, Wilton, Salisbury: value £110. The Rev. M. Wilson, B.A., of St. Catharine's Hall, to the perpetual curacy of Edenfield Bury, Lancashire: value £117. The Rev. J. W. Watson, B.A., of Trinity College, to the perpetual curacy of St. Mary, Preston, Lancashire: value £130. The Rev. J. W. Clarke, B.A., of Sidney Sussex College, to the incumbency of the Holy Trinity Church, Crookhamhill, Westerham, Kent. The Rev. J. R. Sherlock, M.A., of Queen's College, to the incumbency of the new church of the Holy Trinity, Attleborough, Nuneaton, Warwickshire. The Rev. S. Allen, M.A., of Trinity College, to be curate of St. Margaret's, Lynn. The Rev. T. J. Burton, B.A., of St. Peter's College, to the curacy of St. James's Church, Enfield Highway: value £150. The Rev. T. B. Ingham, B.A., of Queen's College, to be minister of the church recently erected at Rainhill. The Rev. J. Bassett, M.A., of St. John's College, to be one of the chaplains to his Majesty the King of the Belgians. The Rev. J. W. Inman, M.A., of St. John's College, to be minister of the chapel of Hartlebury. The Rev. W. F. Lanfear, B.A., of Queen's College, to be chaplain to the Church of England congregation at Wiesbaden, Germany.

ORDINATIONS.—The Bishops of Exeter, Peterborough, and Carlisle, held ordinations at their respective Cathedrals on Sunday last. The following gentlemen were admitted into holy orders:—

Deacons, of Oxford—Charles Howard Archer, B.A., Baliol College. Robert Lewis Bampfield, B.A., Trinity College. William Courtenay Clark, B.A., Exeter College. Francis T. B. Cole, B.A., St. Edmund Hall. Henry Edwards, B.A., Lincoln College. John Kingsmill Eisdell, B.A., Exeter College. William Edward Viger, B.A., Worcester College. William Franklin, B.A., New Inn Hall. William Nicholas Richards, B.A., Wadham College, by letters dimissory from the Bishop of Bath and Wells. John Hall, M.A., Brasenose College. Thomas D'Oyley Walters, B.A., Christ Church. Morton Shaw, B.A., Brasenose College, by letters dismissory from the Archbishop of Canterbury.

Deacons, of Cambridge.—Henry Smith Anders, B.A., Gonville and Caius College. Joseph Watson Ayre, B.A., St. Peter's College. William Bennett, B.A., St. John's College. The Rev. Reginald Bryan, B.A., Trinity College. William Ligure Fowke, B.A., Queen's College. William Gardner, B.A., Queen's College. William Mignott Kerr, B.A., St. John's College. James Sutherland, B.A., Queen's College. Charles Edward Wells, B.A., Church College. Alfred Roger Taylor, B.A., Trinity College. Edward Ramsay Prother, B.A., Magdalen College, by letters dismissory from the Bishop of Bath and Wells. Christopher Parker, B.A., Emmanuel College. John Halifax, B.A., Corpus Christi College.

Deacon, of Dublin.—Rev. John Mure Ward, B.A., Trinity College.

Deacon, of Oxford.—The Rev. Reginald Bryan, B.A., Trinity College.

Deacon, of Durham.—John Whitewick, Licentiate in Theology, University College.

Deacons, of St. Bee's College, Cumberland —William Frankling

Priests, of Oxford.—The Rev. Edward William Tanner Chave, B.A., Worcester College. The Rev. William F. Everest, B.A., Magdalene Hall. The Rev. Henry Johnson, B.A., Merton College. The Rev. John F. Kibson, B.A., Exeter College. The Rev. Charles F. D. Lyne, B.A., Pemuroke College. The Rev. Mortimer Tyler, B.A., St. Edmund Hall. Rev. William Belgrave, B.A., Lincoln College. Rev. Robert Bell, B.A., Worcester College. Rev. Thomas Charles Price, M.A., Merton College. Rev. Granville Sykes Howard Vyse, B.A., Christ Church.

Priests, of Cambridge —Rev. William Henry Beauchamp, B.A., Christ's College. Rev. Philip Brett, B.A., Emmanual College. Rev. Alexander Douglas, B.A., Magdalene College. Rev. William Ellcoll, B.A., Queen's College. Rev. Alexander Grant Hildyard, M.A., Pembroke College. Rev. George Powell, B.A., Trinity College. Rev. Joseph Edward Rose, B.A., Trinity College. Rev. Charles Anthony Oak, B.A., St. John's College. Rev. Taylor Wise, B.A., St. John's College. The Rev. George R. Fryan, B.A., St. Catherine Hall.

Priests, of Dublin.—Rev. Thomas Henry Maning, B.A., Trinity College. Rev. George Morgan, B.A., Trinity College. The Rev. Robert Augustus Knox, B.A., Trinity College.

The deanery of Peterborough is expected to become vacant by the appointment of the Rev. Dr. Turton to the deanery of Westminster. The Rev. Dr. Graham, Master of Christ's College, Cambridge; the Rev. Edmund Mortlock, B.D., Fellow of Christ's College; and the Rev. Marsham Argles, B.A., Emmanuel College, Cambridge, and Rector of Lowestoft, Suffolk, are spoken of as the persons from whom the new Dean will be selected in the event of Dr. Turton's resignation.

PHOTOGRAPHIC PORTRAITURE.

Of all the wonderful discoveries of modern science, there is none more miraculous in its nature, and but few that have made so rapid a progress, as the system of photographic portraiture, which, "by the sacred radiance of the sun," reveals to us, in the space of a few seconds, a complete transcript of our outward man. In the application of natural powers to the arts and sciences, the advancement made towards perfection has almost uniformly been gradual, although occasionally very rapid strides have occurred, rather than and measured tread; and this principle is fully borne out by an examination of the progressive applance of air and fire, of wind and water, to the numerous branches of art, manufacture, and commerce. Light, however, the source from whence photography springs, has taken no part in the gradual advancement we have described; although it may be termed the primary of created powers, the application of its capabilities has been the work of a moment. Philosophers, even of the present day, cling but to hypothesis, and adopt, we will suppose from conviction, the different theories of their predecessors as to its origin and efficacy. The invention of Daguerre cannot fail, therefore, to lay open new ideas, which may be productive of great advantages to science. We almost feel inclined to trace the first germ of its existence, with the origin of painting itself, to the Greek maiden's device upon the wall her lover's portrait from his shadow; but still we do not hesitate to render all due honour to the modern author of the discovery. In its adaptation to portraiture, the original invention has undergone many improvements, and none are so conspicuous as those introduced by Mr. Beard, which constitute the difference between Daguerreotype and Photography. Portraits taken by the former method are invariably reversed, and frequently subjected to dilatation; but this never occurs in Mr. Beard's process, the chief advantage of which is the application of the reflecting camera. The detail of the proceeding may be interesting. Let us imagine Mr. Beard's atelier, and some one seated for his portrait. The time required is but a few seconds, and is occupied as follows: The sitter's eyes are fixed upon some given object, his attitude a perfect study; and a mark him if he be a vain man, his hair is smartened, and his countenance assumes its sweetest simper. The operator having previously prepared a polished silver plate of the utmost brilliancy, that the chemical action may be the more efficient, exposes it to the vapour of iodine, until it acquires a pale yellow tint. It is now conveyed to the camera, care being taken that not a single ray of light gleams upon it in the transit—the door of the camera closed, and the full action of the sun is concentrated upon the surface of the plate. In a less space of time than the words can be penned a coup de soleil takes off the sitter's head. The portrait can now be colored in its natural tints, or tinted by dipping in a solution of gold, neither of which processes at all impair the brilliancy of the touches. We ourselves, prefer the latter method, as it destroys the leaden appearance of the ground, and imparts to it a softness and a warmth that are alike desirable. Without disparagement to the performances of the miniature painter, we must record our veto against his works, when brought as portraits (their chief value) into comparison with this flash-of-lightning method of proceeding; they must entail admiration for their finished excellence, yet are but rarely entitled to it, for the expression of sentiment and grace, which the masters only of this art, in their productions, have at times so beautifully displayed. But photographic portraiture presents the semblance of its living model—it depicts not merely the exactness of feature, so easily attainable by hand—it preserves the life and animation—the delicacy of expression; in fact, so much of the character of the individual as is displayed in his features during the period of his sitting—and this, so decisive, and without chance of erring, is only attained at mere random from the hand of the miniature practitioner.

"For by his face straightway shall you know his heart,"

Our visit was paid to Mr. Beard's establishment, in Parliament-street, where, by the politeness of Mr. Hogg, we were shown the minutiæ of the process, and an abundance of most beautiful specimens, numbering amongst them the holders of the rank and wealth, and beauty of the kingdom—princes, nobles, statesmen,—"fair women and brave men," composed the throng; all had been to test the efficacy, and to acknowledge the advantages of this most wonderful of modern inventions.

IRELAND.

SINGULAR AFFAIR.—DETENTION OF THE MARQUIS OF WATERFORD. At Kilcullen, Ireland, a few days since, a curious case came on for trial before the magistrates, the substance of which was as follows:—Mr. Joseph Byrne was proprietor of the Red Lion Inn, in Kilcullen, and also of a posting establishment in the town. Mrs. Dunne was proprietress of another inn. A competition in trade existed between them. On Saturday, the 10th ult., a groom of the Marquis of Waterford came to Mr. Byrne, and desired him to have four horses ready for the marquis, with the utmost speed, would pass through Kilcullen on the Monday following, on their way to Cumberland. On Monday he heard that the marquis was coming, and suspecting that he would be stopped at Dunne's door, he sent to meet him. The post-boys stopped at Dunne's—the horses were forced from the carriage—Mrs. Dunne's horses were harnessed to it—the carriage was driven on—but Mr. Byrne's ostler stopped the horses opposite his master's hotel. Mr. Byrne addressed the marquis, and said he would charge him for his horses, as he had them in readiness all day. The Marquis, not wishing to stop on the road, and as the unpleasantness was heightened, said he would pay for them, and desired the postilions to drive on. A riotous crowd of 500 or 600 persons had collected round Mr. Byrne's door, shouting in a violent manner. Mr. Byrne stated that the Marquis of Waterford always stopped at his hotel, except on one occasion, and then stopped at Mrs. Dunne's, but he came back and said he and his valet were taken there by force. Heard there was a determination to stop the marquis at Mrs. Dunne's on the last occasion, in consequence of which he sent his ostler over to meet him. Acknowledged that the carriage containing the Marquis and Marchioness of Waterford was stopped when it came opposite to his hotel by Byrne, the ostler, but said it was at the desire of the marquis. He first saw the carriage opposite his stable with six or seven hundred people, big and little, about it shouting. Went to the carriage window and asked payment for the horses. The marquis said, "Byrne, I'll pay you; let the d d blackguards go on with the horses." He came back then. Witnesses were then examined to prove a riot against the parties acting for Mrs. Dunne. Counsel for Mrs. Dunne contended that Mr. Byrne was the aggressor, and called witnesses to prove his statement. Ultimately the magistrates decided on binding over James Perkins and Peter Dunne to keep the peace.

* We learn, from a correspondent, the death of Mr. Fenton, one of the examiners of the Court of Chancery. The salary is £600 a year, and the office, if vacant, is in the gift of the Master of the Rolls.—Dublin Evening Post.

NEW MASTER IN CHANCERY.—We believe we may announce that Mr. Litton will certainly be the Master in Chancery.—Dublin Evening Post.

AWFUL THUNDER STORM.—LONDONDERRY.—On Tuesday night, the 20th ult., this town and neighbourhood were visited by a severe thunder storm, which continued during the whole of the night, and till about 1 or 2 o'clock on the following morning. Throughout the entire of Tuesday there was very heavy rain, and towards the evening occasional flashes of lightning were seen in a north-easterly direction. About half-past 10 o'clock at night the storm began to gather. The town ceased to shine, and the atmosphere became heavy, sultry, and still. There has been no injury done by the lightning in this city. Near Cunningham, however, a man was struck insensible by the electric fluid, but ultimately recovered from the shock. No other injury, we believe, has been sustained in consequence of the storm.

The large estates of E. Montagu Parker, Esq., the late M.P. for the Southern Division of Devonshire, were lately brought to the hammer, and one of the farms, upon which there is a lease of fourteen years to run, and at a rack-rent, sold for forty-two years' purchase.—Bristol Mirror.

STAFFORD, Wednesday morning.—Sir Nicholas Conyngham Tindal, Sir James Parke, and Sir Robert Monsey Rolfe, the Judges appointed under the special commission to try the prisoners in the gaol, will arrive in here on next Saturday to open the present session, on which occasion the justices of the peace, mayors, and the other civil authorities are expected to attend. On Sunday the Judges will attend divine service at Christ Church, when a sermon will be preached by the Rev. W. E. Coldwell. On Monday the grand jury will be empanelled as soon as true bills are found, the trial of the prisoners will be proceeded with. There are 240 to be tried; 97 are indicted for demolition of property and arson, one for high treason, and the remaining 142 for riot, burglary, rescue, personal violence, and presenting other weapons. Thomas Cooper and Arthur O'Neil, the two great Chartist leaders, will, much against the advice of their friends, defend themselves. It is also said that William Ellis, who is committed for high treason, will do the same. Joseph Whatsons, who was committed on last Saturday, by P. B. Broade, Esq., for a riot and fire at the residence of Mr. Benjamin Vale, on the 15th of August, in the parish of Stoke-upon-Trent, was quite an enthusiast and a second Thom of Canterbury. While engaged in burning the property of Mr. Vale, he used to exclaim "The Lord has desired me to do so: that is the desire of the Lord." The evidence on the witnesses, quite home and conclusive against him. The following is the classification of the prisoners, as refers to their education. viz.:—Prisoners who can read and write superiorly, 1; Do. read and write well, 27; Do. read and write imperfectly, 50; Do. read well, 5; Do. read imperfectly, 71; Do. neither read nor write, 99. Do. on bail, 25; total, 210. The ages of the prisoners vary from 17 to 70 years, and all of them, with few exceptions, bitterly regret the part they have acted, and what they declare they would not have acted had they not been led on and instigated by heartless, designing demagogues, who are noted there as soon as danger showed itself. They are all decent, industrious-looking men, and most of them with large families. Mr. Thomas Bratton, the governor of the gaol, who is a kind, humane man, speaks highly of their demeanour while under his care. It is expected that our military force will be augmented during the special commission. It now consists of two companies of the 34th, with some recruiting parties of the artillery and infantry regiments. The mayor and John Edwards Piercy, Esq., the high sheriff, are busily engaged making preparations for the trials. In consequence of a few straggling strangers having been seen in the streets yesterday, some suspicion arose that they were not on a good intent. They were narrowly watched, and the result proved that they were Chartist agents sent from Bristol and Birmingham to watch the fate of the Chartist prisoners in custody. There are now in this gaol 770 prisoners. News has just reached of the capture of four more prisoners, supposed to be the leaders of the attack upon the house of the Rev. Benjamin Vale, which, as has been already stated, was burned down by the rioters on the 15 h of August. The four prisoners were brought into Stafford yesterday.

On Monday and Tuesday a large meeting of the magistrates of the hundred of Pire Hill, was held at the Castle Hotel, Newcastle, for the purpose of establishing a military depôt and a protective police for the security of life and property during the ensuing winter. They were also engaged in devising means for affording a safe escort for the witnesses (forty in number), who are to leave Newcastle to attend the commission. Messrs. Addersey, Meagh, Rose, Childe, Harvey, Broade, Manwaring, and Wise, were among the magistrates present.

AT Newcastle-under-Lyne the preparations were quiet and secret.

POLICE IN THE PROVINCES.—We understand that on the 1st of October the municipal authorities of Manchester, Birmingham, and Bolton will, for the first time, undertake the management of the new police. From 1839 to the present period the police force of Manchester and Birmingham has been under the command of Sir Charles Shaw and Captain Burgess, commissioners appointed by Government. The arrangements with regard to Bolton have not transpired. Colonel Angelo was appointed the commissioner of police for Bolton in 1839; but, after organising the necessary force of about twenty men, the gallant colonel, in a letter to the mayor of Bolton, resigned his appointment. The colonel is now one of the candidates for the office of commissioner of police for the city of London in the event of a vacancy, through the election of Mr. Whittle Harvey to the situation of high bailiff of Southwark. Some change in the discipline of the city police is evidently necessary, but we have very few exceptions; they are perfectly unequal to the duty.—Times.

GLENARTNEY—THE HILL WHERE PRINCE ALBERT, ATTENDED BY LORD WILLOUGHBY, WENT DEER STALKING

PASS OF GLEN OGLE.

We gave in our last a description of this famous glen. The representation which we now place pictorially before our readers involves the interesting feature of the transit of the Queen and her Consort through this wild and gloomy defile among old Scotia's Highland hills.—And below we present our artist's sketch of the close of her Majesty's visit to Scotland.

THE THANKSGIVING PRAYER.—The following is the Prayer of Thanksgiving to Almighty God, for the great blessing which, in His mercy and goodness, He hath vouchsafed to this nation, in the late abundant harvest, to be used at morning and evening service, after the general thanksgiving, in all churches and chapels in England and Wales, and in the town of Berwick-on-Tweed, on Sunday, the 2nd of October next, as ordered by her Majesty in Council:—"O God, through whose Providence the earth yieldeth food for the sustenance of man, we offer unto Thee our hearty thanksgiving for Thy late mercy vouchsafed to us, in blessing the labours of our husbandmen with plentiful increase, and preserving the fruits of the field for our use. Give us grace, we humbly beseech Thee, that whilst we receive Thy bounty with thankfulness, we may regard the blessing bestowed on us as a call to repentance, and turn from the evil of our ways. Remove from amongst us all causes of strife and contention; put an end to our unhappy divisions; and grant that all conditions of men, impressed with the fear of Thy judgments, and trusting in Thy fatherly care, may faithfully serve Thee, in loyalty to their Sovereign, in obedience to the laws, in kindly affection one to another, and in dutiful resignation to Thy will; that so, under the guidance of Thy Holy Spirit, we may pass through this world in peace and contentment, and finally by thy mercy attain everlasting life, through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen."

ANECDOTE OF THE QUEEN.—While Prince Albert and the Marquis of Breadalbane were enjoying the sports of the hills, her Majesty and the Marchioness had a private walk through part of the extensive grounds. In the course of their excursion they paid a visit to the dairy, which is fitted up in a style every way becoming the princely mansion to which it is attached. After several minute inquiries of the principal dairy-maid, regarding the different varieties of cheese made within the premises, her Majesty asked whether any "porridge" had been made that morning, significantly enough letting it be understood that she would have no objection to partake of our homely fare. The dairy-maid, not being aware of the exalted rank of the lady who was addressing her, after politely stating that the dairy was not the usual place where such a dish was manufactured, presented her Majesty with as near a substitute as she could—some oat cakes and cream. Her Majesty partook heartily of the homely fare, and on going away forgot not to present a small portrait of herself to the dairy-maid, to remind her in after years of the royal visit to Taymouth.—Caledonian Mercury.

RUBINI.—At Palermo (while still under engagements to Barbaja, the Neapolitan manager) he was the hero of an adventure nearly as romantic, but not so tragical, as the celebrated story of Stradella. On his arrival at Palermo he waited on a lady of very high rank, to whom he had letters of introduction, and who received him with the kindness and distinction due to his genius and agreeable manners. In the evening, when he appeared on the stage, Rubini made a respectful inclination to his fair patroness, who was in her box—an act which, though dictated simply by respect and gratitude, roused the vindictive jealousy of a Sicilian husband. On quitting the theatre, the presumptuous singer found himself suddenly in the hands of a couple of bravos, who seized his arms, muffled his head in a cloak, and began to drag him towards the beach, intending (according to custom in such cases) to stab him, and get rid of his body by throwing it into the sea. The unfortunate tenor gave himself up for lost; he could not call out, and, if he had, such outcries would have attracted little notice in Sicily. Luckily for him, however, he was recognised by one of the bravos. In those parts of the world a murderer may be a man of taste and virtù. Such, fortunately, was the worthy who had Rubini in his grasp. He was a musical amateur, to whom Rubini had sometimes given orders for the opera. He could not hurt his favourite artist; and, instead of using his stiletto, he told Rubini of the danger he had run, set him at liberty, and advised him to get out of Sicily as fast as possible—an advice which, as may be supposed, was promptly followed.—Mainzer's Musical Times.

RETURNED EMIGRANTS.—We noticed (says a Liverpool paper) some weeks ago, that large numbers of people who had emigrated to the United States had returned in the ships from New York. They continue to arrive in considerable numbers. The greatest number brought by one ship, up to last week, was 250 by the Hottinguer; but on Tuesday night, the packet-ship New York arrived with upwards of 300, many of whom would have starved from want of provisions, had not Captain Cropper humanely supplied the poor creatures out of the ship's stores. Amongst the passengers were a lot of British sailors who had been some years in the American navy, which they left, they say, lest if hostilities should break out between Great Britain and the United States, they might be brought into deadly conflict with their own countrymen.

HER MAJESTY AND PRINCE ALBERT EMBARKING ON BOARD THE TRIDENT AT GRANTON PIER.

ROSLIN CASTLE.

ROSLIN.

One of the interesting scenes visited by the royal tourists in Scotland is Roslin Chapel, situated about seven miles from Edinburgh, on the banks of the North Esk. The vale of Roslin is one of those beautiful and sequestered dells which so often occur in Scotland, abounding with all the romantic varieties of cliff, and copsewood, and waterfall. Its beautiful Gothic chapel is one of the most entire and exquisitely decorated specimens of ecclesiastical architecture in Scotland. It was founded, in 1446, by William St. Clair, Earl of Orkney, and Lord of Roslin. At the revolution of 1688 part of it was defaced by a mob from Edinburgh, but it was repaired in the following century by General St. Clair. The late Earl of Rosslyn, some years ago, undertook the restoration of its more dilapidated parts, and the present earl still continues the repairs, with scrupulous attention to preserve the original character of the structure. "This building," says Mr. Britton, "may be pronounced unique, and singularly interesting. The chapel of King's College, St. George, and Henry VII., are all conformable to the styles of the respective ages when they were erected; and these styles display a gradual advancement in lightness and profusion of ornament: but the Chapel of Roslin combines the solidity of the Norman with the minute decorations of the latest species of the Tudor age. It is impossible to designate the architecture of this building by any given or familiar term for the variety and eccentricity of its parts are not to be defined by any words of common acceptation." The central aisle is bold and lofty, enclosed as usual by side aisles, the pillars and arches of which display a profusion of ornament, executed in the most beautiful manner. The "Prentice's Pillar" in particular, with its finely-sculptured foliage, is a piece of exquisite workmanship. It is said that the master-builder of the chapel, being unable to execute the design of this pillar from the plans in his possession, proceeded to Rome, that he might see a column of a similar description which had been executed in that city. During his absence his apprentice proceeded with the execution of the design, and, upon the master's return, he found this finely ornamented column completed. Stung with envy at this proof of the superior ability of his apprentice, he struck him a blow with his mallet, and killed him on the spot. Upon the architrave uniting the Prentice's Pillar to a smaller one is the following sententious inscription from the book of the Apocryphal Scripture, called Esdras:—"Forte est vinum, fortior est rex, fortiores sunt mulieres; super omnia vincit veritas." Beneath the chapel lie the Barons of Roslin, all of whom were, till the time of James VII., buried in complete armour.

ROSLIN CASTLE.

The mouldering ruins of Roslin Castle, with its tremendous triple tier of vaults, stands upon a peninsular rock, overhanging the picturesque glen of the Esk, and is accessible only by a bridge of great height, thrown over a deep cut in the solid rock, which separates it from the adjacent ground. This castle, the origin of which is involved in obscurity, was long the abode of the proud family of the St. Clairs, Earls of Caithness and Orkney. In 1544 it was burned down by the Earl of Hertford; and in 1650 it surrendered to General Monck. About sixty or seventy years ago, the comparatively modern mansion, which has been erected amidst the ruins of the old castle, was inhabited by a genuine Scotch laird of the old stamp, the lineal descendant of the high race who first founded the pile, and the last male of their long line. He was Captain of the Royal Company of Archers, and Hereditary Grand Master of the Scottish Masons. At his death the estate descended to Sir James Erskine St. Clair, father of the present Earl of Rosslyn, who now represents the family.

SWORD OF ROBERT BRUCE.

HAWTHORNDEN.

Passing through scenery of great natural beauty, the tourist arrived at Hawthornden, the classical habitation of the poet Drummond, the friend of Shakspeare and Jonson; it is now the property of Sir Francis Walker Drummond. "This romantic spot seems to have been formed by nature in one of her happiest moods. All the materials that compose the picturesque seem here combined in endless variety: stupendous rocks, rude and varied in colour, hanging in threatening aspect, crowned with trees that expose their bare branching roots; here the gentle birch hanging midway, and there the oak, bending its stubborn branches, meeting each other; huge fragments of rocks impede the rapid flow of the stream, that hurries brawling along unseen, but heard far beneath, mingling in the breeze that gently agitates the wood." Being built with some view to defence, the house rises from the very edge of the grey cliff, which descends sheer down to the stream. An inscription, on the front of the building, testifies that it was repaired by the poet in 1638. It is well known that Ben Jonson walked from London, on foot, to visit Drummond, and lived several weeks with him at Hawthornden. Under the mansion are several subterraneous caves, hewn out of the solid rock with great labour, and connected with each other by long passages; in the court-yard there is a well of prodigious depth, which communicates with them. These caverns are supposed to have been constructed as places of refuge, when the public calamities rendered the ordinary habitations unsafe. The walks around the house are peculiarly fine, but admission to them is limited to Wednesday of each week, and can only be obtained by an order from the proprietor, application for which must be made at the office of Walker and Melville, Esquires, writers to the signet, 110, George-street.

SUBTERRANEOUS PASSAGE.—HAWTHORNDEN.

ROSLIN CHAPEL.

HAWTHORNDEN.

THE PROPRIETORS of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS

have the pleasure to announce that they have made arrangements with one of THE MOST EMINENT AUTHORS OF THE DAY, to produce in their journal a Work of Fiction,

UPON AN ENTIRELY NEW PLAN,

to be entitled,

THE NOVEL OF THE MOMENT.

The work will be produced with

EVERY VARIETY OF ILLUSTRATION,

executed in the most expensive style of finish, by ARTISTS OF THE HIGHEST REPUTE in their several walks of art. The Novel will be printed in weekly episodes of not more than three columns of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, including embellishments; and arrangements will be made to prevent any entrenchment by it upon the established departments of the Paper.

 Prospectuses of the design, with further details of the entire spirit of its publication, will be issued to the public in due course of events.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

TO ADVERTISERS.

WE insert a letter from our Printer, stating the number Printed of the above Paper. It will remove any doubt as to its being decidedly the best medium for Advertisers of all the Weekly Papers, being the first as regards respectability, and second in circulation to only one in the kingdom :—

"198, Strand, Sept. 15, 1842

"SIR—For the satisfaction of our Advertising Friends, we should be obliged by your stating the number printed of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS since its commencement to No. 18. Please to state also the average number of the last Four Weeks. Yours, respectfully,

"THE PROPRIETORS OF THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

"To Mr. R. Palmer, 10, Crane-court, Fleet-street."

"10, Crane-court, Sept. 16, 1842.

"GENTLEMEN—In compliance with your request, I beg to state and pledge my word to the truth of the statement—that the number of stamped sheets printed for the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, from No. 1 to No. 18 inclusive, is 329,530; and that the number for the last four weeks' papers

AVERAGES 23,888 PER WEEK.

The Stamp-office returns, when published, will bear out the above statement. I am, Gentlemen, yours very obediently, "R. PALMER.

"To the Proprietors of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, 198, Strand."

The charge for Advertising is, five lines, or under, 5s., and 9d. per line after. Advertisements must be sent to the Office, 198, Strand, on Thursday at latest.

All the numbers are now reprinted. Orders received by all Booksellers and Newsmen in the Kingdom.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

The following letter from a correspondent has reference to what appears to have been an error in our notice of St. Mary's Chapel, Southampton, and the poet Gray. Several of our correspondents corroborate the terms of this epistle, which we therefore print entire. "Stoke, Sep. 21st, 1842.

"SIR,—Being on the spot, I take the liberty of forwarding you a few facts, which, it has occurred to me, may be of some assistance to you in settling the question of Grey's last resting place at rest. The following is the inscription on the tablet which was placed in the wall of Stoke church by the direction of the Hon. and Rev. Godolphin Osborn, who, I am told by the churchwardens of the parish, found the register of Gray's burial :—

"Opposite to this stone, in the same tomb upon which he has so feelingly recorded his grief at the loss of a beloved friend, are deposited the remains of Thomas Gray, the Author of the Elegy written in a Country Church yard, &c., &c., &c. He was buried August 6th, 1771.' On the tombstone allusted to in the above inscription, is thus written 'In the vault beneath, are deposited, in the hope of a joyful resurrection, the remains of Mary Antrobus; she died unmarried, Nov. 5, 1749, aged 56. In the same grave-contained, beside her former sister, here sleep the remains of Dorothy Gray, widow, the careful, tender mother of many children, one of whom alone had the misfortune to survive her. She died March 11th, 1753, aged 67.' In addition to the above facts, it is well known that Gray resided a considerable time with his mother and aunt in a house now standing at West-end, Stoke; and also that he used to visit the late T. Penn, Esq., whose late son (John) erected the monument now standing in Stoke Park to Gray's memory. On this monument, erected in 1799, amongst other things it states, that Gray 'Died, July 30th, 1771, lies unnoticed in the church-yard adjoining, under the tomb on which he piously and pathetically recorded the interment of his aunt and mother.' Trusting you will not consider me too presumptuous in submitting these facts to your notice,

"I am, Sir, your very obedient Servant,

"And constant reader, H."

" A taker in of the Illustrated London News."—Contribution not suited to a newspaper.

" An Old Merchant."—We will try to include the quotation in our markets.

" M. P."—We will attend to the suggestion. Such a bill can only be received by the drawer.

Thanks to J. Clark of Bramley, for his good wishes. Let him send his sketch and description.

" A nervous person."—We cannot undertake to give medical advice.

"Bookworm."—No room for this article.

" F. X. 9." will get the print, but the poem is too long for insertion.

" Locomotive." He can apply to the Colonial Editor, who, if he have not the paper already, will willingly exchange.

" H. C."—We have already given the views in a former paper. It is the first stone of the Victoria Tower that is about to be laid.

"Leander."—Thanks; but we fear we cannot use it.

" A Subscriber."—Chess problems will be continued at intervals.

The arch erected by Sir David Milne, came too late for insertion.

" Censor," next week.

" R. Dennis." Channelt.—Shall be glad to receive the Nooke.

" Nota Bene," Stroud. The publication is too contemptible to notice.

" N. P." should order his newsman to supply the Saturday evening edition. Where practicable, we recommend this edition for the country, which leaves London by Saturday night's post.

" G. F."—Thanks.

" Timothy."—Too long for insertion.

" Cecil P. de Lancy" may consider his proposal accepted.

" H. S." Edinburgh.—We have referred his letter to the artist.

" Zenas," Rochdale.—We shall be glad to receive the sketch and description.

" A Lover of Nautical Affairs."—The artist disappointed us.

" R. Y. W."—Will he send us a sketch of the festival to which his second paragraph alludes

" A Subscriber," Sheffield.—Thanks.

" A reader from the first."—The least amiable man in the world is an unnecessary grumbler.

" Aliquis."—No room for Latin song.

" H. G. G." is liable.

" M. L. B." would be better occupied in giving than requiring the information he asks.

" John F. Clark" had better call at the office any Tuesday at 10 o'clock in the morning.

" A."—Peterborough shall be illustrated in an early number. Shall be glad to have a communication.

" A. Y."—Not of sufficient general interest.

" H. P."—Neither.

" A Subscriber and Well-wisher," Suffolk.—We are sorry we did not receive his suggestion sooner in reference to the map.

" H. W. G."—Not this time, we disapprove of the law.

" J. D. N."—Yes.

" A. D." Leicester.—Yes.

" E. H. G."—We will try and oblige him; want of room compelled us to omit what he requested.

" Friendship's Temple" will appear.

" J. Athanson."—We agree with him as to the originators of the mischief.

" T. M." Winchester.—An order should be given to a respectable newsman. Should any difficulty, however, arise in getting the papers on receipt of cash, we will supply from our office.

" T. M."—A misprint; it should be Part IV.

" A Subscriber," Islington, has our thanks for his communication. We will inquire.

To the Editor of the Illustrated London News.

Sept. 26, 1842.

SIR—Observing in THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS of the date of September 24, a report under the head of Kensington Police, respecting a person calling himself John Webber, and describing himself as of No. 26, Suffolk-street, Pall Mall East, I beg to say that I shall feel obliged by your stating immediately upon my authority, that no such person now lives, or ever did live, here. Your humble servant, J. TAPPENDEN, Steward of the Civil, Military, and Naval Club.

26, Suffolk street, Pall Mall East.

P.S. Nor was he a member of the said club.

[The report was copied from another paper.—ED. I. L. N.]

London, Sept. 29, 1842.

SIR—Seeing your great anxiety to benefit the public at large in the handsome manner you insert every article anyways fitted for your excellent columns, and particularly those which relate to the general good of all, I cannot forego an opportunity of requesting your kind publication of the following truths, respecting the very serious consequences resulting to travellers generally, from the illiberal and selfish plan upon which the second class carriages have been constructed by the railroad proprietors, and which has been a constant source of complaint without remedy.

These carriages originally were inclosed, and consequently safe as it regarded the health of the individuals occupying them; they are now, from sordid motives, thrown open on both sides, and, consequently, from the great velocity with which they run, pour in such a continued stream of cold air and wind through these openings as renders it highly dangerous to all within. I could enumerate serious cases of illness without end, brought on solely from this mode of travelling, and I have no hesitation in saying, numberless deaths have occurred from colds taken in these carriages.

What, Mr. Editor, is every man responsible for leaving anything before his own door, or in the public way, whereby life or limb is endangered and are not these monopolists of the roads equally liable for endangering the lives of her Majesty's liege subjects in a much more extensive and effectual manner.

I could enlarge much, but will not occupy farther your valuable time, than adding, that medical men have an increase of practice from it. I am, Sir, very respectfully yours, A SUBSCRIBER.

The Cymreigddon Society.—Several engravings will appear in our 23rd number, illustrating this interesting and ancient Welsh Festival, with a detail of the proceedings.

 Part 4 is now ready, in a beautiful Tartan wrapper, exquisitely printed by De la Rue, price 3s. Separate wrappers may be had, price 6d. each.

 Those who feel interested in the boundary question, and consequently in the remarks upon our first page, are referred to the correct Map of the territory, according to the new treaty, published in our last number.

☞ An accident, which prevented the usual supply to some of the newsmen, will, we hope, be a sufficient apology to those subscribers who may receive their papers somewhat later than usual.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

LONDON, SATURDAY, OCTOBER 1, 1842.

Lord Ashley has, in the indefatigable pursuit of his humane labours for the improvement of the condition of the poor creatures in the mines and factories, made a tour to satisfy himself of the working of the Mines and Collieries Bill; and on his return from his philanthropic visit, has received an address from the "Short Time Committee," every way worthy the perusal of the friends of humanity. We do not, however, call the attention of our readers so much to the address itself—which is, however, beautiful for its earnestness, gratitude, and sincerity—as to one passage in the rejoinder of his lordship, which, although painful in its truth, is most powerful in its eloquence and expression, and will hardly fail to impress the mind strongly with the virtue, the justice, and the necessity, of the civilizing reforms which this excellent nobleman has undertaken, so wisely, so cheerfully, and so industriously, to see consummated with effect. There are few patriots of the modern age who do not content themselves with the mere struggle for what they aim at, but Lord Ashley not only struggles, to a great extent successfully, but when the doors of Parliament are closed, betakes him—not to the preserves for game, but to the districts of distress and oppression, to watch the working of the peculiar legislation which he hopes to find relieving his unfortunate protegés. Here is one of his reflections, in answer to the address of the committee, after his labour of love :—

Nor must we omit to impress upon the attention of the public the general displacement of male by the substitution of female labour in a large proportion of the industrious occupations of the country—an evil we have long observed with fear and sorrow. This evil, as you well know, is not confined to the mills and factories of the United Kingdom, but is spreading rapidly and extensively over other departments; desolating, like a torrent, the peace, the economy, and the virtue of the mighty mass of the manufacturing districts. Domestic life and domestic discipline must soon be at an end. Society will consist of individuals no longer grouped into families, so early and so complete is the separation of husband and wife, of parents and children. Thousands of young females of tender years are absorbed day by day in the factories and workshops; every hour is given to their toil, and that toil the most unsuited to their age and sex. In the precious season of youth there is no consideration for the harvest of adult life; they become, not a few of them, wives and mothers, but in utter ignorance of every domestic accomplishment, oftentimes unwilling, more frequently unable, to discharge any connuga land maternal duty. I draw a veil over the enormous licentiousness which alike disgraces and endangers these pursuits; but the late unhappy disturbances have exhibited, to you and to the world, the pernicious results of violating the order of Providence by the abstraction of the females from their peculiar calling; their presence, nay, more, their participation in the riots, has read us a lesson; for when the women of a country become brutalised, the country is left without hope. I speak these things openly to you and without fear, because you know that I love and respect you, and that I have ever said, as I conscientiously believe, that the working classes of these realms are the noblest material in existence for industry, patriotism, and virtue.

All this writing is "beautiful exceedingly" although its matter has within it the sad truth "which makes reflection weep." It will stand of itself as an advocacy of the interests of humanity which it seeks to championize, but we take it up also in connection with another subject whereby it may be made to present a new moral and example. It is this. Those who oppose "short time," that is short hours of work in manufacturing districts, evidently have one chief position in the argument, that short time will produce a lack of labour—that there will not be enough work done. Yet, when discontent and disaffection range abroad, an unexampled depression of labour occurs, and the originators of the evil are of the same class with the men who would deny the fair repose of nature to the factory child. They will do mischief two ways. With a grasping eye to profits they force woman and infant labour on the one hand, and on the other, in a moment of extremity, they reduce wages, and produce a strike which makes all labour in an instant as stagnant as a pool. They are capitalists, however, and therefore the suffering only falls partially upon them. But we strongly suspect that men of this class greatly aided to originate the delusions under which the poor artisans have lately suffered by their insubordinate acts. They first incited them to dissatisfaction—then goaded them from labour—then, by dint of capital, forced them back. Now, here is an example of the mischief which the sin and wickedness both of agitators and agitated have tended to produce. In an article in the Stockport Chronicle, entitled, "The Turnout, and its results," it is proved that the cost of the recent strike, to Stockport alone, was seventy-five thousand pounds. Most of this was, of course, borne by the obstinate labourers, though, some, also, by the master capitalist; but the Stockport paper thus points the consequence :—

To impress more forcibly upon minds of every order of intellect the proper estimate of the real magnitude of this tremendous loss, we give below the following lots of different commodities, any one of which might have been purchased with £75,000 :—35,000 sacks of flour, a quantity sufficient for this town for six months; 375,000 loads of potatoes (at present prices), plenty for the same for five years; 3,000,000 pecks of apples, or 25,000,000 quarts of plums, at last Friday's prices; 1,125,000 gallons of beer, at 1s. 6d. per gallon; 150,000 tons of coals; 150,000 men's hats; 300,000 pairs of shoes of all sizes; 1,000,000 pairs of hose, at 1s. 6d. per pair; or would have given £7 10s. worth of clothing, bedding, and furniture, to every family in the borough; or it would pay the whole rental of the town for one year; or the whole poor and other rates for three years; or have maintained the police establishment for two generations. It would have supported all the Sunday schools of the borough a whole generation; or have given a day-school education to the whole of its youth for ten years. It would have erected a manufactory equal to any in the borough; or five workhouses equal to that on Shawheath; or have bought and laid out, in the vicinity of the town, a pleasure-park or promenade of several hundred acres for the use of the inhabitants for ever.

Now all this lamentable statement should carry a twofold moral—first, a moral to the poor, that to rush wildly into insubordination, no matter by whom incited, is to fearfully increase the amount of human poverty, misery, and deprivation; and next, a moral to the rich, that the poor are deserving of a humane respect—that it is the province of the higher to protect the humbler classes—and that it is by denying to such evils as Lord Ashley has exposed a christian and legitimate relief, and sharpening the stings of poverty and wrong, by using capital against humanity for individual aggrandisement, that even crime may seem invested with a sort of justice in its exercise, and rebellion be taught to assume the aspect of patriotism to those who unfortunately may be ignorant and deluded, as well as aggrieved.

A trial has taken place during the week—recorded in another column—in which a man has been tried for the murder of three human beings upon the high seas. The man was English, the deceased sailors were Spanish, and therefore, the proverbial manliness of our national character should at least have been brought into play, and the majesty of our laws vindicated by a due protection of the foreigner if he were aggrieved. The result of the trial in question was, however, one to make us blush for the jury—and their verdict would indeed put in jeopardy the virtue of our opinions of the frank and generous character of British impartiality, if we were not proudly convinced that we are recording an exception and not a rule. The evidence was strong and indisputable. It did not, perhaps, prove actual murder, although most people would, on perusal, arrive at a perception of manslaughter of a very cruel and aggravated kind, but it did afford a thrilling picture of brutal torture and heartless tyranny practised by an Englishman upon three unhappy foreigners who seem to have met a wretched death under their exercise. The jury, however, thought proper to consider that the indictments had broken down, save in one instance wherein the culprit was convicted of an assault (!) and sentenced to three months' hard labour. The Times comments upon the sentence and significantly adduces the contrast of another conviction of a prisoner seventy years old for defrauding a woman of eleven pounds, ten shillings, who is punished by the recorder with two years' hard labour. Three Spanish lives thus appear to fetch in an English court of justice exactly one eighth of the retribution which is awarded to a man upon the verge of the grave who has falsely procured from another a matter of eleven guineas. Our English money fearfully weighs down humanity in the scale. It is melancholy to contemplate these palpable errors of the human heart and judgment, and we must own that every one of them of which we read, seems like a blot of disgrace and dishonour upon the otherwise fair page of our national character.

METROPOLITAN NEWS.

THE NEW LORD MAYOR.—Thursday being the day for the choice of a new chief magistrate for the city, an unusual crowd assembled in and near Guildhall, in consequence of the expected refusal of the aldermanic body to accept Alderman Thomas Wood as Lord Mayor elect. After the usual routine in the Court, Alderman T. Wood addressed the livery, and complained of the treatment he had received, and his willingness to meet every charge that could be brought against him. Alderman Lainson, being in ill health, had requested to be passed by; and Alderman Thomas Wood and Alderman Humphery were then returned to the Court of Alderman to their choice—which fell on the latter alderman, to the exclusion, for the present, of Alderman T. Wood, whose turn it was to serve the office of Lord Mayor. The usual votes of thanks to the Lord Mayor, Sir John Pirie, and the Sheriffs, Alderman Magnay and Mr. Rogers were then proposed and carried; and the meeting separated.

SWEARING IN OF THE NEW SHERIFFS.—Agreeably to ancient custom, a common hall was held on Wednesday, at two o'clock, when the usual oaths were administered to Mr. Alderman Hooper and Jeremiah Pilcher, Esq., the newly-elected sheriffs for the city of London and county of Middlesex, upon entering upon their official duties for the ensuing year. After the sheriffs had taken the oaths, and signed the declaration that they would not use any influence they might possess in virtue of their office to the injury of the Established Church, they were invested with their gold chains, and other insignia of this important office. Mr. Hardwick and Grafton-street Pilcher, Esq., of Broad-street, were nominated by the sheriffs as their under sheriffs, and took the usual oaths. The Lord Mayor, the late sheriffs, and other civic dignitaries, arrived at Guildhall in state a few minutes before two o'clock, but it was nearly a quarter past two o'clock before they entered the hall. The hall was numerously attended.

THE LATE LORD SYDENHAM.—The niches in the gallery at the Reform Club are appropriated to the reception of portraits of celebrated deceased Reformers; and it will be a gratification to the numerous admirers of the late Lord Sydenham to know that an excellent likeness of the late Governor-General of Canada has just been placed in the niche opposite the portrait of one of the earliest and most distinguished Reformers, Lord Holland.

EAST INDIA HOUSE.—A quarterly General Court of Proprietors of East India Stock was held on Wednesday at the East India House, but was very thinly attended. The minutes of the last Court having been read, and some papers laid upon the table, Mr. D. Salomons postponed, until the next Court, the motion of which he had given notice for the production of an estimate of the expense incurred by the war in Affghanistan to 31st December, 1841. Mr. Lewis also postponed to the next Court, a motion of which he had given notice for to-day, to call the attention of the Court to the papers which have recently been printed and laid before the proprietors, in relation to the commission of inquiry held at Sattara, on the Rajah of Sattara, in October, 1836, and the conduct of the commissioners who sat on the inquiry. The hon. proprietor gave notice that he would, at the next Court, bring forward a motion to prevent, for the future, the withdrawal of any business of which notice had been given, until the matter should have been regularly proposed and seconded. (Hear.) He further gave notice of a motion on the part of Mr. Sullivan, for substituting to a greater extent the agency of the natives of India for that of Europeans in the civil administration of their own affairs. (Hear, hear.) There being no other business to proceed with, the Chairman declared the Court adjourned.

ST. BARTHOLOMEW'S HOSPITAL.—The governors of this institution dined together on St. Matthew's Day, according to ancient custom, in the great hall of the building. Mr. Bentley, the new treasurer, in the chair. There were upwards of 100 of the most active supporters of this great establishment present. The president, Alderman Lucas, was not able to attend, in consequence of ill health. After toasts of ceremony were passed, the chairman rose to propose prosperity to the institution, whose flourishing state they could not meet without most enthusiastically cheering. The toast was drunk with great approbation. Several other toasts were drunk, and the whole business of the evening afforded the highest gratification.

THE DEANERY OF WESTMINSTER.—On Tuesday it was notified to Lord John Thynne, the sub-dean of Westminster, and the canon in residence, Dr. Causton, that the appointment of Dean of Westminster, vacant by the demise of the Very Rev. Dr. Ireland, had been conferred upon the Rev. Dr. Thomas Turton, dean of Peterborough. A recent act of parliament has very materially interfered with the interests of the clerical body known as the Dean and Chapter of Westminster. Until within a very short time since the government of the Abbey funds was vested in a dean and twelve prebends, who, after paying all demands, setting aside so much for repairs of the Abbey, and a certain portion for the ecclesiastical commissioners, divided the residue amongst themselves, the dean taking the large share, and the prebends according to their seniority. The new act limits the number of prebends, who are now to be called canons, to six, after the number, which is at present eleven, shall be so far reduced by death. All new canons will be paid a permanent stipend, and the dean, instead of realising the princely income of his predecessors, will, coming under the new law, be limited to an income of £3000 per annum. The surplus is to be given over to the ecclesiastical commissioners, who are to appropriate it to the building of new churches and increasing the value of poor curacies.

We regret to have to announce the premature decease of Sir Michael O'Loghlen, Baronet, the Irish Master of the Rolls, which melancholy event took place on Wednesday evening, about six o'clock, in George-street, Hanover-square. Sir Michael was appointed to his judicial office by the Liberals about six years ago, and the bench has never been occupied, in that country nor in England, by a man of more unimpeachable integrity, or brighter qualifications as a lawyer.

ROYAL MAIL (WEST INDIA) STEAM-PACKET COMPANY.—On Wednesday an adjourned meeting of the shareholders of this company took place at the London Tavern, to consider matters connected with the company of high importance. At one o'clock Mr. J. Irving, M.P., the chairman, and Mr. Colville, the deputy chairman, with the other directors, took their places. After a long discussion a resolution was carried by a large majority declaratory of the intention of the company to support the Directors in carrying out the objects of this grand national undertaking.

THE STATUE OF WILLIAM IV., ABOUT TO BE ERECTED IN KING WILLIAM-STREET, CITY.—On Wednesday an immense block of hayter, or Devonshire granite, the largest block of stone ever imported into the port of London, was removed from Tuckerell's Norway Wharf, Greenwich, to Chadwick's Wharf, Millbank, for the purpose of forming the lower part of the statue of the late king.

The prize of ten pounds, offered by Mr. Macready, for the best song and chorus in As You Like It, has been awarded to Mr. Henry Smart, nephew of Sir George Smart.

A CARGO OF WILD BEASTS.—Early on Monday morning the steamer Monarch arrived at her moorings off the Custom-house, her decks being almost covered with cages containing an extensive collection of wild animals, a transhipment from Hull. Amongst them were a remarkably fine young lion from Zauzebar, a pair of striped hyenas from India; a very beautiful pair of the Sasin antelopes from the borders of Persia, the horns of the male nearly two feet long, forming a perfect spiral; a most interesting specimen of the gnu antelope, from the Cape of Good Hope, called by the Dutch boers of South Africa the baas or master, from his great strength; and one of the most formidable of the monkey tribe ever brought to this country. The last animal stands nearly four feet high. The whole of the cargo was landed at daylight, and forwarded in vans to their destined resting-place, after all their wanderings, at the Surrey Zoological Gardens.

PRICES OF BREAD IN THE METROPOLIS.—The various prices at which bread is sold in the metropolis call loudly for some legislative enactment fixing the assize. The 4lb. loaf of the best household bread is now selling in Tottenham-court-road for 6½d., in the Borough and Lambeth for 6½d., in the Broadway, Blackfriars, and places adjacent for 6d., and in Oxford-street, Holborn, Drury-lane, Clare-market, and the Seven Dials, for 7d., and 7½d. The full-price bakers charge from 8½d. to 9½d. That extortion exists somewhere is evident, and it is equally plain that neither the corn-merchant nor the miller is in fault, else bread could not be sold by one baker at such a reduction more than another;—upon whom, then, does the blame rest?

SUICIDES FROM THE BRIDGES.—On Monday morning, about half-past one o'clock, a young woman, who appeared to be about twenty-five years of age, mounted the parapet from one of the recesses on the north-east side of London-bridge, and rolled herself over into the river, after striking the abutment of the arch in her descent. She went down immediately, and no more was seen of her. The female was dressed in a green bonnet and plaid shawl. On the same day, about half-past nine in the evening, as some passengers were passing over Waterloo-bridge, a man was observed to throw himself into the Thames from the third lower Middlesex recess. An alarm was instantly raised, and several boats put off from Strand-lane stairs, and also two police galleys, but, from the tide drawing rapidly down, in a short time the unfortunate man disappeared. The deceased appeared to be about forty-five years of age, very much pockmarked, of fair complexion, and was dressed in a brown great coat. The deceased left a large street-door key behind him on the seat of the recess.

ROBBERIES.—From the house No. 55, Baker-street, the property of Mrs. Cook, eight silver table spoons, seven desert, four tea, and two salt, all with crest two eagles' heads holding a ring in each mouth.—From the house of Mr. M'Lochlan, 4, Lansdown-terrace, London-fields, Hackney, a lady's dress, watered drab colour; a small Geneva linked gold chain; a crystal brooch, shape of a butterfly, with hair enclosed; a turquoise ring, set with pearls; a cornelian necklace with white beads; a Turkish bead bracelet, and other property.—From the girls' school-room, Princes-road, Lambeth, the property of the Rev. Mr. Eaden, 3 Randal-place, Vassal-road, an eight-day spring dial, maker's name Hurst, Lambeth-walk.—From the house of Mrs. Davis, 2, Middle-row, Knightsbridge, a small box, containing four sovereigns and a half sovereign, £1 in silver, some silver and copper coins, and several articles of jewellery.

POSTSCRIPT.

Saturday Evening.

FUNERAL OF THE MARQUIS WELLESLEY.—We understand that the mortal remains of the Marquis Wellesley are to receive the last tribute of his country's respect by being deposited among the illustrious dead in Westminster Abbey. The funeral, it is expected, will be a public one, but the day has not, up to the present time, been decided upon.—Globe

A GOOD EXAMPLE.—The Rev. Henry Vigne, vicar of Sunbury, Middlesex, has made over, gratuitously and in perpetuity, to the inhabitants of that place in trust, one acre of land to be kept solely as a play-ground for the children of the national schools.

APPREHENSION OF MR. FEARGUS O'CONNOR, FOR SEDITION.—This morning (Friday), Mr. Feargus O'Connor was brought up at Bow-street, having been arrested upon a government warrant, for certain inflammatory speeches which have lately been delivered by him. The examination was strictly private, no person being present except the parties and their solicitors, the chief magistrate, Mr. Hall, and Mr. Burnsby, the chief clerk. The prisoner was taken first to Gardener's-lane station-house, but subsequently he was taken in custody to Bow-street. Mr. O'Connor was apprehended in a coffee-shop, and the warrant was issued, we have since learned, for seditious words spoken at Manchester on the occasion of a meeting for the purpose of erecting a monument to the late Mr. Hunt (Mr. John Campbell has also been arrested on a similar charge.) The result was, Mr. O'Connor was bound over to appear on his trial at Manchester at the next April Assizes. The amount of bail required was, for himself £1000, and two other sureties of £500 each. It is reported that Mr. Campbell was taken to Manchester by the five o'clock train; the bail was required to the amount of £1600—himself in £800, and two others of £400 each.

MANCHESTER, Friday Evening.—The work of arrest is going on here. This morning the Rev. J. Scholfield and son, James Leach, Messrs. Railton, M'Cartney, Doyle, Ellison, and six others were arrested and taken to the New Bailey, examined, and remanded till Tuesday next.

LEEDS. This morning (Friday) the Rev. W. Hill, editor of the Northern Star, and Mr. T. B. Smith, were arrested, and taken to Manchester on a charge of conspiracy.

SHEFFIELD.—Mr. G. J. Harney was arrested here to-day (Friday), and at once sent to Manchester for examination before the magistrates there.

THE INDOSTAN STEAM SHIP.—SOUTHAMPTON, Sept. 24.—This splendid vessel left here to-day for her destination, and to open the new line of steam communication between Calcutta, Madras, Ceylon, and Suez, in concert with the Oriental Company's vessels running between this and Alexandria. She is looked upon as the first link of a grand chain of inter-communication, destined to effect immense benefits, both for Great Britain and her vast Oriental possessions.

STATE OF TRADE IN THE CITY.—Another failure on the Corn Exchange has to be noticed—the firm of Messrs. Hays, Irvine, and Anderson, has been under the necessity of suspending its payments. The liabilities of the house are said to reach £100,000, but, according to some reports which were current on 'Change, they do not much exceed £60,000. Two or three more cases of suspension are looked for to-morrow.—Post, Friday.

METROPOLITAN IMPROVEMENTS.—Mr. Cubitt is now making a new square on the Marquis of Westminster's Pimlico estate, to be called Saint George's-square, extending from Besborough-place to the river. It will be 1170 feet wide, and 1213 yards long. Mr. Cubitt is also going to erect a chain pier at the foot of Vauxhall Bridge, for the accommodation of the steamers. The Commissioners of Woods and Forests have let the kitchen-garden and orchard of Kensington Palace, for building villas and cottages. No property erected on the site is to be of less value than £800 or £900: some of the houses will be worth £2000.

The new sheriffs were sworn in to-day (Friday) at Westminster with the usual ceremonies.

NOTTINGHAM SCHOOL OF DESIGN.—We are happy to announce that the government has determined to establish a school of design in this town, as may be learned from communications, which have been received by the mayor, from the Earl of Lincoln, M.P.—Nottingham Journal.

PROMISSARY NOTES IN CIRCULATION.—England:—Bank of England, £19,914,000, Private Banks, £5,098,259, Joint Stock Banks, £2,819,749; Scotland:—Chartered and Private Joint Stock Banks, £2,648,549; Ireland:—Bank of Ireland, £2,806,000. Private Banks and Joint Stock Banks, £1,058,012. Total, £34,949,594. Bullion in the Bank of England, £9,816,000. John Thornton, Stamps and Taxes, Sept. 30, 1842.

THE BARINGS.—We have heard it stated that the long-established and wealthy firm of Baring, Brothers, and Co., have returned their profits to the income-tax commissioners, on the average of the last three years, at less than £150, and that they have requested the proper authorities to send clerks to examine their books and ascertain the correctness of the returns. This strange circumstance is attributed to their dealings with some of the repudiating States of America.—Sun.

ADELPHI THEATRE.—This favourite little theatre commenced its season last night with a corps which promises well for public patronage. Mr. P. Bedford, Mr. Wright, Mr. O. Smith, Mr. Wilkinson, Mr. Beverley, Mr. Lyon, Miss Faucit, and Miss Murray, are names to which the public have long been familiar, the absence of which at this house could scarcely be stoned for. Under such circumstances, it is to be regretted that their first new drama should not have been more decidedly successful. It was termed The Owl Sisters; or the Haunted Abbey Ruins; it was too long, and the audience were consequently so wearied that the last act was almost a struggle for existence. The Rifle Brigade and Norma followed, and made the audience feel that they were once more in their own old house for genuine talented entertainment. The house was very crowded.

FIRE AT SADLER'S WELLS THEATRE.—Last night (Thursday) a fire broke out in the property-room of Sadler's Wells Theatre, which was completely extinguished in about half an hour, and the performances proceeded. The fire was happily confined to the room in which it originated.

FIRE AT GREENWICH.—On Friday night, between 11 and 12 o'clock, a fire broke out in the house of Mr. Carpenter, confectioner, of London-street, Greenwich. In a very short time the engine from the West of England, and two others, were on the spot; but before the flames could be subdued, property to the amount of between three and four hundred pounds was destroyed. Mr. Carpenter is insured.

ROBBERY.—Between six and nine on Wednesday evening, a daring and extensive robbery was committed at the house of Mr. Bragg, the Britannia, Lower-road, Islington, when a japanned cash-box, about 18 inches by 8, which contained £241 in sovereigns, £18 in silver, &c. &c., was stolen.

WOLVERHAMPTON.—A traveller, who has just arrived from Wolverhampton, states that the greatest apprehensions are entertained for the quiet of the town. The notices of the men that they will no longer work for the present wages terminate next Saturday; after which day they are resolved not to turn into work unless the masters make an advance, which the latter are equally resolved not to do.

CHARGE OF ARSON AT LIVERPOOL.—The Liverpool Mail contains a long account of the examination of a man, named Patrick Doran, on the charge of setting fire to his premises, which are insured for £500. The evidence against the prisoner being closed, the further inquiry was adjourned. The prisoner was ordered to be confined meanwhile in the main bridewell.

ST. LEONARD'S, Sept. 28.—A sad accident happened here today; the up-coach to town, turning round by the Saxon Hotel to the London-road, upset. Several of the passengers were bruised; the portor was much injured, and was attended by Mr. Smith, surgeon, from the time of the accident till he breathed his last, about half-past seven this evening.

NORWICH.—A lad named Skipper, 17 or 18 years of age, has been committed to Norwich gaol, on a charge of setting fire to a stack of straw, which stood near the wall of St. Faith's union-house. The boy acknowledged that he set it on fire, hoping that it would burn down the workhouse, that he might be no longer fed on bread and water.

ATTEMPT AT MURDER.—An extraordinary and most inhuman attempt was made, on Sunday last, by a man named James Mallers, or Mallard, to murder his wife, at Hemingford, Cambridgeshire. The following we give in detail:—

Mallers and his father-in-law lived next door to one another, and on Sunday afternoon, during divine service, while all the persons residing in the house belonging his own were at church, he enticed his wife (who is pregnant) to the brink of a well in the back part of the premises, and, watching his opportunity, when the unfortunate woman's attention was engaged, he seized her suddenly and threw her head foremost into the well, which is about ten or twelve feet deep. In the fall the poor creature's head came upwards, and, as there was not more than five feet of water in the well, she was enabled to keep her mouth above the surface. Seeing that his object was not likely to be effected, the murderous wretch jumped down upon her shoulders, and endeavoured to trample her under the water. During this attempt the struggles of the woman for life were dreadful; and each time that her head rose above the surface she made use of the brief breathing space to beseech him in the most agonising tones to spare her, promising that if he would desist from his design she would not mention a word of what had happened. He replied that he had gone too far to stop, and also would hang him if he spared her life. Moved at last, either by the fear that somebody would arrive, or by pity for his victim, he relented, got a ladder, and helped her out. The moment she was inside her bedroom, she had the presence of mind to lock the door. He tried to get into the room, but not succeeding made his escape. When the monster's father-in-law returned from church the circumstances became known, and the magisterial authorities having been made acquainted with them, the poor woman's deposition was taken down, and a warrant issued for the apprehension of the prisoner, who is supposed to have come to London.

SINGULAR CONSPIRACY AT BRISTOL.—Mr. Traill was engaged at Union-hall, on Friday, in the detection of one of the most extraordinary frauds ever attempted.—

A timber merchant of Bristol, named Woolley, a widower, had permitted his deceased wife's sister, named Briers, to reside in his house; and in the month of June last she made a representation to him relative to a Miss Louisa Poole King, of Redcliffe-parade, Bristol. She told him that young lady had taken a great fancy to him, and that she knew him by her passing his house frequently, and that she had expressed a strong inclination to be more acquainted with him, and that her hopes of happiness were fixed upon him. Briers then asked him if he had and objection to cultivate the acquaintance of such an amiable and accomplished young lady as Miss King, and he was aware of the respectability of her family, he intimated a desire to acquesce in her wishes. After a series of letter writing (forgeries), messages, and presents, between the parties, the time was fixed for the marriage, and the parties left Bristol (Miss King not wishing her friends to know of the wedding), and, on their arrival in town, they put up at the St. Paul's Coffee house, from whence they removed to the Bridge House Hotel, where they assumed Miss King informed him that she had a fortune of £47,000, £27,000 of which she should make over to him, and the remainder to be settled on her for life. He acquiesced in this proposition, and they were married at St. John's Church, in the borough, on the 12th instant. After the ceremony they went into private lodgings in Thomas-street, where they remained until they set out on their return to Bristol. They remained in St. Thomas-street for a week after the nuptials, at the expiration of which time they went to Bristol, and on their arrival they proceeded to Redcliffe-square, and Briers went to Mr. King's house, as she said, to appraise Mrs. Woolley's lady's maid that her mistress, who had changed her name to Mrs. Woolley, was desirous of seeing her next day at her husband's house. The prisoners then each gave him a kiss, and departed, as he supposed, for the ebony carriage, saying they should be back in half an hour, and they then went away, taking with them, without his knowledge, two large trunks and a box belonging to him, containing various articles, his property, and he had seen neither of the "ladies" until that day he met them in the city, and gave them into custody. In Briers' possession was found a gold watch belonging to him. He knew a woman named Allen, in Bristol, who he had every reason to believe was concerned in the conspiracy. He did not know to what family the woman to whom he was married belonged, but he believed she was of low origin; that she had been a servant, that she could not write, and that she had a brother a sailor, who lived in Radcliffe-street, Bristol.—Mr. Clarkson said, that as the case was not yet matured against the prisoners, he should request that they might be remanded, in order to give time to take a third party into custody, when other facts relating to this extraordinary case would be brought to light. His intention was to prefer a charge of forgery at common law against Mary Ann Morgan, and also of larceny against the other prisoner.—The prisoners were then remanded, Morgan saying that she was led into it by her fellow-prisoner.

POLICE.—GUILDHALL.—Margaret Farrell, a tall, elegant-looking girl, of about 22 years of age, was placed at the bar, charged with attempting to destroy herself, by throwing herself from Blackfriar's-bridge, on Thursday evening. The prisoner said that her mother lived in Palace New-road, Westminster.—The magistrate remanded her for two days, and gave directions to the Clerk to apply to the father of the girl respecting his daughter.

GREAT QUEEN-SQUARE.—William Dell was charged with having fraudulently obtained goods from a number of tradesmen, by representing himself as a gentleman's butler, sent by his master. He stands remanded for a week.

GREAT ORMOND-STREET.—James Uwins, porter, in the employ of Messrs. Norbey and Co., linen-drapers in Leicester-square, was finally examined for robbing his employers, and fully committed.

UNION-HALL.—Thomas Taylor, a fishing-line keeper in Horsleydown, was charged with having smuggled brandy, Geneva cordials, and tobacco on his premises. The mitigated penalty of £50 was inflicted, and in default of payment committed for six months to Horsemonger gaol

BOW-STREET.—FASHIONABLE THIEF.—This day (Friday) Baron Kame, the man charged with stealing two rings and a pin from Mrs. Johnson, of Palace-yard, was brought up. The prisoner has undergone several examinations, the facts of which have appeared. Mr. Twyford finally sent him to Newgate for trial.

FOREIGN.

PARIS.—In a correspondence lately commenced betwixt the Pope and the Cabinet of the Tuileries, his Holiness, whilst praising to the skies M. Guizot's Administration, hinted that he wished his Excellency would enter into the true road to his salvation. The Minister, who, as you of course know, is a Protestant, answered, that on his part he daily offered up prayers for the conversion of his Holiness!—Post.—[This is a regular Joe Miller.]

The Paris papers state that the accounts from Algiers were disastrous. The Flitta tribe, one on which the French most counted, have risen, and driven General d'Arbouville back into Mostaganem, with fifty men hors de combat. The camp of Setiff has been fiercely attacked; but few details have arrived.

HANOVER.—The King of Hanover appeared at the theatre of his capital on the 20th inst., for the first time since the death of the Queen. A letter in the Frankfort Journal states that the audience expressed their joy at his recovery from his recent illness by acclamations.—Galignani.

The Emperor of Russia has published an ukase, authorising the banker, Baron Streglitz, of St. Petersburgh, to make a loan of 40 to 50 millions silver roubles to defray the expenses of the railroad between St. Petersburgh and Moscow. The amount to be issued every year will depend upon the outlay which the railroad may require, and six months' notice will be given to Baron Streglitz.

VIEW OF LIVERPOOL.

LIVERPOOL.

Liverpool, the first commercial city in the British empire, if not in the world, is situated on the north-west coast of England, and upon the northern shore of the river Mersey. Its range of extensive and magnificent docks excites the admiration of all stranger visitors, and, when coupled with the general appearance of the town, at once establishes its claim to being considered one of the finest cities in Europe.

Although Liverpool has attained this high standing amongst the towns of England, yet this eminence has only been acquired of late years. The etymology of the two first syllables of its name, Liver, or Lever, is derived from the fact of the district, part of which gives site to the town, being originally the possession of the family of Lever, whose pedigree and arms are noted in the Harleian Collection. The latter portion of the name, pool, is traced to the fact of this portion of Lancashire being formerly a marsh or pool. The derivation of Lever, as above, has been disputed; and some etymologists have advanced claims to this portion of the name being derived from Liver, the name of a bird which is said to have frequented this place.

It also deserves the attention of the historian from being the residence of Roger de Poictiers, lord of the honour of Lancaster, who possessed a castle so early as 1076. This castle was dismantled in 1659, and remained in a dilapidated state till 1721, when it was finally demolished, and the church of St. George was erected on its site. In the two insurrections in the north in the cause of the exiled Stuarts the inhabitants of the town, from its defenceless condition, were under serious apprehension for its safety; for, though a fort was constructed at its north-western extremity, it was inadequate to the security of a port of such rising consequence. Its commerce extends to all parts of the known world, and the docks are continually crowded with British and foreign merchantmen trading between England and the European continent, the West Indies, America, Africa, and Asia. An immense traffic is also carried on here with Scotland and Ireland, in the interchange of goods, &c. Strangers are particularly struck with the number and immensity of the Liverpool Docks. They are reckoned the first known; and their magnitude corresponds with the importance of the town. Clarence Dock is the principal resort of steam-vessels of all sizes and from various parts. It was opened in 1830, and has a surface of 29,313 square yards.

It were needless, here, to enumerate particulars relative to the rapid extension of the commercial character of Liverpool; nor is it necessary that we should enter into full details relative to the rapid growth of the town—we may cite one proof:—In St. Martin's district alone (which is a strip of land lying between New Scotland-road and the canal, bounded on the south by Burlington-street, and on the north by Boundary-street), there have been 300 houses built within the last fifteen months, containing, upon the most moderate computation, 2100 souls; and it is calculated that 300 houses more will be built in the course of another year. The total population of the district at present is 10,000. In five or six years this will probably be doubled; and, when the whole space is covered with buildings, there will be not less than 40,000 inhabitants, all of the working classes. The houses of Liverpool are constructed both of brick and stone, and many of them are very spacious; perhaps no other town in England has received greater improvement, during the past half century, than has been conferred upon Liverpool. Before that period the streets were narrow and inconvenient, and the houses were devoid of all claim to architectural beauty; but the alterations of late years give the town an air of elegance and commodiousness not to be met with in any of our English seaport towns. This alteration has been produced by the exertions of the corporation, in whom is vested the proprietary of a great proportion of the houses. As the leases of these have progressively worn out, they have been re-let only on condition of expending certain sums necessary for their embellishment. The appearance of the town is enriched with a great number of beautiful churches and other public buildings, markets, arcade, cemetery, &c. &c. The value of bonded property in the port cannot be valued at less than two millions sterling. The borough sends two members to Parliament.

GREAT FIRE AND LOSS OF LIFE IN LIVERPOOL.

On the morning of Friday week, the most destructive fire which has taken place in this town since the memorable destruction of the Gores in 1801, broke out in a yard occupied by Mr. Penniston, dry-salter, about the centre of Crompton-street. As Inspector Massey and officer Hitchmough were going their rounds, about five minutes before three o'clock, they discovered the fire, and on entering the premises, which are situated close to Mr. Isaac's oil and varnish mill, they found a bench on fire, which they supposed communicated the flames to the roof of the shed. The fire was alive under the engine-boiler, and the door of the furnace wide open. When they entered, there was no person but themselves upon the premises. The steam in the boiler was also partly up at the time. Information was immediately conveyed to the fire-police station, and three engines, under the direction of Mr. Hewitt, immediately started off, and reached the scene of destruction shortly after three o'clock. The wind at this period was blowing a strong gale from the north, and the rain poured down heavily. The three engines were instantly got into play, and in a few minutes were joined by the remainder of the engines, and one belonging to the West of England Insurance Company. All their efforts, however, availed little, for owing to the combustible materials of the premises, as well as the nature of the goods which they contained, the fire continued to gain head, and in about twenty minutes after its commencement, the warehouse in which it had commenced, and two others adjoining, were completely destroyed. Mr. Isaac's oil and varnish works next fell a sacrifice to the flames, and the combustible materials in this gentleman's premises caused such a volume of flame as excited in the beholders feelings of awe and admiration. Henceforth the fire set at defiance all the efforts of the fire-police, and the continued torrents of water which, without intermission, they poured upon the burning mass, did not appear to make the least impression upon it. The sheds and cooperage of Messrs. Taylor and Green were next assailed, and added fuel to the devouring element. These gentlemen are also extensive owners of carts, lorreys, and horses, and we are happy to state that this part of their property was removed to a place of safety. The wind however, being chiefly from the north, forced the flames towards Formby-street, which, with the exception of a range of new cottages at the top, and a dwelling-house opposite, in the occupation of Mrs. Bark, consisted of ranges of splendid warehouses recently built. It still advanced eastwardly towards Great Howard-street, deserting in its onward course several yards and sheds, and at length reached the yard of the Messrs. Molyneux, the front of which is in Great Howard-street, but it runs a considerable distance backwards in a westerly direction. Here, again, it received additional strength from considerable quantities of timber in the yards and sheds. The fire still progressed onwards up Formby-street, and caught some bonded sheds which front Great Howard-street. These, with the goods which they contained, were in a short time added to the mass of burning and smoking ruins which now occupied the sites of the previous buildings, and left nothing but outward walls standing. All the sheds and yards between Crompton-street and Formby-street were, in a few hours, either a mass of ruins or in flames; and the wind still continuing to blow freshly from the north, the fire was communicated, about five o'clock, from the adjoining sheds to the rear of the fine warehouses and sheds on the north side of Formby-street. On this side of the street, in the course of about two hours, four warehouses belonging to Mr. Nathaniel Rayner, one ditto, the property of Mr. Taylor, and three bonded sheds belonging to Mr. Gray, were destroyed. At this period the fire had assumed an awful magnitude, and burned with great ferocity. These warehouses and sheds were chiefly filled with cotton, but contained considerable quantities of other kinds of merchandise. On the ground floor of one of these warehouses there were no fewer than one thousand barrels of turpentine, to which, when in flames, no description can do adequate justice. It burned as long as any of the turpentine remained, with the fiercest intensity, and by its own mere force, as its situation precluded the operation of the wind, it set fire to the new sheds on the opposite side of the street, in the occupation of Mr. M'Knight. The working of the various fire-engines, the encouraging cheers of the men as they rapidly plied the handles of the engines, the roaring of the vast volume of flame which ascended from the burning pile, the crashing of the timbers, and the falling of the disrupted and destroyed walls, could not fail of impressing every beholder with the strongest emotions of terror and astonishment. Here it becomes our painful duty, whilst recording this melancholy event, to notice one of those fatal occurrences which almost always accompany fires of any considerable magnitude. Two of the fire-police engines, with a full complement of men, were hard at work, pouring a continued discharge of water upon the sheds of Mr. M'Knight, when, without any warning whatever, a great explosion or crash took place in one of the warehouses on the north side of the street, and almost over where the engines were being worked: simultaneously with the noise, the wall of the warehouse fell, partly into the street and partly upon a shed adjoining, belonging to Mr. Gray. Some of the men had the good fortune to make their escape; but such as had not time were buried in the ruins. Of the number of those who were thus overwhelmed by the falling mass, were three men in the employ of Mr. M'Knight, who, at the time of the occurrence, were busily engaged in removing goods lowered from the sheds. Several of the fire-police were also buried in the ruins. With every promptitude the sufferers were released; but many of them without the least signs of animation. All the wounded were immediately taken to the Northern Hospital, where every suitable attention was immediately paid to them. Amongst the number taken to the hospital was Inspector Riding, who had one of his legs broken. In addition to this calamity, we have to notice the death of a very useful and active officer of the name of Samuel Hodson. The station of this officer, previous to his death, was in Castle-street, opposite the coach stand, and he was well known through his civility and the faithful discharge of his duty. About half-past six, he and officers Bates and Tuck were holding their branches directing the water against the burning premises of Mr. M'Knight, when Tuck, it appears, saw some idea of the wall falling, and gave intimation to that effect to the other officers. A burning bale of cotton, however, fell into the street; Hodson ran towards it to remove it out of the way, when the wall fell, and buried him in the ruins. Tuck at the moment seized hold of Bates, and pulled him from beneath the falling mass, and thus happily saved both their lives. The body of poor Hodson still remains under the ruins. Several gentlemen, who were assisting and encouraging the men, had also a very narrow escape. Amongst these were the head constable, Mr. Hewitt, and Mr. Maxwell, agent for Hillie insurance companies. Both these gentlemen were severely hurt, and blackened all over from the falling materials. It would be supererogatory to notice the zeal and activity of both these gentlemen wherever duty leads them,—for our own part we are sure their zeal carries them beyond all regard for self, and it is to be feared that their disregard for their own personal safety will, at some time or other, be attended with serious consequences to themselves. Mr. M'Knight, the lessee of several of the sheds, also incurred great danger, as did also Mr. Priestman, of the firm of Messrs. Wm. Brown and Priestman. Both these gentlemen were busily engaged in superintending the removal of goods from the different sheds when the accident occurred, but we are happy to say they sustained no personal injury. Inspector Quick was also present when the accident occurred, and most praiseworthily exerted himself to rescue the sufferers from their horrible situation. A master carter, named Campbell, was most active to render every service in his power, and his conduct has been represented to us as most praiseworthy. The cries of the sufferers whilst under the burning mass were most appalling. During the time of this awful occurrence, two firemen, named Little and Nelson, were busily employed in pouring water upon the upper floors of Mr. Maw's iron warehouses. Whilst thus occupied the flames attacked the lower part of the premises, and cut off their retreat. Every one who saw them gave them up for lost, but, very fortunately, there was a jigger rope on the premises, down which they descended, and thus saved themselves to the over gratification of their comrades. About six o'clock the wind veered a little to the westward, and drove the flames over Formby-street to the warehouses and sheds on the south side. These were speedily in flames. The sheds of Mr. M'Knight, and the sheds and warehouses of Mr. Rayner were rapidly enveloped in one fiery mass. Mr. M'Knight's property was filled with sugar and rice, just landed from the Bland, from Calcutta. Much of this was destroyed, and much, we are happy to state, was removed in time; but of the cotton which filled the warehouses and sheds of Mr. Rayner, little was saved. All this property was entirely new, and such was the avidity of the fire, that in about two hours after they were attacked, they were one mass of flame from Formby-street to Neptune-street. Two iron warehouses, in Formby-street, owing to the incombustible nature of their materials, have as yet escaped destruction; but the warehouses and sheds on each side are a mass of utter ruins. During the raging of the fiery element, several persons were busily employed in the upper lofts of these warehouses, hoisting up buckets of water, so long as the ruins did not prevent all access to them, and dashing it over the floors and walls to keep them cool; but so great was the heat, that the water evaporated in steam as quickly as it was thrown upon the heated floors and walls. The ground upon which the fire took place forms an oblong square. To the north it commences in Crompton-street, and terminates to the south in Neptune-street. On the east it runs along a portion of Great Howard-street, and to the west it is bounded by Waterloo-road and Dock. In the interior of this square the fire had now uncontrolled sway, and consumed everything within its reach, saving the two iron warehouses already mentioned.

Having now noticed the direction and effects of this calamity, let us for a moment or two direct attention to the awful and magnificent spectacle which the scene presented. Let the reader imagine himself standing upon the top of the Rotunda, Waterloo-road. From the summit of this building the spectator will have a fine view of the whole burning and smoking pile. On looking towards Great Howard-street, a vast mountain of agitated fire meets the view. This mountain consists of tier upon tier of cotton, forming a very well defined cone with a tolerably sharp apex, and a widely extended base. All that now meets his view is one mass of living fire, agitated and fretted by a strong western breeze, and consists of the ruins of several noble warehouses, which had been piled up to the roof with bales of cotton, and which have yet scarcely lost their original form, although one mass of fire. Further on, in the same direction, are several minor mountains of fire, encircled here and there with clouds of smoke rising from the ruins. A little to the left are the warehouses of Messrs. Rayner, Gray, M'Knight and Horsley, on fire, with large volumes of flames bursting from the doors and windows, and towering over the roofs of the premises. In the midst of these are the two iron warehouses belonging to the trustees of Marshall, Rodgers, and Co., and which have hitherto set at defiance all the power of their fiery assailant. Advancing the eye towards Neptune-street, the fire may be still seen on its onward career, seizing upon other property of the above-named gentlemen, and bursting out from the doors and windows of their various warehouses and bonded sheds. During all this time men are seen running to and fro calling out to each other, —giving directions about the removal of goods—urging horses to accelerate their speed while the cheer of the firemen and the working of the engines are distinctly heard amid all the surrounding din and confusion; and, to complete the scene, remove the eye from this direction towards the Borough Gaol, where may be seen Mr. Highton, the governor, directing the operations of a number of men engaged in pouring buckets of water over the roof of the gaol to prevent ignition, by the heat which assailed the building from the opposite side of the street. The above is but a faint description of the scene which this awful conflagration presented; but a little exercise of the imagination of the reader, aided by the illustrations we are enabled to give, will render the picture more complete, and give him a tolerably correct idea of the effect of the fire, as well as the great destruction of property which took place during the calamitous event. In addition to the warehouses and sheds, several dwelling-houses have been destroyed. Two or three of these were situated in Formby-street, near to where the fire commenced. Mrs Brake's, at the top of Formby-street, is, however, safe; and of a range of new cottages close by, eight have been much injured. The inmates of all the other dwellings in the vicinity of Waterloo-road had most of their bedding and furniture ready for removal at a moment's notice. The amount of property consumed by this visitation is very great.

CLARENCE DOCK, LIVERPOOL.

FIRE AT LIVERPOOL.

The following is, as near as we can ascertain, a statement of the buildings destroyed, and the goods supposed to be destroyed; Rayner's A 309, B 315; Rayner's C 309, D 315; Maw's four warehouses, no numbers; Gray's E 228; Grey's C 229; Taylor's 233; Rodger's 256, two; Rayner's shed, 252; Gregson's 319, two; Horsley's two sheds; M'Knight's two ditto; Poole's two sheds; Taylor's cooperages and other timber yards. The whole is assessed at an annual value of £3500. The value of the buildings, exclusive of the land, probably from £35,000 to £40,000. The principal contents were cotton, turpentine, flour, &c. It has been estimated, by a competent authority, that 53,000 bales of cotton have been destroyed. The following is an estimate: —£530,000 in cotton; £150,000 in other goods; £35,000 in buildings —total, £715,000. It is feared, however, that even this sum is considerably under the mark, and that the loss, when correctly ascertained, will amount to somewhere near a million sterling.

The Mayor and Mr. Rushton were early on the spot, and aided the officers of police in their arduous duties. A number of men from the Redwing (her Majesty's steamer) attended, and, under the direction of Mr. Ladd, assisted in supplying the engines with water. Water was obtained in great abundance from the Waterloo-dock, but in consequence of the height of the walls, and no aperture being made in them, it required a great force to raise it. Mr. Highton, governor of the borough gaol, was most actively engaged in every place where he could make his services of any avail. Messrs. Superintendents Leverett, Quick, and M'Donald were early in attendance, and, by their judicious arrangements, cleared the way for the uninterrupted exertions of the firemen. No person who attended the fire could for a moment doubt the efficiency and excellency of the fire brigade and police establishment. Every one, both inspectors and men, must have excited the admiration of those who witnessed the assiduous manner in which they discharged their duty, amidst the dangers which continually encompassed them. Many could hardly be recognised on account of the soot and smoke which lined their eyes and altered their features. Amongst the casualties, we have to record the death of a labouring man, who was engaged in endeavouring to remove cotton from one of the sheds of Mr. Rayner, in Neptune-street. This person, about ten o'clock in the morning, was seen in a very perilous situation by Inspector Clough, who endeavoured to get hold of him to remove him out of danger: not succeeding in the attempt, the inspector got a rope to throw over him, in order to pull him out, but while in the act the flames surrounded him and Mr. Whitty (who was also present), so that he was obliged to relinquish the attempt, and he had the melancholy sight of seeing the man burnt to death before his eyes without being able to render him any assistance.

Ground Plan of the Seat of the Fire.—The seat of the fire is nearly a square, of which one side, Neptune-street, is 163 yards in length. The opposite side, Crompton-street (formerly Wood-street North), is 209 yards in length. One point is to the docks and Waterloo-road, the other towards Great Howard-street and the Borough Gaol, on both sides of which, and especially to the side on which the wind drove the flames with the greatest vehemence, there is a good deal of vacant ground. Formby-street passed down the centre of the plot, and is now completely obliterated by the fallen ruins. The whole was overlooked by the old wind-mill, so long a conspicuous object, and of which the base is now turned into a public-house, and called the Rotunda. The whole area is about six acres, or about thirty thousand square yards. This was thickly covered with lofty warehouses and manufactories, and store-houses of various descriptions, mixed with dwelling-houses. The largest portion is now levelled in utter ruin, or else so injured as to be useless; and the only portions left in a perfect state are the row of houses towards the docks, and a newly-built warehouse behind them, and the buildings and warehouses in the lower end of Crompton-street and Neptune-street.

On Saturday, at one o'clock, a meeting of the agents representing the different fire insurance offices took place in the underwriters' committee-room, N. D. Bold, Esq., in the chair. After "comparing notes" on the engagements of each office having liabilities in connection with this destructive event, the following was reported as the result:—Sun, £47,000; Globe, £40,000; Royal Exchange, £30,000; Phœnix, £30,000; London Corporation, £30,000; Liverpool, £25,000; York and London, £25,000; Imperial, £20,000; Scotch Union, £20,000; West of England, £20,000; Alliance, £13,000; Atlas, £12,000; Manchester, £10,000; Guardian, £7000; Yorkshire, £5000; Norwich Union, £3600; County, £3300; North British, £3000; London Union, £7000. Total liabilities, £359,000.

Second Outbreak of the Fire.—On Monday night, shortly before ten o'clock, the fire again broke out, in premises that were thought to be quite safe, after dark. It was first discovered by a boy, who communicated it to Inspector Moore. He immediately made it known to Mr. Whitty, who, fortunately, was just then making a tour of the ruins. The alarm was given throughout the lower part of the town, soon after ten o'clock, by the springing of rattles and the tolling of the station bells; and, from the destruction of life and property that had already taken place, the most painful apprehensions were entertained, and thousands rushed to the scene, which was indicated by the glare on the sky, nearly over the site of the previous conflagration. It was found that the premises ignited were Webster's small house and extensive yard behind, and Devan's marine store adjoining, and also some premises occupied by a carter named Bushell, who had several horses in the stables behind. The whole of the premises are situated at the lower part of Compton-street (the northern boundary of the great fire), and the fire had communicated from the interior of the area where the buildings are in ruins, and yet burning in the sublime manner before described. The flames from the buildings, though low, being almost wholly of wood, gained a rapid heat, and the cooperage, the marine store, and Bushell's (at the back), were all speedily in flames, over a frontage to the street of about twenty-five yards. Two or three of the horses and some pigs were got out alive, but some were burned to death. Just above, in the same row, and to the east, was a double cotton shed, longitudinal with the street, which was for some time in great danger, but Superintendent Leverett had the door burst open, and got the fire extinguished just in time to save it. When the fire began the greatest alarm naturally prevailed amongst the inmates of the premises, several of whom were in their beds—females as well as males ran out in their shirts and shirts. A number of engines were speedily on the ground, and were worked by the police, under Mr. Whitty and others, with as much energy, notwithstanding their previous fatigue, as if they had come fresh to the scene of action. We can form no estimate of the loss; but we may say that this fire, as well as the greater one we have had the pain to record, shows the necessity for some law to prevent the building of sheds and other premises of timber, and other combustible materials, particularly in the mercantile and crowded parts of the town, where much valuable property is stored, and many lives are endangered on the spreading of a fire. The fire, at twelve o'clock, was got under; and, but for the amazing rapidity with which it burst amongst the wooden buildings destroyed, would have been arrested in a few minutes by the large and active force at present on the spot. Six valuable horses belonging to Mr. Bushell were destroyed; amidst the smoking ruins upon the site of the stabling were the carcases of two, charred to a cinder, and the bones perfectly white in parts from which the skin and flesh had been stripped off. A donkey was the only tenant of the stabling which made its escape without assistance; and, as it rushed through the gates of the yard into Compton-street, with its long ears all a-flame, and shaking its head, furnished a laughable exhibition contrasted with the horror of the remaining scene. The fate of the pigs which were upon the premises is unknown. They were in all probability saved, having promptly made their egress from their sties, and distributed themselves in all directions amongst the legs of those engaged in arresting the progress of the flames. The stench from the remains of the four-footed tenants of the stable was dread ful.

No. 1. Formby-street. 2. Borough Prison. 3. Great Howard-street. 4. The Fire-Proof Warehouse. 5. Formby-street, where the Engine, with the Firemen, was buried. 6. The Chimney of the Bone-house where the Fire began. 7. Neptune-street.

RUINS AFTER THE FIRE.

An inquest was held on Monday and Tuesday on the bodies of Martin, Smith, and Bell, who died at the Northern Hospital from injuries received at the late fire. The only statement which appeared to contain any originality in it was that of Inspector Abraham, who said About five minutes before taree o'clock on Friday morning I was on duty in Vauxhall-road, when I knocked and asked one of the officers whether all was right? He replied in the affirmative, with the exception of what he conceived to be a small fire in the distance. I looked in the direction, and said that it certainly looked like a fire, and that we had better proceed at once to the spot. After a little further observation, I perceived that it lay decidedly behind one of the houses at the canal, near the French Prison. We ran together, and as we were proceeding over Chisenlale-bridge the clock struck three. We then proceeded as fast as we could to Crompton-street, where we saw a bright blaze, which caused a reflection. I went to the gate of Mr. Peniston's yard, but saw no one there. I immediately knocked my stick, and an officer answered and came up. I asked him his name, and he said it was Danzell, and that the word had been passed to the fire-station. I then returned to the fire. At this period several other constables had come up. We tried the gate of Peniston's yard, but found it secure. I asked two women, who happened to be looking out of a window at the time, whether they could lend me a poker, or any other heavy instrument, to break the lock? They replied that they had a hatchet, which they threw our. Danzell caught it, and, after the lock had been broken, and just as we were about to enter, Inspector Massy arrived. I ran into the yard and looked round. I paid particular attention to the situation of the engine-house. My first attention was directed to the fire under the engine. I saw the doors of the fire-grate wide open, and said it was rather singular they should have been left. Two grates were below the engine-house, and the floor opposite the engine was quite clear. There was nothing near the fire in the grate to communicate to any of the things in the place. Every care seemed to have been taken to prevent communication. We then thought it advisable to cut away the roof of the engine-house, which was on fire at the time, to prevent the flames from extending to the adjoining buildings, and we tried to do so by lifting the roof up; but the fire had communicated right and left, on the south as well as on the westward, and the sheds blazed almost as speedily as if they had been covered over with turpentine. The flames ran as astonishingly fast on the top of the engine-house shed as if a train of gunpowder had been left there. After we had succeeded in removing some very heavy casks, which, I believe, were filled with bones, some one cried out that the engine might burst, and that if we touched the top cut we were all in danger of destruction. Fearing there might be some truth in this remark, we jumped off and made the best of our way out, and then I sent in a man with Danzell to let off the steam from the boiler, after which I proceeded to Mrs. Isaac's gate, where I saw another raging among some tar barrels. The engines came up at this period, when I directed Mr. Hewitt, of the fire station, to play upon the ignited materials on Mrs. Isaac's premises, but he thought it more advisable to play in the first instance upon the warehouses, three of which were then on fire. We broke open Mrs. Isaac's gate at once, and found that the fire was proceeding slowly in her yard; but I think the fire could not have originated in her (Mrs. Isaac's) place, but that it must have originated in Mr. Peniston's yard. Within twenty minutes all the sheds on the south side were in flames, which communicated with the windows of several low warehouses. The flames spread most rapidly, and in a few minutes all the warehouses were on fire. We experienced much difficulty in procuring a sufficiency of water in the commencement.—Mr. Peniston: I beg your pardon, there was a large quantity of water in my yard.—Inspector Abraham: I am not speaking exactly of your yard, but of the pipes from which we worked the engines. If we could have obtained water at first, and had been ten minutes sooner on the spot, and been provided with buckets, I have no doubt we should have extinguished the fire immediately.—Mr. Peniston: Gayle, the watchman, should have exerted himself much better than he appears to have done.—The Foreman: When did you first see the fire in Mrs. Isaac's place?—Witness: About a quarter past three o'clock.—A Juror: Did you and Inspector Massy go into Mr. Peniston's yard about the same time?—Witness: Yes.—Juror: Did you see a bench burning in the engine-house, and the flames going up the side of a wooden partition?—Witness: I did.—Juror: Would you presume from that circumstance that the flames originated there?—Witness: Yes; in that corner of the yard, and that proceeded from there the fire went into Mrs. Isaac's, where it burned slowly.—Juror: Did you see anything like where a candle might have been placed?—Witness: No, I did not; the fire under the engine appeared as if it had been in a cake, and was burning slowly.—The Coroner then briefly addressed the jury. He said they had arrived at nothing beyond what had come out in evidence on the preceding day. There appeared to be no certainty as to the precise spot where, or the manner in which, the fire had commenced. He did not see any good which could arise by keeping the inquiry open for any longer period. The only way in which the evidence could affect the verdict would be this—that A. B., having been assisting to put out a fire which had been either feloniously or accidentally originated, met his death. He (the Coroner) had given the subject a great deal of consideration, and was decidedly of opinion that he could not be affected. Therefore, unless the jury should think that anything was to be gained by keeping the inquiry still open, he would close it at once.—Officer 24 was here called, and, on being asked whether he knew how the fire originated, replied in the negative. All he knew was, that when he went to the place he heard, some say, "I told the boy about the boiler."—The Coroner then pointed the attention of the jury to the main facts of the case, and directed them as to the finding of their verdict. He said that as Mr. Peniston had not had a shilling's worth of his property insured, it could scarcely be possible that that gentleman would maliciously set his own concern on fire; and that Coghlan (the engineer) in his evidence had very satisfactorily shown the impossibility of anything of the kind having taken place from the fire in the stove. With regard to the letter which had been received by Mr. Peniston, it would appear that in the opinion of the writer the fire had been accidental, and that it was a design on the part of Providence to punish thereby the act of the nation in giving a stone when the people asked for bread. It had, however, been written by some religious enthusiast, from the way in which it was penned.—The foreman then announced the verdict of the jury, as follows:—"We find that the three deceased parties were accidentally killed while they were employed in removing goods from a warehouse which was contiguous to one that was on fire, but how it came on fire no evidence doth appear; and we wish, at the same time, to clear Mr. Peniston of the charge that his premises had been purposely set on fire by himself, or by the neglect of any of his servants."

PROVINCIAL.

WORCESTER FESTIVAL.—The 119th triennial meeting of the choirs of Hereford, Gloucester, and Worcester, was held last week at the latter city, and with greater success, we rejoice to hear, than has been known for years. The principal singers were—Miss Birch, Mrs. W. Loder, Miss Marshall, Miss Davies, and Miss Dolby; Messrs. Hobbs, Francis, Hawkins, Laffler, and Phillips. Leaders, Messrs. Cramer and Loder; organ, Mr. Amett; pianoforte, Mr. Hunt; conductor, Mr. Surnam. The band and choruses amounted to nearly 300. On Tuesday morning divine service was performed in the cathedral, and an excellent sermon preached by the Lord Bishop of Worcester, the choir performing Handel's "Te Deum," an anthem by Croft, and the Coronation Anthem. In the evening Handel's "Alexander's Feast" and a miscellaneous act were performed. Wednesday morning Handel's "Messiah" was performed in the cathedral; and Haydn's "Seasons" in the evening, in the College Hall. Thursday morning, "Judas Maccabeus;" in the evening, Romberg's "Lay of the Bell," and a miscellaneous act. Friday morning, Beethoven's "Mount of Olives," newly adapted, and called "David in the Wilderness," with a selection of sacred music, in the evening a grand ball in the Guildhall. The whole of the performances went off most successfully, and the total amount of subscriptions for the widows and orphans of the Clergymen's Charity was £1041 10s. 2d., being £109 more than in 1839, and £266 more than 1836. All the money collected at the cathedral doors is given to the charity. What the receipts for tickets amount to we have not yet heard, but they are considerably more than what has been received for some years back. The experiment of employing native talent only has perfectly succeeded, and will in future be acted upon both at Hereford and Gloucester.

DEATH OF SIR JAMES SPITTAL, KNT.—We regret to announce that this highly respectable gentleman died yesterday at his house in Newington. Sir James Spittal was the first Lord Provost of the city elected under the Reformed Burgh Act.—Edinburgh Courant of Monday.

A FEMALE SAILOR.—On Thursday week, just as the Lady Charlotte was about to sail from Cardiff, attention was drawn to a person in sailor's dress, who was exhibiting money rather carelessly, and expressing great anxiety for the sailing of the packet. Perkins, a constable, accosted him, and on refusing to give any account of how he got the money, or where he came from, took him to the station-house. Mr. Superintendent Stockdale, after asking a few questions, suspected the apparent sailor-boy was a girl, and charged her with being so, which she resolutely denied. A woman was made to search her, and the young sailor turned out to be a very pretty-looking Welsh girl. Finding disguise to be useless, she gave an account of herself. Her assumed name as the sailor was Edward Williams, but her real one is Mary Davis. She is twenty years of age. She lived with her father, who is a decayed farmer, about nine miles from Merthyr, and between that place and Neath. Having a brother at sea from home, she determined to go in search of him. She had received a letter lately from him enclosing £5, and it contained a request that she should come to him; this letter she had lost, and so entirely had she forgotten her brother's address, that she did not know whether the letter came from America, Australia, or Ireland. Her purpose in the present instance was to go to Bristol, and from thence to America. She was taken every care of at the station-house, and visited by the worthy mayor and the Rev. I. Shore, who, after hearing her statements, were convinced she was of weak mind. She was directed to be sent to the union-house until her friends could be communicated with, and her money was left in Mr. Stockdale's hands. She cannot speak a word of English.—Silurian.

BODMIN ELECTION.—Mr. Edgcumbe, the nephew of Lady Sawle, residing in the vicinity of Bodmin, was busily engaged canvassing that borough last week for the eldest son of Sir Joseph Sawle, on the Liberal interest, and Sir Samuel Spry, the former representative, has also offered himself as a candidate.—Globe.

On Tuesday there was held, in the Shire Hall, the annual meeting of the Stafford Church Missionary Society, Lord Sandon, M.P., in the chair. The Earl of Harrowby, and other distinguished personages attended. In the evening the Ladies' Association held their meeting in the same place; and next evening the annual meeting of the Stafford and Sandon Ladies' Bible Association was to be held in the same hall.

MANCHESTER AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY.—The annual show of stock and the award of premiums given by the Manchester Agricultural Society took place on Tuesday last. The exhibition of horses, cattle, &c., which took place in the police yard in Clarence-street, attracted together a large body of agriculturists and the friends of agriculture; amongst whom were the Hon. R. B. Wilbraham, M.P., Mr. M. Philips, M.P., Mr. P. Greenall, M.P., Mr. W. Egerton, M.P., Mr. Brotherton, M.P., &c. Both in number and quality the horses and stock brought to the show were much superior to any former year, and the different descriptions of agricultural productions and implements of husbandry gave evident proof that improvement had made very considerable progress in this part of the country. There were several very excellent samples of natural grasses for pasturage exhibited by Mr. E. Baines, of Leeds, who, at great cost and industry, has succeeded in bringing into cultivation a large tract of land on Chat-moss, which, comparatively speaking, a few years ago was even worse than any of the bogs of Ireland, and from the Worsley Hall Farm, belonging to the Hon. F. Egerton, M.P., and which also on Chat-moss, some samples of a very superior and useful kind of turnip and mangle wurzel. In the evening the annual dinner took place at Hayward's Hotel, when nearly 150 gentlemen sat down. The chair was taken by Mr. M. Philips, M.P., in the absence of the noble president of the society, Lord F. Egerton.

On Friday morning, about one o'clock, a desperate affray took place on Lord Gage's estate at West Firle, near Lewes, between two of his lordship's gamekeepers and two poachers, named Day and Harvey, living in two of the adjoining villages; the last named was apprehended.

A serious riot took place last week at Airdrie, Scotland, when five prisoners were rescued from the police and much violence perpetrated. The military were sent for to quell the riot.

Last week a man named Taukard, of Salford, died of hydrophobia, having been bitten by a mad dog six weeks previously.

A landslip took place last week on the Birmingham Railway. No serious is convenience resulted.

A LARGE TAKE.—Four hundred and sixty whales were captured on Monday last, at Westray, in the Orkneys. They are of a small size. A Kirkwall merchant immediately gave the fishers £500 for the result of their day's labour.

FATAL ACCIDENT ON THE EXETER CANAL.—THREE LIVES LOST.—An accident, attended with fatal consequences, happened on Monday afternoon, under the following painful circumstances:—On Saturday the men in the employ of Mr. Kerslake, wireworker, of Exeter, celebrated their annual "wayzgoose," and, as is too often the case on such occasions, instead of going to their work on Monday, resolved to make another holiday, and we believe only one of the number went to work on that morning. They spent the earlier part of the day in drinking together, and in the afternoon they resolved on taking an excursion on the canal; accordingly about three o'clock they hired two boats at the quay for that purpose. In one of these boats the wives and female relatives of some of the men were embarked, and in the other eight of the workmen. In proceeding down the canal, the boat in which the females were, and which was rowed by others of the men, shot ahead of the other, when a race ensued, in which one was overset, and the whole of the men were thrown at once into the water. Three of the crew unfortunately sunk to rise no more. Their names are Darby, Phillips, and Richmond.—Bristol Mirror.

NEWPORT, ISLE OF WIGHT, Sep. 27.—The parishioners here have refused, for five years past, a rate for the repair of the parish church; the consequence is, that the church is in such a dilapidated state that it has been declared unsafe to worship in it; and divine service, accordingly, has been formally suspended. For some time past, persons sitting in certain parts of the church have often held umbrellas over their heads during divine service, to shelter themselves from a shower of rain.

SERIOUS DISTURBANCES IN SCOTLAND.—About one o'clock on Saturday morning last, as constables Falconer and Macpherson, and an assistant constable, all of the county police, were on their patrol, they observed ten or eleven men coming from a potato-field at Gowkshill, parish of Newbattle, carrying bags of potatoes. The constables immediately seized two of the party, when, the others coming to the rescue, Falconer was knocked down, but still continued to keep hold of his prisoner. The other prisoner escaped in the scuffle, but the one retained being handcuffed, was conveyed to the house of Mr. Proudfoot, farmer, Gowkshill. Here Macpherson was left in charge of the prisoner. Falconer was severely treated by a mob which collected, and the prisoner rescued. On intelligence being brought to town of the disturbances, the superintendent, in the course of the morning, dispatched a sergeant to the spot, along with several constables, to apprehend the guilty persons. On this body arriving, about 400 colliers assembled and dogged the police in all directions, while the latter were endeavouring to identify the parties. Mr. M'Gillivray, the factor of the Marquis of Lothian, now arrived, and seeing the formidable character of the movement, advised the police to proceed no further with their limited force, but to report the state of matters to the sheriff. This being done, Mr. Sheriff Spiers immediately made application to the Commander of the Forces for military aid. Accordingly a party of the Enniskillen Dragoons left Piershill barracks in the course of the afternoon, and proceeded with Sheriff Spiers, Mr. List, superintendent of the county police, and a body of constables, to search the house at Gowkshill for those concerned in the rescue of the prisoner. The search, however, did not succeed, and the dragoons returned to Edinburgh between nine and ten o'clock at night. At five o'clock in the afternoon a detachment, consisting of 100 men of the 53rd infantry, under the command of a captain and two subalterns, were also dispatched from the castle, and reached Lothian-bridge about eight o'clock, having marched that distance. This party was quartered in Dalkeith that night, and arrangements were afterwards made for their being billeted at Gore-bridge and in the neighbourhood of the disturbed district. On searching the houses, a great number of colliers from East Lothian were discovered, and the report was that most of them had stones in their pockets: these were supposed to be delegates from the more distant collieries. On Sunday all was quiet, the immediate presence of the military having overawed the disaffected.—Caledonian Mercury.

POWDER MILL EXPLOSION.—Monday morning two buildings, forming part of the extensive works of Messrs. Pigou and Wilks, near Dartford, blew up with great violence, carrying away the roof and materials some yards distant. Fortunately, the workmen had not returned from breakfast, or a serious loss of life would have been the consequence. Had the accident occurred a few minutes later, several persons would have been in the works, and thus suddenly blown to pieces.—Maidstone Paper.

COTTON-SPINNER'S STRIKE.—It is with deep regret we have to state that on Friday last the cotton-spinners employed in the factory of Messrs. Gregory, Mandley, and Co., St. Rollox, struck for an advance of wages, and we very much fear that, in announcing this fact, we are only intimating the commencement of a general suspension from labour among this body of workmen. It appears that a fortnight ago, a resolution was come to at a meeting of all the operative spinners in the town and suburbs, to demand an advance of wages; and accordingly deputations were sent round to all the employers, requesting them to return to the prices of 1840, which were about 30 per cent. higher than those given at present. The request was, we understand, unanimously refused, and the workmen have since resolved on a trial of strength with their masters, though on a ground somewhat different from that put forth in their first demand. Their intention, it is stated, is to take the factories one by one; and accordingly the first singled out for the struggle is that of Messrs. Cooper, Mandland, and Co., who are asked to raise their wages to a rate corresponding with those alleged to be paid in certain other factories referred to. A meeting of the mill-owners, we understand, was held on Saturday in the counting-room of Messrs. William Sharpe and Co., Glassford-street, when a statement of the demands of the spinners was laid before them, and, after considerable discussion, unanimously rejected. At St. Rollox alone the effect of twelve cotton-spinners striking work will be to throw idle about 300 weavers and other workmen.—Glasgow Courier.

RAMSGATE, Tuesday Night, Sept. 27.—It has blown a hurricane for the last two days. This morning, at the usual hour (9 o'clock), the Duchess of Kent started for London. In going out of the harbour she strained and laboured much, and was not off Broadstairs till 10 o'clock, a distance which she usually accomplishes in one-third of the time. After shipping two heavy seas the skipper prudently gave orders to put about for Ramsgate, where she arrived with 60 or 70 passengers shortly before 11 o'clock. It was found on examination that the Duchess had been considerably damaged, and 20 carpenters were immediately set to work on her.

ACCIDENT BY LIGHTNING.—During the severe thunder storm on Thursday week a serious accident occurred at the Great Western Cotton Works, St. Philip's, Bristol. The electric fluid struck the meter-house, and completely destroyed the large gas meter, the erection of which has just been completed by the company at a cost of £150. The iron face of the meter was split in pieces, and the gas which was in the cylinder (fortunately it was turned off at the main) being ignited by the electric fluid exploded, and large pieces of iron, one of them weighing above 100lbs., were thrown with such violence against the wall twenty-six feet distant as to produce considerable indentations in portions of the masonry.

DOVER JUSTICES.—Our justices have received a long letter from the Secretary of State for the Home Department, on the subject of the late "hair-cropping" case, in which he desires that his "marked disapprobation of the gaoler's conduct in that affair should be conveyed to him by the justices." This unpleasant task was yesterday (Friday) performed by the visiting magistrates reading Sir James Graham's letter to the gaoler. We cannot conceive a greater humiliation than it must have been to the justices to be made the medium of conveying to the gaoler the censure of conduct which, in their gravity and wisdom, they had so recently fully approved; and what a farce the gaoler must have thought it, that he should now have a sentence of condemnation read to him by the magistrates, some of whom so lately declared him fully justifiable. In every word of Sir James Graham's letter the magistrates who dismissed Messrs. Fitzjames and Gladstone's appeal for justice must feel their judgment and fitness for their office impugned.—Dover Chronicle.

CHARTIST PLOT TO MURDER THE QUEEN.—Bills have just been issued in Southampton, offering a reward of £100 for whoever will give information that shall lead to the conviction of the person who shot at Pierce in the Houndwell, in Southampton, and who was recognised as one of the party engaged in a Chartist plot to murder the Queen. Fifty pounds will be paid by Government and £50 by Pierce himself.

CENTRAL CRIMINAL COURT.

[Before Mr. Justice Cresswell.]

Philip Partridge, who was acquitted on an indictment charging him with the wilful murder of Jose Maria Balager, was again placed at the bar on Saturday morning, charged with the wilful murder of Mariana Mandolo.—John Fisher, the chief mate, stated that the deceased was one of four Spaniards shipped at Prince's Island; he was a "stiff-built" man, and was a very good seaman. Shortly after he went on board he was placed at the wheel. Witness was occasionally on watch with the deceased. Had frequently seen the prisoner beat him, at least 50 times; perhaps not quite so many as 50 times, but very frequently. The first time he saw him beat him was about a fortnight after they left Prince's island. The deceased at that time was at the wheel, and was not steering to please the captain. In his witness's opinion he was steering very well. The captain struck him on the face with his fist two or three blows, and afterwards over his head and shoulders with a thick rope. Should think that he gave him six blows with the rope. On that occasion the beating did not appear to him to have any bad effects upon him. Did not see him again struck that day. About a fortnight afterwards he was again beaten most unmercifully, in consequence of a suspicion being entertained that he had stolen some canvas. He was then flogged by one of the Kroo boys with a thick rope; he was flogged by order of the captain. Heard him say, "Give it him well." Recollected on one occasion hearing the prisoner say that deceased had attempted to strike him; he was then severely flogged. The deceased at the time was at the wheel, but was so extremely weak that he could not work, upon which the prisoner struck him to make him get up. That was about three or four days after the second beating. After he had been at the pump for a short time he left it, for the purpose of going forward; the prisoner, however, followed him, pulled him back, and immediately knocked him down with his fist. The prisoner immediately went to witness, who was at the wheel at the time, and said, "That —— fellow was going to strike me." He (witness) had observed the whole transaction, and was quite certain that the deceased did not attempt to strike him. The deceased was then very weak, and continued gradually getting worse till he died, which he believed was on the 24th of December. A day or two before he died he was at the wheel, when the captain struck him over the face with the log slate, which bruised him very much; he then struck him across the top of the head with the edge of the slate, and broke one frame of it. The same afternoon, after he left the wheel, he saw the deceased, and examined his head, found on his temple a severe wound, and another on his head, from which he was bleeding profusely; that was three or four hours after the blows were struck. A few days before the beating he had just alluded to, the deceased was going to take his turn at the wheel, when the prisoner desired him to take off his pea-jacket; the deceased, not understanding English, did not do so as desired, but was about taking hold of the wheel, when the prisoner seized him, and tore the jacket from his back. He had not then sufficient clothing to keep him warm, and he was afterwards occasionally compelled to borrow a jacket of witness. The day after he was struck with the slate the deceased was at the pump, which he left, and went down into the forecastle; he was missed for some time, and, when found, appeared to be dying. He was hauled upon deck with ropes, and he lay there in a state of insensibility; whilst he so lay in that state the prisoner beat him most unmercifully, over all parts of the body, with a thick rope. Witness was himself at that time very weak, and was unable to assist him. He next saw the deceased at the pump, but he could not work, in fact, he did more harm than good. He died, about eight o'clock in the morning, and after a few minutes' delay looked up to the deceased, and said to some of the men, "Go and fetch that fellow down." He was brought down by some of the men and taken into the forecastle. He appeared to be dead. In the course of the same evening he went into the forecastle and felt the deceased; he was quite cold and stiff, but a slight respiration was perceptible. Whilst there the captain entered and said, "Knock that fellow; I gave him some brandy a little while ago, and he'll soon come round." Witness then left the forecastle, and never saw the deceased again alive. Heard about two o'clock on the following morning that he was dead; and an hour or two afterwards he was hove overboard.—After a protracted trial, during which the foregoing evidence was not materially shaken, Mr. Justice Cresswell summed up, and the jury returned a verdict of guilty of an assault.

SPANISH SAILOR (SKETCHED BY A SPANISH OFFICER.)

Mr. Adolphus said there was another indictment against the prisoner, but under all the circumstances it would be unnecessary to proceed with it.—In answer to a question by the learned judge, Mr. C. Jones said the prisoner had already been in custody nine months. Mr. Justice Cresswell told the prisoner, that although the jury had acquitted him of the capital charge, he had been found guilty of a very serious and aggravated assault. Taking, however, into consideration the suffering he had already endured, and a hope that what had occurred would be a warning to him for the future, the sentence would be very lenient, which was, that he be imprisoned and kept to hard labour in the House of Correction for six calendar months. The prisoner was then charged with the wilful murder of Alonzo Rosalis under similar circumstances.—Mr. Adolphus said he should decline offering any evidence, and the jury accordingly returned a verdict of not guilty.

SEPTEMBER 26.

Frederick Shackleford, 36, was respited until next session.

As the session which terminated on Saturday approached to a close, several prisoners were brought up to receive judgment, and some to have their sentences, which were passed instanter, revised, and in some cases commuted. Subjoined are the principal sentences and results in both courts during the sitting:—For life, 1; for fifteen years, 2; fourteen, 1; ten, 10; seven, 21. Imprisonment and hard labour, two years, 1; eighteen months, 3; one year, 31. Several were imprisoned for one month and under, 57 were acquitted, and the judgment upon some was respited.

The court adjourned till Oct. 24.

NEW COURT.

(Before the Recorder, &c.)

Isaac Morgan, aged 70, the father of the man who was convicted of forgery in this court on Friday week, and sentenced to be transported for ten years, was indicted for feloniously uttering a forged order for £11 10s., with intent to defraud Martha Foote.—Martha Foote stated that she keeps the public-house called the Anchor, or Falconglen, in Liquorpond-street, Gray's Inn-lane. Early in June last the prisoner (who was a customer) came to her and produced a check, purporting to be drawn by John Foote for the sum of £11 10s. He told her he was then in want of money, and asked her to advance him £3 on it. He said he could get it cashed, only it was too late in the day. A day or two afterwards she sent a person to get the check cashed at the Bloomsbury Bank. The check was returned as a bad one. Shortly after this the prisoner came to witness's house. She told him that the check was a bad one. He appeared surprised when she told him, and said that it came from a most respectable person. He then went away. Witness saw him again shortly after. She spoke to him on the subject of the check, and he said he would pay her the £3 he had borrowed. He kept putting witness off with these promises until the week of August before last, when she gave him into custody.—James Harfield stated that he is a compositor, residing in the house of the prosecutrix. In June last witness received a check to get cashed at the Bloomsbury Bank. He presented the check, but no such person as John Booth was known at the bank.—Charles Schofield, a clerk at the bank, stated that he remembered receiving the check from the last witness in June last. There was no such person as John Booth known at the bank. An inspector of the Division, who took the prisoner into custody, stated that he searched his lodgings and found several festimonies. The prisoner said that it was all his son's fault.—The Recorder having summed up, the jury returned a verdict of guilty against the prisoner, accompanied by a strong recommendation to mercy.—The Recorder said that the hands of the court were tied in these cases. The lowest punishment they could pass was a very severe one. The sentence of the court was, that he be imprisoned and kept to hard labour for two years.

POLICE.

MANSION HOUSE.—On Saturday two young men, named Edward Bannister and Joseph Campbell, were brought before the Lord Mayor, in the Mansion House, by an officer, and charged by Mr. Freshfield, the solicitor to the Bank of England, under the following circumstances.—Rae stated, that on Friday, at a quarter past five o'clock in the evening, he went, in consequence of information which he had received, to Grocer's Hall-court, and in the back room of the ground floor of a house, he saw the prisoners standing by a desk. Campbell had an engraved plate in his hand; and a packet of notes, apparently bank notes, were lying upon the desk. Witness said to Bannister, "Is your name Bannister?" to which the reply was in the affirmative. "Hollo," said witness, pointing to the notes, "what are you going to do with these?" Bannister, after some little hesitation, said, "If it was not going to do anything wrong with them." Witness then proceeded to search the desk at which the prisoners were standing, and found in it several papers, which he had in his possession, but had not yet been able to examine. (Here one of the notes was exhibited. It purported to be a Bank of England note for £500, but was miserably executed, and in no respect resembling the genuine instrument.) The witness then said, that Bannister stated while the search was going forward, that it was his intention to give one or two of the notes to brokers who travelled through the country, as a kind of attraction. In Bannister's fob was found four £5 notes and one £10 notes, all genuine, and £6 10s. in gold. Campbell had no more than 1d. in his pocket, and nothing of any consequence was found at the lodging of either. The place at which the prisoners were apprehended was a kind of warehouse, and Bannister was a dealer in carpets. The prisoners were then remanded till Monday next.

GUILDHALL. ONE OF THE BUBBLE COMPANIES.—A case which caused a deal of talk in the city some time since Sir Peter Laurie, Knight, Alderman, was summoned by Mr. Robert Gordon, for having induced him to purchase shares in a company which had no existence, and for which shares no price could be had in the market.—The complainant stated that in the early part of 1841 he was in the habit of meeting the defendant at a merchant's counting-house in Leadenhall-street, by whom he was pressed very much indeed to take 200 or 300 shares in a company called "The North West Cotton Company." The defendant spoke in such high terms of the company, and stated that he expected to sell so vast a number, that he (complainant) was induced on the 23d of March to purchase of him 200 shares, at £1 a-piece (a laugh, being also assured most positively by the defendant that in the course of a fortnight they would reach 8*l*., and in the course of a month or six weeks they would reach 12*l*. per share; in fact, the value of the North West Cotton Company held? Defendant: I know nothing at all about it. I have merely sold shares in it at the desire of sellers, as I have sold shares in other companies.—Complainant: I was told me he had sold 1000 or 1500 shares to a gentleman, and I had no doubt of the correctness of the business.—Sir Peter Laurie: Did you ask who the directors were?—Complainant: No; I did not think it necessary.—Sir Peter Laurie: Do you know where the establishment is?—Complainant: No; I saw nobody but the defendant, to whom I paid the sum of £4 3s. 4d. for the shares.—Sir Peter Laurie: Was there a board of directors?—Complainant: No; I never heard of any meeting money under false pretences, Mr. Wilson.—Defendant: I am only an agent, and I am not obliged to know anything about the company.—Sir Peter Laurie: I want a deal of fraudulent dealing has been carried on in companies.—Defendant: No doubt of it; and I believe this company to be without stability. Here are the shares for which Mr. Gordon supposes I have obtained a valuable consideration.—Sir Peter Laurie: To whom did you pay the money you got from him?—Defendant: It is now eighteen months ago, and it is impossible for me to say.—Sir Peter Laurie: From whom did you purchase them?—Defendant: From Mr. ——, a member of the Stock Exchange.—Sir Peter Laurie: Let Brand, the marshalman, go to the Stock Exchange, and tell the gentleman I wish to speak with him.—Brand, in a few minutes, returned to the justice-room, and said, "When I inquired for the gentleman I was told that he had not been seen these twelve months on the Stock Exchange, and the last time he was heard of was himself into the sea from the Chain pier at Brighton" (laughter).—Sir Peter Laurie: Why, Mr. Wilson, how could you let me send for a man who has drowned himself?—Defendant: How could I know it for a fact.—Sir Peter Laurie: Did you know that he had thrown himself from the chain pier?—Defendant: I saw an account of it in the newspapers, but how could I know that he was drowned (great laughter).—Complainant: Why should he tell me the shares would be up to 8*l*. in a fortnight? Defendant: I only told you what I heard others say. Everyone who has had dealings in shares understands the whole business. No doubt, if Mr. Gordon got, or he, a share, he would not care a straw if the lost fell upon the person who purchased of him (laughter). Sir Peter Laurie: It is complete swindling on the part of those who put out such things amongst the public.—Defendant: I have had nothing to do with issuing them.—Sir Peter Laurie: You allowed me to send for a man who was drowned a year ago, and who appears to be the only witness you can call (laughter). How could you engage in the sale of shares at a moment's?—Defendant: Why, I bought 800 shares of the London and Westminster Bank, now one of the first in the empire, at sixpence per share. Sir Peter Laurie: Well, what can you say Mr. Gordon?—Defendant: If he leaves the shares with me I shall see them when they reach a premium (great laughter).—Sir Peter Laurie: The transaction is, I consider, a very discreditable one, but it would appear as if there were no use in exposing things of this kind. Gulls crowd in from all sides.—Defendant: I have had nothing to do with the business, except as an agent, and they may be good stock for what I know, but I say that I have no great opinion of them (laughter).—Sir Peter Laurie: Well, Mr. Gordon, you must seek satisfaction in the Court of Requests, or by an action. I am sorry for you, but I hope it will be a lesson to you. The complainant then left the office, and reckoned the number all right, folded them up and put them in his pocket, after which he thanked Sir Peter Laurie and departed.

BOW-STREET.—FASHIONABLE THIEVES.—Madame Louise La Grange, alias Mordelle, and Eugene Ladent, were brought up for examination, charged with robbing several jewellers of property to a very considerable extent. The office was crowded with well dressed fellows, who have been long known to the police, and who evidently took a great interest in the proceedings.—Robert Simonde Wilson, of 27, Duke-street, Bryanston-square, stated, that on the 1st of August last a person who gave his name Fake, and who represented that he lived in South Molton-street, came to his house, accompanied by the prisoner Ladent, whom he introduced to witness as a person wishing to hire apartments in his house. Ladent afterwards came there accompanied by the female prisoner, and they agreed to take the lodgings. They described themselves as Viscount and Viscountess Le Grange. They immediately took possession, and remained in the apartments about six weeks, during which time they lived together as man and wife. They had a female servant with them, whom they called Pauline. They took possession of the apartments the day after Mr. Fake had called respecting them. The male prisoner was frequently out during the day, and together, and of which conduct on his part the female prisoner sometimes complained. The male prisoner was not in the house during the last three days that the female prisoner was there. They went away without paying the rent, except for the first week. They owed him £11 for rent; the only security he had for which was a couple of boxes that they had left behind them, and which, on being afterwards broken open by the police, were found to contain a quantity of old iron and bricks. (Loud laughter.) The boxes were very heavy; and the witness supposed that they contained a great deal of valuable property belonging to the viscount. (Laughter.) A person named Le Roi frequently called on the prisoners, and always had a large carpet bag with him. Mr. Fake had since called upon witness, and told him that he, in conjunction with the prisoner Ladent, had been employed in the consequence of witness having told him that, as he introduced the prisoners to him, he should hold him responsible for the rent which the prisoners left unpaid.—Pearce, an inspector of the A division, stated that he took the female prisoner into custody on the 10th instant, at the Imperial Hotel, in Sackville-street, Dublin.—This being all the evidence with which the prosecutors were at present prepared, the prisoners were again remanded.

Baron Bourrere Kain was next placed at the bar on a similar charge. He had shaved off his moustachios, and his appearance altogether was very considerably altered since the last examination. The following was the only additional evidence adduced against him:—Louis Donnereau, of 65, Queen-street, and who was examined through the medium of an interpreter, stated that he was a commercial traveller, and that he knew the prisoner, who about a month or six weeks since requested he would pledge two diamond rings for him, which he did, at a pawnbroker's in Oxford-street. He asked £30 upon them, but the pawnbroker refused to advance more than £10 upon them, which sum witness obtained from him, and afterwards handed over the amount, together with the duplicates, to the prisoner. There being no further evidence at present, the prisoner was again remanded for further examination.

MARYLEBONE.—SHOCKING BRUTALITY TO A CHILD BY ITS OWN PARENTS.—On Tuesday a considerable degree of interest was manifested by crowds assemble. in the immediate vicinity of this court, in consequence of its having become known that Barnard Garvin and Mary his wife would be brought up for examination before Mr. Rawlinson, on the charge of having exercised treatment of a most horrid and brutal nature towards Eliza Garvin, one of their children, under ten years of age.—Mr. Potter, one of the board of guardians, and Mr. Messer, the relieving overseer, were in attendance on the part of the parish. The poor little victim of its parents' vengeance was led in by one of the workhouse nurses, to whom it clung in a most affectionate manner, and after the disposal of the night charges the prisoners were placed at the bar. Garvin is a man of most repulsive appearance, and his wife (who carried in her arms an infant) had also ill-nature depicted in her countenance.—Hobbs, 174 S, stated that on Tuesday night last, about half-past nine, a man came to the station-house, and told him she was lost. She had neither bonnet, shoes, nor stockings, and he observed that there were marks on her head and arms.—Mr. Rawlinson: What did you then do?—Witness: I asked her where she lived, and she told me No. 2, Henry-street, Portland-town. I laid hold of her hand, telling her I would take her to her parents; and, as I was going along with her, I met the female prisoner, who said, "This is my child." She (the child) laid hold of my coat, saying, "Pray take me to the station-house; don't let me go home!" I took the mother and child to the station, and afterwards went to the prisoner's lodging, a front kitchen, when she (the mother) took down a leather strap, saying, "This is what I beat her with."—The strap was here produced. It was a thick piece of leather upwards of an eighth of an inch thick, and a yard long; and upon it were several spots of blood.—Witness added, I asked her how the child became in such a state, and she said it was all when it came from Ireland, when it was brought over by its father last March. The mother said she (the child) was a bad girl, and had been corrected for stealing a loaf. I also asked her if the child had had any medical attendance, and she said, "No; it has had some treacle, which I gave it myself."—Wilkes, 94 D, (who occupies a back kitchen, which is separated only by a thin partition from the front one rented by Garvin) was next examined.—Mr. Rawlinson: What do you know of any cruelty towards this poor child?—Witness: My attention was drawn to it eight or ten weeks ago, and she was then almost nearly ill-treated. About four weeks back I saw her father beat her with the strap and his fist. He has beaten her with the strap both before and since. Her clothes being at the same time pulled up behind.—Do you know what was his reason for doing so?—He has a large family, Sir; and I think he hated this child in particular.—Have you ever seen the child on the floor?—No; but I have heard stripes and kicks given by the mother to the child.—Have you upon these occasions heard the child cry out?—No, she was not suffered to do so; had she called out she would have had more stripes. Have you heard the mother say anything when she has beaten the child in this manner?—Yes, I have heard her say, "——, you," and "——your soul," and I've also heard the father say so.—How often, to your knowledge, has the child been thus ill-used?—Generally at every meal, and at night when she has been turned out she has fled for refuge to the privy, where she has remained till one or two in the morning, when the mother has dragged her away and again beaten her; and on my going to the place afterwards I have found the flooring thereof covered with blood. I am now speaking of three or four weeks ago.—Can you mention anything relative to either the father or mother?—Answer: No.—Is the child in the morning the father has called out in a sharp tone of voice, "Eliza, get up," and immediately afterwards I have heard a noise which sounded like a kick upon the child's body?—No; I have not known anything with respect to the child being kept without food?—She has often come to our kitchen and held out her hand, implying that she wanted something to eat; and on Tuesday last I gave my wife part of the food three times. Upon one occasion she got into our window while I and my wife were absent, and took away some meat, but hunger, you know, will make a person bite through a stone wall.—Have you seen marks or bruises upon any part of her person?—About a fortnight ago, when her mother was gone out, she came to me and said, "Oh, Mr. Webb, see how I'm ill-treated; they (meaning her father and mother) have taken hold of my legs and knocked my head against the wall." Red, and also saw, cuts upon her head, and a quantity of hair seemed to have been pulled from it.—Have you ever spoken to either of the prisoners about their conduct?—Yes; two or three weeks ago I asked the father how he came to ill-use his child in such a manner, and I mentioned that I had heard he thought her an idiot, to which he replied, "If she is so (% beat the——idiot out of her."—Do you know the child to be at all idiotic?—Certainly not. Mr. Rawlinson told the prisoners that they would be committed for trial, but in order to complete the case they would be remanded. They both denied the charge, and declared that the statements were false, and they will be brought up again on Tuesday next. They were then locked up, and at five o'clock were conveyed in the government van to Clerkenwell. On their way down the passage from the court they were assailed by execrations, &c. deep from a large number of persons who had collected together to witness their departure, and they would most assuredly have been roughly treated but for the attendance of the officers who were on the spot. The poor child was taken back to the workhouse by Mr. Messer, who, without hesitation, took the whole of the family (with the exception of the infant at the breast) into the establishment.

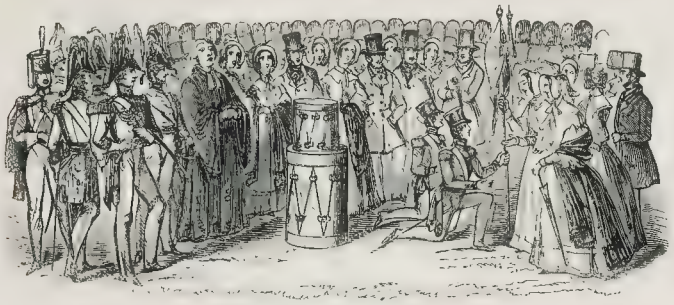
UNION-HALL. On Saturday John Sabini, a fashionably-dressed man, 36 years of age, was brought before Mr. Cottingham on a charge of obtaining the sum of £50 from John Rosier, coachman, in the service of Mr. John Knowles, of Streatham, under false representations. The case, from the singularity of the circumstances attending it, excited a considerable degree of interest, during which the court was very much crowded. After a lengthened evidence on the part of the prosecutor, Mr. Cottingham said that a clear case of obtaining money under false representations had been made out against the accused, and he should commit him for trial. The prisoner was then indulged to enter into his own recognizance in £400, and find two sureties of £200 each, to answer the charge.

CORONER'S INQUESTS.

ON DEATH IN A CAB.—Mr. Baker held an inquest on Tuesday at the Black Horse, Kingsland-road, on the body of Alfred Butler, aged 36, of Belmont place, Hackney-road. The deceased died in a cab in the Hackney-road, and the driver, John Hawkins, had been ordered by two women and a man to take the deceased, when intoxicated to insensibility, to Goldsmith-row, Hackney. The deceased has been identified as a meat salesman in Newgate-market.—Wm. Naude, a butcher, said, that seeing deceased unable to do his work properly on Friday last, he put him into a cab on Newgate-street, and told the driver to take him home. Mr. Burton, surgeon, said that he had made a post mortem examination, and found the vessels of the head and heart gorged with blood. The liver was greatly enlarged, the effects of drinking. Verdict, "Found dead, apparently from suffocation."

FATAL ACCIDENT ON THE RIVER. A long inquiry was gone into before W. Carter, Esq., the Coroner for Surrey, at the Nine Elms Tavern, Battersea, respecting the death of Mr. George James Rogers, aged 29, a partner in the firm of Rogers and Son, of 392, Oxford-street, tobacco manufacturers, who was drowned on Sunday last while rowing in a wager-boat, which belonged to Messrs. Searle and Son, the boat-builders of Stangate.—James Gibson deposed he was Jack-in-the-water at the Red-house. On Sunday evening, about six o'clock, a gentleman, much resembling the deceased, came in a light wherry there. Another gentleman also came there in a funny, and they went into the house together. The boats filled twice while they were there, and he emptied them out. They came back in about half an hour, and witness advised them not to go, as it was blowing so hard. They, however, persisted they would go, and got into their boats. The funny had the start about twenty yards in front of the wherry appeared to be understand rowing. He was quite sober. Gibson went on to say, that he thought the boat might be swamped. The last steam-boat goes down at seven, and he was not one up about the same time. Cannot say whether the steamer had gone down before the two gentlemen. They rowed on the Surrey shore.—George Perkins stated, that about half-past four the gentleman who was drowned on Sunday last was having a dinner at the Red Boats adjacent to the case. As they could not tell what caused him to be upset on the river, he thought the jury were precluded from any inquiry as to the fitness of the boat, as the deceased had expressed his satisfaction at it. The jury, having consulted, returned the following special verdict:—"That the deceased was found dead in the river Thames; that there were no marks of violence on the body, but how he came by his death we have no evidence to show."

INCREASE OF DEATHS BY DROWNING.—On Wednesday the coroner for Surrey, held an inquest at the Swan Tavern, Battersea, being the seventh inquest and similar inquiries in the same parish on persons drowned within a fortnight, respecting the deaths of James Whiting, aged forty-eight, and James Harrison, aged twelve. It appeared in the case of Whiting that he was a lighterman, and worked for Messrs. Perkins, of Walworth. On Friday last he and a man of the name of Baker were getting a barge out of the Grand Surrey Canal, dock, when the deceased fell overboard into a ship's side, and not being able to get it out he fell into the water. Baker could not reach him, and in running aft for the oar was so frightened that he fell into one of the empty boats. On the alarm being raised he was got out in about four minutes, and attended by Mr. Murdoch, surgeon, but he was quite dead. In the case of James Harrison it was stated he was steward's boy on board the Waterfly Greenwich steamer. On Saturday week the steamer was at Greenwich, and he was ordered to clean the boat alongside, into which he got, and was soon after missed, but no one saw him fall in the water, and the body was not found for a week afterwards. The jury in both cases returned verdicts of "Accidental death."



PRESENTATION OF COLOURS TO THE 16TH REGIMENT.

The imposing ceremony of presenting new colours to the 16th Regiment took place on Thursday week, on Southsea-common, in the presence of a vast assemblage of persons, who had repaired from all parts of the country to witness it. It being generally known that the Hon. Lady Pakenham would this day present new colours to the 16th Regiment on Southsea-common, the place appointed for the ceremony, and its neighbourhood, exhibited early in the forenoon a most animated and imposing spectacle. In order to preserve the ground, and secure space for the due performance of the ceremony, a detachment of the Royal Marines, together with a body of the local police, were so posted in front of the battalion as to form with it a large parallelogram, in the centre of which a platform was placed for the accommodation of the Hon. Lady Pakenham and other distinguished guests. For some time the ground was admirably maintained, under the superintendence of Captain Bruce, of the 18th Foot, who passed in such parties as were entitled to admission. Unexpectedly, however, a carriage and four entered the arena, when the mob, following in its wake, perfectly inundated the enclosure. All attempts to confine the crowd within its former limits having proved ineffectual, the ceremony commenced—the regiment receiving the Major-General and his noble lady with the customary honours. The band was then ordered to "troop," at the conclusion of which the grenadiers, under Captain Luxmore, took close order, advanced twenty paces to their front (band playing Grenadiers' March), wheeled to the left, and proceeded to the centre of the line, where they wheeled again to the left, so as to front the old colours. The grenadiers having opened ranks, Ensigns G. Y. and H. A. Macdonald (brothers), sons of Lieut.-Colonel Macdonald, late of the 16th Regiment, an old and distinguished war officer, advanced, bearing the old colours, within a few paces of the company, when the whole battalion presented arms. The ranks of the grenadiers were then closed, and the company, bringing the left shoulders forward by sub-divisions, so as to enclose the colours, moved off, parallel to the line.—(Band playing Grenadiers' March.) The regiment then formed three sides of a square, which movement, owing to the intervention of the crowd, was executed with the greatest difficulty. Finding that the mob, patrician and plebeian, had beset the vacant side, Colonel Campbell wheeled up the two flank companies, so as to form a complete square. The space having been cleared, an altar of drums was raised, and the new colours, which had been previously brought from a tent in the rear of the line, were arranged by the two Majors for consecration. The colours were consecrated by the Rev. R. Bingham, jun., who delivered an admirable speech on the occasion, for which we regret our inability to find room.

At the conclusion of the prayer the field officer handed the colours to Lady Pakenham, when the brothers (Macdonald)—a happy presage, we trust, of never-failing unity and good fellowship amongst the guardian followers of these standards—advanced to the front, and, kneeling upon their right knees, received the new colours from her ladyship, who, in presenting them, addressed the regiment in the following appropriate and complimentary words:—"I am much gratified at the opportunity afforded me of being present on this interesting occasion. Receive these colours, which I feel confident you, the sons of a distinguished officer, will defend gallantly. As in former days the 16th Regiment fought bravely under Marlborough, and on a latter occasion its colours were seen flying on the heights of Mont Martre, so I doubt not, when opportunity again offers, it will be ready to uphold the well-known character of British troops, and will, with God's blessing, be amongst the most successful in the field, whilst at home, I trust, good discipline and conduct will at all times, as heretofore, be its motto."

At the conclusion of her ladyship's address, which was most impressively delivered, the regiment presented arms, when Sir Hercules Pakenham, assuming the most eligible position he could command, delivered an address commemorative of the distinguished conduct of the 16th Regiment on all occasions when their services were required. Lieut.-Colonel Campbell returned thanks in a very appropriate manner. At the conclusion of the Colonel's address the regiment re-formed lines, the new colours remaining in the hands of the ensigns, guarded by the two majors, at the place of consecration. Colonel Campbell then gave the word, "Grenadiers to the front," and opened the ranks of the remainder of the battalion. The grenadiers accordingly moved out as before (the band playing the Grenadiers' March), and proceeding in front of the centre, brought the left shoulders forward, and halted so as to free the new colours. The ranks of the grenadiers being opened, the whole presented arms. The grenadiers then took close order, and moving off successively by subdivisions from the right, the leading subdivision wheeling to the left at the third pace, proceeded with the new colours between them as before.

Immediately after the parade Lieut.-Colonel Campbell and the officers of the regiment entertained Sir Hercules, Lady Pakenham, and a distinguished party of guests, amounting to about 130, in the King's Rooms, Southsea, where an elegant dejeuner, supplied and arranged by Messrs. Gunter and Co., of Berkeley-square, London, was tastefully laid out. The ball went off splendidly. At the upper end of the ball-room the new colours surmounted a military tableau, raised with the drums and arms of the regiment, in which were interspersed silk banners, emblazoned with the ancient achievements of the corps.

COST OF STRIKES.—There has been expended in strikes of late years, among the Glasgow cotton spinners, £47,000; the Manchester cotton spinners, £370,000; and the wool-combers, £400,000; Leeds mechanics, £187,000. The late strike in and about Manchester has probably cost as much as all these put together, and yet been productive of no satisfactory results.

REPLY TO A LAME REMARK.—The week after my grandfather ran away with a lame heiress, "Didn't I manage the matter well, my Lord?" says he to Lord Castletown. "Ye did in troth, Mick; and ye made a grate hit of it, if yer amiable lady was only right upon her pins." "Well, my lord," saye he, "what matter if she is a wee bit lame? Does your lordship suppose that men marry wives to ran races with them?"—Hector O'Halloran.

ROSHERVILLE GARDENS, GRAVESEND.

These delightful gardens have been opened during the present season, now drawing to a close, by private enterprise, a pier has also been erected for the convenience of London and other visitors. The gardens, themselves, are formed, from an almost barren heath, to a modern paradise, and will well repay the time devoted to an examination of their manifold beauties.

NOOKS AND CORNERS OF OLD ENGLAND.

SCARBOROUGH CASTLE.

This celebrated castle is built on a lofty peninsular rock of considerable extent, accessible only by a narrow isthmus, which has been strongly fortified. This fortress, which was built in the reign of King Stephen, by William le Gros, earl of Albemarle and Holderness, about the year 1136, has been the scene of various memorable transactions, which the limits of this journal will not allow us to particularize. During the civil wars, it was gallantly defended by Sir Hugh Cholmly against the forces of the Parliament, for upwards of a year, and afterwards sustained another siege of five months under the command of Colonel Boynton; since that period, its principal buildings and fortifications have lain in ruins.

The lofty promontory at Scarborough, on which the ruins of the ancient castle are situated, is bounded on three sides by the German ocean, and elevated nearly 300 feet above the level of the sea, presenting to the north, the east, and the south, a vast sweep of craggy perpendicular rocks, totally inaccessible. The tremendous appearance from its aspiring summit perfectly assimilates to the description of Dover cliff, by the inimitable pen of Shakspere:—

> ——— How fearful,
> And dizzy 'tis to cast one's eye so low!
> The crows and choughs, that wing the mid-way air,
> Show scarce so gross as beetles.—
> The fishermen, who walk upon the beach,
> Appear like mice; and yon tall anchoring bark
> Diminished to her skiff, her skiff a buoy
> Almost too small for sight.—The murmuring surge,
> That on the unnumber'd pebbles idly chafes,
> Can scarce be heard so high.

In turning from these mouldering remains of antiquity, the eye is relieved and the mind exhilarated by the charms of the surrounding prospect. The diversified scenes of the adjacent country; the romantic appearance of the town; the sands enlivened by various objects, and the unbounded view of the ocean, form an assemblage beautiful beyond conception.

THE FASHIONS.

Paris, Rue de la Chaussée d'Antin, Sept. 28, 1842.

Mon cher Monsieur,—Furs will be much worn this winter, not only as a trimming for dresses, but for cardinals, camails and tippets, cloak linings and pelisses. Already has one fashionable warehouse in the Rue Saint Honoré spread forth its rich stores of ermines, sables, and squirrel furs, and every preparation seems to be making to meet the approaching winter in a manner to defy the utmost rigour of its severity. We still await the return of our fashionables from the country before anything new is positively announced, but braidings, embroidery, and lace appear likely to continue their sway, while barege, poult de soie, and velvet are the leading materials at the present season. By the drawing I send you it will be seen that the fashion of three years since, in open bodies with lace stomachers, has returned. The dress is cut rather higher on the back, and is trimmed with flounces of embroidered cashmere let into the dress; the sleeves and body being also trimmed with the same material let in. The colour of the dress is a bluish grey, and, as a demi-toilet, is a great favourite with those of our belles who have been compelled malgre lui to remain in Paris. I know not whether Oudinot's pedicrine, of which I wrote to you, has yet made its appearance in London, but a better material for le plus jolies chaussures was never invented. It is positively the poetry of bootmaking, and whether employed for shoes, boots, or gaiters (I mean that elegant and convenient French invention which so speedily converts a lady's shoe into a boot), does infinite credit to the inventor, to whose genius all female Europe is indebted for the discovery and manufacture of the jupons crinolines, or horse-hair petticoats.

JULIE.

GLADES OF WINDSOR.

When the sun gleams o'er wood, and brake, and ford,
And the soft skies shine fair and blue above,
Here, young Victoria and her princely lord
By flow'r-crown'd paths take vernal walks of love.

Here, in the hush of nature, when the crowd
Intrude no curious gaze nor deaf'ning cheer,
When all is eloquent, though nothing loud,
And summer's ling'ring beauty crowns the year;

Here, when the breeze's whisper has a tone
As gentle as affection's, and there seems
A melody—the spirit makes its own—
To murmur music from the trees and streams;

Here, in a fond communion of the heart,
They taste a quiet that no cares alloy;
And ramble, from their world of state apart,
Amid a sort of solitude of joy!

THEATRICAL PORTRAITS

STRICKLAND AS BARON STOUT.

Here is a great favourite with the playgoing public—a good actor and a worthy man—Strickland, to wit—more betoken, the dramatic authors have entrusted much wit to Strickland. To say truth, its utterance could not easily be in a more appropriate mouth, or its acting in better hands. Strickland is a very clever fellow, a boy (though not a young one) of unlimited versatility, and nearly the most useful actor on the stage. He can do every thing respectably—and much with a vigour, spirit, and creative faculty, that far transcend mere respectability: we have often seen him exhibit undoubted genius. He is here depicted in the character of Baron Stout, a great lord-chamberlain, in the very lively little drama of Foreign Affairs. There he is—the pink of pomp and dignity—raised from a lower sphere, and trying to struggle into aristocracy with might and main. Next to Farren, he is the best old man upon the stage. But he is in every rôle a capital actor; and whether for his readiness to sustain many parts, or his great capability of sustaining them with credit, a most valuable acquisition to any theatre that may have the good fortune to retain him. As we believe, too, that his private character coincides with his public merit, we have great pleasure in introducing him to our readers, and wishing him a long life—as much as possible of which he has our full permission to devote to their entertainment.

POPULAR PORTRAITS.—No. XV.

SIR JAMES GRAHAM.

Here is her Majesty's Secretary of State for the Home Department—an announcement that in former times would, as regards Sir James Graham, have made some men

" * * * * * stare,
And wonder how the devil he got there."

Now, however, it wakes not even as much "mild surprise" as Aurora Raby bestowed on the ghost story in Don Juan. The fact is that with the progress of events great changes of opinion become visible in the moon of politics, and even the most consistent philosophers do not always find it convenient to live in the same quarter. We do not, therefore, "speak it as a reproach" that Sir James Graham should have been at the Admiralty under the Whigs, and in Downing-street under the Tories, but rather prefer to see him meddling with a secretaryship than with any of the ships of our beautiful navy. We believe he was born a farmer—at least the title of English farmer is one of which he used to be proud—but that does not qualify a man to superintend the ploughing of the main. That is quite a different style of agriculture.

Now, although Sir James Graham is, for many reasons, not the man of whom we can afford to write in terms of profoundest reverence, yet he is much more entitled to considerable respect than many people we wot of who have abused him in print "to the length of the tether of a column;" and moreover, he has just now won something like a spark of affection from us for imposing upon the Dover magistrates the pleasant task of reading to their elaborate Cropper of a gaoler the marked dissatisfaction of the Home Secretary at the course which the said magistrates thought him so abundantly justified in pursuing. The gaoler probably only grinned away the punishment of his ruffianism when hearing this new version of the ditty of "Croppies lie down;" but the magistrates must have looked very like people in a pillory while they were singing it. Meanwhile it is clear that Sir James Graham must have perused our enjoinments to the Home Secretary in this affair; and no minister who reads the ILLUSTRATED NEWS can be thoroughly contemptible, let him be assisting to govern for what party he may. We are, therefore, going to stand to the "In medio tutissimus ibis" principle, and take a middle course.

It is quite true that Sir James Graham began his career as a politician in what we call "strong terms." He was in love with the last French revolution, and his notions of reform travelled in seven-leagued boots. He was of a good family too, had personal station and respectability to back him, with a great deal of talent to throw into the scale. He was a good farmer and not a bad orator; a baronet, a member of Parliament, a debater, and l'homme distingué of the semi-radical party. The en avant people placed much hope in him, and put him into the trio with Lord Stanley and the Earl of Durham.

Office, however, is a great queller of political violence; and although we believe that, save in so far as ambition is concerned, it would have as little influence over the opinions of Sir James Graham as over those of any other well-educated and independent gentleman, yet there is no harm in mentioning that, from the moment he took the Whig direction of the Admiralty, he did not, politically speaking, clap on quite so much sail. His tone grew gradually moderate; and it was, we think, very proper that it should. We forget who it was that, speaking of the infirmities of human nature in regard to office, went so far as to declare even of the Radicals that their patronage of the Charing-cross tailor was entirely attributable to "their regard for Place."

But as Sir James Graham grew more moderate he grew also more firm in his purpose of moderation. He began by withdrawing himself into the snail-shell of Whigism; and when the Whigs wanted to hurry themselves, and were ready to yield to any "element of popularity," they could not draw him out of it again. He would not travel with them on their radical railroad. He left office, or office left him, or both, and one fine afternoon, when some dose was proposed that seemed too strong for him, he and Lord Stanley stalked, passibus equis, bang over to the benches of the opposition.

It is only due to say for Sir James Graham, that upon those benches he several times distinguished himself greatly in debate. He made several remarkable speeches, and there was much force and eloquence in what he said upon many questions of important policy. He also delivered a splendid oration in Cumberland, giving a general show up of his former colleagues and their march on the road to ruin, and in this he fairly committed himself emphatically to Conservative principles. In Conservative principles he has since remained, and when the Peel phalanx marched into office, and formed square in Downing-street, there he was, and there he is, Secretary of State for the Home Department.

In this capacity Sir James has, with the exception of two or three faux pas in minor points of domestic legislation, such as being too merciful to blundering magistrates, and on one occasion too favourable to a "criminal of condition," acquitted himself to the satisfaction of the community, and maintained the dignity of his position in the eyes of society. But there is one dreadful drawback against any excellence that may attach to his general character as a Home Secretary, and that lies in his obstinate adherence to the cruel principles of the Poor Law Bill—a measure which the election speeches of the Conservative members almost promised us to sweep away, but which the Conservative Ministers still retain in all the glaring enormity of its injustice and oppression.

There never can be any lasting popularity attaching to the memory of a "new Poor Law Home Secretary."

THE MARQUIS WELLESLEY.

In presenting to our readers a portrait of the late distinguished Marquis Wellesley, we take the opportunity of recording also a few memoirs of his memorable existence. The death of the noble marquis took place, after a protracted illness, on Monday, at his lordship's residence, Kingston-house, Brompton, between three and four o'clock in the morning.

Many years have elapsed since there was occasion to record the death of any man who enjoyed a more brilliant reputation than the Marquis Wellesley. Of noble birth, of eminent classical attainments, he was justly admired as an elegant writer, and still more distinguished as an orator of acknowledged ability; but his genius as a statesman is known to have produced results the remote consequences of which it would be presumptuous to calculate, though its more immediate effects have been felt in every quarter of the world.

MARQUIS WELLESLEY.

The Marquis Wellesley, when by courtesy Viscount Wellesley, was at an early age placed at the most celebrated of English schools, Eton College, and in due time transferred to the University of Oxford. At both those great seats of learning the embryo statesman was eminently distinguished. His brothers (afterwards Lord Maryborough, the Duke of Wellington, Lord Cowley, and the Rev. Gerald Wellesley) attained to some honours in the course of their school and university education, but the eldest member of this celebrated family not only surpassed his relatives, but even stood high amongst the great body of his contemporaries at a period when classical attainments were in the highest repute, and when they were to many men objects of an ambition beyond which they indulged no higher aspirations.

His studies at the University being concluded, Viscount Wellesley returned to his native country, but had the misfortune to lose, his father before he attained his majority.

Immediately on attaining his majority the young Earl of Mornington took his seat in the Irish House of Peers, of which body he of course continued to be a member for the nineteen years which preceded the union. It was a theatre of operations, however, which soon proved too circumscribed for his abilities. The young Irish earl frequently visited London, having been returned in 1784 to the British House of Commons, as member for Beeralston; and, owing to the part which he took in the regency debates, as well as on account of the general evidences of brilliant talent which his lordship found many occasions of displaying, the King appeared to take a warm interest in the rising fortunes of the young and ambitious statesman, who would not be content with less than the enjoyment of seats in two Houses of Parliament. At the next general election he was returned for the King's borough of Windsor, sworn in a member of the Irish Privy Council, and elected one of the Knights of St. Patrick, which latter distinction, however, he resigned in 1810, on being elected a Knight of the Garter.

Lord Mornington, soon after his entrance into the House of Commons, was appointed a Lord of the Treasury, and in 1793 sworn in a member of the British Privy Council. His lordship made such rapid progress in the favour of the King and the confidence of the Minister, that even the post of Governor-General of India was not deemed a situation too arduous for his powers, or too extended in the nature of its duties for the grasp of his comprehensive and vigorous intellect.

In the year 1797 he succeeded Lord Cornwallis in the Government of India, having been at the same time raised to the British Peerage by the title of Baron Wellesley, in right of which he continued to sit in the House of Lords. The marquisate which he subsequently received was in the Irish Peerage; but as a British Peer he never attained to a higher rank than that of baron.

In India under the government of the marquis was achieved a series of victories so complete that General Wellesley (Duke of Wellington), in one of his despatches written at that period, and recently published by Colonel Gurwood, says, that he "only waits to know what countries they are which the Governor-General wishes to take possession of," as if all Asia had quailed under his dominion.

The next efforts of the noble marquis were directed to the important objects of enlarging commercial intercourse between India and Europe; in this, however, the naturally jealous spirit of the East India Company opposed itself to his liberal designs, and the attempt was but partially successful. In no respect cooled by this disappointment, he applied himself with untiring energy to the duties of his station, making a viceregal progress through the northern provinces of India, visiting the nabobs and native princes in the full splendour of Asiatic magnificence, redressing grievances, creating friends and allies, repressing open or concealed enemies, and laying upon a broad basis the foundations of an empire which the potentates of Europe regard with envy, and to which our remotest posterity will look back with astonishment and admiration.

In the year 1805 he was, at his own request, recalled from the Government of India, and, as might be expected, everything was done in this country by the East India Company, and by the Ministers of the Crown, to mark the deep sense which they entertained of his splendid services.

With the life of the marquis all the titles which were conferred on himself become extinct, but the Earldom of Mornington, the Viscounty of Wellesley, and the Barony of Mornington, in the peerage of Ireland, descend to his next brother, Lord Maryborough, because these were honours which their father had enjoyed. Lord Maryborough, now Earl of Mornington, is in his 79th year. He assumed the name of Pole on inheriting the estates of his cousin, William Pole, of Ballydin. His lordship's eldest son, the Hon. William Pole Tylney Long Wellesley, married, as is well known, the daughter and heiress of Sir James Tylney Long, Bart.; this lady died in 1825, and Mr. Wellesley married in 1828 the third daughter of Colonel Paterson and relict of Edward Bligh, Esq. Mr. Long Wellesley will now enjoy the courtesy title of Viscount Wellesley, or that of Lord Maryborough, whichever he may choose.

The number of families put into mourning by the event is, of course, considerable, including those of Lord Maryborough, the Duke of Wellington, Lord Cowley, the Hon. and Rev. Gerald V. Wellesley, the Earl of Westmorland, the Marquis of Tweeddale, the Marquis of Salisbury, Earl Cadogan, Sir Charles Bagot, Lord Fitzroy Somerset, Lord Robert Grosvenor, the Earl of Winchilsea, &c.

By the death of the marquis a stall in the Order of the Garter falls to the patronage of Ministers, and the office of custos rotulorum of the county of Middlesex also becomes vacant. The marquis was a Knight of the Turkish Order of the Crescent, and of the Persian Order of the Lion and Sun.

The following is a brief statement in chronological order of the offices held by the noble marquis, the public proceedings in which he participated, and the chief events of his parliamentary and private life:—Born, June 20, 1760. Succeeded his father in the Irish peerage, May 22, 1781. Elected a Knight of St. Patrick, 1783. Sworn of the Irish Privy Council, 1793. Returned to the British House of Commons for Beeralston, 1785. Returned for New Windsor subsequently; created a British Privy Councillor, 1793. Married his first wife, November 29, 1794. Appointed Governor-General of India, 1797. Created a British Peer, as Baron Wellesley, October 20, 1797. Created Marquis Wellesley, December 2, 1799. Returned from India, 1805. Appointed Ambassador to the Supreme Central Junta of Spain, July 28, 1809. Returned, Dec., 1809. Appointed Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, December, 1809. Elected a Knight of the Garter, and resigned the order of St. Patrick, 1810. Resigned the office of Foreign Secretary, June, 1812. Appointed Lord Lieutenant of Ireland for the first time, December, 1821. Married his second wife, October 29, 1825. Resigned the Lord Lieutenancy, March, 1828. Appointed Lord Steward, 1831. Resigned, 1833. Appointed Lord Lieutenant of Ireland for the second time, September, 1833. Resigned a second time, December, 1834. Appointed Lord Chamberlain to the Household, April, 1835. Resigned the Lord Chamberlainship the same year. Died, September 20th, 1842.

THE COURT AND HAUT TON.

The Right Hon. Fox Maule, when at Taymouth Castle as the guest of the Marquis of Breadalbane, during the Queen's visit to that magnificent seat, wore on the first evening at dinner a superb Highland brooch of considerable value, to confine his plaid on the shoulder. Her Majesty was pleased to admire it, and on the succeeding morning the right hon. gentleman presented it to her Majesty, by whom it was graciously accepted, and both at Taymouth and Drummond Castle the brooch was used by the Queen in the velvet plaid of the Royal Stuart tartan, worn every evening at dinner by her Majesty.

WINDSOR, Tuesday.—In consequence of the extremely unfavourable nature of the weather, the rain having continued, with scarcely any intermission, nearly the whole of the day, the review of the 15th Regiment of Foot by his Imperial Highness the Archduke Frederick of Austria, which was to have taken place this afternoon in the Home Park, was postponed, and from the very unfit state the park is now in, from the late heavy rains, for a military display, it is more than probable that the intended review by his Imperial Highness will be abandoned altogether.

WINDSOR, Wednesday Evening, September 28.—In consequence of the departure of the whole of her Majesty's royal and illustrious visitors from the castle, the state apartments will be again open as usual to the public to-morrow. During the residence of the Court at Windsor they are invariably closed on Tuesdays and Fridays. Her Majesty has abandoned the intention of leaving Windsor Castle, upon a visit to Claremont, as had been previously arranged, during this week. Indeed, it is now quite uncertain at what period the court will proceed from Windsor to that delightful retreat. It may be observed, that it is not expected the court will visit Brighton till after Christmas, which her Majesty will spend at Windsor. The festivities of the season will be celebrated at the castle with the usual magnificence and splendour which have been observed since her Majesty's accession to the throne. A numerous and distinguished party will be invited to the castle to partake of the hospitality of the Sovereign during that festive season.

His Excellency Count St. Aulaire, the French Ambassador, arrived at Manchester House, on Monday evening, from a short visit to their Majesties the King and Queen of the French, at Eu, near Dieppe. The Ambassador landed at Dover from the French mail packet, and set off for town under a salute from the heights.

LORD MORPETH.—Lord Morpeth, we understand, is not expected to return from his tour in the United States and Canada until the beginning of November, when his Lordship will join the Earl and Countess of Carlisle, who are now at Chatsworth, at Castle Howard, Yorkshire.—Leeds Times.

On Thursday week a deputation from the committee of figured silk weavers of Spitalfields proceeded to Frogmore Lodge, for the purpose of presenting to the Duchess of Kent a specimen of silk weaving, new, we believe, to the manufactories of this country, but on a principle which has some time been worked by the manufacturers of France. The subject was the portrait of the illustrious lady to whom it was presented, entirely woven in silk, in a loom and machine of the Jacquard principle. Its dimensions are 14 inches by 10, and the portrait is an exact copy from an engraving published some time since. It is elegantly mounted in a rich gilt frame, and is at once creditable in the highest degree to the skill and industry of the designer and the operative, and well worthy the gracious acceptance of the Duchess of Kent. It has cost in materials, patern drawing, &c., upwards of £100. The deputation was received by Sir G. Couper, through whose hands the portrait was conveyed to her Royal Highness, accompanied by an appropriate address. Sir G. Couper announced to the deputation that her Royal Highness had been pleased minutely to examine the present, and to observe that the work had been got up with admirable skill and ingenuity. Her Royal Highness further desired that the deputation would have the kindness to communicate to the committee the gratification her Royal Highness felt for their kind attention.—Globe.

VISIT OF THE DUKE OF CAMBRIDGE TO NEWCASTLE.—His Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge, accompanied by a distinguished party, visited this town on Saturday, when they were met according to previous arrangements, and conducted to the hall of the Literary and Philosophical Society, in Westgate-street. The mayor, aldermen, and council, in their robes of office, were here assembled to receive his Royal Highness, and an address was presented with the usual formalities, which his Royal Highness acknowledged in suitable terms. An address was also presented from the mayor and town council of Gateshead, to which his Royal Highness also returned a most gracious reply. The library was crowded by genteel company connected with the town and neighbourhood, and the gallery was well filled with ladies. The Royal Duke visited every portion of the town worthy of note, and seemed highly pleased with the results of his visit.

HIS IMPERIAL HIGHNESS THE ARCHDUKE FREDERICK OF AUSTRIA.—On Wednesday his Imperial Highness, accompanied by his Excellency Prince Esterhazy, and attended by Baron Lebzeltern, Count Szeczyli, Chevalier Wiltmann Olli, Chevalier Du Mont, Chevalier Kohel, &c., returned to Mivart's Hotel from a visit of seven days to her Majesty the Queen, at Windsor Castle. On his route to town from Windsor his Imperial Highness paid his respects to the Queen Dowager, at Bushey-park, and her Royal Highness the Duchess of Cambridge, at Kew. In the evening his Imperial Highness and suite had an early dinner at the above hotel, and afterwards went to honour the performances by his presence at Covent-garden Theatre, his Imperial Highness and retinue occupying the Queeen Dowager's box.

Baroness Lehzen is, we are given to understand, on the eve of departing for Germany, for, it is said, the benefit of her health.—Morning Paper.

THE LORD CHANCELLOR.—His Lordship and Lady Lyndhurst have been staying for several days at Lord Clarence-mansion, on the Marine-parade, Brighton. His Lordship was visited on Monday by Sir W. Follett, who, after transacting business with the noble lord, returned to town the same day.

Sir R. Peel, accompanied by Lady Peel and family, left Whitehall-gardens on Tuesday for Drayton Manor, where a distinguished circle has assembled this week.

EPSOM, Tuesday.—The Prince Albert's prize has been given out. The names stand thus:—French and German—1st, Lambton; 2nd, Dodson. French and Italian—1st, Dodson; 2nd, Bastard. Among the select were Ffolliott, Naper, and Stratton.

THE THEATRES.

The note of preparation has been sounded aloud in every thoroughfare of the great metropolis for the last fortnight. The winter theatres are all about to open on us at once, and fame has found full occupation for her many tongues. Od Drury claims precedence in point of standing, though Covent Garden has taken it in point of time. Drury, however, opens its portals this evening, and a play of Shakspere, As you like it, put upon the stage in a style of unexampled splendour, forms the first item in the bill of fare. Mrs. Nisbit plays Rosalind, Macready "the melancholy Jacques," and the only new name in the cast is that of Mr. Ryder, of whom we know nothing. The Attic Story, a farce played once, we believe, with success at the end of last season, winds up the opening night. A constant succession of novelties is promised, King John amongst the first, with a child named Newcombe of wonderful promise, if report is to be credited, to play Prince Arthur. It is clear, from all we can see, that the lovers of the legitimate drama will be gratified to their heart's content.—Covent Garden bursts upon us this evening also with some new glories. The opera of Semiramide, with Miss Kemble in a new part, and Mrs. Alfred Shaw, for the first time, before the lamps of "the Garden." Of Mrs. Shaw much has been bruited; of what she may accomplish we shall, ere long, have to speak. We are soon to lose Miss Kemble, and if we find in Mrs. Shaw one worthy to tread in her footsteps, our triumph and gratification will be complete. The Haymarket presents nightly three novelties. Alma Mater, a sketch of Oxford College life, farcical, and though destitute of decided novelty, full of material for laughter, is the first in the catalogue. The Curiosities of Literature, a laughable trifle, comes next, and last as to time and first in merit, Grandfather Whitehead. Oh! glorious William Farren, first and still most truthful was that picture you left before us! Never yet was nature more clearly delineated on the stage. The tears of the audience, men, women, and children as they were, bore indubitable evidence to the fidelity of the affecting picture of the old man yearning over his recovered grandchild. We verily believe the very actors though "Hecuba was nought to them, or they to Hecuba," wept as we—yes, why should we be ashamed of it?—did ourselves. Reader, see Grandfather Whitehead, and you must be good indeed if you do not come away improved as well as delighted. The Adelphi, with sad associations of poor Yates hanging about every one who went into it, opened on Thursday with a characteristic melodrama and a strong corps. We wish it all success. The Olympic, under the management of George Wilde, the best of our low comedians in his particular line, opens on Monday with a piece adapted from Pelham, and Blanchard's side-splitting farce of the Artful Dodge, and another revival, Life in the Clouds. Due care has been taken to improve the internal arrangements of the house. In the bills we perceive the name of one of the "cropped comedians;" that alone would be an attraction. The City of London has added Mrs. Honey and Miss Daley to its corps; and the Surrey, now at the head of the minors, produced on Monday a new piece of "romantic and domestic interest" from the pen of a clever writer, Mr. Albert Smith, before a crowded audience. Neville Audley (Mr. Hughes), a young officer, has fled after the affair of his party at the battle of Tewkesbury, and being pursued is arrested while having an interview with his mistress, Blanche Heriot (Mrs. Honner). He is protected by the abbot of Chertsey Abbey, but the sanctity of the abbey being about to be violated by a follower of Edward, who is also Audley's rival, he consents to yield himself a prisoner on the condition that time shall be given to him till curfew's toll on the next day, for the arrival of a reprieve from King Edward. The messenger who brings the reprieve is belated, and Blanche knowing that the first toll of the curfew would be the knell of her lover, finds the bell, and by seizing the tongue of the bell as the imminent moment of its sound approaches, prevents it from yielding any sound. Before the cause of the delay is discovered the expected messenger arrives, and Blanche has secured the safety of her lover. There is a slight under-plot involving the courtship of the village doctor's apprentice (Smith) with a pretty and saucy village coquette (Miss Terrey), which, of course, terminates in a union of the parties currently with that of the heroine with Audley. The piece is well written and full of striking incidents. It is far above the run of dramas produced at this side of the Thames, both with reference to its intrinsic merits and the correct and tasteful manner in which it was put upon the stage; the scenery, dresses, and all appointments being unexceptionable. Of the actors, Hicks, Hughes, Smith, and Webster played well. Mrs. Honner acted with great judgment, force, and feeling, and it is but just to say that Miss Terrey contributed to the success of the piece by her admirable acting and singing. The Chertsey Curfew will, we predicate, toll for many an evening at the Surrey.

SPORTING INTELLIGENCE.

NEWMARKET FIRST OCTOBER MEETING.—TUESDAY.

Duke of Bedford's Oakley, beat Lord Exeter's Abydos. 200 h. ft.

The Buckenham Stakes of 300 sovs. each.

Colonel Peele's b c Murat by Sheerness (Nat)	..	..	..	1
Lord Exeter's br c by Velocipede, out of Galata	..	..	..	2
The Grand Duke Michael Stakes of 50 sovs. each, for three-year olds, colts, 8st 7lbs; fillies, 8st 4lbs. A.F.
Lord G. Bentinck's b c Misdeal (Rogers)	..	..	..	1
Lord Exeter's Revocation	..	..	..	2
Lord Albemarle's f by Plenipotentiary, out of Antiope	..	..	..	3
Mr. Greville's b c Canadian	..	..	..	4
Lord Albemarle's Buffalo, beat Mr. Osbaldeston's The Devil among the Tailors.

Duke of Bedford's John o'Gaunt received 25 sovs ft from Mr. Osbaldeston's Skipton.

Captain Colquett's Pickpocket (E. Edwards)	..	..	..	1
Duke of Rutland's f by Bizarre, out of Minx's dam	..	..	..	0
Mr. Ford's f. by Poison	..	..	..	0

WEDNESDAY.

For the D. M. Handicap this afternoon only three horses were named, viz., Rosalind, and the Manto colt, and the first two having been scratched within the time prescribed by the conditions, the race was void. The T. Y. C. Handicap did not fill, and Johnny having paid forfeit to Ralph, a list that at one time looked like four races at least was reduced to a match; and a D. I. Plate, with three entrances. The members seem to be reserving themselves and their horses for the Second October and Houghton Meetings, for which great things are promised. Of the two events decided this afternoon the following are particulars:—Match—100, h. ft. T. Y. C.

Duke of Bedford's Magog, 3 yrs, 7st 7lbs (E. Edwards)	..	..	..	0
Mr. Gregory's Una, 4 yrs, 8st 7lbs (Chapple)	..	..	..	0

£50 for 3-yrs-olds.

Mr. Rogers's Bridegroom (Bartholomew)	..	..	..	1
Mr. Petitt's Everilda	..	..	..	2

Match, £200, h. f. Lord Albemarle's Ralph, received ft from Mr. Payne's Johnny.

Cesarewitch Stakes.—7 to 1 agst Bell sauns, 8 to 1 agst Portrait (taken), 9 to 1 agst Blue Bonnet, and 10 to 1 agst Florence.

A match for 100 sovs, h ft, is made between Lord Albemarle's Tickle and Mr. Goodman's Bother'em, 8st 7lbs each, T. Y. C., to run on Monday in the next meeting.

THURSDAY.

The Town Plate of £50.

Mr. Combe's Rosalind (Rogers)	..	..	..	1
Mr. Stephenson's Ma Mie	..	..	..	2

The Rutland Stakes of 30 sovs. each.

Mr. J. Sadler's Testy by Venison (Rogers)	..	..	..	1
Lord Exeter's f by Jerry, out of Macrocmme	..	..	..	2
Mr. Treen's Bastile, by Defence	..	..	..	3

The Queen's Plate of 100 guineas.

Lord Albemarle's c by Plenipo, out of Antiope, 3 yrs. (E. Edwards)	..	..	..	1
Mr. Rogers's Bridegroom, 3 yrs.	..	..	..	2
Mr. Osbaldeston's Woldsman, 3 yrs.	..	..	..	3

Duke of Bedford's John-o'-Gaunt received forfeit from Mr. Osbaldeston's The Devil among the Tailors.

LATEST BETTING.

THE CESAREWITCH STAKES. 6 to 1 agst Mr. Sadler's Bellissima (taken); 8 to 1 agst Mr. Jones's Portrait (taken); 10 to 1 agst Lord Eglinton's Blue Bonnet; 12 to 1 agst Duke of Grafton's Florence; 13 to 1 agst Mr. F. Clarke's Arcanus; 20 to 1 agst Mr. Stephenson's Ma Mie (taken before her race). Bellissima and Portrait have been backed to win large stakes.

It was reported in town this morning (Friday) that Canadian died on Thursday night.

EXTRAORDINARY ROBBERY.—PLYMOUTH, Sept. 26.—The Pay-Sergeants' offices of the Royal Marine barracks at Stonehouse were plundered on the morning of Sunday last, between twelve and two, by one of the marines, named Norman, whose duty it was to guard that department between those hours. Norman had been about eight months in the corps; he is a Cornishman by birth, and was lately in service as a coachman or stableman at Exeter, the place of his enlistment. For a freak he recently lowered himself from a four story window, assisted only by a small clothes line, into the area, and at the Pay-office he took out the pane of glass so completely that it was not noticed until gun-fire in the morning. About 200 or 300 letters were immediately forwarded to the various police-offices and recruiting-stations, and a reward of £10 has been offered for his apprehension.

COOPER THE CHARTIST.—Some friends of Cooper, the late Chartist leader, have been for some time collecting money twards the cost of his defence.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

TO GROCER'S ASSISTANTS.

AN OPPORTUNITY is now offered to any Young Man having at his command not less than £300, of going into Partnership with a party of long standing, having a shop, well situated, in a populous county town, and also a good connexion. He will be expected to take an active part in the business.—For further particulars, apply, by letter, to B.B., 198, Strand.

FOR INVESTMENT OR OCCUPATION, BERNARD-STREET, RUSSELL-SQUARE, AND RUSSELL-PLACE, FITZROY-SQUARE

MR. TIMS is directed to submit for SALE by AUCTION, at the MART, on TUESDAY, OCTOBER 11, at One, the LEASE of a truly desirable RESIDENCE, No. 11, Bernard-street, within two doors of Russell-square, held for 55 years at a low ground-rent, and let to a highly respectable tenant, at £75 per annum. Also a capital Abode, with premises in the rear, No. 15, Mansfield-place, Fitzroy-square, held for about 35 years, at a low ground-rent, at present in hand, but of the estimated value of 120 guineas per annum.

Particulars of Messrs. Blake and Beaumont, Solicitors, Carlton Chambers, 8, Regent-street; of the Auctioneer, 69, Upper Charlotte-street, Fitzroy-square, and at the Mart.

FURNISHING IRONMONGERY.

JOHN COX DEAR'S extensive Show Rooms contain Stoves from 4s. 6d. to fifteen guineas.—Kitchen ranges, 2 ft. wide, with oven and boilers, complete (the best), from 2s. 9d. to six guineas. Fire irons, from 2s. per set. Dish covers, in sets of seven, 8s. 6d to 37s. 9d. (the best raised tops). Shower Baths, best quality made, 45s. Hip, 20s. Sponging, 8s. Kitchen furniture, in great variety, equally low. British-plate Tablespoons and Forks, 11s. to 16s. per dozen Lists, containing the prices of every article, sent free of cost; with engravings of stoves, iron bedsteads, &c. &c.

DEAR'S Builder's price-list (brass, locks, brass-founders, &c. &c., may be had on application, by the trade, free of charge.

MORE THAN FOUR YEARS have now elapsed since W. BERDOE introduced his VENTILATING WATERPROOF; also his well-known WATERPROOF PALETOT, in lieu of the "Macintosh." The host of imitations of both, and the increasingly extensive sale of the latter, among the friends of those who have adopted it, are sufficient proofs of their success. For the coming season W. B. has now ready a large stock of the most modern and appropriate materials. Also of first rate Garments for Shooting, Fishing, Travelling, Riding, Driving, &c., &c., warranted (without confining perspiration) to exclude any description or quantity of rain whatever.

WALTER BERDOE, Tailor, Waterproof, &c., 69, CORNHILL, (eight doors from the Bank), corner of Finch-lane.

A MILD CLIMATE BY THE SEA.

TWO INVALIDS requiring Superior Accommodation for the Winter, or for a permanency.—A Gentleman and his Wife, or two or three Ladies, may be received into the family of an M.D., where advantages of high value are offered. The House is handsome and spacious, commanding sea-views and rich scenery; the Pleasure Grounds well laid out and sheltered; hours regular; a Carriage is kept: in fine, everything combines to make it most desirable for the residence of Invalids, or of Persons returned from a Tropical Country, and only requires to be seen to be duly appreciated.

Address to M. D., care of John Parson, Esq., Solicitor, 24, Red Lion-square, London private.

ROYAL OLYMPIC THEATRE, Wyeh-street, Strand. Lessee, Mr. G. Wild. By authority of the Lord Chamberlain.

The whole of the interior entirely re-decorated, and a new Gallery, erected by Mr. Mackintosh, capable of holding upwards of 800! Open for the Winter Season.

Monday, October 3, 1842, and during the Week, when will be performed a new Drama (in Three Acts), adapted from one of the most popular works of Sir Edward Lytton Bulwer, Bart., by the author of "My Man Tom," "Gwynneth Vaughan," and other favourite pieces originally produced at this Theatre, to be called THE ADVENTURES OF A GENTLEMAN. The Music selected and arranged by Mr. Calcott. The new Scenery by Messrs J. W. Beverley, Scott, and Assistants. Sir Reginald Glanville, Mr. Pitt James; Henry Feltham, Mr. Halford; Dr. Hellebore, Mr. Brookes, Tom Thornton, Mr. Baker; Nat Sursingle, Mr. Ross; Job Johnson, Mr. G. Wyld, with a new Song, entitled "The Life of a Vagabond," Gertrude Douglas, Miss Lavinia Melville (her first appearance at this Theatre); Letty Lambswool (Chambermaid at the "Flying Childers"), Miss Lebatt, with a new Song, called "If I were a Lady."

After which, THE ARTFUL DODGE. The Hon. Frederick Flamwell Fitz-Fudge, Mr. F. Fitzjames; Demosthenes Dodge, Esq., Mr. G. Wild, Susan Smudge, Miss Arden.

To conclude with LIFE IN THE CLOUDS; or, OLYMPUS IN AN UPROAR.

Also in preparation, a New Burletta, by S. Lover, Esq., and a variety of Novelties. Lessee, Mr. Calcott; Stage Manager, Mr. C. Baker

Boxes, 2s. 6d.; Second Price, 1s. 6d.; Pit, 1s.; Gallery, 6d. Private Boxes, £1 11s. 6d., to be had at the Box-office. Doors open at Half-past Six o'clock; the Performances commence at Seven precisely. Price at Nine. The Box-office under the Superintendence of Mr. Watts, and will be open from Eleven till Four o'Clock

ROYAL POLYTECHNIC EXHIBITION, extended into CAVENDISH-SQUARE. Excellent Specimens of Machinery just completed, and at work by Steam Power, in the Hall of Manufactures, including Napier's Patent Printing Machine, Amelia's Patent Brick and Tile Making Machine, Taylor's Patent Sound-Headed Pin Making Machine, &c. The Weekly List of Popular Lectures, delivered by Dr. Ryan, Professor Bachhoffner, and the other Lecturers, with the appointed hours for each, is suspended in the Hall. The fine Exterior of St. Peter's, at Rome, and the Interior of the Chapel of St. Helena, at Jerusalem, the Model by Dr. Bonomi, R.A., published by Mr. Moon, are already established.

A Grand Promenade Concert, Vocal and Instrumental, every evening, comprising the services of the following distinguished artists:—Instrumental Solo Performers, Cornet à Pistons, Mr. Laurent; Flute, Mr. Sayner, Concertina, Master Blagrove; Violin, Mr. T. Baker, of the Italian Opera; Pianoforte, Mr. T. Julian Adams; and a full orchestral band. Vocalists, Mrs. Wilson, Miss Thurston, Miss Taylor, Mr. Martin, Mr. R. F. Smith. Chorus Master, Mr. Wilson. Musical Director, Mr. T. Julian Adams.

Between the first and second part of the Concert, the splendid Gas Microscope is exhibited on Monday, Wednesday, Friday, and Saturday, and Magical Illusions, Tuesday and Thursday. At the close of the Concert a Lecture is delivered on some subject of popular interest, which is followed by the magnificent Dissolving Views.

The Laughing Gas every Tuesday and Saturday evening.

Admission, One Shilling.

THE CHINESE COLLECTION, ST. GEORGE'S-PLACE, HYDE PARK-CORNER. This splendid Collection, consisting of objects exclusively Chinese, surpassing in extent and grandeur any similar display in the known world, entirely filling the spacious saloon, 225 feet in length by 50 feet in width, embracing upwards of Fifty Figures, as large as life, all fac similes, in groups in their native costumes, from the highest mandarin to the blind mendicant in his patched garment; also, many thousand specimens, both in natural history and miscellaneous curiosities, illustrating the appearance, manners, and customs of more than three hundred million Chinese, respecting whom the nations of Europe have had scarcely any opportunity of judging, is now OPEN for PUBLIC INSPECTION, from Ten in the morning till Ten at night. Admission, 2s. 6d.; Children, 1s.

THIS DAY, PRICE 1s., OR POST-FREE, 1s 4d

SCOTTISH SONG.—The Piano, No. 27 (October), contains "Phemie, or Under the Greenwood Tree," a favourite Scotch melody sung by Mr. Wilson, by Royal command, before her Majesty at Taymouth Castle; arranged with accompaniments for the Piano Forte.

Published in Pianoforte Music, Duets, and Songs; sold also by E. Williams, Milsom-street, Bath; Heywood, Manchester; Robotham, Derby; Guest, Birmingham; Watling, Norwich; Whitaker, Sheffield; Sutherland, Edinburgh; Reeve, Liverpool; and all Booksellers.

WEIPPERT'S ROYAL SCOTCH QUADRILLES.

JOHN WEIPPERT, 21, SOHO-SQUARE, has just published, Price Four Shillings, a new set of Scotch Quadrilles, in honour of the Royal Visit to Scotland, including, also, without additional charge a newly-arranged set of Scotch Reels and Strathspeys, composed expressly for the occasion, and danced before her Majesty in the Highlands.

JOHN WEIPPERT, 21, Soho square, Harpist to her Majesty.

Now ready, price 1s. 6d.,

THE QUEEN'S VOYAGE; or, the Follies of Scotland. A Satire.

By the Hon. * * *, author of "The Peace Martyr," "The Queen's Masque," &c. &c. &c.

W. GILLING, 193, Strand.

CHUBB'S LOCKS, FIRE PROOF SAFES, CASH BOXES, &c. CHUBB'S NEW PATENT DETECTOR LOCKS give perfect security from false keys, and also detect any attempt to open them. They are made to all sizes, and for every purpose to which locks are applied. These locks are strong, secure, simple, and durable. Chubb's Patent Fire-proof Safes and Boxes form a complete preservation for deeds, plate, books, &c., from fire and thieves. Cash Boxes, and Japan Boxes of all sizes fitted with the New Patent Locks. A large assortment of the above on sale, by C. CHUBB and SON, 57, St. Paul's Church-yard, London.

INTERLSTING TO LADIES.

SUN-BURNS, FRECKLES, TAN, and other disfigurements of the Skin, prevalent at this peculiar season, are pleasingly eradicated by that unique preparation ROWLAND'S KALYDOR, a balmy, odoriferous liquid, whose purifying and beautifying virtues in completely removing all cutaneous eruptions, and in rendering the complexion delicately clear and fair. It is invaluable as a renovating and refreshing wash during travelling, or exposure to the sun, dust, or harsh winds, and after the heated atmosphere of crowded assemblies. Gentlemen, after shaving, will find it allay the irritation and smarting pain, and render the skin smooth and pleasant. Price 4s. 6d. per Bottle. Duty included.

CAUTION.—Ask for ROWLAND'S KALYDOR, and see that these words are on the envelope with the signature and address in red, "A. ROWLAND and Son, 20, Hatton Garden, London;" the same are engraved on the Government Stamp affixed over the cork.

 All others are trashy IMITATIONS

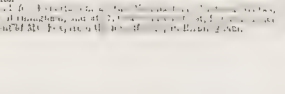
Sold by the Proprietors; and by Chemists and Perfumers



THE QUEEN has been graciously pleased to command that JOSEPH GILLOTT, of Birmingham, be appointed STEEL PEN MANUFACTURER IN ORDINARY TO HER MAJESTY, dated April 13, 1840.

Joseph Gillott's very superior PATENT and other WEDGE PENS may be had of all stationers, booksellers, &c. in all parts of the United Kingdom.

It is gratifying to the Patentee to acknowledge his obligations to the Public for the best proof they can give him of their approbation, in the continual increasing demand for his Pens.

The number of Pens manufactured at the works of Joseph Gillott,

FROM [illegible] TO DEC. 1840,	AND FROM DEC. 1840, TO DEC. 1841,
was 13 [illegible]	was 53,1 [illegible]
or 4,7[illegible] gross,	or 5,177,324 dozens,
or [illegible] dozens,	or 431,437 gross

CAUTION.—All the genuine Pens are marked in full "JOSEPH GILLOTT," and Venders are desired to note that the very few Pens put up in packets of one dozen each, and have a label outside, with a fac-simile of his signature: "JOSEPH GILLOTT."

 At the request of persons extensively engaged in Public Offices, Joseph Gillott has introduced his Warranted Steel Pens, which [illegible] their use, being of different degrees of fineness, from the fine point to the broad points.

Wholesale and for Exportation only at the Manufactory, Graham-street, Birmingham, and at 37, Gracechurch-street, London, where the public can be supplied with the above Pens, and all other kinds made by Mr. Joseph Gillott.

VALUABLE LEASE, PRODUCING A NET RENTAL OF £36 PER ANNUM.

MR. TIMS is favoured with Instructions by the Executors of the late Mr. Meabry to offer for SALE by AUCTION, at the MART, near the Bank of England, on TUESDAY, the 11th OCTOBER, at One, the valuable lease of an excellent Residence, No. 47, Upper Charlotte-street, Fitzroy-square, held for an unexpired term of 39 years, at the low ground-rent of £9, and let on Lease for 21 years, determinable in 7 or 14. The House has been within the last few months put into thorough repair, regardless of expense, under the superintendence of an able surveyor, and is let to a highly responsible tenant, at a rental of £45 per annum.

Particulars may be had of Messrs. Amory, Sewel, and Moores, Solicitors, Throgmorton-street; of Mr. Tims, Auctioneer and Upholsterer, 64, Upper Charlotte-street, Fitzroy-square; and at the Mart.

A SELECT COLLECTION OF NOVELS.

FIVE HUNDRED and FIFTY VOLUMES of MODERN NOVELS, in the best condition, and comprising most of the principal works of the first authors, to be DISPOSED OF for £40. A most desirable collection for any person about opening a Circulating Library. The books may be seen and a list obtained at J. Garmerson's Magazine Warehouse, 9, Temple-street, bottom of Bouverie-street, Fleet-street.

COMPOSITION FOR WRITING WITH STEEL PENS.

STEPHENS' WRITING FLUIDS comprise the most splendid and durable colours, and the most indelible compositions which art can produce; they contain the fullest proportions of colouring matter—and those so whom economy is more an object than powerful contrast with the paper, may dilute them with water, to the extent of colour they may require, and thus effect a real economy, without paying for the cost and incumbrance of large bottles. Also STEPHENS' SELECT STEEL PENS.

HENRY STEPHENS, 34, Stamford-street, Blackfriars-road, London.

THE COMPLEXION.—GOWLAND'S LOTION removes all impurities and discolourations of the skin, and promptly re-establishes a clear and healthy tone of surface, whilst its sustaining properties, in obviating the effects of variable temperature upon the tint of the complexion, is verified by the continued freshness usually limited to the earlier periods of personal attraction. "Rout, Shaw, London," is in white letters on the Government stamp.—Price 2s. 9d., 5s. 6d.; quarts, 8s. 6d. Sold by all Perfumers and Medicine Venders.

GREAT COMFORT TO INVALIDS. The Patent Hermetical Self-sealed Commode Pail, forming, with its mahogany seat and earthen pan, a completely air-tight, inodorous, portable chamber closet, for £1 6s.; in a handsome japanned box, £2 4s.; in an elegant mahogany box, £3, rendering the sick room and lying-in room as fresh and comfortable at all times to enter as a well-appointed drawing-room. Sold only at the Patent Scientific Repository, 25, Tavistock-street, Covent garden; original depot for the improved American Oven, fitted up so as to roast coffee, &c.

Orders from the country, with a reference in London, immediately attended to.

PUBLIC ATTENTION is particularly called to the extraordinary case of cure from the use of that inestimable remedy, PARR'S LIFE PILLS.

From MR. NOBLE, Bookseller, Boston.

"Boston, August 15, 1842.

"To the Proprietors of PARR'S LIFE PILLS.

"Gentlemen—Having heard of the extraordinary and unexpected cure of my friend Mr. Somerville, by the use of PARR'S LIFE PILLS, I applied to him for the particulars of his case, which he has kindly furnished. To his very kind and striking statements (which I enclose) I can add nothing; they speak for themselves; but I may observe, that on his leaving Lincolnshire it was the decided impression of all his friends, both in Boston and Stamford, where he is well known, that his recovery was entirely hopeless:—in fact, that he was just going home to die, his appearance every way indicating an advanced stage of consumption.

"Please to send me 100 dozen boxes of PARR'S PILLS, small, and 20 dozen large, as my stock is again low. I perceive my sale since last August has been 18,368 boxes.

"Gentlemen, yours, faithfully,

"JOHN NOBLE,

"Wholesale and Retail Agent, Boston."

From Mr. PETER SOMERVILLE, of Helensburgh, near Edinburgh, addressed to Mr. JOHN NOBLE, Bookseller, Boston, Lincolnshire.

"Spring Bank Cottage, Helensburgh, August 18, 1842.

"My Dear Mr Noble—Your kind letter I duly received, and would have answered it immediately, but for a circumstance I have delayed until now. I can assure you nothing gives me more pleasure than to bear witness to all and sundry. The real, and I am now satisfied, the lasting good I have received from the use of PARR'S LIFE PILLS; some of my friends observing the wonderful effects produced on me through them, urged me strongly to make my case known to encourage others affected with coughs, &c., to give them a trial, and I was glad to receive from you the same request, as you will be able to manage it for me. I am rather at a loss lest I should fail in giving due justice to the efficacy of these Pills over all the medicines I have tried for my complaint, and you know I have now had nearly two years' trial of Medical Prescriptions for my cough and liability to catch colds, without being one whit better, but I believe worse; and the last physician I consulted laughed at my ignorance when I asked him if there was nothing in physic that would operate as a preventive against taking cold; he shook his head, and said, 'No, no; there is no such medicine.' Now, if he had been acquainted with PARR'S LIFE PILLS, he would have said, 'Yes, yes; there is such a thing;' and instead of recommending Snake-root and Iceland Moss, he would have recommended them as an effectual medicine for Coughs, Pleurisy, and Spitting of Blood, for that was the threefold form of my complaint. The cough had become so much a custom that my sleep was broken by continued fits of coughing; my inability to cold and inflammation was so great, that a change in the weather, or a walk, or any little exertion, would lay me up, and the usual routine of fasting, purging, and blistering, had to be resorted to. This I had four times in the course of two months, and then speaking aloud or reading aloud made me a great deal worse, and my strength was so far gone, that any little exertion in walking or working was quite sufficient for me. Now look at the change; before I had taken two small boxes of the pills, my strength was so far recovered that I commenced to work ten hours a day, and scarcely ever felt wearied, and have done so for these five weeks past; and then as to there being a preventive against cold, I may just mention that the place I went to work in was a school-house, just building, the roof was on it, but as yet, there were none of the windows in it, and the draught was very great, more especially as I had never before wrought under such circumstances; yet I wrought, and am still working there without having taken cold that way.

"When I began to take PARR'S PILLS, I gave up at the same time the use of tea and coffee, which I believe helped me greatly in getting rid of my complaint. I am fully satisfied the use of tea especially, is a very bad thing for a cough, as I always found my cough much worse after taking tea. The great good that I have derived from PARR'S PILLS may be summed up in a few words:—

"1. First, they increased my strength; all other medicines had a weakening effect upon them. I take three, four, and sometimes five pills every twenty four hours, and instead of being weakened by them, they rather in their operation revive the animal spirits, and impart lasting strength to the body.

"Secondly, they go direct to the cough. I had not taken six pills before I felt the cough shaking, its hold upon me became looser and looser every hour I took, and the first, or it may be the second, Sunday after I began taking them, my friends were remarking to me the great and happy change in my cough, as during the meeting I had scarcely coughed any, while previous to taking them I used to be the great disturber of the congregation by my complaint.

"Thirdly, they healed the spitting of blood, and changed completely the nature of the expectoration; this was previously so bad that the doctors agreed from this that my lungs were diseased; and the last advice I got from the doctor was, 'You must take great care of yourself, for your lungs are affected.' Now, what are my lungs affected or? I do not perceive it, and this I say, that by the use of PARR'S LIFE PILLS the [illegible] symptoms are removed.

"Fourthly, they (PARR'S PILLS) have restored my voice to its proper tone and strength; thus all my friends were remarking who heard me speak in the meeting the other day, and who previously had noticed the weakness of my voice.

"Fifthly, by the use of PARR'S PILLS, my natural colour is restored; before taking them, my eyes were languid and dull, my colour was low and death-like, so much so, that a lady told me last week when she saw me above three months ago she really had little or no hopes of my recovery; whereas now, my colour is healthy, my eyes bright, and the same lady says I am now getting some flesh on my face, the cheeks of which were greatly sunk.

"[illegible] Mr Noble, I am afraid you [illegible] reading this long letter; other particulars I might mention, but will finish by expressing my heartfelt thanks to the Proprietors of PARR'S LIFE PILLS, as to them under God I owe the greatest blessing but one—bodily health; the one blessing within no measure can bring, I trust you are continually enjoying—health to the soul, to be found only in the light of His countenance, whose loving kindness is better than life. I remain, most affectionately yours,

"PETER SOMERVILLE."

CAUTION.—BEWARE OF IMITATIONS.

In order to protect the [illegible] Stamps have ordered [illegible] to cover [illegible] and signature and [illegible]

THE LONDON LIBRARY. PRICE THREEPENCE.

No. I., commencing with a tale of high interest, by C. G. Rosenberg, Esq., author of "The Prince, Duke, and the Page," edited by LADY LYTTON BULWER, entitled "Edward Clavering," a romance of real life. Each number will be embellished with spirited designs, engraved by first-rate artists.

Published by W. STRANGE, Paternoster-row, and sold by all Booksellers and Newsmen.

MITCHELL'S AUTHENTIC AND EMBELLISHED EDITION, DEDICATED TO THE QUEEN.

A GUIDE TO FANCY NEEDLEWORK and EMBROIDERY.

"No lady's work-table can be considered complete without it."—Monthly Magazine.

Also, a new and improved edition,

A GUIDE TO THE BALL-ROOM.

One Shilling enclosed to the publisher, in a prepaid letter, will ensure the delivery of either of the above, per post, FREE, to any address

Published by C. MITCHELL, Red Lion court, Fleet-street, London.

FRAZER'S MAGAZINE for OCTOBER, Price 2s. 6d., contains:

The Life of Sir Murray Maxwell. Chapters I. II. Fitz-Boodle's Confessions. Miss Lowe. Pictures of Christian Life. My Life and Times. By Mimrod. The Last of the Heroric Ballads. By William Maginn, LL.D. No. XVI. Nestor's Fire. Essay in Arms. With an Introduction and Notes by the Templar. Charles O'Malley and Jack Hinton. Irish Dragoons and English Guardsmen. Some of the Picture-Galleries of England. Second and concluding notice. The Fine and Fragrant Art of Swimming. By Sir Julius Catwater, Bart., K.C.B. [illegible] Songs. Edited by a Ten[illegible] Adelaidean Song. Stanzas.

G. W. Nickisson, 315 Regent-street, London (Successor to the late James Frazer).

VARLEY'S PERSPECTIVE.

Illustrated with numerous Examples, price 7s.

A PRACTICAL TREATISE on the ART of DRAWING in PERSPECTIVE; adapted for the Study of those who draw from Nature, by which the usual Errors may be avoided. By JOHN VARLEY.

SHERWOOD, GILBERT, and PIPER, Paternoster-row.

Also,

VARLEY'S TREATISE on the PRINCIPLES of LANDSCAPE DESIGN; with General Observations and Instructions to Young Artists. Illustrated with Sixteen highly-finished Views. Elegantly printed in folio, price £2 2s. half-bound.

VARLEY'S PRECEPTS of LANDSCAPE DRAWING, exemplified in Fifteen Views. Price 5s.

VARLEY'S STUDIES for DRAWING TREES. Price 5s.

VARLEY'S SPECIMENS of NINETEEN PERMANENT COLOURS, with particular Instructions for Mixing and Using them. Price 5s.

CHESS, DRAUGHTS, AND CRIBBAGE.

Just published, third edition, much enlarged, price 8s. cloth,

A NEW TREATISE ON CHESS By GEORGE WALKER.

A. This new edition has undergone complete revision, and is now the only really scientific compendium of the game published at a moderate price.

2. CHESS MADE EASY, a new Introduction, exclusively for beginners. By G. WALKER. Price 3s. 6d., gilt edges.

3. SELECT GAMES at CHESS, as actually played by Philidor and his contemporaries. By G. WALKER. Price 5s. cloth.

4. STURGES'S GUIDE to the GAME of DRAUGHTS, with many hundred Games played out. Revised by G. WALKER. Price 5s. cloth.

5. The GRIBBAGE-PLAYER'S TEXT-BOOK, a complete and easy guide. By G. WALKER. Price 3s. 6d. bound and gilt.

"Mr. Walker has done more for these games than any other man living."—Metropolitan Magazine

London: SHERWOOD, GILBERT, and PIPER, Paternoster-row.

TO BOOKSELLERS.

OLD MOORE'S ALMANACK, for the Year of Human Redemption, 1843, being the third after Leap Year, and the seventh of the Reign of her present Majesty, Queen Victoria; with Twelve Original Engravings, and containing, amongst a great variety of other matter all the Fairs in England; Directions for the Farmer and Gardener; the weather, calculated from never-failing data; Summary of the Population Returns; A Prophetic Hieroglyphic, adapted to the times; the New Corn-Law Scales; Weather Table; Tide Table; Summary of the Debates of the British Houses of Parliament; Moon's Rising and Setting; Observations on the Weather; Eclipses; Stamp Tables; Table to calculate Wages and other Payments; the Worst days of the Worst Months; in fact, it contains all that can be desired or expected in an Almanack.

London: INGRAM and COOKE, Crane-court, Fleet-street.

 Hawkers and the Trade supplied. Specimens will be forwarded to any part of the Kingdom on receipt of a paid letter, enclosing two penny stamps.

LONDON, EDINBURGH, AND DUBLIN LIFE ASSURANCE COMPANY, 3, Charlotte-row, Mansion-house, and 55, Chancery-lane, London.

IMPORTANT IMPROVEMENTS, combining the utmost economy with indisputability of Policies, are explained in Prospectuses, which, with the necessary forms, are forwarded free of expense to applicants by the Manager and Agents.

ALEX. ROBERTSON, Manager.

ARGUS LIFE ASSURANCE COMPANY, 93, Throgmorton-street, Bank.

Empowered by special Act of Parliament, 5 & 6 Will. IV. cap. 72.

THOMAS FARNCOMB, Esq., Alderman, Chairman.

WILLIAM [illegible], [illegible], Deputy-Chairman.

Consulting Actuary, Professor HALL, of King's College.

In addition to the [illegible] capital of 300,000£, the assured have the security of the Company's income of upwards of 50,000£ per annum, rapidly increasing, and an accumulating Assurance Fund invested in government and other suitable securities, of considerably larger amount than the estimated liabilities of the Company.

The rates of premium are reduced to the lowest scale compatible with the safety of the assured and the stability of the Company, thereby in effect giving every policy holder an immediate and certain bonus, without risk, in lieu of the deferred and frequently delusive prospect of a periodical division of profits.

Annual Premium to Assure 100£.: Age 25—For five years, 1l. 0s. 3d.; for seven years, 1l. 0s. 7d.; term of life, 1l. 13s. 1d. Age 30. For five years, 1l. 1s. 10d.; for seven years, 1l. 2s. 1d.; term of life, 1l. 19s. 10d. Age 45. For five years, 1l. 7s. 7d.; for seven years, 1l. 10s. 9d.; term of life, 3l. 7s. 7d. Age [illegible] For five years, 1l. 15s. 10d. for seven years, 1l. 19s. 0d.; term of life, 3l. 10s. 5d.; for [illegible] years, 1l. 15s. 3d., term of life, 6l. 0s. 1d.

In assurances for advances of money, as security for debts, or as a provision for a family, when the least present outlay is desirable, the varied and complete Tables of the Argus Office will be found to be particularly favourable to the assured

A Board of Directors, with the Medical officers attend daily

EDWARD BATES, Resident Director.

A liberal commission to Solicitors and Agents.

LOAN of his Imperial and Royal Majesty the EMPEROR of AUSTRIA, of the year 1839. Capital, Thirty Millions of Florins, Convention Money, to be reimbursed with 7,250,000 Florins. The NEXT DRAWING will take place the 1st DECEMBER, 1842, cross-sing of the following consoli[illegible] 1,000fl. 1 of [illegible] 500fl. [illegible] of 100fl. [illegible] 50fl. [illegible] of 10fl. [illegible] 5fl. [illegible] 4fl. [illegible] 3fl. [illegible] 2fl. [illegible] 1fl. and 933 of 200fl. together 700 prizes amounting to 721,50[illegible] conversation money. One Bond 40£, Six Bonds 24£. An official Bulletin of the result will be sent to the shareholders.

For Prospectus, and to obtain Bonds, apply to A. J. STRAUS, banker, Frankfort-on-the-Maine; or to JOHN SCHULZE, Foreign Agent, 32, Villiers-street, Strand, London.

THE PATENT ROYAL ALBERT CRAVAT is the best for [illegible] constant wear [illegible] once fitted, it [illegible] one should test its excellent qualities. It is superior to all others, as thousands do testify. Warranted by the Patentees, F. HUGHES and CO., ANATOMICAL MECHANICIANS, Established 1785, Manufactory, 247, HIGH HOLBORN. New patent Trusses, Belts, and Surgical Bandages. Wholesale, retail, and for exportation.

DEAFNESS CURED by Mr THORNTON, ARMY SURGEON, by Medicated Vapour [illegible], arising from Cold, Measles, Scarlet Fever, Throat Diseases, and Nervous Deafness, of long [illegible] fected by numerous C[illegible] [illegible] Mr. T. [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

THE CHURCHES OF THE METROPOLIS.—No. X.

ST. CLEMENT DANES.

In selecting another of the churches of the metropolis, to continue the series which we are presenting to our readers, it seems only natural that we should have fixed upon the prominent edifice of St. Clement Danes. The merry peal of its bells almost rung us into the new locality that we have taken up. Full on the right, in fresh and decent order of comeliness, stands our office of the LONDON NEWS, and, when the sun is shining upon it from the opposite heaven, the tall tower of that silent house of God flings its shadow across our windows, and, after a passing cloud has for a moment shrouded the sunshine, comes full upon our presence with an almost startling effect. There is nothing very handsome or inspiring in the ancient building, for its architecture is motley, and its design the reverse of grand; but we seem to have made a new acquaintance with it, that we hope for many years to keep; and it has a kind of association with our readers too, as a sort of neighbourly landmark at the time of our arrival near it, watching over the harbingers of our first great success, and not likely, we hope, to frown upon us, if, by and by, we should be found growing grey in the service of our friends. We give it at once, then, to the public in its old familiar form, with such records of its history as the antiquarians have supplied. Nor even in its modern presence has it been altogether without furnishing a theme for reflection. We have looked out upon the busy, cheerful, bustling world beneath—gazed upon the rushing crowds wending to and fro on the everlasting business of Mammon—peered into the heart of the living throng, and then turned our eye and thought, up to that temple of silence; or, if not silent, only waked by the echoes from the stirring life without, and thought that although no voice spake there, yet there was a holy tenancy within—the sacred presence of the Eternal Spirit, whose will wielded the destinies of every being who passed it upon his worldly way. Soon came the Sabbath, and, if we again looked down upon the broadway before us, the street was silent then; but the temple of Heaven had become vocal with prayer and holy song, or there came forth a swelling sound of sacred harmony, breaking with beautiful solemnity upon the awe-struck ear. Every other dwelling around was closed; a reverential decorum pervaded the neighbourhood; and only the dwelling-place of God was open to those who chose to enter in. How then, did the day of rest seem to triumph over the day of world-business—how was Godhead asserted above the infirmities of humanature when the homage of man sought the footstool of Heaven, and within that hushed and holy sanctuary a band of hoping sinners knelt down with faith to pray! To have associated the destinies of a newspaper with the thoughts so inspired by the sacred edifice before us would have been, perhaps, to have trod the brink of blasphemy; but we are willing to believe that we committed no irreverence in breathing an aspiration that, so long as we were pursuing our calling in the public behalf, the responsibility entrusted to us in the conduct of this journal might never be outraged by any violation of the Christian and religious principles which may went into that church to practise or to learn; but that morality and purity of doctrine upon every topic of instruction or intelligence might still and ever characterize our progress, and give our welfare something like the claims of virtue to support.

Now to our history of St. Clement Danes, premising to our country readers that it stands in the heart of one of the busiest thoroughfares of our metropolis, a little west of Temple-bar, and east of the office which we formerly occupied in St. Mary-le-Strand. It would seem, according to William of Malmsbury, that there was a church here before the arrival of the Danes, and that they burnt it, slaying the monk and abbot, and, marching off, continued their sacrilegious fury throughout the land; "at length, desirous to return to Denmark, they were about to embark, when they were, by the just judgment of God, all slain at London, at a place which has since been called the Church of the Danes."

Fleetwood's account is that, when most of the Danes were driven forth of this kingdom, the few that remained (being those married to Englishwomen) were compelled to reside between the isle of Thorney (Westminster was so called) and Cace Lud (or Ludgate), where they built a synagogue, afterwards consecrated, and called Ecclesia Clementis Danorum. This saith Fleetwood the antiquary, and Recorder of London, in a document addressed to the Lord Treasurer Burleigh, who resided in this parish in the time of Elizabeth, when the line of the Strand (taking its name from the river's side) was a street of the palaces of England's nobility.

The church of St. Clement Danes is first noticed by historians as a gift from Henry II. to the Knights Templar. On the dissolution of that order the advowson was conveyed to the canon regular of the church of the Holy Sepulchre, near Warwick, whence, in the changes of time, the patronage of the living fell into the hands of the Exeter family, the representative of which, the present Marquis of Exeter, still holds the same. The architecture of St. Clement's is a strange jumble of handsome and incongruous parts. The church was rebuilt in 1682, and the architect, William Pierce, is said in Malcolm's Londinium Redivivum to have "received the directions of Sir Christopher Wren."

Within the church are twelve composite pillars, somewhat gaudily coloured and gilded, extending from east to west. These form a semicircle before the altar, and spring from galleries supported by square Tuscan pillars. The intercolumniations are arched, the largest arch facing the altar, and all most extravagantly overloaded with festoons and drops, while the ceilings are crossed by enriched bands and intersecting arches. The vault of the nave is large and noble, and hence the pillars have a pitiful effect, being disproportionately small. The vault exhibits five panels of unequal size, the smallest full of ornament, the remainder blanks. The sacrarium is a semicircular, with a centre and two side windows. There are flowers in the panels, which are gilt, as are all the columnar capitals throughout the church. The altar-piece consists of four Corinthian pilasters, with entablatures, arms, and festoons. The commandments are surmounted by an arch, which supports five candlesticks, and in the tympanum is seen a pelican. The whole is formed of the intercolumniations of four isolated pillars, the entablature of which has attic pedestals and good statues of Moses and Aaron. The table is of porphyry, as are the two steps for candelebra; the frame and rails of wrought iron gilt, and the floor of marble. The pulpit is a sexagon, most magnificently and elaborately carved, its piercing and relieving rendering it a graceful, elegant, and admirable object.

Thus much for the interior of St. Clement Danes; and if we are inclined to cavil at the style of taste displayed upon its embellishments, we are yet free to admit that the parishioners have good cause to be proud of their house of prayer. It is true that, to the educated eye, it is elaborately overloaded with decorations; nevertheless, its ensemble is rich and imposing, and the pious feeling which must have prompted this outlay on their sacred temple is creditable to their devotion and their liberality.

The church is 93 feet in length, 63 in breadth, its height to the roof 48, and of the steeple 140 feet. It is thus entered in the last report of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners:—"1830, population, 15,142; church accomodation, 1350; net revenue, £518; patron, the Marquis of Exeter; and its rector, the excellent, gifted, and eloquent Dr. William Gurney."

THE MARKETS.

CORN EXCHANGE.—Although the receipts of wheat of home produce up to Mark-lane have been very limited this week, and the show of samples has proved scanty, we have to report a sluggish inquiry for all descriptions, and the prices have suffered a further depression of from 1s to 2s per quarter. Upwards of 30,000 quarters of foreign wheat have again come to hand, on a portion of which bone-consumption duty has been paid. Some rather extensive sales have taken place in this article, yet the rates have given way quite 1s per quarter. The supply of new barley has been on the increase, owing to which the quotations have had a downward tendency. For malt there has been little demand. The best oats have maintained their value; but all other grain has proved a mere drug.

ARRIVALS.—English: wheat, 2770; barley, 930; oats, 4250; and malt, 3970 quarters; flour, 3880 sacks. Irish: oats, 13,130 quarters. Foreign: wheat, 31,350; and oats, 4530 quarters

English.—Wheat, Essex and Kent red, 46s to 55s; ditto white, 54s to 61s; Norfolk and Suffolk, red, 42s to 56s; do. white, 51s to 58s; rye, 34s to 38s, grinding barley, 27s to 29s; malting do., 30s to 32s; Chevalier, 32s to 34s; Suffolk and Norfolk malt, 56s to 62s; brown do., 52s to 54s; Kingston and Ware, 56s to 62s; Chevalier, 63s; Yorkshire and Lincolnshire feed oats, 23s to 24s; potato do., 25s to 26s; Youghal and Cork, black, 17s to 18s; do. white, 18s to 20s; tick beans, new, 30s to 30s; do. old, 34s to 38s; grey peas, 36s to 38s; maple, 34s to 34s; white, 30s to 35s; boilers, 32s to 37s per quarter. Town-made flour, 46s to 47s; Suffolk, 36s to 38s; Stockton and Yorkshire, 36s to 38s; per 280 lbs. Free wheat, 55s to 60s. In Bond. Barley, 30s; oats, new, 15s to 17s; do. feed, 14s to 16s; beans, 20s to 23s; peas, 23s to 27s; per quarter. Flour, America, 22s to 24s; Baltic, 22s per barre.

The Seed Market. During the week the demand for all descriptions of seeds has ruled dull, and the prices have suffered a slight depression. The following are the present rates:—Linseed, English, sowing, 48s to 50s; Baltic, crushing, 42s to 45s; Mediterranean and Odessa, 45s to 46s; hempseed, 35s to 40s. per quarter; coriander, 10s to 18s per cwt.; brown mustard seed, 10s to 11s; white do., 10s to 11s 6d; tares, 3s 6d to 4s 3d per bushel; English rapeseed, new, 30l to 33l per last of ten quarters. Linseed cakes, English, 10l to 10l 10s; do. foreign, 7l to 7l 10s per 1000; rapeseed cakes, 5l 5s to 6l per ton.

Imperial Weekly Average—Wheat, 54s 6d; barley, 27s 10d; Oats, 18s 4d; rye, 29s 10d; beans, 33s 0d; peas, 35s 7d.

Imperial Average of Six Weeks which govern Duty—Wheat, 53s 10d; Barley, 27s 2d; Oats, 18s 7d; Rye, 30s 9d; Beans, 33s 4d; Peas, 33s 4d per quarter.

Foreign Corn.—Wheat, 18s 0d; Barley, 9s 0d; Oats, 8s 0d; Rye, 10s 6d; Beans, 9s 6d; Peas, 9s 6d.

PROVISIONS.

Bread.—The prices of wheaten Bread in the metropolis are from 7½d to 8d; of household ditto, 6d to 7d for the 4lb loaf

Sugar.—We have had a limited demand for West India sugar this week, in consequence of the late large arrivals, and the rates have given way 6d per cwt. At public sales 100 hhds. Barbadoes went at 62s 6d to 70s for low to fine grocery. By private contract 1800 hhds. and tierces have been disposed of. Very large quantities of Mauritius sugar have been brought to the hammer—viz., 13,000 bags, which have gone off quietly at a decline of 1s per cwt. Good to fine yellow has sold at 62s to 66s, but middling 57s to 61s; good and fine brown, 52s to 55s; low to middling, 48s to 51s per cwt. Nearly 10,000 bags of Bengal have changed hands, at auction, at the above amount of depression—middling to good white selling at 54s to 67s; low 62s to 62s 6d per cwt. More than 1100 bags of Java have been brought forward, but they have commanded little attention. The refined market is dull, and standard lumps are 77s per cwt. Crushed sugar is in request, at 78s per cwt.

Tea.—Much of the attention of the trade is now directed to the numerous public sales. This week nearly 40,000 packages have been offered publicly, about one fourth of which has found purchasers at late rates. By private contract a fair business has been done, at full prices—the clearances from the warehouses having exceeded 500,000lbs.

Coffee. The market is dull for all kinds of coffee, but holders have refused to give way further in price. The public sales have been unimportant.

Cocoa.—The demand is limited for West India, and 113 bags of Grenada, at public sales, went at 33s to 37s per cwt.

Rice.—The market for Bengal is dull; and 1227 bags, at auction, were heavily, at rather lower rates—good to middling selling at 11s 6d to 12s per cwt.

Pepper.—Prices are fair, and the demand good. At auction, 1339 bags good Penang sold at 3¾d to 3¾d per lb.

Oil. Linseed continues scarce, and 33s 6d to 34s are the nearest quotations on the spot. At auction 90 tuns sperm and head-matter were nearly all bought in, the former at £80 to £85 5s, and the latter £85 to £85 5s. 115 tuns southern sold at £35 5s to £40 15s per tun.

Potatoes.—We have had a good supply of potatoes offering this week, which have moved off steadily, at from 45s to 60s. per ton.

Wool.—The imports, this week, have been about 2000 packages. By private contract little is done

Hops. Nearly 2000 pockets of new hops have been received in the Borough market this week, from Essex, Kent, and Sussex, the quality of which has proved good. The demand is active, while the duty is called £150,000. New Kent pockets, 100s to 130s.; Sussex ditto 90s to 100s; and Farnhams, 180s to 190s per cwt.

Corn Market, Tuesday Morning.—Wheat, 58s 6d; Oats, 19s 6d; Barley, 28s 6d; Beans, 34s 6d; Peas, 36s 6d; Flour, 46s 6d per sack.

Mark-lane, Monday Evening.—Wheat, 58s 6d; Barley, 28s 6d; Oats, 19s 6d; Beans, 34s 6d; Peas, 36s 6d; Flour, 46s 6d per sack.

Liverpool, Monday Evening.—Wheat, 58s 6d; Barley, 28s 6d; Oats, 19s 6d; Beans, 34s 6d; Peas, 36s 6d; Flour, 46s 6d per sack.

Manchester, Monday Evening.—Wheat, 58s 6d; Barley, 28s 6d; Oats, 19s 6d; Beans, 34s 6d; Peas, 36s 6d; Flour, 46s 6d per sack.

Chester, Wednesday Morning.—Wheat, 58s 6d; Barley, 28s 6d; Oats, 19s 6d; Beans, 34s 6d; Peas, 36s 6d; Flour, 46s 6d per sack.

Birmingham, Monday Evening.—Wheat, 58s 6d; Barley, 28s 6d; Oats, 19s 6d; Beans, 34s 6d; Peas, 36s 6d; Flour, 46s 6d per sack.

Bristol, Monday Evening.—Wheat, 58s 6d; Barley, 28s 6d; Oats, 19s 6d; Beans, 34s 6d; Peas, 36s 6d; Flour, 46s 6d per sack.

Exeter, Monday Evening.—Wheat, 58s 6d; Barley, 28s 6d; Oats, 19s 6d; Beans, 34s 6d; Peas, 36s 6d; Flour, 46s 6d per sack.

Newcastle and Leadenhall.—We have had an extensive supply of dead meat on offer, with which the trade has ruled dull, at the following quotations:—Beef, from 3s 2d to 3s 10d; mutton, 3s 4d to 4s 2d; lamb, 4s to 4s 10d; veal, 3s 10d to 4s 10d; and pork, 3s to 5s per 8lbs. by the carcase.

ROBERT HERBERT.

BRITISH FUNDS.—(CLOSING PRICES.) SATURDAY.

Bank Stock, —
3 per Cent Red., —
3 per Cent Cons., 93¾
3¼ per Cent Red.—
New 3½ per Cent. 100⅝
New 5 per Cent.
Long Annuities to expire
Jan. 1860, —
Oct. 1859. —
Jan. 1860. —

India Stock 247½ pm
Ditto Bonds — pm
Ditto Old Annuities, —
Ditto New Annuities, —
Ex. Bills, 1000l., 2d., 48 pm
Ditto 500l., 50 pm
Ditto Small, 50 pm
Bank Stock for Opg. —
India Stock for Account, —
Consols for Account, 93

SHARES.

Bristol and Exeter (—p), —
Edinburgh and Glasgow (50 p), 46½
Great Western Railway (66 p), 82
Ditto New Shares (50 p), 59½
Ditto Fifth (4 p), 7⅞
London and Brighton (50 p). 34½ ⅜ ½

London and Blackwall (—p), 6⅞
London and Birmingham (90 p), —
Ditto Thirds (3 p), 61 60½
Ditto New Shares (20 p), 21
London and South Western (£42 6s. 10d. p), —

THE LONDON GAZETTE.

TUESDAY, SEPT. 27.

At the Court at Windsor, the 24th day of September, 1842, present, the Queen's Most Excellent Majesty in Council.—It is this day ordered by her Majesty in Council, that the Parliament be prorogued from Thursday, the 6th day of October next, to Thursday, the 10th day of November next.

WAR-OFFICE, SEPT. 27.

1st Life Guards—Cornet and Sub-Lieut. Sir W. W. Wynn, Bart., to be Lieutenant, vice Allen; Ensign Thomas George Lord Glaims to be Cornet and Sub-Lieutenant, vice Sir W. W. Wynn. Royal Horse Guards—Lieut. R. H. R. H. Vyse to be Captain, vice Corbet; Cornet C. H. Gordon Lennox, Earl of March, to be Lieutenant, vice Vyse; F. C. P. A. Stuart, gent., to be Cornet, vice Lord March. 4th Light Dragoons—Lieut. W. H. Magan to be Lieutenant, vice Francis. 9th Light Dragoons—Lieut. T. J. Francis to be Lieutenant, vice Magan. 17th Light Dragoons—Assist.-Surg. D. Cooper to be Assistant-Surgeon, vice Leslie.

17th Foot—Ensign L. J. M'Pherson to be Lieutenant, vice Baird. 19th Foot—Lieut. F. Deacon to be Adjutant, vice Calley. 26th Foot—Ensign R. F. Synge to be Lieutenant, vice Sweeny; Ensign H. De Quincey to be Lieutenant, vice Hon. W. G. Osborn; F. J. Cresswell, gent., to be Ensign, vice De Quincey. 40th Foot—Ensign F. Huey to be Lieutenant, vice Armstrong. 46th Foot—Lieut. A. Maxwell to be Captain, vice Thompson; Ensign A. R. Garrett to be Lieutenant, vice Maxwell; W. Hardy, gent., to be Ensign, vice Garrett. 63rd Foot—Ensign W. G. L. Crowther to be Lieutenant, vice Spier. 66th Foot—Colour-Sergt. M. Reiley to be Quartermaster, vice W. Horahy. 69th Foot—D. S. Miller, gent., to be Ensign, vice Lord Glamis. 70th Foot—Brevet Major L. Greene to be Captain, vice J. J. Graham. 72nd Foot—Major W. H. Sperling to be Major, vice F. Hope. Brevet Major H. Jervis to be Major, vice Sperling. Lieut. J. T. Hyde to be Captain, vice Jervis; Ensign W. Lake to be Lieutenant, vice Hope. J. S. Clark, gent., to be Ensign, vice Parke. 87th Foot—The Hon. R. W. D. Shirley to be second Lieutenant, vice Moore. 93rd Foot—Lieut. Maxwell to be Lieutenant, vice M'Carmond. J. H. Hardy, gent., to be Ensign, vice Maxwell. 94th Foot—Lieut. C. D. O'Brien to be Captain, vice Stoddard. 96th Foot—Lieut. J. H. Ford to be Adjutant, vice Rogers. Ensign G. J. Dowdall to be Lieutenant, vice Ford. Brevet Major G. J. Hutchinson to be Major, vice Cannon. 98th Foot—Lieut.-Col. H. Despard to be Lieutenant-Colonel, vice J. G. Le Marchant.

Ceylon Rifle Regiment—Lieut. J. Marchington to be Lieutenant, vice Ostheyden; Second Lieut. H. Lucas to be First Lieutenant, vice Marchington; H. Bird, gent., to be Second Lieutenant, vice Lucas.

Particular Service.—Brevet Lieut.-Col. P. Young to be Major, on a particular service in Canada.

MEMORANDUM.—The promotion of Ensign G. J. Dowdall, of the 96th Foot, to a Lieutenancy in the 84th Foot, on the 8th of April, 1842, has been cancelled.

BANKRUPTCY SUPERSEDED.—M. BUCKLEY, Oldham, Lancashire, draper

BANKRUPTS.—R. H. SMYTH, Cornhill, merchant.—W. H. BALL, Kennington-cross, coach-builder.—HANAH SIMMONDS, Leamington Priors, Warwickshire, milliner.—J. BADCOCK, Shrivenham, Berkshire, grocer. H. PAYN, Liverpool, master mariner.

SCOTCH SEQUESTRATIONS.—W. MELDRUM, Dunfermline, manufacturer.—W. THOMSON, Kinghorn, Fifeshire, carpenter.

FRIDAY, SEPT. 30.

WAR-OFFICE, Sept 30.—3d Dragoon Guards—Lieut.-General F. Newbery to be Colonel, vice Sir J. C. Dalbiac. 1st Dragoons—Lieut. W. Peel to be Captain, vice Burke; Cornet R. F. Jones to be Lieutenant, vice Peel; G. Courtenay to be Cornet, vice Jones. 4th Light Dragoons—Lieut.-General Sir J. C. Dalbiac to be Colonel, vice General Lord E. Somerset. 16th Light Dragoons—Surgeon R. L. Sandham, M.D., to be Surgeon, vice Harcourt.

20th of Foot—Lieut. E. Brock to be Captain, vice Fraser. 22d Foot—Assist.-Surg. A Campbell to be Surgeon, vice Ore. 25th Foot—Lieut. W. Brunell to be Paymaster, vice W. Dean. 31st Foot—Ensign J. P. Robertson to be Lieutenant, vice Frend; J. Gould to be Ensign, vice Robertson. 40th Foot—Ensign P. W. Miller to be Lieutenant, vice Huey. 41st Foot—T. C. Taylor to be Ensign, vice Matthews. 45th Foot—Lieut. E. O. H. Bridgeman to be Captain, vice Shirrell; Ensign E. Boys to be Lieutenant, vice Bridgeman; J. G. Eggington to be Ensign, vice Boys. 50th Foot—Capt. P. J. Cobban to be Major, vice Rutherglen; Lieut. G. G. M. Cobban to be Captain, vice Petit; Ensign R. B. Bellerby to be Lieutenant, vice Cobban; J. C. Bishop to be Ensign, vice Bellers. 61st Foot—Capt. W. Boates to be Captain, vice F. J. S. Hepburn; Lieut. C. F. H. Mayne to be Captain, vice Boates; Ensign J. J. Hort to be Lieutenant, vice Mayne; C. R. Platt to be Ensign, vice Hort. 62d Foot—J. A. Hore to be Surgeon, vice Sandham. 84th Foot—Ensign W. F. Macbean to be Lieutenant, vice Dowdall. 90th Foot—Cat t. H. C. Johnson, to be Captain, vice J. Wilson; Lieut. J. H. Bringhurst to be Captain, vice Johnson; Ensign H. Lecky to be Lieutenant, vice Bringhurst; Ensign W. Hamilton to be Ensign, vice Lecky. 97th Foot—Capt. C. O'Neill to be Major of the Regiment of the Tower of London.

UNATTACHED.—Brevet-Colonel R. Egerton, late Aide-de-Camp and Private Secretary to the late General Commanding in Chief, to be Lieut Col.

BREVET.—To be Majors in the Army: Capt. H. C. Johnson, of the 90th Foot; Capt. W. Boates, of the 61st Foot; Capt. C. O'Neill, of the 97th Foot; Capt. T. C. Smith, of the 97th Foot.

MEMORANDUM.—The name of the Gentleman appointed to an Ensigncy in the 91st Foot, on the 15th of April, 1842, is George Thorn, not Thorn, as previously stated.

BANKRUPT.—SIMSON, Shirley, Southamptonshire, jeweller.

BANKRUPTCY SUPERSEDED.—G. E. ROTHE, New Broad-street, merchant

BANKRUPTS. W. URQUHART, Wellington-street, Strand, merchant. J. YARRAD, Jun., Spalding, Lincolnshire, Grocer J. FISHER and W. MILNER, Norwich, drapers. H. T. HARRISON, Tavistock-row, Covent-garden, Hotel-keeper. F. SANDON, Rugeley, Staffordshire, cabinet-maker. R. LEWIN, Northampton, leather seller. A. BLUMENTHAL, Warwick, wine merchant.

PRICE OF SUGAR.—The average Price of Brown or Muscovado Sugar, computed from the Returns made in the Week ending Sept. 27, 1842, is 38s. 9d. per cwt., exclusive of the Duties of Customs paid or payable thereon on the importation thereof into Great Britain.

BIRTHS.

In Grosvenor-place, Mrs. Henry Kingscote, of a daughter.—The Hon. Mrs. Spring Rice, of a daughter.—In Curzon-street, Mayfair, the Viscountess Jocelyn, of a daughter.—At Wiesbaden, the Lady Rosa Greville, of a son.—At the Priory, near Bishop Stortford, the Hon. Mrs. Wall, of a daughter.—At Collingwood, Kent, the lady of Sir John F. W. Herschel, Bart., of a daughter.

MARRIAGES.

At Marylebone, Campbell Richardson, Esq., E.I.C.'s service, to Ellen, daughter of R. Aickman, Esq.—At Great Chesterford, W. F. Brewster, Esq., of Cambridge, to Anne, daughter of J. Living, Esq.—At Norwood, Robert Donaldson, Esq., of Madeira, to Alice, daughter of Christopher Jordan, Esq., of Aylesbury.—At Marylebone, John Myple Cock, Esq., of King's Caple, Herefordshire, to Mary, heiress of the Rev Charles Wetherell, of Eaton-place, Belgrave-square, and Rector of Byfield, Northamptonshire.—At Frankfort, the Hon. Gerard Noel, second son of the late Sir Andrew St. John, Esq., of Guyton, Norfolk, and grandson of the Hon. and Very Rev. St. Andrew St. John, late Dean of Worcester, to Catherine, daughter of Colonel Bowyer Smith, Commander of the Forces at Gibraltar.—At Edinburgh, Randal Wilbraham Falconer, Esq., M.D., son of the late Rev. Thomas Falconer, of Bath, to Ann, daughter of John Wood, Esq., of Cove and Brighaved, Carmichaelshire.—At Paris, John Cramer, Esq., Advocate of the King's Council, to Mary, daughter of the late Henry Matthews, Esq., Puisne Justice in Ceylon.—At Arthur's Seat, near Aberdeen, Duncan Davidson, jun., Esq., of Tillychetly, to Katherine Jane, daughter the late Charles Duncan Gordon, Esq., of Abergeldie.—At St. George's, Hanover-square, the Hon. and Rev. Wm. Charlie Hennicker, brother of Lord Hennicker, to Mary, daughter of the late Edward Farnham, Esq., of Quorndon House, Leicestershire.

DEATHS

At his residence, in Strabane, Mr. Patrick Monaghan, sen., aged 67 years. The deceased, amongst many other amiable qualities, was distinguished for his extensive charity, in which he often advanced by a large circle of friends and neighbours, was never known to have made an enemy.—His accidental expiration of his gun, Charles Hamphlen Turner, Esq., of Ingleborough, Yorkshire, in his 40th year.—At Tanland, Wolf Dale, relict of Jonathan Raine, Esq., bencher of Lincoln's-inn.—At Norwich, aged 80, Judith, widow of Thomas Beecroft, Esq., of Saxthorpe Hall. At Brixton, Isaac Wilson, Esq., in his 70th year.—At Brighton, in her 22d year, Emma, only daughter of William Smee, Esq., Chief Accountant of the Bank of England.—Mr. John Poulton, landlord of the Three Tuns Inn, Denbigh-ton, and who, about twenty-five years ago, apprehended and brought to justice Hussey, the murderer of Mr. Bird and his housekeeper, at Woolwich.

At Aberdeen, Jane, only daughter of Rear-Admiral Sir Arthur Farquhar, K.C.B., wife of John Mitchell, Esq.—At Edinburgh, Harriet, daughter of the late Lieut.-General William Gardiner, and relict of Robert Patrick, of Hermitage, M.D., Inspector General of Army Hospitals. At Exmouth, Sarah Wilmot, relict of Benjamin Wyatt, Esq., of Merton, Surrey.—Near Port Lynch, Ashtah, Ross, Ireland, W. Hille, Esq., of Longlane, Dorset.—At Upper Holloway, Margaret, widow of John Wilson, Esq., of Richard-street, Whitechapel.—At Ripley, near Leeds, Elizabeth, daughter of the late Thomas Wilson, Esq., Islington-green, near London.—At Abbotsbury, Dorset, Maria, Countess Dowager of Ilchester.

LONDON: Printed by ROBERT PALMER (at the Office of Palmer & Clayton), 10, Crane-court; and published by WILLIAM LITTLER, at 198, Strand, where all communications are requested to be addressed.—SATURDAY, October 1, 1842.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS

No. 22] FOR THE WEEK ENDING SATURDAY, OCTOBER 8, 1842. [SIXPENCE.

OFFICE 198, STRAND.

RIOT TRIALS, CHARTIST ARRESTS, AND ITINERANT PREACHERS.

There are two or three points among the social occurrences of the week that seem to require serious attention from the community. They are among the circumstances which influence the condition of civilization, have reference to political liberty, involve considerations religious and domestic, and bear upon the great English question of the preservation of constitutional peace. We say constitutional because the internal peace of a nation may be of two kinds, that of which element is merely order without happiness as preserved by tyranny; and that which is the tranquillity of content engendered by the satisfaction of the people in the laws by which they are swayed, and in the Government which administers them with justice. The points to which we are now going to allude are, first, the proceedings of the Special Commission at Stafford to try prisoners for offences committed during the late disturbances; secondly, the arrest of Feargus O'Connor and several other Chartists upon charges of sedition; and, lastly, the progress of a very dangerous agitation permitted to be violently exercised on the Sabbath day by ignorant brawlers, who, in our parks, commons, and highways, may be heard insolently offending the decencies of society and desecrating the sacred name of God.

Last of the Stafford Commission. We have reason to believe that as much indulgence and leniency as are compatible with the principles of eternal justice, and as may not seem to encourage or protect the commission of the several crimes adduced, will be granted to all the prisoners concerned in the riots, except those who have clearly acted upon broad principles of sedition, with the sole wicked purpose of disorganizing society, and producing anarchical confusion, if not bloodshed, in the land. It cannot be denied that some have done this, and to such we cannot afford palliation. But to the duped, the deluded, the coerced, and the distressed, we would award mercy as large as is our amount of pity for their misery and their misguidance both. The sad prevailing pauperism which everywhere oppressed the manufacturing districts before the recent outbreaks must not be forgotten in the punishment of those who were so easily led by it into the maniac struggle of despair, neither, on the other hand, should the men who goaded the wretchedness of their fellows into crime, be suffered to escape with impunity. The cruelty of forcing men out of work to join in a strike for wages, to which they lend no willing sympathies, is a subject of emphatic observation by Chief Justice Tindal, in his charge from the commission to the grand inquest—"if there is one right," says his lordship, "which, beyond all others, the labourer ought to be able to call his own, it is the right of his own personal strength and skill, in the full enjoyment of his own free will, altogether unshackled by the control or dictates of his fellow-workmen; yet, strange to say, this very right, which the discontented workman claims for himself to its fullest extent, he does, by a blind perversity and unaccountable selfishness, entirely refuse to his fellows who differ in opinion from himself. It is unnecessary to say, that a course of proceeding so utterly unreasonable in itself, so injurious to society, so detrimental to the interests of trade, and so oppressive against the rights of the poor man, must be a gross and flagrant violation of the law, and must be put down, when the guilt is established, by a proper measure of punishment."

It is upon this principle, we presume, that the decisions of the Special Commission will be guided and actuated, and nobody can deny its justice or its truth. The whole temper of the Judge's charge, however, implies that we shall have no unnecessary harshness—no vindictive retributions—in the decisions consequent upon the "Riot Trials," but that example will be made the great teacher, and mercy the interpleading advocate of the deluded men, whom the law is to bring back to its obedience, with only such punishment for its violation as will assert its supremacy with effect.

But coeval with the commencement of the trials commences also the arrest of numerous Chartists, and first in importance that of Feargus O'Connor among the list. This persevering agitator was, we believe, retained in some measure to manage the defences of some of the prisoners connected with the outbreaks, and his being taken into custody was considered by his followers as inopportune, as they doubtless believe it also was arbitrary and unfair. We have only, however, to view it as a mark of just energy on the part of Government if they make good their charges, and can prove themselves to have acted upon reasonable and warrantable ground. If this chief of the Chartists, and those leagued with him and arrested simultaneously, have been really, by word or deed, guilty of fairly constructive sedition in these dangerous times—if they have been swelling the tide of disorder until it promised to crimson as its torrent rolled—then they deserved to be checked decisively in their mid-career, and the Government has only done its duty by their apprehension to society at large. On the other hand, if the arrests are wanton, and justice shall acquit the Chartists upon trial, not only will the state be reprehended for its tyranny, but opinion will gain ground, as it always does, in favour of those deemed to be oppressed, and the cause of Chartism will be strengthened instead of brought to the dust. We apprehend, however, that it is the desire of Government to damp the exertions of those who resort to a violence of agitation which really tends to frightful disturbance, all the time that they are mocking the alarmed portion of the public with a cry of peace. There is no doctrine more majestic than that of "moral power," if it be exercised with truth and reason; but if it becomes only the word of promise to the ear, which is broken with broadest violence by its advocates, we cannot fairly admit it as a protection for all the acts of outrage that are committed under its name. For instance, there is Mr. Thomas Steele: he is designated "O'Connell's head pacificator of Ireland;" he is a moral-power gentleman, and here is some of the language in which he has been this week preaching peace in Belfast:—

Gentlemen the observer to the people there are two ways of repealing the Union—one by a simultaneous and voluntary uprising of the brave Irish millions, with the pike. I say the [illegible] uprising, because such a movement would be utterly irresistible. Did any one tell me, that had the pikes of Ireland been brought simultaneously into operation in the year 1798, the people would not now be free? (Hear.) This, gentlemen, is one mode of repealing the Union.

Of course Mr. Steele then recommends the "other mode," which is gentler; but the style of pacification which offers the "pike alternative" at all, must at least be admitted as peculiarly Irish. We fear, however, that latterly it has been a good deal adopted in England, and that Feargus O'Connor and the Chartists have not been free from an indulgence in the same order of oratory, which Government has a perfect right to check. Let the people and their leaders confine themselves to what is really moral power, and the middle, and even the higher, classes will listen to their complaints with sympathy, and watch their grievances with a purpose of redress. Their cause is injured when they resort to mad violence of either deed or language, and it is weakened when it evidences despair. This axiom must be proved, when we find the most violently Radical journal in the empire—an organ of avowed democracy, in fact—writing in the following strain of the Chartist leader:—

We are not blind to the distresses of the lower classes in this country; we know that the faces of the people are pinched to the most [illegible] and have ourselves, we have not yet to learn, that the people of England are not fairly represented. But [illegible] by breaking up the entire framework of society in the manner proposed by its [illegible]? Is it amidst scenes of revolution, rapine, and bloodshed, [illegible] contemplation of which makes the blood run cold, that the [illegible] perfection is to commence? Yet to this [illegible] have the speeches and writings of the Chartist leaders laboured to drive the nation. They rejected every proposed measure, however beneficial to the country, because it did not go the full length of their wild and impracticable schemes. What they require is revolution, not reform. For this they would shake the foundations of society to their base, and plunge a nation in civil war—provided they might do so without incurring the danger which they so magnanimously recommend their thick-skulled admirers to hold in perfect contempt.

Now, we are far from going the length of all this, and yet we see a paper doing so which, upon nearly every topic of domestic policy, would go ten times the length of our own. It proves that men of extremest opinions in this country do not, so long as they retain reason, seek to arrive at their adoption by any other than peaceful means. The great community is in favour of the principle of peace, and they only want to see it upheld with moderation and justice. Government, we hope, while acknowledging the first part of this assertion in the Stafford Commission and the Chartist arrests, will not forget the latter in their treatment of the prisoners.

And now we have lastly, as the authorities seem inclined to be energetic in vindicating the law, to point their attention to the Sunday blasphemers, who blend politics with religion in the public places, teaching the most dreadful maxims, perverting texts of Scripture with horrible ignorance, breaking down every barrier of morality, and invoking the name of the Deity with familiar profanity, to hallow the most fearful political imprecations, and the most rebellious and brutalizing hatred to whatever is pure and good. These wretches, who infest the parks, and commons, and road-sides, in every district of the metropolis and its suburbs, as well as in every country town, give horrid loose to their passions before the public; quarrel, shout, blaspheme, and riot with a desperate impunity that is not without a mischief proportioned to its crime. Although many sneer, and more hear them with loathing, abhorrence, and disgust, yet there are always some persons ignorant enough to listen and credulous enough to believe. A large amount of fanatic folly, of mad sedition, of wild rebellious opinion, has been promulgated by these itinerant revolutionists, who cloak revolution under religion, and delude their victims with the apparent authority of the word of God. These persons should be put down at once. No respectable person in the community would express one sympathy in their favour. All the moral and virtuous would rejoice in their removal as a pest swept by justice and decorum from the social hearth.

THE SULTAN AND HIS VIZIER.

The beautiful engraving here presented to the reader represents the Sultan Abdul Medjid and Mehmed, his grand vizier, holding a divan of public affairs. The sovereign is dressed in the European costume, introduced by his father Mahmoud, and is only distinguished as a Turk by the "fez" or red cap on his head. This attire, the precursor of mighty changes in his decaying empire, forms a singular and interesting contrast to the flowing habiliments of his unreforming minister. The Sultan's general costume also approaches the European, and its adoption was not too trifling a circumstance to alter the manners and destinies of the whole Turkish empire. It led to the entire destruction of the once formidable Janissaries, and changed the aspect and habits of the city of Constantinople, so as to render the former features scarcely recognisable by those who had visited it but a few years before.

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

FRANCE.—The Paris papers of Sunday have reached us by our ordinary express. Their accounts are not, however, of political importance.

The National returns to the affair of L'Aigle, the French vessel brought to and "visited" on the coast of Africa by her Majesty's brig Cygnet, which proceeding the National describes, of course, as brutal and insulting to the French flag in the last degree. La Presse also, as a matter of course, regards the offence as decisive of the question whether or not the treaties of 1831 and 1833 should remain unrevoked. The National has, however, the indiscretion to copy from a Marseilles Carlist paper the details of the affair given in the protest of the French captain, the procès verbal signed by his crew and passengers, and the reply of Lieutenant E. Wilson, the commander of her Majesty's brig in question; and this shows that the captain's own statement is obviously incorrect, that on material points it is at variance with the procès verbal, and that Lieutenant Wilson only gave effect to his orders, founded on the treaties abovementioned, on their fair interpretation. In the paragraphs which precede the documents just referred to the National prays its readers to have the goodness to compare them with an article in the Times, of which it promises an extract. "Never before," says the National, "was the determination of England to domineer absolutely on the seas, as an indispensable condition of her existence, more brutally revealed. The article in the Times is on a par with the morality displayed in the documents we are about to lay before the public, and we recommend them equally to the attention of our readers and of the Chambers, convinced that if they call for the dissolution of the treaties of 1831 and 1833 they will find universal sympathy, even, perhaps, in the most elevated ranks of the navy." The French captain states, that (not having hove to, we suppose) when signalled) a cannon was fired across his bows, the shot from which fell a short distance from his vessel. Having purposely declared noticing that summons, or failed to show that he was about to wait for the English brig to come up, another shot was fired from her, which, he says, grazed his ship, but which his crew and passengers state fell at a little distance from her. The captain then proceeds to state, that he was boarded by two men out of uniform, but whom he supposes, from their greasy and dirty appearance, to have been two of the ship's scavengers, and one of whom was drunk. They presented to him an authorization from the French Government to visit and examine vessels of that nation. For the indelicacy of sending ill-dressed persons on such a duty as that of examining a suspected slave-trader Lieutenant Wilson will, no doubt, be severely reprimanded. The imputation that one of those persons was drunk is a falsehood on the face of it. The reply of Lieutenant Wilson, suffering though it does from a double translation, is that precisely which might be expected from an intelligent British officer. Accounts from Eu of the 30th ult. state, that the King, Queen, and royal family walked on that day from the Chateau to the Hotel Dieu to visit the sick. The Journal des Débats states, that M. Bourgeot had been appointed Minister Plenipotentiary, and charged to fill, ad interim, the post of Minister of France at Washington, in the absence of M. de Bacourt.

PARIS.—The King, Queen, and royal family arrived at St. Cloud from Eu at ten o'clock on Sunday morning. His Majesty appeared to enjoy excellent health, and at one o'clock presided at a council of Ministers. The letters and journals of the south of France are filled with accounts of the inundations of the rivers of Provence, Dauphiné, Bresse, and Vivarais. Italy appears likewise to have been visited with similar calamities; and on the 20th ult. a frightful hurricane was experienced at Rome, which damaged a number of houses and felled many trees in the vicinity. The charge brought by the Opposition papers against the Government of "pressing forward the fortifications of Paris unnecessarily, while they neglected carrying out the views of the legislature in respect of railroads," is in some degree corroborated by an article in the Journal des Débats, which, however, accounts for the non-appearance of contractors for the works of the projected railroad between Paris and the Belgian frontier, by an unfounded report that Government had already contracted for those works with a private company." One private letter, however, states that "no such was not the real or only cause for the non-presentation of tenders for that railway, but the positive inertness of Government, who would see with pleasure the public (or, as in the instance of the Rouen railway, the 'English') come forward with the means for commencing and completing the work. No such propositions having been made, the Government did not press for tenders, but the public must not forget how important, Ministers felt it impossible longer to delay the application of the funds placed in their hands for that purpose, and declare, consequently, that if no tenders be made within a few days, they will themselves commence the work."

SPAIN.—Our accounts from Madrid are of the 25th ult. The Corresponsal publishes a notice from the Director of the Bank of San Fernando, addressed to the shareholders that they are entitled, in the present year, to a dividend of 4 per cent, which will be paid from the 1st of October. The following is an extract from a letter from Madrid of the same date, with which we have been favoured:—"The Heraldo, with a view to annoy M. Arguelles, has published a series of articles, in which it contends that his duties as Guardian of the Queen must cease when her Majesty shall have published her sixteenth year. Little notice was at first taken of the subject, but party spirit, soon perceiving that a question so closely allied with that of the Regency could be made a powerful engine for overturning the existing Government, has given it a certain degree of importance. The Moderados, in particular, first encouraged themselves with the hope that the Queen would appoint both the Regent and Guardian for the same period of years, and that they alone could decide what they had done. Of late, however, a change has been remarked in the tone of those journals, and it is said that Espartero, having had some differences with M. Arguelles, who is extremely jealous of his attributes, would not be sorry to see another chosen in his place. M. Cortina, on the other hand, has never forgiven M. Arguelles for preserving his seat in the Chamber after his election as tutor, and bearing likewise a grudge to Espartero because of his refusing to confide to him the construction of a new Cabinet after the retreat of the Gonzales Administration: he is determined to bring the matter before the Cortes at the next session, in the hope of upsetting the principle on which the present Regency now stands, and substituting in its stead a triple Regency, of which the Infant Don Francisco de Paulo would be the nominal chief, and himself (M. Cortina) the soul. The commercial treaty with Great Britain is again beginning to be talked of, and it is even asserted in some political and diplomatic circles, that the project has been actually discussed between the Regent, his secretary (General Linage), a Spanish statesman, supposed to be M. Gonzales, and Mr. Aston, our Minister. The last correction was said to have been given to it so far back as the 20th of August. It is thought that the Government will present it to the Cortes, together with the projected treaties with Belgium and Holland, and that whilst the discussion is proceeding Zurbano will be kept in Catalonia to overawe the cotton-spinners and manufacturers of Barcelona. M. Cortina, aware of the conclusion of this treaty, and of the plans of Government for carrying it through the Cortes, is concerting measures, not only with his Parliamentary friends, but even with the secret societies of Barcelona, to procure their failure. Although tranquillity prevails throughout the kingdom, the Government nevertheless appears to labour under some apprehension. I have been assured (but I can hardly believe it) that the Regent has secured at the British Embassy some of his most valuable property, and that Mr. Aston himself conveyed it in his carriage from the Palace of Buena Vista to his hotel."

PORTUGAL.—The Tagus steamer arrived at Falmouth on Saturday afternoon with Peninsular mails, having left Gibraltar on the 22d of September, Cadiz on the 23d, Lisbon on the 26th, Oporto on the 27th, and Vigo on the 28th ditto.—Lisbon, Sept. 26. The bank has just concluded another loan with the Government of one thousand contos (£225,000), part of which will go immediately to meet the more pressing emergencies of the State. The claims of Colonel Rose, on behalf of the British officers who served in the Peninsular war, are likely to be immediately liquidated. The amount of them is 160 contos, the half of which the Government proposed to pay in the extinct paper currency, which bears a value in the market, and scarcely any purchasers, of about 20 per cent. This offer was, of course, refused. In regard to the tariff nothing has been decided. The Chambers are closed, and closed are all the energies of the nation. It is now demonstrated how a state of uncertainty affects commerce. In Oporto, British shipping is accumulating, and no freights to be had; the regular London and Liverpool traders have either to remain in the Douro many weeks for a few pipes of wine, or to leave almost in ballast. The same remark is applicable, at the present moment, to this port. The wine merchants will not, of course, subject themselves to present duties, when a few months hence the duties may be lowered in England. It is true, they can allow the wine to remain in bond; but that incurs expense. The English and Portuguese merchants and ship-owners are suffering, while the two Governments appear to take matters very easily.

ROME.—THE POPE AT SEA.—The Semaphore de Marseilles of the 28th ult. contains some particulars of the visit of the Pope on board the French Levant steamer Dante, at Civita Vecchia, on the 19th ult. This vessel had just entered the harbour when his Holiness was sailing out in the brig-of-war of 12 guns, the St. Peter and St. Paul, escorted by the three small steamers lately constructed for his service in England. The Pontifical flag was immediately hoisted on board the French steamer, and a salute of twenty-one guns was fired. Two hours afterwards the Sovereign Pontiff, accompanied by a numerous suite, composed of cardinals, prelates, and superior officers, repaired on board the Dante. The Pope, after visiting the vessel, conversed a long time with the officers of the staff and the French Consul, commended the services rendered to the Legion by the Levant packets, who gave a free passage to missionaries and nuns of different orders, and extolled the virtues of Louis Philippe and the piety of the Queen, whom he pronounced to be a saint. A collation was next offered to the Holy Father, and his health drunk; after which everybody on board was admitted to kiss his slipper, and another salute of twenty-one rounds announced his departure. Before leaving the steamer, Cardinal Fosti distributed, in the Pope's name, valuable medals and beads among the officers, and left a large sum of money to be divided amongst the crew.

VIENNA.—A GOOD EXAMPLE.—A letter from Vienna of the 20th ult., says, "The municipality of our capital has just completed an establishment unique in its kind in Germany, or perhaps in the world—a swimming-school for the winter. The premises of this useful institution are composed of a room of red marble 163 feet long and 46 wide, covered with a vaulted roof of glass, supported by 18 cast-iron columns, with composite capitals. In the middle of the room is the basin, 122 feet long and 40 wide, lined with earthenware, behind which are pipes for conveying steam, in order to keep the water at a certain temperature. Round the room are two rows of closets for dressing, heated, as well as the room itself, by hot air. Twelve huge lustres for gas, suspended from the roof, give light to the place until eleven o'clock at night." —Galignani.

A letter from Copenhagen, of September 21, says, "Since the establishment of the reformed religion in Denmark in 1517, the Catholic inhabitants of the capital have been deprived of places of worship, and all meetings for the exercise of that religion being formally forbidden, they were reduced to the little chapel of the Austrian embassy, which contains scarcely 100 persons, and where the service and other acts of religion are given in the German language. For the future this is not to be the case, as the King has decided that the Roman Catholics of Copenhagen are to be placed, in a religious point of view, on the same footing as other dissenters, and in consequence, he has author sed the erection of a Catholic church in the capital. It is probable that the first stone will be laid at Christmas or soon after."—Galignani

TURKEY.—CONSTANTINOPLE, Sep. 17.—The day before yesterday Sami Pacha, the Egyptian envoy, was despatched in the Turkish steamer Reschid, to Alexandria, with a superb decoration and imperial firman, investing Mehemet Ali Pacha with the hereditary rank of Sadrazam, or Grand Vizier. This distinction is, per se, of little importance, and there are precedents for it in the annals of the Ottoman empire. Mehemet Ali himself would have preferred the title of Khedive, which, coupled together with the Pachalic of Saïde, in Egypt, has been specially the object of incessant importunity for the last year past, has been positively refused to him. On Wednesday last Sir Stratford Canning had a conference with Sarim Effendi on the affairs of Persia, with respect to which he has the perfect security of the result, that the Porte could not be responsible for any loss of merchandise which foreign merchants might sustain in those disturbed parts of the country. On Thursday the representatives of the five powers were invited to a conference with the Minister for Foreign Affairs, at which, though the details of the contemplated arrangements in the Lebanon were not definitively settled, the Porte formally gave its adhesion to the plan and the principle embodied in the communication of Sir Stratford Canning. The popular movement in Servia has at length reached the development and crisis anticipated. The cause of the people, identical in this instance with that of the Porte, has triumphed, and the creatures of Russia, who, by means of her influence, had usurped the administration of the country, with no other view than that of seconding her ambitious projects against the whole of European Turkey, have thus been summarily ejected from power.

UNITED STATES, &c.—LIVERPOOL, Sunday Morning.—The Caledonia steamer arrived in the Mersey this morning at a quarter before five. She left Boston on the 17th, and Halifax on the 19th ult., and has had very rough weather, with head winds almost all the voyage; she has thirty-five passengers. The steamer Acadia arrived at Halifax on the 16th, in 12½ days, and the Margaret steamer from this port, in 14½ days. The Great Western had not reached New York when the latest accounts left that city. There is not much news of importance by this arrival. Various changes are reported in the cabinet of Washington, amongst these the appointment of Mr. Cushing to the treasury, in place of Mr. Forward, and the resignation of Mr. Daniel Webster, whose place will be filled by Mr. Lewis M'Lane, and the resignation also of Mr. Spencer in the war department, to be filled by Mr. Legal. A grand struggle between the Democrats and Whigs will take place at the autumn election in the State of New York, as upon it is supposed to rest the turn of the next Presidential election. In general politics the Whigs appear to be generally losing ground in the country. The stoppage of the Great American Far Company has been announced; their capital, which is of large amount, has been locked up in advances to the Indians who procure them skins, and the vast accumulation of their stock this season, in consequence of the bad trade, has compelled them to suspend. It is said, however, that they will shortly be able to resume. The death of Mrs. Harrison, the lady of the late President, took place at the White House, Washington, on the 13th. Lord Morpeth had returned to Albany, and was going to visit Mr. Van Buren for a short time before his return home. Intelligence from Buenos Ayres to the 9th July had reached New York, but it is not important. Business is reported to be moderately good, the packets were filling with cotton and flour at rather better freights. Of flour the supply this season will be enormous. There was a fair demand for bills on London for this packet, the rate of exchange 7½ to 7⅝ per cent. premium. On Paris, 5f. 32½ to 5f. 31¼. The supply of bills was moderate. From Canada the news is not important.

FALMOUTH, Oct. 4.—The Royal Mail Company's steamer Dee, Captain Hemsley, made her appearance this morning about eleven o'clock, having left Vera Cruz on the 13th of August, Tampico on the 17th, and off New Orleans on the 21st, Havannah on the 1st of September, Nassau on the 6th, Bermuda on the 11th, Payal on the 21st, and Corunna on the 1st of October, for which latter place she was obliged to bear up on the 27th ult., from about twenty leagues west of Ushant, owing to strong easterly gales. She has on freight 480,916 dollars and six serons cochineal, independent of seventeen cabin passengers and thirty-three supernumeraries. The Medway steamer left Nassau for the gulf of Mexico on the 6th of September, which vessel had brought up the Jamaica mails. A steamer, supposed to be the Teviot, was going into Corunna on the 1st instant, on her outward passage. The master of the Helen, of Belfast, died at Tampico on the 15th of August; and the roaster and nearly all the crew of the brig Native, of Exeter, had died at Havannah, at which place the fever was prevailing to a great degree.

JAMAICA.—Every thing quiet. Lord Elgin gaining more popularity; he and Lady Elgin had gone into the country for her ladyship's health. The House of Assembly would commence their session on Tuesday this month—and all parties were very harmonious between the governor and the members. The sugar crop was expected to average about 60,000 hogsheads. The 1st of August ships had all sailed, and there was produce at hand to load the vessels in port. The want of labourers was very much felt—the wages not being sufficiently high to remunerate the negroes for their work, which caused a refusal to labour on their part. The Electra had arrived with specie for Carthagena, which ship of war, with the steamer Spitfire, were in port.

LIMA, June 18.—General Lafuente on the part of the Peruvians, and General Bolivians on behalf of Bolivia, had come to conditions of peace at Puno, so that now in those quarters matters are settled. A change was expected in the government, it being anticipated that the ensuing elections would have a majority against the existing administration.

MEXICO.—The day after the Dee sailed from Vera Cruz, 1500 troops were to sail for Campeachy. Three French vessels were engaged to convey them, and they would be accompanied by two sailing Mexican ships of war and the steamer City of Dublin. The Mexican soldiers were suffering very much from the prevailing fever; several had died. The British ships of war Rover and Victor were at Vera Cruz.

HONDURAS.—Nicaragua and the other states which refuse to pay the indemnity required by Great Britain, are still blockaded.

HAVANNAH.—Fever still raging very fearfully. At one time there were twenty-six cases on board the Dee; two seamen fell victims to its violence, and the ships, generally, were severe sufferers by the loss of different members of the crews. Exchange on London, 13 to 15 prem.

NAVAL AND MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

NAVAL PROMOTIONS AND APPOINTMENTS.—Promotions: Commander, F. Boyd (Royal George yacht) to the rank of Captain. Lieutenant J. J. Paulet, of the Royal George, and G. W. Smith, of the William and Mary yacht, to the rank of Commander. Messrs. J. Dawson and A. J. Pechell, fields to be Lieutenants of Lieutenants. C. R. Bryan, M.D., of the Queen, George, and A. Woodcock, of the Racehorse, to the rank of Surgeon. Mr. [illegible] to be Assistant-Surgeon to the Salamander, vice [illegible]. Second Master, R. L. [illegible] to be Master, vice Slaughter. Surgeons, R. L. Birkbeck to the Romney; A. Woodcock to the Volcano; Assistant-Surgeon, Hon. A. A. Cochrane to the Salamander; D. C. O. Slaughter to the Minotaur. Coast Guard: Removal of Officers, Lieutenant E. Hill, from Cowes, Isle of Wight, to Hollesley, in Dorsetshire; Lieutenant [illegible] from Newcastle, Durham, to St. Mary's Lighthouse, near Whitley; Lieutenant [illegible] from Hollesley, to Eastbourne; Lieutenant J. Maxwell, from Wexhaven to Portpatrick; Lieutenant [illegible] to Wexhaven.

CAPTAIN SMITH.—We are glad to perceive by the London Gazette that the promotion of Captain Smith, of the 27th Regiment, has been promoted to a brevet majority for his gallant and meritorious conduct at the battle of the Umvoti, in Port Natal. This appropriate and well timed reward is, we are sure, the Duke of Wellington's spontaneous and unsolicited act. The gallant officer in question has for many years been conspicuous for distinction upon Captain Smith, and the spirited and exemplary conduct which it is intended to reward, is, we presume to the donor and the recipient, if not, perhaps, by generally known to our readers that Captain Smith commenced his professional career in the navy, from which he transferred his services into the 27th Regiment in June, 1813. At that period his father was surgeon of that corps, and his sister, Mrs. Tucker, married to one of its captains, circumstances which no doubt had their full weight in determining Captain Smith to exchange his blue for a red jacket. The ship in which he last served was the Sapphire. He has had his fair share of hard fighting, both in the Peninsula and at Waterloo, since he has belonged to the military branch of the service.

LORD HILL'S PRIVATE SECRETARY.—We are by no means surprised, although certainly very much gratified, at the promotion of the unattached Lieutenant-Colonelcy of Colonel Egerton, late Aide-de-Camp and Private Secretary to Lord Hill.

WEST INDIA AND MEDITERRANEAN DETACHMENTS.—The usual periodical detachments have been placed under orders for Jamaica, the West Indies, and the Mediterranean. Their combined strength is to consist of about 1 field officer, 11 captains, 15 lieutenants, 24 ensigns, 20 sergeants, 4 drummers, and 880 rank and file, who will be selected from the respective depots in the following proportions:—For the West Indies, 1 field officer, 2 captains, 8 lieutenants, 15 ensigns, 12 sergeants, 2 drummers, and 340 rank and file, to be taken from the 33rd, 46th, 47th, 59th, 77th, and 92nd Regiments. For Jamaica, 1 captain, 1 lieutenant, 3 ensigns, 3 sergeants, and 100 rank and file, from the 46th Foot and the 2nd battalion 60th Rifles. For Gibraltar, 2 field officers, 4 lieutenants, 2 ensigns, 4 sergeants, and 120 rank and file, from the 1st battalion of the Royals, the 7th Fusiliers, and the 79th Highlanders. For Malta, 1 captain, 1 lieutenant, 2 ensigns, 1 sergeant, and 30 rank and file, from the 88th Connaught Rangers; and for the Ionian Islands, 1 field officer, 2 captains, 2 ensigns, 1 sergeant, and 15 rank and file, from the 13th, 38th, and the 97th Regiments, and the 1st battalion Rifle brigade. These drafts are exclusive of the reserve battalions of the 42nd, 45th, and 97th Regiments, which are to proceed separately to Malta, Gibraltar, and Corfu. No tonnage has yet been provided for the conveyance of any of these officers and men; but arrangements are in active progress ensuring their early departure from this country. The 53rd, 58th, and 61st Regiments are to be augmented to 1200 rank and file each, and to be formed into two battalion corps.

DEVONPORT, October 3.—The Superb, 80, lately launched at Pembroke arrived from that port on Sunday, having been towed hither by the Thunderbolt steam-vessel. The Superb is now alongside the south jetty.—The Thunderbolt, new steam-vessel, will sail to-day for the Excellent, at Portsmouth, to which ship she will take twelve first-class boys from this ordinary. The Dapper, 18, sloop, Captain J. J. Dastley, will sail this afternoon for South America. The Salamander steam-frigate, Commander A. S. Hamond, arrived here from Portsmouth on Sunday. She was fitted out at Chatham, where a number of her men were paid in advance; the remainder will be paid here to-morrow. It is said that the Salamander will embark at this port for the Brazils the Right Hon. Henry Ellis, special minister to that kingdom. The Sanspareil, old sheer hulk, was taken into dock on Saturday.

COURT-MARTIAL ON LIEUTENANT LIONEL R. PLACE, AT MALTA.—We announce, with much gratification, the full acquittal, after a four days' patient and laborious investigation, of this promising young officer, from all and every of the other foul charges preferred against him, which the court in its sentence at once pronounced as "false, scandalous, and malicious." Sir Francis Mason, the president, in returning the prisoner his sword, assured him, in the name of every member of the court, that he left the same "without the slightest stain on his character." On returning to his own ship, the Queen, the gallant commander-in-chief, Sir E. W. C. R. Owen, received Lieutenant Place on the poop (where all the officers of the ship had been previously summoned, and after shaking him cordially by the hand, and making an appropriate speech, presented him with his commission to the flag ship, on board of which he had heretofore been a mere supernumerary or additional lieutenant, a mode of proceeding which we cannot too highly laud, since it the more fully makes known to the public in general the restoration of Lieutenant Place to that position in the service from which, with such poignant feelings of regret to himself and his friends, he has been necessarily suspended pending the late proceedings, which have occupied a fortnight. We understand the accusing parties will be sent to England in the Phœnix.

SHIPPING INTELLIGENCE.

A case of considerable interest, and one [illegible] doubt to arise in a trial of importance in the Court of Admiralty [illegible] between Lieutenant Fynes-court; the boatswain and several of the crew of the Montezuma employed by the mayor for advice under the following circumstances:—The Montezuma had been fitted out at Southampton as a [illegible] ship for the Mexican Government, [illegible] of Texas. [illegible] fered, it was said, to [illegible] and to fit her out as a [illegible] Some days [illegible] to convert her into a mer[illegible]. The crew had previously signed articles for a twelvemonth's voyage, but on the interference of the Government the articles were, of course, put an end to, and the greater part of the crew refused to sign new articles, more especially as Captain Cleaveland had refused to say under what colours they were to sail, taking from that he got the idea he should have that of the Texian [illegible] proper. The Montezuma had sailed, but Mr. Fenton, a solicitor, appeared on behalf of the company, and contended that, as the men had signed articles to other and foreign service, they could not recover their wages. The magistrates said they had no jurisdiction, the applicants must make an application to the Board of Admiralty.

SOUTHAMPTON, Saturday.—The North steam-ship, belonging to the Royal Steam Packet Company, sailed this afternoon, on her way to Falmouth, where she will receive the 1st of October mails for the West Indies, and proceed immediately on her voyage. The Forth is the first outward ship sailing under the new plan of service agreed upon between the Royal Mail Steam-Packet Company and the Admiralty, and which came into operation on the 1st inst. The Forth was crowded with passengers, the whole of her cabins having been engaged several days before her departure. She also carried out a considerable freight of quicksilver.

CHURCH, UNIVERSITIES, &c.

OXFORD, Oct. 1.—The Lord Bishop of Salisbury has admitted the following gentlemen of this University into holy orders:—

Deacons.—A. Barnett, of Worcester College; T. H. House, Worcester; E. H. Burnett, Merton; A. P. de Tessier, Corpus Christi; E. A. Ferryman, University; T. Barry, Magdalen Hall; B. B. G. Astley, St. Alban Priests.—Rev. C. Bedford, of New College; Rev. W. Bas nell, University; Rev. T. G. Clarke, Queen's; Rev. E. W. Pears, Magdalen; Rev. C. M. K. Elborton, Brasenose.

And by the Lord Bishop of Exeter.

Deacons.—R. Archer, of Balliol College; H. Edwards, Lincoln; R. L. Pamphell, Trinity; W. E. Vigor, Worcester; W. C. Clack, Worcester; W. N. Redman, Wadham; F. B. B. Cole, St. Edmund Hall; J. L. Harding, New Hall.

Priests.—Rev. C. F. D. Lyne, of Pembroke College; Rev. S. Johnson, Merton; Rev. W. T. Chave, Worcester; Rev. F. J. Knowles, Exeter; Rev. M. Tyler, St. Edmund Hall; Rev. W. F. Everest, Magdalen.

Colonel H. Vyse has presented the Rev. G. S. H. Vyse, of Christ Church, to the rectory of Pusford. The Rev. W. Pedder, of Brasenose College, has been appointed Vice Principal of the Wells Diocesan Theological College. The Rev. J. M. Knobbs has been appointed to the curacy of Cookstock, Nottinghamshire.

The following appointments have taken place:—The Rev. Charles Bulkeley, Fellow of Jesus College, to the [illegible]. The Rev. Edward Bunnell, of Clare Hall, [illegible]. The Rev. Ashby Blackwood, B.A., of Caius College, to the rectory of St. James's, Westminster. The Rev. Hubert Wynne, B.A., of St. John's College, to the rectory of Rushmere, Suffolk.

CAMBRIDGE.—[illegible] gentlemen were announced as having been elected Fellows of Trinity College:—Henry Augusta Marsh, Richard Jake Mate, Charles [illegible] William King, Robert Watt, Theodore Preston, Edward Cope, Arthur Calvert. At the same time the Rev. George Adam Browne was elected Vice-Master, in the place of the Rev. John Hudson, resigned.

THE BISHOP OF BARBADOES.—The Right Reverend Thomas Parry, D.D., the present Bishop of Barbadoes, [illegible] Archdeacon of Barbadoes, [illegible] Bishop of Barbadoes, [illegible] Bishop of Barbadoes, [illegible] Bishop PASSING THE CANONGATE, EDINBURGH.

We have here engraved a representation of the passage of her Majesty through an old and highly interesting locality of Edinburgh. In this rather narrow street are situated several buildings famous in history and romance, and among them the house of John Knox the reformer. The clock, which projects from another edifice in our picture, will indicate to the reader the site of the celebrated Canongate gaol.

BOTHWELL BRIG.

Her Majesty and Prince Albert had here an opportunity of gazing on the scene of the famous battle of Bothwell Brig, which took place in 1679, between the royal forces, under the Duke of Monmouth, and the Covenanters, the result of which Professor Wilson has thus described episodically in his poem of the "Clyde":—

> Where Bothwell's Bridge connects the margin steep,
> And Clyde below runs silent, strong, and deep,
> The hardy peasant, by oppression driven
> To battle, deem'd his cause the cause of Heaven;
> Unskill'd in arms, with useless courage stood,
> While gentle Monmouth grieved to shed his blood;
> But fierce Dundee, inflamed with deadly hate,
> In vengeance for the great Montrose's fate,
> Set loose the sword, and to the hero's shade
> A barbarous hetacomb of victims paid.

Many of the fugitives found shelter in the wooded parks around Hamilton Palace.

Great changes have now been made on the scene of the engagement. The gateway, gate, and house of the bridge-ward were long ago removed. The original breadth of the bridge was twelve feet; but, in 1826, twenty-two feet were added to its breadth, the holm which once lay at the Hamilton extremity was filled up, and an alteration was also made in the road, at the other end. The open park in which the Covenanters were posted is now changed into enclosed fields and plantations, and the moor upon which the royal army advanced to the engagement is now a cultivated and beautiful region.

The level grounds, which stretch away from Bothwell Bridge along the north-east bank of the river, once formed the patrimonial estate of Hamilton of Bothwellhaugh, the assassin of the Regent Murray.

HIGHLAND COSTUME.

"The Highland garb, worn by one who knows how to dress properly in it, is, undoubtedly, one of the most picturesque in the world," remarks Mr. Logan, in his History of the Highlanders; and this people, by their enthusiastic adherence to their ancient national costume, show that their opinion coincides with that of the author just named. Indeed, their love for the garb of old Gaul" has existed in undiminished fervour for centuries, in spite of penal enactments of the most rigid kind, which went to prohibit its wear entirely, by not allowing "man or boy, on any pretence," to appear "in the clothes commonly called Highland clothes, viz., the plaid, philibeg or little kilt, trowse, shoulder belts, or any part whatsoever of what peculiarly belongs to the Highland garb; and that no tartan or party-coloured plaid or stuff should be used for great coats or for upper coats." Such were the stringent words of the act of 1747, immediately after the quelling of the rebellion in favour of the Pretender, and which remained unrepealed until 1782, when the Duke of Montrose brought forward his bill for that purpose.

Much has been said on the alleged antiquity of this dress; and great heat has been elicited during the progress of the argument by writers on both sides of the question. Sir John Sinclair and Mr. Pinkerton both denied its claims to considerable age. Sir John declares that "it is well known that the philibeg was invented by an Englishman in Lochaber about sixty years ago (he writes in 1795), who naturally thought his workmen could be more active in that light petticoat than in the belted plaid; and that it was more decent to wear it than to have no clothing at all, which was the case with some of those employed by him in cutting down the woods in Lochaber." Pinkerton, with the same view of the case, declares, that "the Highland dress is, in fact, quite modern; and any improvement may be made without violating antiquity. Nay, the trousers are far more ancient than the philibeg, for that cannot be traced among any of the Celtic nations, Ireland, Wales, or Bretagne, either as an article of dress, or as a word in their language. As to the plaid, there is no reason to believe it more ancient than the philibeg. The tartan, I dare say, passed from Flandors (whence all our articles came) to the Lowlands, about the fifteenth century, and thence to the Highlands. It is never mentioned before the latter part of that century, and first occurs in the accounts of James II., 1474, and seems to have passed from England; for the rouge tartarin, in the statutes of the Order of the Bath, in the time of Edward IV., is surely red tartan, or cloth, with red stripes of various shades." He goes on to argue, from the silence of the ancient chroniclers, the impossibility of the existence of such a costume in their day, mentioning that "Froissart, though astonished at the sauvages d'Ecosse, as foreigners termed the Highlanders even down to Mary's reign, and though a minute observer, remarks no fixed appropriated dress among them, though the plaid and philibeg, if then worn, must have struck him as most particular;" adding, "Leslie and Buchanan, 1570—1580, are therefore the first who mention the modern Highland dress. The former represents tartan as then confined to the use of people of rank. The latter says the plaids of his time were brown."

Having thus, to his own satisfaction, got rid of the question of its antiquity, he falls foul of the propriety of this costume in terms of unmeasured abuse. "It is not only," says he, "grossly indecent, but it is filthy, as it admits dust to the skin; is absurd, because, while the breast, &c., are twice covered by vest and plaid, the legs and thighs are but loosely clad; is effeminate, being merely a short petticoat, an article of female dress; is beggarly, because its shortness and the shortness of the stockings, joined with the naked knees, impress an unconquerable idea of poverty and nakedness."

The tartan is dismissed very cavalierly in the words, "Nothing can reconcile the tasteless regularity and vulgar glow of tartan to the eye of fashion; and every attempt to introduce it has failed."

After this sample, we cannot be surprised at Mr. Logan's declaration, that Pinkerton was "an author notorious for his anti-Gaelic spirit, and whose learning is sullied by a rancour of feeling and heat of temper;" the more particularly as his assertions against the antiquity of the costume have been thoroughly disproved upon mature investigation.

Mr. Planché, writing on the subject, says, "No rational doubt can exist of the great antiquity of the national costume of Scotland. That the chequered stuff which still forms it is the variously-coloured garment of the Gauls described by Diodorus, at one time the common habit of every Celtic tribe, but now abandoned by all their descendants except the hardy unsophisticated Gaelic mountaineer, is admitted, we believe, by every antiquary who has made public his opinion on the subject. But to the same extent that our credence is given to the fact is our wonder awakened that the existence of so peculiar a habit should have been passed unnoticed by every chronicler and traveller, whether native or foreign, for upwards of a thousand years! yet such is the case as far as we have been able to discover." This Mr. Logan accounts for by allowing it to be certainly difficult for those who were unacquainted with its details to convey a proper idea of it. The old Scots of the low country mentioned it as "the Highland weed," a "light dress, &c.;" and except to those who lived near the hills, or had intercourse with the inhabitants, their peculiarities were little known. Diodorus was unable to describe the singular dress of the Celts, which he thought was formed of cloth, ornamented in flowered work; and Beague, in 1549, from a superficial view of them, describes the Highlanders as going almost naked, and says they wore painted waistcoats!

The plates in the "Costume of the Original Inhabitants of the British Islands," by T. R. Meyrick and C. J. Smith, exhibit the ancient Britons in chequered tartan, which is undoubtedly accurate, for the ancient Gauls and Britons, at the period of the Roman invasions, made their lighter or summer garments either in stripes or chequers, the cloth being composed, according to Pliny, of fine wool dyed of several different colours, which, being spun into yarn, was thus woven, and thus we obtain the undoubted origin of the Scottish tartan. "Indeed," says Mr. Planché, "with the exception of the plumed bonnet, and the tasselled sporan or purse, a Highland chief in his full costume, with tunic, plaid, dirk, and target, affords as good an illustration of the appearance of an ancient Briton of distinction as can well be imagined."

This variegated stuff was also called by the Highlanders cath-dath, commonly translated, as Mr. Logan informs us, "war-colour," but ingeniously rendered by a friend of that gentleman the "strife of colours," as if they emulated each other in brilliancy, an etymology which has certainly the high merit of being as probable as it is poetical and characteristic. The close trousers anciently worn by the Gauls and Britons, called "bracæ" by the Romans, were made, as the name imports, of their chequered cloth; breac, in Celtic, meaning anything speckled, spotted, striped, or party-coloured.

Stirling, in Scotland, has been long celebrated for its manufacture of this cloth, and a very fine web, especially of scarlet, which the Highlanders could not produce from their native dye-stuffs, was known as "Stirling tartan." The native hills of the Highlander afforded him the articles with which he dyed brilliant, permanent, and pleasing colours. The Gauls, by using herbs only for dyeing, produced such beautiful tints that they excited the admiration of Greeks and Romans. The Britons and Highlandmen used alder-bark for black, willow for flesh-colour, corkir or crotil geal, a lichen formed on stone, for crimson, and various other vegetable substances. "Give me bullock's blood and lime," said the Highlander, "and I will produce you fine colours." Every farmer's wife was competent to dye blue, red, green, yellow, black, brown, and their compounds. These woollen cloths were commonly worn of an intermixture of black and white, and the particular pattern of clan tartans must have been fixed for centuries, and by their dress were these clansmen known. The Stewart or royal tartan is worn by all branches of the royal family, and was adopted by George IV. when in Scotland. It is of the richest description, composed of narrow bands of colour united in groups, and crossing each other diagonally, leaving solid square centres of scarlet. His Royal Highness the Duke of Sussex has a pattern peculiar to himself, which is worn for Inverness, of which he is Earl. All regular tartans are made so that in the folds of the kilt or plaid, which are formed in what is called quilled or box plaiting, a particular stripe shall appear. Thus, in the Gordon set it is yellow, in the Mackenzie white, &c., and wherever one of these patterns cannot be formed in this way, the web is irregular: and an error in weaving would equally derange the operation of making up a jacket, which consumes a considerable quantity of cloth, being cut on the bias, and is a work of great nicety and skill. The Gordon tartan is here given: its prevailing colours are green, of different shades, and blue. The stockings of white and red, with shades of buff.

STEWART TARTAN.

GORDON CHIEF.

Of the five regiments who still wear the kilt, the 42nd is composed of the plainest, darkest, and most common pattern, and is often called the Black Watch, from the old name of the corps, who were so denominated from wearing this tartan only, the red jacket being a late alteration. The regular colours are blue, black, and green, but a red stripe in the middle of the former is often introduced. Our engraving represents a Highland bagpiper in full costume, and dressed in the tartan of this regiment.

The 78th, or Ross shire Highlanders, wear the Mackenzie tartan, having been raised from that clan. The 79th, or Cameron Highlanders, the tartan of their clan, as also does the 93rd, or Gordon Highlanders, the 93rd wearing the Sutherland tartan, which appears only different from the plain set of the 42nd in having the green and blue lighter. The 71st Regiment, or

PIPER OF THE 42ND REGIMENT.

Mackenzie Highland light infantry, when first raised wore their own clan plaid; the 72nd, or Seaforth Highlanders, being also a Mackenzie regiment, wore the same tartan and costume, but the late Duke of York, taking a fancy to this corps after their return from the Cape of Good Hope, called them "The Duke of Albany's own Highlanders," and gave them a scarf plaid and trousers of the royal tartan

It will be well here to note the distinction between the plaid and the tartan, particularly as a confusion in the use of these terms is constantly made by Englishmen. The tartan is the proper name for the chequered dress of the Highlander—the plaid is not the name for the pattern, as many suppose, and use it, consequently, improperly; the plaid is the broad piece of tartan which is passed across the figure from shoulder to waist, as shown in our figure of the Gordon chieftain; it consists of a fold of tartan, two yards in width by four or six in length, and it was fastened on the shoulder by a brooch or pin, so as to display the tastefulness of its arrangement and the grandeur of its folds to the best advantage. The "belted plaid" was bound round the loins with a leathern belt, in such a manner that the lower side fell down to the middle of the knee joint, and the Highlander, if he wished to dress with precision, would apparently require some assistance; but in the absence of aid he might lay his plaid upon a box, table, or chair back, and when abroad he spread it on a sloping bank or rock, and, having the belt under it, laying himself on his side, and buckling his girdle, the object was accomplished. He was, however, so nice that he took considerable pains to arrange the folds after it was put on.

THE TREWS.

The trews, or trousers, are also ancient portions of costume, and in remote times formed, with the Romans, soldiers, and writers, a distinguishing mark, by which they named their wearers "breeched barbarians," in contradistinction to themselves and what they considered to be the civilized world. They appear to have been worn pretty commonly about the time when Prince Charles Edward, the young Pretender, headed the Highland army in 1745. In the illustrations to the "Waverley Novels" we find the Earl of Perth thus habited; and a curious portrait of Prince Charles himself is similarly dressed, his tartan jacket being cut in the fashion of that period, with large cuffs to the elbow, and he is enveloped in a capacious plaid. Our engraving is a fac-simile copy of the picture.

(To be concluded in our next.)

THE CAPERCAILZIE.

The capercailzies are rare birds of a breed almost extinct in Scotland, until the Marquis of Breadalbane was presented with some of the race from this country by one of the family of Buxtons—of the great brewing firm of Truman, Hanbury, and Buxton—and with these endeavoured to restore the brood. The marquis had met with partial success, and there are now many capercailzies upon his estate, which, however, his lordship's loyalty permitted the gun of his Royal Highness Prince Albert somewhat to reduce in number upon the recent occasion of his excursion to the noble marquis's Highland estate.

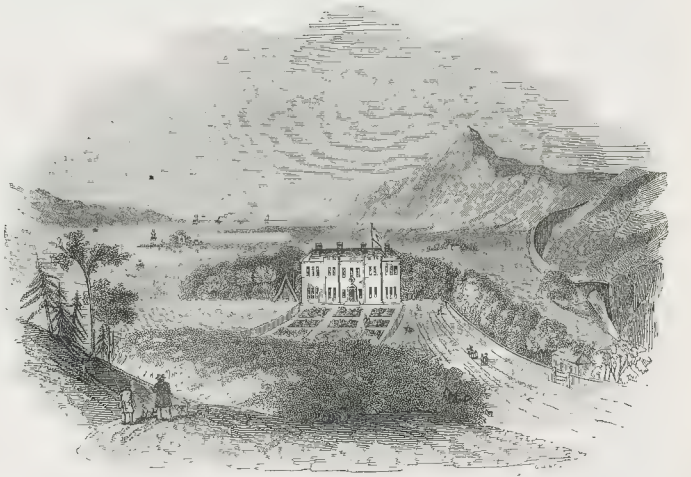
PORTRAIT OF DANIEL O'CONNELL.

At the request of many readers, we have had for the last few weeks in readiness for publication the drawing of Derrynane Abbey, which we give in the present number of the ILLUSTRATED NEWS; and the expression of a desire from the same quarters that we will not allow it to appear without a portrait of its owner, persuades us also to introduce Daniel O'Connell in propria persona to our gentle public, who comprise the great category of his enemies and friends.

On the other hand, as the English and Irish world is made up of these two opposites—as no man had ever so many friends or so many enemies—as he has left no third party in society to think "neutral thoughts" of him—as neither his worst nor best actions were likely to raise "an army of indifferents"—so there is the more inducement for us to leave the public to the enjoyment of its own extremes, and not to open the question of Daniel O'Connell's political character, for the purpose of setting our readers and ourselves by the ears. There could be no wonderful unanimity in any discussion that we might originate on this head among the many thousands of all classes who take our journal. He is, as you walk through the world, the god of one man's idolatry, and the incarnate fiend of another's execration. One poet writes of him that—

> His labour has its harvest day by day;
> He works for hire and agitates for pay;
> And colder blood than even his might boil,
> While from the poor he wrings his cursed spoil.
> Yes, from the poor, whom it would purchase bread,
> The pining, hungry, naked, and unfed,
> He tribute takes, by which he loves to live,
> Unskilled to pity those who starve to give;
> And who, while giving to obey their priest,
> Go without food to furnish him a feast.

Anon this rhymester, who makes him out the "epitome of all the monsters," is interrupted by a prose admirer, who says, "Whatever faults or vices we may lay to O'Connell's charge, that of being selfish, mercenary, or avaricious, can never be amongst them. He is ambitious, if you will, and has achieved ambition's most wonderful aspirations; but never either loved money, or used it in any form of personal repayment for the exercise of his talents on his country's behalf." Thus do opinions meet. To-day he is idolized by a people—to-morrow he is denounced from a throne. Good and bad fairly joust with each other to call him names: he is patriot — swindler — emancipator — traitor — liberator — tyrant—duellist—coward; and has every other attribute of cardinal virtue or inordinate sin. All this is the nonsense of party, that will not and cannot be impartial in the midst of its strife. The fact is, the man belongs to history, and history will by and by deal with him as her own. It is his prominence as a public man only that induces us to introduce him here, because he is universally known, has a far-spread fame, a name that makes its noise with the million, and is engraven on every page of the book of politics of our time, because he is the achiever of Catholic emancipation—the orator and agitator of all Ireland—the Lord Mayor of Dublin—and the hero of Repeal. He brings with him, in fact, the passport of notoriety, and the credentials are too genuine to be refused. But, although he is all this, we are not going to write an essay about political Daniel O'Connell. No; we take him up socially, because we have his native home of hospitality before us, and the Abbey of Derrynane full in our view. That same Abbey of Derrynane belonged, we believe, to his uncle, what time Dan himself was in the shop of his father, Morgan O'Connell, a huckster in Cahirciveen, and was taken by the said uncle from the said shop, to receive the education of a barrister, and, par consequence, of a gentleman. Dan's career in the great world may be dotted like so many milestones on the road of public events; but his "snug lying in the abbey," meaning always the Abbey of Derrynane, is less known unto all but those who have feasted and drunk so well therein, that to have slept away from it were impossible. Dan, though he has given up his tumbler of punch and turned teetotaller, makes a jolly and impartial host, and everybody is free to Derrynane. "The Derby dilly, with its six insides," would be welcome if it went there. Whig, Tory, and Radical are all entertained in the purest spirit of old Irish hospitality; and, to add to this testimony, that the host is merry, amiable, and urbane, is still only to give the devil his due. We once heard an Orangeman declare that "Dan was a capital fellow out of politics;" and this we beg our readers to remember is the only sense in which we are referring to him in this notice. And now, reader, take a glimpse of his castle of Derrynane.



DERRYNANE ABBEY.

On the verge of a narrow creek formed by the Atlantic Ocean, on the south-western coast of Ireland, and in the county of Kerry, is Derrynane Abbey, the seat of Daniel O'Connell, Esq., M.P. The mansion itself, which is comparatively of modern structure, derives its name from the Abbey of Derrynane, situated a short distance from it. The architecture of Mr. O'Connell's mansion lays claim to no particular order; it is a plain substantial erection, and is of sufficient dimension to afford accommodation to his large family, numerous retainers, and a constant succession of visitors during the period of the year in which he is a resident there. The approach to Derrynane is by a circuitous route over a range of lofty hills, which completely preclude the view of Mr. O'Connell's residence until the visitor is in close proximity to it; the surrounding scenery is of a bold and romantic character, and its imposing beauties have been described by himself in his own characteristic and exulting manner, in a letter to Walter Savage Landor, the conversationist and poet:—

"I could show you at noontide, when the stern south-wester had blown long and rudely, the mountain waves coming in from the illimitable ocean in majestic succession, expending their gigantic force, and throwing up stupendous masses of foam, against the more gigantic and more stupendous mountain-cliffs that fence not only this my native spot, but form that eternal barrier which prevents the wild Atlantic from submerging the cultivated plains and high-steepled villages of proud Britain herself. Or, were you with me amidst the Alpine scenery that surrounds my humble abode, listening to the eternal roar of the mountain torrent as it bounds through the rocky defiles of my native glens, I would venture to tell you how I was born within the sound of the everlasting wave, and how my dreamy boyhood dwelt upon imaginary intercourse with those who are dead of yore, and fed its fond fancies upon the ancient and long-faded glories of that land which preserved literature and Christianity when the rest of now civilised Europe was shrouded in the darkness of Godless ignorance. Yes! my expanding spirit delighted in these day-dreams till, catching from them an enthusiasm which no disappointment can embitter, nor accumulating years diminish, I formed the high resolve to leave my native land better after my death than I found her at my birth."

The principal routes to the remote district of Mr. O'Connell's paternal domain are by Cork and Dublin. The one by Cork leads on through Killarney to Tralee,—the assize town of the county of Kerry,—and Cahirciveen,—a village about ten miles distant,—which is the nearest post-town to Mr. O'Connell's residence. The other route leads from Dublin to Limerick, through Rathkeale, a straggling, dirty village, Newcastle, a small but beautiful town, the property of the Earl of Devon, Abbeyfeale, and Castle Island, to Tralee. The district betwixt Limerick and Tralee was but little travelled over, owing to the badness of roads and want of proper conveyance, until within the last few years. This country is now intersected by as fine a road as any in Europe, and the accommodation of every description for travellers is unexceptionable.

THE PROPRIETORS of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS

have the pleasure to announce that they have made arrangements with one of THE MOST EMINENT AUTHORS OF THE DAY,

to produce in their journal a Work of Fiction,

UPON AN ENTIRELY NEW PLAN,

to be entitled,

THE NOVEL OF THE MOMENT.

The work will be produced with

EVERY VARIETY OF ILLUSTRATION,

executed in the most expensive style of finish, by ARTISTS OF THE HIGHEST REPUTE in their several walks of art. The Novel will be printed in weekly episodes of not more than three columns of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, including embellishments; and arrangements will be made to prevent any entrenchment by it upon the established departments of the Paper.

 Prospectuses of the design, with further details of the entire spirit of its publication, will be issued to the public in due course of events.

To the Editor of the Illustrated London News.

Sir—In the absence of Mr. De Moleyns from this country, I feel myself called upon—as one of his friends—to notice the unwarrantable imputation put forward by the anonymous writer of the article on Science in the 17th No. of THE LONDON NEWS, to wit, that his Sustaining Battery, and more recently discovered Voltaic Combination, were only modifications of Daniell's "Constant" and Grove's "Nitric Acid" Battery. This, Sir, I emphatically deny; for if Mr. De Moleyns has modified or improved upon any invention—it certainly was the original invention in 1829—of M. Becquerel of Paris, to whom must be conceded the honour of being the first promulgator and constructor of a constant voltaic combination, consisting of two fluids, namely, solution of sulphate of copper and of sulphate of zinc, in connexion with the metals copper and zinc—a diaphragm being interposed (see Annales de Chimie, et de Physique, Tome 41) — add to this, that with the exception of the above general principle of Becquerel, every principle of construction applied in Mr. De Moleyns's combination happens to be opposed to every one in Daniell's (see Annals of Electricity for June); and as to Mr. De Moleyns's late invention, there are elements employed, and combinations formed, and results obtained, which are unknown in Grove's Nitric Acid Battery, and create a very wide difference indeed between the two inventions. It would be well, Sir, if, before your contributor laid claim to the very enviable office of partisan vituperator, he read more and wrote less. I am, Sir, your obedient servant,

Blackheath, Sept. 23. F. H. DAYROLLES.

[We insert this letter with pleasure, because we find its complaint just; but our previous contributor was also entitled to inquiry at our hands, which having given him, we no longer pause to correct his error. Mr. Dayrolles, however, is anything but courteous in his tone; and when he asks the name of our contributor, he must greatly misappreciate the principle of this journal, if he imagines that we would give it up, however we might be induced to guard against his future comment.—ED. I. L. N.]

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

"O. T. K."—The lines are quite true in their spirit, but we have no space to publish mere truisms.

"T. E." Foot's Cray.—We should say not, but cannot undertake to answer legal questions.

"A Subscriber," Edinburgh.—He is.

"R. G. W."—He can divide it among several savings' banks, or place it in the funds; but the best thing is to procure some profitable investment.

"Thomas Daily," Chichester.—Let us have a letter or two at the terms mentioned. We will communicate according to the result.

We have found it impossible from want of space, to insert "The Kent Survey Agricultural Association;" but our correspondent has our best thanks.

"T. E. K." Any Windsor Guide will inform our correspondent as regards the statue. For the rest it is likely we may oblige him.

"M. M. D.," Ratcliff. We have no room.

"J. S."—We shall be glad to receive the sketches, and will look out the poem for next week. "Forest Life" may be revised.

"S. H. C." Edinburgh. Volumes certainly, every six months, with a yearly index for two.

"Nooks and Corners."—We have received numerous interesting sketches from various sources; they will appear from time to time as we can get them ready.

The correspondent who writes from the London and Westminster Bank, is informed that the fault lies with his news-agent, who should be properly instructed.

"W. M. A."—Yes, he is liable.

"Dove brown," Birmingham.—We cannot condescend to obtain subscribers at the expense of popularity.

"Tenant."—We cannot avoid ourselves of the suggestions.

"A Lover of Accuracy."—In the instance in question we were indebted to an officer (present), not an artist. We take every precaution to get at the truth; but in minute points of art it is not always accessible.

"Quiz" shall know all in due time, and will certainly not be disappointed.

"E. B. B."—Yes.

"A Constant Reader."—The first point has been noticed; the next, with reference to Mr. Fenn, shall have attention.

"J. P. James."—We have no opening at present.

* The many subscribers who complain of the non-receipt of the paper, are earnestly recommended by us to give their orders to respectable book or news-agents in their neighbourhood. We strongly suspect that much blame and neglect is attributable to the post-office (into which we will duly inquire), and which would thus be avoided. With regard to cases where money has been received, there can be no excuse for the non-receipt of the papers from the person from whom they were ordered, unless the post-office can be clearly fixed with what we do not hesitate to call "a breach of public trust."*

Mr. Little is our present publisher, and letters on the business of the office (apart from the editorial) should be addressed to him only. Mr. Clayton's connexion with the journal has ceased, and any orders that he may be supplying, are in his capacity of general news-agent, and not as publisher of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

TO FREEMASONS.

* We shall next week commence an irregular series of portraits of royal personages, with a fine likeness of his Royal Highness the Duke of Sussex, beautifully engraved, and copied by permission from a splendid work of art executed in Paris. An article in connexion with freemasonry will also be added to our general notice of his Royal Highness and of the work which his portrait adorns.*

NOTICE TO THE PUBLIC.

To prevent mistakes that are likely to occur to parties forwarding the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, to foreign countries we give the recent Post-office regulations.

FREE. To all parts of the United Kingdom, France, Hamburgh, Bremen, Cuxhaven and Lubeck, Spain and Portugal, Gibraltar, Malta, and all the Ionian Islands, and the East Indies, via Falmouth, South America, Upper and Lower Canada, Jamaica, and all the British West India Islands.

A postage of 2d. is charged upon papers to the following countries, which must be paid when put into the post-office in this country, either by post stamps or money—viz., Belgium, Holland, Sweden and Norway, all Germany, Russia, Switzerland, Italy, Egypt and Turkey via France, the United States of America, Boston, New York, Philadelphia, &c. Cuba and Mexico—all the foreign West India Islands—Guadaloupe, Martinique, Hayti &c.

Papers for St. Helena, the Cape of Good Hope, Ceylon, Australia, New South Wales, Van Diemen's Land, and New Zealand, are charged a postage of 1d. each.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

LONDON, SATURDAY, OCTOBER 8, 1842.

If there be one thing more detestable than another in the pursuit of public life, it is the contemplation of the occasional meanness of party, no matter in what quarter of the political hemisphere. There live public writers who pause at no amount of degradation—who will blush at no effort of impiety—who will condescend even to blasphemy, for the sake of serving the purpose of the moment—to vituperate an opponent—to vex a minister—to tickle an opposition—or, in a word, to perform any other servile, or partial, or unpatriotic act, without reference to considerations of religion, justice, honesty, or truth.

Now we are no sticklers for any administration that can propel the iniquitous engine of an income-tax, or uphold the cruelties of a poor-law bill—but were we the bitterest and most hating opponents of a government, we would not assail it with false weapons, or grapple with it upon impious and unfair grounds; we would not, at least, attack it for its reverence towards Heaven, and seek to bring it into contempt for enjoining the people to pour out their gratitude unto God. It is really painful to us to find the Morning Chronicle devoting itself to this unscrupulous task, and that in a spirit of thoughtlessness and irreligion which has lately characterised but too many of its political tirades. We often go the whole length of the Morning Chronicle in some of its arguments of advocacy for the people, and respect their urgency and eloquence beside, but how sadly do we depreciate the value of all it says or does virtuously, when we find it producing a leading article of invective against the Prime Minister and High Primate of the Church, because they have returned thanks to Heaven for its providential bestowal of a plentiful harvest upon the land. The journal in question really attempts to mingle human legislation with the gift of divine mercy and love. It objects to any prayer being offered up to God in the way of thanksgiving for the abundant fruits of the earth, unless that prayer (which ought to express all the boundless gratitude of the human heart—which ought to be pure, perfect, uncomplaining, and sincere) involved the qualification of cheapness in its gift, as who should blasphemously cry to Heaven, "Give us not the fruits of plenty, unless we can receive them at our own price." What! because human legislation is imperfect, return no unqualified thanks for abundance unto God! because a Corn-Law may be unequal, iniquitous, or oppressive, not thank Heaven for the corn? Shame! Shame! Is not this sadly unnational? Would the worst enemies of the Corn-Law have the corn fail in this country, merely to create a famine in favour of foreign grain, or would they exclude foreign grain, and rather rejoice in the misery which should afflict their fellow-creatures than in the eternal beneficence which is shed in plenty from above? No thanks to God, unless thanks qualified! It is the first time we have known a public journalist in this country hardly enough to propound so base, so degrading, so unholy, so unblushing a doctrine. Why here is a sentence for the pen of party—"the madness of many for the gain of a few"—to record in an age of Christianity:—

The fastidiousness that finds desecration here (meaning the musical festivals which have been complained of, but which we heartily support), surely should not tolerate the dirtiness or the dulness that eliminates the item of cheapness from a public thanksgiving for the harvest. If not for its consequent cheapness, what is there in a plentiful crop of corn, for which the great body of the people should be thankful? If the cheapness do not result, or be not expected and intended to result, why thank Providence at all? Why attempt the shabby compromise of cheapness omitted with thankfulness expressed, and thus send devotion into the Creator's presence, halting between the feelings of the monopolist few and the suffering many, and worshipping with the voice of Jacob and the hands of Esau? These tricky compromises are characteristic of the man who now holds the reins of political authority; but we do not want the spirit of Peel in the prayers of the Church.

Can anything be more blasphemously wicked than the sentence we have quoted in italics? As an argument it is simply imbecile. It is not for cheapness that we thank Heaven, but for the plenty which saves us from the affliction of famine. The cheapness is the result of human legislation—the harvest is the gift of God. We thank God for the abundance of the supply, and we may blame man as bitterly as we will for the partiality of the distribution:—but as well might we reproach some generous benefactor for leaving us wealth that did us no service, or was perverted to another's use, as turn away the voice of praise from the Great Dispenser of human food, because it did not, through man's injustice or improvidence, fall at once into the lap of the craver. Then the paltry alliterative taunt that "Peel is not wanted in the prayers of the Church." Why what Christian ever dreamed of such an association, in reference to the subject of the "golden grain that Heaven has showered upon the earth." But we will not pursue the train of reflections which all such remarks call up; they seem to us to be of sickening depravity, and we have only to mourn that any man in England would rob Heaven of its praise for the sake of stinging even the meanest or most sinning of its humble thanksgivers.

We have to call the attention of our metropolitan readers to two special nuisances which are just now infesting the City of London. The first of these consists in the street repairs (or destruction); and the second, in the watch or police. The difference between the two being principally involved in the fact that the street obstacles are sure to be found where they are not wanted, and that the police are sure not to be found where they are. As regards the breaking up of pavements, making of sewers, and obstruction of public thoroughfares generally, we have only to complain that there is no discretion exercised as to the arrangement of these sometimes necessary inconveniences. The commissioners, or the corporation, or "what not," are determined that it "shall never rain but it pours," and that if it does pour there shall be plenty of ruts, and sewers, and gutters, to receive the water. All the highways and all the byways are broken up at once, and the confusion of vehicles is not only delaying and annoying, but fraught with difficulty and danger. It is not as if there were "something rotten in the state of Denmark," but as if all things had decayed together,—not a street sound! There is as much humbug in this simultaneous repairing of the streets of a populous city, as there would have been in the appetite of a Dando who attempted to swallow all his oysters at once, or the ingenuity of the Irishman who took six different cabs to go in six different directions at the same time. Mend the streets, gentlemen, by all means; but mend them as you do your manners—by degrees. Depend upon it, in either instance, you will have always something to mend.

But the police form a still greater nuisance—they are busy, officious, often (and we are sorry to say it) drunken, continually negligent, and, to speak by wholesale, a sadly ill-conditioned corps. We speak this, be it remembered, of the City police, not of the force generally. We will not, however, make our aspersions (only too straightforward and just) without an example. In a broad court (principally occupied by printing establishments) in the populous district of Fleet-street, an office has been robbed, during the week, by some person secreted in the house (and who subsequently opened and got out of the window) of a large sum of money in bills, bank-shares, half notes, and cash. On being apprised of the circumstance in the morning, the secretary to the commissioner forwarded the following letter to the firm:—

Gentlemen,—I am directed by the Commissioner to forward you the subjoined copy of a report made to him by an inspector of the 3rd division City Police, and to observe that the inattention of servants and others in charge of houses, &c., is found to be a fruitful source of robberies.—I am, Gentlemen, your obedient servant,

THOMAS WOOD, Sec.

A very good letter, doubtless! Servants are negligent, and thieves are numerous, because the police are negligent also. But what will the commissioner or his secretary think of the negligence of the particular court in Fleet-street in which this robbery occurred, when we tell him that three or four previous robberies have been committed in it almost within an equal number of weeks; and that still, although it must have been a marked spot, it was not even so well watched as to achieve for it the detection of a thief obliged to break his way out of a window with the new booty which he had gained.

It is pleasant for a commissioner, under such circumstances, to come down and taunt people with the negligence of their service, and the trouble they give to the police.

But, on the other hand, the City police can be just as over-active in vice as they are under-active in vigilance. Here is an authenticated letter from Thursday's Times:—

Sir,—The police, by their flagrant transgressions of the line of duty, seem to court the execration of the public. A gross instance occurred about eleven o'clock this forenoon, near Finsbury-square. A cab-driver having met with some trifling accident to his harness, stupidly refused to obey the order of policeman 101, to turn out of the thoroughfare, but his refusal was wholly unaccompanied by any act of violence or menace; whereupon this same policeman dragged the man from his box to the ground, and, using his staff in a murderous manner, would, not improbably, have left his victim lifeless, if the bystanders had not interfered. Two other policemen came up, and the cabman, bleeding profusely at his head, was borne off by them on a litter to some adjoining hospital. Such outrages demand strict inquiry; for though cab-drivers are not, perhaps, of the most conciliatory manners, yet they are equally entitled, I presume, to the same protection as other persons.—I remain, Sir, your obedt. servt.,

October 5. VIATOR.

The Times adds to this a sensible comment, which we had not previously seen, but which, now reading, we cannot suffer to escape our readers.

In the case justly animadverted upon by our correspondent, the policeman seems to have mistaken brutality for zeal, and will be, no doubt, severely punished. A zealous activity in the execution of their duties is, however, so very rare a quality among the City police, that the offender in this case might be pardoned without any ill consequences from such leniency. We frequently receive letters from correspondents, who inquire if there is in the City any by-law requiring that the police should go always in pairs; so rare is it to see those gentry except in earnest conversation with each other upon some subject so interesting, that the discharge of their ordinary duty is wholly forgotten.

Every word of this comment is applicable to the lazy, restless, insubordinate condition of the force. We will observe further upon the point of complaint in the letter when it shall have passed the investigation of the police courts, but we are now restrained from pursuing the subject by the intelligence that the person struck by the policeman is not expected to survive, and the consequent necessity for not prejudicing the course of justice by premature remark.

METROPOLITAN NEWS.

PROROGATION OF PARLIAMENT.—Parliament was on Thursday, by royal commission, further prorogued until the 10th of November.

THE OFFICE OF HIGH BAILIFF OF SOUTHWARK.—The approaching contest for the office of high bailiff of Southwark, vacant by the death of Mr. Holmes, will be, it is expected, a very severe one. Mr. Daniel Whittle Harvey, the commissioner of the city police, Alderman Sir William Heygate, Mr. Pritchard, of Doctors'-commons, and Mr. Payne, the City coroner, are the candidates. It is whispered about that the salary will be reduced, but that report has not diminished the number of candidates, nor induced them to abate a jot of their exertions for victory.

INSPECTORSHIP OF ANATOMY.—Dr. Somerville has ceased to hold the appointment of Inspector of Anatomy, and are replaced by Mr. Bacot and Mr. Rutherford Alcock. We understand that considerable alterations are to be made in this department. The mere procuring of bodies and their removal are to be entrusted to subordinate officers, while the inspectors are to see that proper objects are procured, that the business of dissection is conducted with propriety, and that the remains are interred.—Med. Gazette.

THE GREEN PARK IMPROVEMENTS.—The whole of the site of the late Lady W. Gordon's house, with the shrubberies, &c., attached to the late ranger's residence, was on Monday thrown open to the public, the new footpath, which has been formed through the centre of the ground, extending to Lord Coventry's gardens, and other embellishments which have been in progress during the summer, being completed. We hear that the long-projected and desirable improvement of widening Piccadilly from Devonshire House to Hamilton-place has been postponed by the Commissioners of Woods and Forests until next year, as an act of parliament must be first obtained to authorise it. The parish of St. George, Hanover-square, has consented to bear the expense of keeping the road in repair after the contemplated improvements shall have been carried into effect.

The first meeting of the Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge for this season was held on Tuesday in Lincoln's Inn-fields, the Bishop of Gibraltar in the chair. Much business of importance was transacted, and many very interesting letters were read. Among others we may mention those from the Bishop of Madras and from Bishop Alexander. A notice of motion was given, for the November meeting, of grants of £500 each to the Bishops of Gibraltar and Tasmania, and of £200 each to the Bishops of Barbadoes, Antigua, and Guiana.

Another failure was reported on Monday in Mark-lane. Mr. Body is the new sufferer, a gentleman largely engaged in the corn trade, who has been compelled to declare himself, at least for the present, unable to meet engagements at maturity.—Morning Chronicle.

The corn averages for this week do not differ materially from those of last week; the import duty on wheat remains at 18s. per quarter.

Dantan, the celebrated French sculptor, is at present sojourning amongst us. He has executed several busts of Miss Kemble, representing her in the most striking passages of Norma, for an English nobleman distinguished for his exquisite taste and liberal patronage of the arts. The fidelity with which the artist has performed his task, has been rewarded by an order, from the same high quarter, for a statue in marble as large as life, which is said to be intended for one of the public galleries in London.

Extensive frauds have for some time been carried on in the Customs department in connection with the silk and lace trade, by certain Custom-house officials. An investigation is now pending, and some curious disclosures are expected. The details already published are of too lengthy and involved a character for publication.

MONUMENT.—A number of workmen are employed in the erection of the iron railings, which was determined upon by the city authorities, for the purpose of preventing the possibility of the public mind being again harrowed up by the recital of desperate individuals committing suicide by precipitating themselves from the fearful height.

WATER.—The combination among the water companies to raise their charges for serving the public with water has led to a revival of the old project of bringing a supply of pure water from the Thames above Barnes, where it may be procured free from the filth and pollution which enters into the river nearer the metropolis. The project was supported some years since by Sir Robert Peel, who stood forward in the House of Commons a firm advocate for supplying the public with one of the great blessings of life—good and wholesome water. The intention (according to report) is to convey the water by pipes or an aqueduct to Lambeth and Vauxhall.

THE DAVIS STRAITS' WHALE FISHERY.—A wealthy firm in the City, who had the earliest intelligence of the failure of the above undertaking, and the scarcity of the fish, have purchased all the whalebone they can find; the consequence is an immense advance in the price. It is supposed the parties will realise at least £10,000 by their last month's purchase. This advance has caused a sad consternation among the umbrella-makers.

WINES AND WALNUTS.—There is an immense falling off in the consumption of port wine. The fashionable drink is now sherry, the consumption of which is four-fold what it was a few years ago; it is retailed at a higher price than port. This we never could understand, as it does not require to be bottled or to obtain the age; it is also quite as cheap per gallon as port. Walnuts are now very cheap; this is the time to put them in jars for Christmas use.

STAGE COACH AND OMNIBUS DUTY.—The duty on stage coaches was reduced by a recent act from 3d to 1½d. a mile. This alteration came into operation on Monday, when other duties were imposed. In future, for every original licence for any stage carriage, a sum of £3 3s. must be paid, and a supplementary licence, 5s. By the same act the length of seats for passengers is determined, and power given to measure the same, and a penalty of £5 fixed to any person who shall oppose another, whether passenger otherwise, in the act of measuring the seats.

CONVICT LABOUR.—Government, we understand, have resolved to employ convicts forthwith in repairing the fortifications of Gibraltar, and directions have been received from Mr. J. H. Capper, the head clerk for criminal business in the home-office under Sir James Graham, for a considerable number of convicts to embark at Gravesend for Gibraltar. A detachment of the 7th Royal Fusiliers from Dover disembarked at Gravesend, on Friday week, from the Isle of Thanet steamer, as a guard over the convicts to Gibraltar.

COLLISION ON THE RIVER.—On Tuesday morning, as the Pearl, Gravesend steam-boat, Captain Pindar, was proceeding up to London-bridge Wharf, to land her passengers, when off the Custom-house, she was ran into by a brig which was dropping down the river with the tide. The collision was of a serious character, carrying away the framework of the starboard paddle-box, with the cooking apparatus, &c., and causing the greatest alarm to the passengers. When the vessels got clear, the Pearl went into dock to be injury repaired.

ROBBERY OF DIAMONDS TO A LARGE AMOUNT.—Mr. De Wolf a diamond merchant of Berlin, went to Covent Garden Theatre on Wednesday night, accompanied by two friends, and while sitting in the boxes, he observed close to him a person with whom he had been during the early part of the evening in conversation at a coffee-shop in the city. On his leaving the theatre, with his friends, he missed a tin box containing naked diamonds value £9,000, from his person. Information of the robbery was instantly given to the police, and subsequently a reward of £400 was offered for the recovery of the property, and a further sum of £100 for the apprehension of the offender or offenders.

POSTSCRIPT.

Saturday Evening.

THE OVERLAND MAIL.

We announced, in our first edition, the telegraphic dispatch, stating that the Indian Mail had arrived at Marseilles; and also gave a summary of the intelligence so brought: we are now enabled to give details more at length. The following are the principal features of importance:—

Our dispatches in anticipation of the mail from India have arrived, bringing intelligence from Bombay to the 27th, from Calcutta to the 13th of August, and from China to the 6th of June.

The most remarkable fact is the decision taken by the Governor General to send forward the troops from Candahar and Jellalabad to Cabul. There had previously existed throughout India a strong feeling of dissatisfaction, to which some of the journals had afforded a decided vent. The soldiers expressed their eagerness to be led against the enemy, and in particular against the murderer Akbar Khan; but the order for the onward movement had been delayed by Lord Ellenborough. The efforts of the Government had, however, in the interval, been actively directed to supply the troops with every requisite. The force at Candahar, under General Nott, was so well furnished with carriage cattle as to be able in July to move in any direction. The spirit of those troops may be learned from the following anecdote:—When that general was told that he should evacuate Affghanistan, he is said to have inquired "by which route, whether by Quetta backwards, or to Cabul forwards?"

The Candahar army, having on the 30th of July received the welcome notice for a movement, was ordered to form into two divisions: the one under General England to proceed towards Quetta, and the other under General Nott to move to the northward. General Nott's division has taken the battering train, which fact indicates a disposition not to spare the Affghan fortresses, and especially Ghuznee and Cabul. The abandonment of Candahar seems to be decided on, for a general destruction of guns, ammunition, and small arms, which could not be conveniently removed, was stated to have taken place. Among other arrangements, the distribution of warm clothing to the Bengal troops was not neglected.

The position of the force at Jellalabad under General Pollock during the months of June and July had attracted much attention, for the difficulties which surrounded them had been exaggerated. There was abundance in the camp of every necessary, but not of luxuries. The principal want was beasts of burden. The force at Jelalabad was considerable, for besides the "illustrious" garrison, which had withstood the siege of Akhbar Khan, and the troops that stormed the Khyber Pass, a considerable body of Sidkhs, against whose behaviour no complaints were urged, was collected there, and to whose custody it was said that the fortress of Jellalabad and the care of the Khyber Pass were to be intrusted after the retirement of the British.

On the 13th July a new negotiation on behalf of Akbbar Khan was commenced, Captain Troup (who is one of the prisoners) came to Jellalabad: he was accompanied by a Candahar chieftain. The object of his mission was, under pretence of making terms for the restoration of the prisoners, to gain time, and to delay operations until the approach of another winter. But those negotiations tended to no purpose, and several letters brought by Captain Troup from the prisoners, both females and males, have contributed to allay the great anxiety felt on their account. They were then confined in a fortress five miles distant from Cabul. Some of them were allowed to move about the mountains, and to ride in small parties into Cabul. Lady Sale, who occasionally botanised, was always guarded by two Affghans. The officers might perhaps manage to escape, but Akbbar Khan's agent took too good care of the ladies and children, whom he looked upon as his safe hostages. The most accredited report respecting the real position of Akbbar Khan was, that he had appointed himself Vizier under Futteh Jung, the son and nominal successor of Shah Soojah, but that he was not in favour with the inhabitants of Cabul. The Kuzzalbashes, a strong party in that town, were opposed to him; he was therefore compelled to act with some moderation towards the prisoners, for the people of the town and district looked to their being protected by Futteh Jung as the acknowledged representative of his father in the alliance with the British. It was supposed that on the arrival of the British troops from Jellalabad and Candahar at Cabul, the ill-acquired domination of the ambitious son of Dost Mahomed would speedily be terminated. There is no doubt now of his having murdered Sir W. H. Macnaghten, for the fact of his having done so has been admitted by himself.

Most of the Affghans in and around Cabul were stated to entertain great alarm, and were begging written notes and little bits of scribbled paper from the prisoners to serve as tokens for their preservation. It appeared to be expected in some usually well informed quarters that little or no opposition would be made to the advance of the British.

These statements, coupled with the facts that have occurred since the disastrous retreat of last January, serve to prove that the fatalities of November, December, and January were owing more to the want of talent and energy on the part of the British leaders than to the enterprise or patriotism of the Affghans. Captain Troup had declared that no doubt exists, if a single wing of a regiment had marched into Cabul on the 2nd of November the much talked of insurrection would have been completely and effectually put down."

The distance from Candahar to Ghuznee viâ Khelat-y-Ghilzie is about 240 miles. In the year 1839 Sir John Keane's army took from the 27th of June to the 21st of July, both days included, to perform that march. Ghuznee and Jellalabad are nearly equidistant from Cabul, each being somewhat more than 90 miles. It was expected that the armies would meet in Cabul before the middle of September.

The transports sent from England with the reinforcements had arrived. The 78th Highlanders and 86th Regiment having made rapid passages, reached Bombay in the beginning of August.

The 28th Regiment, from New South Wales, had also arrived there. The resolution and activity displayed by the British governor on this occasion had infused new vigour into the whole of the Hon. Company's service.

The examination into the causes of the Cabul disasters was continuing under the superintendence of Mr. Cameron, the Law Commissioner.

The news from China was to the 7th of June. It contains the account of the capture of Chapoo, on the 18th of May, which was effected without loss to the British; but when the troops were marching through the town violent resistance was made from a loss-house, from which some Tartar soldiers had retreated, who, fearing that if they surrendered they would be cut to pieces, unexpectedly fired on some British companies. Col. Tomlinson, of the 18th Royal Irish was killed, and Col. Mountain, Capt. Campbell, and Lieutenant Lodell wounded.

An apprehension prevailed in India that but little would be effected this year against China, in consequence of the delays that had taken place. The want of vigour in the prosecution of this war was much spoken of, particularly as the season for sailing along that coast without danger was allowed to pass over. The expedition was, however, said to be preparing to attack Nankin, the southern capital.

Several shipwrecks had occurred: among them were mentioned that of the Adele from Bombay for Mauritius, of the Copeland from Liverpool to China, of the Martha Ridgeway and Two Sisters in the eastern seas.

The removal of the troops from Jellalabad appeared to be necessary, as sickness prevailed, and several officers had died there since the arrival of General Pollock. Every preparation was making at the period of the latest intelligence for a speedy movement. In a postscript it is stated that the troops were to march from Candahar on the 8th, 9th, or 10th of August; and that rumour asserted that Akbbar Khan, whose great object was delay, had sent another of his prisoners, Captain Lawrence, on to Jellalabad, to try to make some further arrangements.

The fall of rain in Bombay during 10 days previous to the departure of the mail had been very great. It was stated that the overflowing of the Ganges had done considerable injury to the Indigo crops.

Mr. Blackburne, the Irish Attorney-General, has been appointed Master of the Rolls, and it is added, that Mr. Smith, the newly chosen Solicitor, is to be the Attorney-General.

Last night's Gazette contains an Order in Council, appointing Wellington, Auckland, and Russell, in New Zealand, to be free ports.

ARMY IN IRELAND.—The Limerick Chronicle states that Lieut.-Gen. Lord Greenock, is reported as the successor next year of Lieut.-Gen. Sir E. Blakeney, in the command of the troops in Ireland.

The 33rd regiment is to be made a royal regiment, having attached to it Musical Instrument.

PORTSMOUTH, Oct. 1.—An order has been received for the speedy completion of the Cumberland, 74 guns, now building at Chatham dockyard, so as to be ready for launching in the course of a fortnight. Next Monday week is the day mentioned on which the launch will take place.

Dr. Whitfield, the botanist, has lately returned from Africa, with a large collection of rare plants and animals. They have been consigned to Kennedy-park. The doctor's last voyage was undertaken expressly at the request of the Earl of Derby, who has in his menagerie many objects totally unknown in our public collections.

MANCHESTER.—ANTI-CORN-LAW LEAGUE.—A large meeting of the Anti-Corn-law League, took place here on Friday, at the large room in Newall's-buildings. Thanks were voted to Mr. Cobden, M. P., for his past services; to which he replied at some length. Messrs. M'Larea (of Edinburgh), Bright, and Bayley, afterwards addressed the meeting amidst general applause; the assemblage then separated.

DEATH OF THE DUCHESS OF ATHOLL.—Her Grace the Duchess of Atholl died at Dunkeld House, on Monday, in the 81st year of her age.

FUNERAL OF THE MARQUIS WELLESLEY.—The removal of the remains of this accomplished statesman took place on Friday morning, at six o'clock, for Eton. The procession, in accordance with the marquis's latest wishes, was private all offers of attendance having been declined. The remains are to lie in state on Saturday, in the Council Chamber of Eton College, preparatory to interment.

A fine new ship of 1000 tons burthen, and named after Lady Sale, was launched at Hull on Wednesday morning.

The schooner Regina, from Exeter, and the steamer Rose, of Bristol, came in contact off Naas Point, on Tuesday night, when the schooner was so much damaged that she sunk in a short time; the crew, however, were saved.

PLOUGHING MATCH.—The annual meeting and ploughing match of the South-West Middlesex Agricultural Society took place, on Friday, at Hounslow. Buckingham competed with Middlesex in the match, but the latter proved victorious. The parties afterwards dined at Albemarle House, H. Pownall, Esq., in the chair; when the evening passed off very pleasantly.

PASSENGER'S SUICIDE.—Waterloo-bridge was on Friday night a scene of great excitement, a coat and hat having been found in one of the recesses, the party to whom the things belonged having, as it was supposed, committed suicide. The coat and hat were taken to the Bow-street station-house, by Tilt, the toll-keeper. In the coat-pocket was a note: the contents were as follows:—"Distress has driven me to this dreadful act: dear friends forgive me; you will find my body at the bottom.—Thomas Johnson, 14, Richmond-street, Marylebone." The coat was one of the description called a pilot, and the hat a shabby one.

DREADFUL MURDER.—A most inhuman murder has been committed at Stanley, about four miles from Derby. Two elderly maiden sisters, named Goddard, lived in a house some hundred yards from any other dwelling. During the night of the 30th ult. the house was broken into, and one of the sisters dreadfully beaten and left for dead: the other was, with a crow bar or jemmy, brutally murdered. The depredators took what cash they could find, and escaped. Miss Sarah Goddard (the youngest sister), on partially recovering, gave information to the nearest neighbours, and a vigilant search was commenced to trace the parties. 100*l.* was offered by the neighbours, and 100*l.* by Government, for the detection and conviction of the offenders. Two men have been arrested as implicated in the robbery and murder, Bonsall and Bland, and a man (who has since absconded) named Starbuck, alias Holmes. The latter person is a travelling chimney sweep, and has frequently been employed in that capacity at Miss Goddard's. This man, together with another named Dowse, with an alias (a tinker by trade), lodged in a notorious rookery at Heage, and it appears cohabited with, or are married to, women of the same class as themselves; and it was through these women in the first instance, that information of the real murderers was conveyed. The evidence produced is such as to leave no doubt the parties are the offenders; and there is every reason to believe Holmes will be apprehended in a short time.

POLICE.—BOW STREET.—A brutal, though respectably attired, young man, named Adolphus Myers, was charged with an unmanly assault on a respectable female, named Sarah Rudd. As the prosecutrix is not out of danger, he was remanded.

SATURDAY.—James Myers, a well-known Tottnes waterman, was charged with having attempted to cut his throat.—Mr. Twyford asked him what had induced him to make an attempt upon his life?—Myers (as if choking with emotion): Distress, sir, distress! I have lost all my things. My furniture has been taken from me. My wife has been carried to the workhouse, and there a corpse (The poor man could say no more).—Orders were then given that the prisoner should be taken to the Brentford workhouse, with directions that he should be received and taken care of. It was stated that this well known waterman had, since he has pitched his tent in Tottnes, been the means of forty persons from drowning. (We sincerely hope that the man, to whose exertions so many of his fellow-creatures have been indebted for preservat on from death, will not be neglected and deserted by a benevolent public now that the extremity of distress has occasioned a temporary aberration of reason.)

Richard Wells, an old soldier, somewhat deranged in his head, was placed at the bar for being drunk and disorderly. When his real state was explained to the magistrate, he told the prisoner he was discharged. "Thank you, Sir, you are a gentleman. But may I say one word before I go?" "Why, Twyford?" "Oh yes, certainly." Prisoner—"Then I'll tell your honour what it is: I don't think the police treated me well. They put me in a cell underground. Now I've been in the army six-and-thirty years. I've been in the Black Hole at Calcutta, but I'll be d—d if I was ever in such a hole as that cell before" (Much laughter.) The old soldier was then removed from the bar, declaring that the magistrate was a gentleman, for he got a decent bed.—In the door closed upon his garrulity as he was by main force [illegible]ty.

QUEEN-SQUARE.—A man, named Alfred Hall, was brought [illegible] charge of having upwards of seventy sheets of printed [illegible] in value from 2*s.* to 5*s.* He was ordered to be [illegible] a week, for the attendance of other tradesmen.

WORSHIP STREET.—Fifteen robust men, inmates of the Bethnal-green workhouse, were charged with refractory conduct, and refusing to do the work assigned. They were committed to the treadmill for twenty one days.

KENSINGTON.—Eliza and Caroline Foster were charged on suspicion of having stolen a valuable ring. The prisoners were remanded for further inquiry to be made.

THAMES OFFICE.—Edmund Still, a seaman, summoned Captain Robinson, the master of the ship Orbit, from Quebec, to show cause why he refused payment of his wages. It appeared that it was frequently the custom of seamen to go to Quebec, for the special purpose when there of deserting, and exacting very high wages. This the prisoner had done, and a clause inserted in his articles was quoted to show that he had broken them. Such a proceeding, however, was shown to be at variance with the existing act, under which the magistrates decided that the wages must be paid.

FOREIGN.

FRANCE.—PARIS.—The Toulonnais publishes intelligence from Algiers to the 25th ult., inclusive, by which it appears that General Changarnier, had marched to the western frontiers of Oran, and invaded the territory of some tribes which had not yet been visited by French troops, where he met a vigorous resistance from their warlike population. The Arabs fought during two days with a courage amounting to heroism, and are supposed (no doubt correctly) to have sustained considerable loss. In these conflicts the French confess to have had 150 men killed and wounded, including six officers killed, and amongst other Lieutenant Sebastiani, nephew of Marshal Count Sebastiani.

In his march to Tekedempt, from Mostaganem, the French General D'Arbouille likewise met with unexpected and determined resistance, and was obliged to fall back with the loss of 9 killed and 62 wounded.

The province of Tlemceen was perfectly tranquil. In that of Constantia there has been some fighting. General Sylegue having left the former place to levy contributions among the neighbouring tribes, came up with a large body of Kabyles, whom he attacked and dispersed, with the loss of 100 of their number killed, and many wounded, having had himself 55 men put hors de combat. At Bugia, the Arabs made a desperate attack upon the French advanced posts, but after a fruitless attempt they retreated, leaving 100 men dead on the field. The division which was to march to the East, had been ordered to rendezvous in advance of the Maison Carrée on the 20th ult. It was to consist of nine battalions of infantry, 400 cavalry, two sections of mountain artillery, and two of rampart guns, and a detachment of Engineers. The column was to take provisions for 20 days, and to bring with it 500 oxen.

These accounts, which represent the Arabs as unflinching as ever in their hostility to the French, have produced a very unpleasant impression on the public mind.

The Paris Government has received a telegraphic despatch from Bayonne, announcing that the Spanish Cortes are convoked for the 14th of November.

SPAIN.—The Madrid journals of the 28th ult. have reached us.—A report was current at Madrid, on the 28th, that Government had received important news from Valencia, which city had been threatened for some time with serious disturbances. It was even asserted that an insurrection had taken place, and that the insurgents had insisted that the Queen's majority should be fixed at eighteen years of age.

A Berlin paper publishes the details of the great fire at Kasan, by which 1300 houses, nine churches, and one convent, were reduced to ashes.

THE BANK PARLOUR.

Yes, reader, that is the entrance to the Bank Parlour, and there are even trees in the way, although you would hardly expect to find "anything green" in the City. The verdure is perceptible, however, and, but for crimson-gowned beadles, "with gold lace bedizened," who are not far away, you would refer to those isolated trees by the great temple of the Dives, and, bethinking you of the heaps of sovereigns within, imagine that Mammon had made up his mind to have a livery of "green and gold" that should outshine all the other liveries east of "the Bar." That Bank Parlour is a sacred and mysterious place; it is, as a reporter might say, just the place to take notes in, and, although parlour is its nomenclature, how often has it served the purpose of a drawing-room to boot. Therein great financiers are privileged to visit great directors, and play their "money-pranks" before high Heaven after the most approved merriment of the speculator's or the usurer's heart. What did the great Rothschild do in the days of his living glory? In that Bank Parlour, when gold was scarce, he borrowed one million of specie, with the promise that in specie it should be returned. When the period of the loan had expired, the Jew Napoleon marched again to that Bank Parlour with one million of money in Bank of England notes. "Gentlemen, I have come to return your loan." "But, Mr. Rothschild, you were to return the money in gold!" "Very well, gentlemen; if you wish to put me to that trouble I will do so. I shall take your notes to your counter and get gold for them, and then I shall bring the gold into your parlour, and so keep my word." The Bank directors were done. From the Parlour let us go and get a glimpse of the business of

DIVIDEND DAY AT THE BANK,

Which a writer in a former "Comic Almanac" has thus descanted on:—

What a crowd! what a crush!
What a row! what a rush!
What screaming, and tearing, and noise,
Of cabmen and footmen, policemen and bus-men,
And poor little run-over boys!
From Lombard-street, Prince's-street, Broad-street, King-William-street,
On they come driving full spank:
Old and young, great and small,
Fair and brown, short and tall;
For it's Dividend Day at the Bank.

The merchant on 'Change
Think it looks rayther strange
That his wife should come out all that way—
From Kennington-common—
Such a very fat woman!
And such an "uncommon hot day!"
To meet her "dear duck,"
Her "love" and her "chuck."

The Minister now,
With pre-occupied brow,
On some "secret service" is gone;
While loyal committee,
From borough or city,
Is left in its glory alone.
"Yet he promised to be Here exactly at three—
Only think! and a man of his rank;
And possessing such zeal
For the national weal!"
But it's Dividend Day at the Bank.

Oh! the poet may sing
Of the beauties of Spring,
In a hymn to the sweet first of May;
The hero attune
To the eighteenth of June
His glorious, uproarious lay;
To St. Valentine's morn
Let lovers forlorn
Write verses in rhyme or in blank;
I'll carol my lays
To the glory and praise
Of Dividend Day at the Bank.

POPULAR PORTRAITS.—No. XVI.

FEARGUS O'CONNOR.

We believe this dangerous person to be—while we deprecate the wild and fierce agitation to which he has lent himself—the least selfish and the most sincere of the leaders in the Chartist cause. His ambition, however, has overreached the legitimate compass of what he is, or ever will be, able to achieve; and only the event of the recent riots, his connexion with the defence of the prisoners, and the circumstance of his having been the other day arrested upon a charge of sedition, combine to create a momentary interest in his destiny, which the placid world in its serenity would not otherwise feel. He is perhaps dangerous, as we have said, but it is more to his party than to the community at large, because he is in point of ability their best leader, in point of purse their strongest, and in point of station their most respectable; and take him away from them, with one or two more who think they approximate to him in these points, and then the game is up with his deluded followers. Without leaders they would be followers no longer, and would, therefore, thus avoid the perils which their conduct, in the present constitution of English society, can entail only upon themselves. We have hinted, however, that there is just now as much interest taken in the fate and proceedings of Mr. Feargus O'Connor as will warrant us in producing him before our readers as a sort of political lion of the moment; and, though we do so to keep pace with the occurrences of the day, we do so with something of the sorrowfulness which a gentleman must naturally feel at finding one of his class not only placed in a painful but a false position.

We believe Mr. O'Connor to have been trained to the bearing of a gentleman in early life. We will not condescend to trumpet the history of the somewhat reckless existence which his father was supposed to have led before him: it is enough to record that there were means with the sire to give education to the son, and Mr. O'Connor had, there can be no doubt, both education and inheritance.

In England the early part of his political and personal career was such as to win for him high opinions from a widely-extended class of Liberals, which have only gradually died away because he himself has made nothing short of revolution the boundary of Liberalism. His first approach to notice by the English people was on his return to the English Parliament, where he sat with more independence and less under the wing of O'Connell than (with one or two exceptions) any of the members of the tail. What won him some personal esteem was a disposition to sympathize on all hands with those whom he was chivalrous enough to believe oppressed. He was the great friend, for instance, of Patrick Grant (brother-in-law of Lord Glenelg) and John Bell, when they were convicted in a Government prosecution, as proprietors of the True Sun newspaper, and sentenced to an imprisonment in the King's Bench. Here Feargus O'Connor used continually to visit and advise with them, displaying kindly feelings and generous and disinterested interest in their behalf. It was about this time that rumours were afloat that he was either married or about to be married to Mrs. Nesbitt, and it is certain that they were constantly together, and that afterwards, in answer to some electioneering question put to him in Ireland, he made a little eulogium of that accomplished actress from the hustings, which quite confirmed the conclusion to which the public had arrived. Subsequently, however, Mrs. Nesbitt herself has denied the marriage in print.

After Feargus O'Connor was returned for Cork, he became unseated upon the ground of want of qualification, he not being able to prove his property equal to a title to represent a county. Having thus, as it were, split with Parliament, he broke away from the tail, disjointed himself in the teeth of O'Connell, and threw himself into the arms of extreme English Radicalism. He committed, in his fresh enthusiasm, a few faux pas that bordered strongly enough upon sedition, but were nevertheless quite in the style which the Whigs had been accustomed to encourage, and for these he was duly taken to task, and incarcerated in York Castle by the Government of the day. Here he suffered much cruel indignity, which he might, for aught we know, have deserved, but which was made singular in his case, and was reprehensible because it was unnecessary.

At last, being let out of gaol, Mr. O'Connor set up a sort of steam-engine of Chartism, which, at a tremendous pace, he has been guiding ever since. He has given his time, his little money, his constitution, and his personal talent to the cause, but he has so out-Herodod Herod that he has only made mischief, and led himself and a great many other agitators into scrapes. He has always had a great idea of the value of the press in political objects, and has endeavoured to work through newspapers upon the public mind. He had the Northern, and Evening Star, and has aided the work of mischief in both organs.

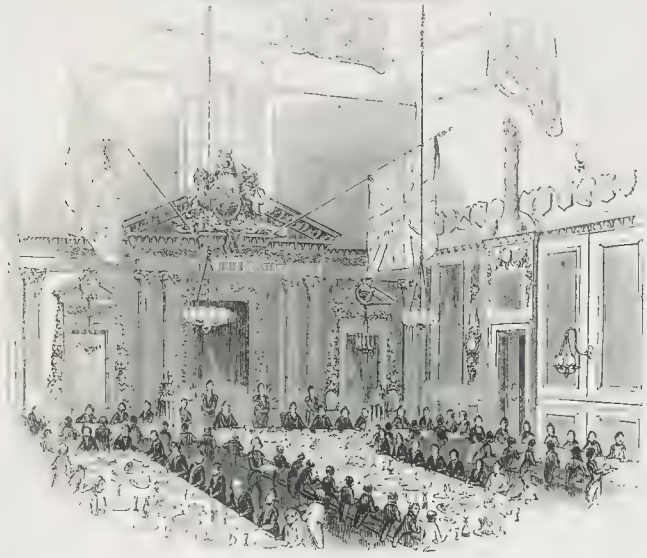
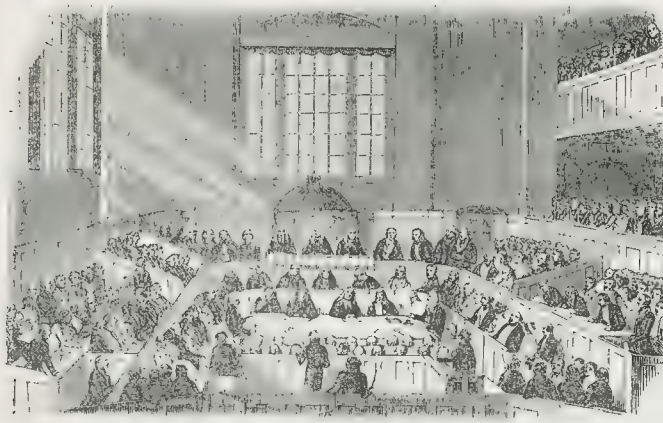
We believe this most unfortunate and self-deluded gentleman to have a point in his favour which we are glad to record. It is that he is not cowardly—which most of the agitators are. He has always sought to resent insult in a manly spirit; and we regretted to hear Mr. Roebuck in the House cast an aspersion upon one who was formerly a brother M.P., which, out of it, he would have been perfectly unable to sustain.

The great wickedness of the man is this—that, with the means to live reputably, he resorts to a course of political life which, in spite of the whispers of ambition, is disreputable entirely—that he heads multitudes to delude them with doctrines which he is quite educated enough to know to be false—that he riots in a desire of power among those classes who, if they achieved it, would hold it without responsibility, and wield it without discretion: in a word, that he mistakes turbulence for patriotism, and notoriety for fame—imagining that to be a victim is to be virtuous, and that to incur prosecution is to prove the justice of his cause. He is teaching himself and his followers a hopeless and miserable lesson.



THE INAUGURATION DINNER OF THE SHERIFFS OF LONDON AND MIDDLESEX AT VINTNERS' HALL.

The new sheriffs (Alderman Hooper and Mr. Jeremiah Pilcher) gave their inauguration dinner on Friday week at Vintners'-hall. The entertainment was not only splendid, but abounded with those comforts which are often looked for in vain at large banquets. Nearly 200 gentlemen sat down to dinner in the great room, in which the banner and the armorial bearings of the Vintners' and Haberdashers' Companies, to which the sheriffs respectively belong, were displayed. Amongst the company were the Lord Mayor elect, M.P., the Cursitor Baron, M.P., the Recorder, M.P., Mr. Masterman, M.P., Mr. Lyall, M.P.; Aldermen Lucas, Farebrother, Sir Peter Laurie, Magnay, John Johnson, Sir C. Marshall, Thomas Wood, Sir George Carroll, Sir John Key, Bart., Gibbs, and Farncomb; several mercantile men of eminence, the courts of the companies to which the sheriffs belong, all the principal City officers, Mr. R. L. Jones and the other chairmen of the corporation committees, Mr. D. W. Harvey, the commissioner of the City police, &c. &c. The sheriffs officiated alternately as chairman, very much to the satisfaction of the company. We have not room for the speeches.



STAFFORD COURT-HOUSE—THE SPECIAL COMMISSION.

THE SPECIAL COMMISSION.

Stafford, Monday Evening.—The court was opened at ten o'clock this morning, when the bench and grand jury box were immediately crowded with a numerous and most respectable assemblage of the nobility and magistracy of the county. Amongst them were the Earl of Dartmouth, Lord Talbot, Viscount Sandon, and Viscount Ingestre. Chief Justice Tindal occupied the central seat, having on his right Mr. Baron Parke, and on his left Mr. Baron Rolfe.

The usual proclamations having been made, a jury of noblemen and gentlemen was sworn.

Captain Powys, a gentleman who distinguished himself as an active magistrate during the Pottery riots, upon being called, intimated to the learned judges that, as he was subpœnaed as a witness, he supposed he might claim exemption from the duties of a grand juror.—Chief Justice Tindal: In how many cases are you a witness, Sir?—Captain Powys: In only one, my lord.—Chief Justice Tindal: In that case, then, you need not take part in the grand jury; but that circumstance will not incapacitate you from acting in the others.—Captain Powys was then sworn. On the several mayors of the boroughs within the county being called, Mr. Horton, the mayor of Walsall, and Mr. Robinson, the mayor of Tamworth, were fined for non-attendance. Her Majesty's most gracious proclamation having been read, Lord Chief Justice Tindal delivered to the grand jury a charge, explanatory of the English law in the cases about to be brought under their notice, which involved indictments varying from common assault to high treason. On the last-named case the learned judge descanted at some length, defining the precise nature of high treason. In conclusion, the Chief Justice said "Gentlemen, I cannot close the observations which I have thought it right to submit to you without expressing the earnest hope of my brethren and myself, that the administration of criminal justice under the commission which have been specially issued into this county, and into other where similar enormities have taken place, may have the wholesome effect of teaching all who need such warning first, that in this country the punishment of crime will follow the commission of it with a pace so sure, so steady, and so speedy, that the guilty can have no chance of escaping; and secondly, the more important lesson, that whatever attempts may be made by discontented persons to subvert the government, the laws, or the religion of their country, and to establish a new order of things in their stead, they will find the law of the land too strong for them, and that the honest part of the community, the lovers of peace and order, will at all times unite themselves with the established authorities of the government to render their attempts futile and abortive, and to put down such evil-doers with a strong hand; and I would, in conclusion, further suggest that the effectual, and only effectual, method of counteracting the attempts of wicked and designing men to undermine the principles of the lower classes, and to render them discontented with the established institutions of the country, is the diffusion of sound religious knowledge (in which there can be no excess) amongst those classes who are the most exposed to their attempts, and the educating their children in the fear of God, so that all may be taught that obedience to the law of the land and to the government of the country is due, not as a matter of compulsion, but of principle and conscience. Gentlemen, her Majesty's judges will be happy to render you any assistance in the performance of your duty, if any difficulty should arise." The crown counsel retained for the Crown are Sir W. Follett (Solicitor-General), Mr. Serjeant Ludlow, Mr. Serjeant Talfourd, Mr. Godson, Mr. Waddington, and Mr. Talbot. Mr. F. O'Connor, who is said to be the treasurer of the defence fund, to the great concern and disappointment of many, has not yet made his appearance; but it is understood that Mr. Roberts, the Chartist solicitor of Bath, sentenced at Salisbury to two years' imprisonment, is in the town.

The Lord Chief Justice Tindal, Mr. Baron Parke, and Mr. Baron Rolfe, took their seats in the Nisi Prius Court a little before two o'clock, when the grand jury returned several bills. The first case proceeded with was that of the rioters committed for the attack upon the house of Dr. Vale. In all 30 persons were put to the bar, and indicted for destroying the house of Dr. Vale. The Solicitor-General opened the case. The trials were proceeded with, and occupied the attention of the court on Monday, and on Tuesday the case was further proceeded with. In this case the first witness was Mrs. Mary Ann Vale, who deposed that she was wife of the Rev. Benjamin Vale, whose house was burned. She remembered the 15th of August, on that day a man approached the house. As soon as she perceived them she proceeded to close the shutters, but the mob reached the house before she could do so. They demanded some money and drink, which at first she refused. She then gave them her purse, containing about six shillings, and desired the servant to supply them with some drink. They then entered the study, and commenced destroying and burning the books and furniture. A party went up stairs, and forced her from them. Others followed the servant to the cellar with a sheet, which they set on fire in the cellar, and then commenced drinking whisky. Witness fled as soon as she saw the whole house in flames. She took refuge in an adjoining cottage, where Jervase Philips came up, who said, "That they were going to London, to burn and to bring all things to a proper level." The witness here reiterated the other particulars of the burning on the 15th and 16th of August, which have already appeared.—After the examination of a great number of witnesses, the PARSONAGE HOUSE, HANLEY.

Crown closed the prosecution at a quarter to seven, at which hour the court adjourned to half-past eight o'clock on Wednesday morning, and the jury were conducted to the Sun Inn, where they were again locked up for the night. The judges entered the court on Wednesday morning at half-past eight o'clock, when the defence of the prisoners was commenced. Mr. Price called their lordships' attention to the indictment, in which he could find nothing that proved that not more than two persons out of the number charged were concerned in the riots. But it was necessary that it should be proved that three persons were so engaged together to bring them within the indictment.—Chief Justice: On the face of the indictment it is stated that twenty-nine persons were together with others. What do you wish us to do? To quash the indictment, which is now a matter of record? Your objection is, that the indictment does not contain distinct allegations, but it puts them together, and states that they assembled with divers others.—Mr. Price: The connexion in the indictment does not say that they assembled together.—Mr. Baron Parke: It says that they assembled together riotously and tumultuously. Mr. Price: But that is mentioned afterwards, and not in connection with the names. Therefore singuli cum singulis should be taken.—Chief Justice: That is an objection on merits, and not to acts, to be decided after the verdict of the jury.—Mr. Price made another objection.—Chief Justice: In my opinion the two objections are untenable.

The Solicitor-General said that he had to make an application respecting William Hollins and Thomas Jackson, against whom nothing had been proved. He, therefore, prayed, on the part of the Crown, that they might be discharged. The Chief Justice immediately directed the jury to return a verdict of not guilty against Hollins and Jackson. They were accordingly discharged from the dock.

The trials of the other prisoners then proceeded, and occupied the whole of Wednesday, and Thursday till the evening, when Chief Justice Tindal concluded his charge, and the jury returned a verdict of guilty against all the prisoners.—Sentence was deferred.

Secrecy.—In the debate in the United States Senate on the new British treaty great care was taken to have the doors closed, and to keep everything secret. The weather being very hot, the windows were up, and Mr. Allen, from Ohio, who has a very shrill voice, talked so loud that any one could hear in the public walks outside the Capitol, and, as he went over the whole ground, the details of the treaty were common talk in Washington before it passed the Senate. So much for secret session.

Ancient Coin.—Lately Mr. John Duguid, residing at 1, Pilrig-place, Edinburgh, while at his usual employ in the nursery grounds of Messrs. Dickson and Co., observed an old coin, about the size of our present sixpence, and he had the curiosity to examine it—on the oneside there is the Scotch thistle surrounded with the motto "Nemo me impune lacessit," and date 1077; on the other side is the Scottish Regalia, to be seen distinctly, although apparently 765 years old.

"Save a Thief from the Gallows," &c.—A very singular investigation took place a few days since before the Tribunal of Termehäd (Sweden), arising out of the following circumstance:—A robber having been condemned to death, was hanged, according to his sentence, in the public highway. A miller returning home, perceiving that life was not extinct, and influenced by a very natural feeling of pity, cut him down and conveyed him to his mill. The robber, on his recovery, could not resist his inclination to resume his old habits, and, with unparalleled ingratitude, exercised his dexterity on the man who had saved his life. The miller indignant at such monstrous conduct, restored the thief to his gibbet, from which, this time, no commiserating passenger relieved him. The Court condemned the miller to some months' imprisonment and a heavy fine, to act as a warning for the future not to interrupt the course of law or take the office of executioner in his own hands.

PROVINCIAL.

PRESTON.—The annual agricultural dinner came off last week with much éclat.

Report says that the late Archdeacon Strong died worth upwards of £200,000, the whole of which goes to his only son, the Rev. W. Strong, after an ample annuity settled on the widow of the deceased, who is far advanced in years.—Stamford Mercury.

A TOURNAMENT.—There was a chivalric display of the ancient military exercise of tilting last week at Airthrey Park, Lord Abercromby's beautiful seat between Stirling and Allan Bridge. The Hon. Miss Abercromby, daughter of his lordship, acted as Lady Paramount, or Queen of Beauty, and awarded the prizes to the most skilful competitors. The premier prize was obtained by Mr. Campbell, of the 42nd Regiment, and Mr. Titwell gained the second prize. The weather was most favourable; and a military band amused the brilliant company invited by playing during the intervals between the tilting.

STATE OF TRADE.—Trade is certainly rather improving, and there is a greater demand. Prices have not advanced; both wool and cotton retain the same value. The manufacturers are now at work again, and we may look forward to a steady trade. Cotton is now so greatly substituted for wool, that the growers would do well to be satisfied with present prices, both for their own interests and those of the manufacturers, as the best means of again restoring trade.—Leicester Journal.

THE LATE FIRE AT LIVERPOOL.—On Friday, after the ordinary business of the court had terminated, Patrick Doran was again placed at the bar, on a charge of arson. His case excited much interest, and the court was, throughout the day, crowded. Several witnesses having been examined, Mr. Rushton then rose to sum up. In concluding a long, minute, and clear recapitulation of the evidence for and against the prisoner, the magistrate said he was of opinion that there was quite sufficient evidence upon which to commit the prisoner; but, on account of the testimony about his having been at the theatre, he would admit him to bail, himself in £200, and two sureties in £100 each. After the respective depositions of each witness had been read over, and the parties bound over to prosecute, the court adjourned.—Liverpool paper of Saturday.

MID-LOTHIAN COLLIERS.—Considerable uneasiness was manifested in Dalkeith last week, by the contin ued arrival of large bodies of colliers, not only from the colleries in the neighbourhood, but from the more distant ones in East Lothian, who kept pouring into this usually quiet town, until their united numbers were probably not much under 400. They went to the Freemasons'-hall, and there held a meeting with locked doors. The meeting having been anticipated, a company of the 53rd arrived from Edinburgh in the course of the afternoon; and a consultation was held between the Duke of Buccleuch, Sir John Hope, and sundry other gentlemen, as to the steps proper to be taken under the circumstances; and immediately thereafter a party of about 20 special constables was brought together. The military were drawn up in line in the little square or place directly in front of the hall, where the colliers were assembled; and his grace, accompanied by Mr. Moncrieff, his chamberlain, and the special constables, went to the door, demanding admittance. This was at first refused; but by and by, on the door being opened, the Duke entered the room, followed by many of the constables, and called on several rioters immediately to come forth and surrender themselves. None of the parties being disposed to comply, the Duke and his party retired to the door, and waited patiently until the meeting broke up; and, as the whole body filed past, three culprits were successively identified, seized, manacled, and in the instant walked off to gaol, without the slightest attempt at resistance. There can be little doubt the meeting was intended as a demonstration to overawe and defy the authorities, and that they were bent on outrage and riot. Their arrangements, however, were completely anticipated, and their intentions, whatever they might be, frustrated. This is now the seventh week of the strike; and even supposing the masters should so far yield as to enter into some arrangement with them, the loss in wages already sustained cannot be estimated at less than £6 per week, or £10 10s. per family, which will require an augmentation of 4s. per week for a whole year to afford them a compensation for what they have already lost. In the present state of trade there is no chance of the masters making any such concession.—Caledonian Mercury.

RAILWAYS.—DOVER AND FOLKESTONE.—The near prospect of having the railway terminus at Dover is highly gratifying to those who have property near the spot proposed. Some of the men employed by the company have been engaged sinking large pits at the very low water in order to ascertain the distance to the solid rock, whereon to lay the foundation of a sea-wall from the Shakspeare Point to the rock in front of Archcliff Fort. The sea-tunnel at Shakspeare Cliff, it is currently reported, will be thrown open in three weeks or less, and the brickwork will not be far behind that time in its completion. —Dover Chronicle. PLYMOUTH.—The public meeting, held 30th Sept., at the Guildhall, came to a resolution to adopt Mr. Rendel's line of railway, by Ashburton, Totnes, Newton, and Exeter, with the proviso that sufficient encouragement be offered by the landowners and inhabitants of the district.—Plymouth Times.

THE LATE CONSPIRACY AT BRISTOL.—Since the committal of Ann Bryers and Mary Ann Morgan for re-examination for conspiracy, in effecting a marriage between the latter and Mr. Woolley, the Bristol timber merchant, the prisoners have been kept separate in the county gaol; one of them (Bryers) being confined in the infirmary, and her companion in one of the prison wards. As the circumstances relating to their detention are pretty well known in the gaol, they have become objects of curiosity to their fellow prisoners. Ever since their incarceration they have both been living on the gaol allowance, being without the means of procuring any additional comforts. On Monday morning Bryers was visited by a female, the wife of a respectable tradesman in Fore-street, Cripplegate, who has been long acquainted with both parties. The interview, which was in the presence of Mr. Keane, the governor of the county gaol, the visiter asked Bryers what could have been her motive for practising such an imposition upon a person so nearly allied to her as Mr. Woolley, and with whom she had been living in the capacity of housekeeper ever since the decease of his wife, her sister? Bryers, in reply, said that she could not account for it, but said that it came into her head in consequence of Mr. Woolley first mentioning to her the name of Miss Louisa Poole King. That some weeks ago Mr. Woolley told her that he met Miss King in the street in Bristol, that he bowed to her in passing, and that she returned the salute with apparent pleasure; and he went on to say that he was very much captivated with her; that he should use every means in his power to awaken a sympathetic feeling in her breast; and that he expected that he should ultimately succeed in forming a matrimonial alliance with so accomplished and wealthy a young lady. It was subsequently to the above conversation the notion of practising a joke upon her brother-in-law came into her head, and to effect her purpose she wrote a letter to him in the name of Louisa Poole King, in order to create a belief in his mind that that young lady was enamoured with him, and that she was ready and willing to bestow upon the object of her affections her hand and her heart. After she had written the first letter to her brother-in-law, she found that it answered the desired purpose, and that he was absolutely enraptured at its receipt, and from that moment the correspondence took place between them which ultimately led to the matrimonial affair between Mr. Woolley and Mary Ann Morgan. That she (Bryers) was not acquainted with Morgan for some time after the correspondence had been going forward, and that meeting with her in the Corn-market at Bristol, and perceiving that she would answer admirably to personate Miss Louisa Poole King in the affair, she (Bryers) got acquainted with her, and as she said that she had no objection to a husband, the marriage was brought about between the young girl and Mr. Woolley, as already described. Bryers, in conclusion, assured the female who visited her in the gaol, that at first she intended to have a bit of fun with her brother-in-law, but, finding that she had gone too far with the joke, she was afraid to divulge the real secret to him, and therefore carried it on until she effected the marriage between the parties.

ROYAL YACHT SQUADRON. — YARMOUTH, ISLE OF WIGHT, Oct. 2.—Fine weather, wind N.E. The great yacht match for 1000 guineas (that is, 500 each), between the rival cutter yachts, the Corsair, of 54 tons, and the Talisman, 87 tons, from Yarmouth, Isle of Wight, to round the Eddystone and back, started at 3 30 p.m., wind E.N.E., blowing a gale, under trysail, squaresail, and third jib. The Talisman rounded the Eddystone at 3 a.m. on Friday, and the Corsair about 8 min. after, by rocket signals, and arrived at the starting vessel, Yarmouth Roads, at 7 a.m. on Saturday; the Corsair beating the Talisman 4 min., in 39½ hours' sail, after running to the Eddystone, and beating back against a heavy sea with a gale nearly all the way, and is supposed to have sailed more than 400 miles in the time; the nearest and most interesting match ever known. The Talisman kept the lead, after rounding the Eddystone, for within five miles of the Needles, when the Corsair came up and won by 4 min. Two finer vessels of their class were never built. The Corsair was built by Mr. Michael Ratsey, and the Talisman by Mr. Jos. White, of Cowes. The Talisman was sailed by Mr. John Long, the owner, a Trinity pilot, assisted by other pilot friends; and the Corsair was sailed by Mr. Dodds, the master, a Trinity pilot, assisted by other pilot friends.—Oct. 1. The match between Viscount Seaham's yacht, the Fanny, and Harry Barrard, Esq.'s yacht, the Eliza, came off to-day, light wind N.E. After about eight hours' sail, and two slight mistakes made by the Eliza, the Fanny arrived at the station vessel at 7 p.m., beating the Eliza about 10 min. With cheering and good cheer the evening was spent merrily.—Oct. 2, noon. Sailed H.M.S. Salamander, for Rio. Passed, for Southampton, the Tagus steamer, from Lisbon.

Her Majesty the Queen Dowager has transmitted the sum of £20 for completing the new church at Llanyelynn, Merionethshire

NEW BANKRUPT COMMISSIONERS.—The bankrupt commissioners, including the several new appointments which, it is understood, have been made, will assemble in a few days to agree to certain rules for carrying the provisions of the new act into effect. The act comes into operation on the 11th of November next. It is stated that only ten new appointments will be made, and not twelve, which are sanctioned by the 59th section, and that the new commissioners will have jurisdiction in country districts. The names of the new commissioners mentioned in legal circles are Mr. Sergeant Stephens, Mr. Kenyon Parker, Mr. Wray, Mr. Shepherd, and Mr. Charles Phillips. Other names have been mentioned to complete the number, among them H.R. Reynolds, Esq., of the Chancery bar. By the 70th section the commissioners are authorised to make rules, and by the 76th clause the amount of salary is fixed. The present judge of the Court of Review (Sir John Cross), £2500 a year; the London commissioners, £2000; and the country commissioners, £1800 a year each.

STRATHBOGIE PRESBYTERY.—On Wednesday week his Grace the Duke of Richmond entertained Principal Macfarlan, the majority of the Presbytery of Strathbogie, Mr. Graham, of Aberfoyle, and others, at dinner at Gordon Castle, in a style of true Highland hospitality. His grace has taken every opportunity during his sojourn in the north to pay the most marked attention to the majority of the Presbytery of Strathbogie; and all those who assisted at the respective sacraments have, without exception, been received and entertained at the castle. Not a single member of the minority has been shown the least attention by the noble duke.—Aberdeen Herald.

PRICES TWENTY YEARS SINCE.—Notwithstanding the fall in the prices of sheep and cattle (about twenty per cent. on all but very fine fat oxen), the markets are much higher than they were some years since. An extensive sheep farmer says to us the other day: "I went to Edinburgh in 1822, to see George IV., and sold my cheviot wethers: the price I got was 15s. 10d. each. I went again this month to see Queen Victoria, and to sell my wethers, exactly the same sort as before, and my price was 24s. 6d."—Inverness Courier

ANOTHER CAPTURE OF WHALES.—KIRKWALL, Sept. 19.—Another capture of whales has been made at the Island of Fiday, 50 in number, which have been disposed of to some of our merchants for £102, about £2 each, double the amount obtained for the 671 caught at Westray. A shoal of from 400 to 500 whales appeared close in, in our bay yesterday (Sunday). The 300 old whales already caught, will, it is thought, bring into the country no less a sum than £2000! This will in some degree make up for the bad fishery, which did not exceed, in many instances, more than 40 crans each boat. At Vidlinuce, Shetland, about the same time, an attempt was made to strand some hundreds, but failed. However, in another quarter, we understand about 60 were either forced on shore or stranded by accident. At the Faroe Isles the bottlenose fishery is a matter of considerable importance, and a good deal of dependence is placed upon it by the inhabitants of these bleak regions. Inverness Courier.

FATAL ACCIDENT ON THE BRIGHTON AND CROYDON RAILWAY.—On Monday evening, shortly after the down train from London, which leaves the terminus at twenty minutes past five, had passed No. 5 bridge, which is situate in a cutting between New Cross and Sydenham, a frightful accident occurred to Richard Crossley, one of the signal-men in the employ of the London and Croydon Railway Company. It appears that immediately after the Croydon train had passed, he was returning towards New Cross, in the middle of the line, where he ought not to have been, when a first-class Brighton train, proceeding to London, overtook him. The guard perceived him some little distance in front, and sounded his whistle as loudly as he could to warn him off the line, and the alarm not being noticed, he continued it, and in a few seconds the buffer of the tender struck him down, and the entire train passed over him. From the position in which the unfortunate deceased was found, it is evident he had been deaf to the signal, as he laid between the rails.

ARREST OF THE ARCHBISHOP OF TRIPOLI.—BIRMINGHAM, Tuesday.—This morning a foreigner who represents himself, and has been received here by the clergy, as the Archbishop of Tripoli, accompanied by a young gentleman, a native of Syria, was brought before the magistrates at the public office, charged with the serious offence of obtaining money under false pretences. The archbishop and the young Syrian arrived in Birmingham a few days ago, and obtained an introduction to the Rev. Josiah Allport, minister of Ashted chapel, to whom he presented a paper containing a statement of the object of his visit to this country, which was to collect money for the relief of the Christians which in Syria. Mr. Allport, [illegible] to the object of the mission, and introduced the parties to several of the clergy of the town. In the course of the morning, however, whilst the parties were engaged in soliciting subscriptions in the adjoining [illegible], Mr. Allport received information that the strangers were impostors. Not feeling satisfied with the explanations which he received, the prelate and the young Syrian were taken into custody by the officer. Upon examination before the magistrates the prelate presented his credentials and documents tending to disprove the charges, or at least to afford no ground for detaining the archbishop and his friend, who were accordingly discharged.

The system of solitary confinement adopted at the Bath New Gaol is found to be remarkably salutary, especially among the females. Several of these prisoners, who await their trials, have declared that, in case of their conviction, and being sentenced to imprisonment, they shall beg to be transported as a preferable punishment. One old woman, who boasts of an acquaintance with gaols for the last twenty years, declares her intention of relinquishing her visits to the new establishment as soon as her term of imprisonment shall have expired.

SUICIDE OF A CLERGYMAN.—Considerable gloom was caused in the village of Bingham, near Stockton-on-Tees, on Sunday night, the 25th ultimo, by the melancholy suicide of the Reverend Mr. Gibson, of that place. On that day, after doing the duties in his church at Bilhingham, the unfortunate gentleman retired about nine o'clock into the orchard adjoining his residence, and suspended himself from one of the apple trees. He was discovered very soon afterwards by a member of his family, and immediately cut down. About two years ago the unfortunate gentleman had a severe nervous attack, from which he appears never to have thoroughly recovered.

DEATH OF A SOLDIER FROM THE RIOTS.—One of the soldiers who were wounded during the riots at Halifax has died of his wounds. His name was Francis Williams, and he was only 19 years of age.—Leeds Intelligencer.

Mr. Woolley, who was the unfortunate dupe of his sister-in-law, by marrying the maid instead of the mistress, is so unfitted for business that he has dissolved partnership, and is about to leave Bristol.

ARREST OF ANOTHER CHARTIST.—Mr. J. Arthur, bookseller, was arrested this afternoon by a police-officer from Manchester, on a charge of sedition, and was taken off in a chaise in the custody of Kent, of the Carlisle police establishment. It is understood that the charge against Mr. Arthur is founded on the part taken by him at one of the Chartist meetings in Manchester, when he signed certain resolutions which he described as "dangerous" in one of his letters addressed to the Chartist Association in this city during his sojourn in Manchester as the delegate from the Chartists in Carlisle. The arrest was not known until a few minutes before his departure.—From a Second Edition of the Carlisle Journal.

INCOME TAX.—SALARY OF CURATES.—A clergyman, having the assistance of three curates, wrote to the office of Stamps and Taxes, requesting to know "whether, in the returns to be made under the Property Tax Act, their salaries were to be deducted?" The reply is as follows: "In answer to your letter, I am directed by the board to state that the salaries of curates can only be admitted as a deduction in the returns made under the Property Act in those cases in which curates are licensed by the bishop at a fixed stipend."—Birmingham Advertiser.

ORDERING A ROCK.—A sunken rock off Stoke Church, Dartmouth, which is not laid down in any chart, and occasions frequent damage to vessels, has been ordered to have its accurate position ascertained.—Daily Paper.—[We hope the rock so ordered will comply.—ED. I. L. N.]

WHAT NEXT?—MILKING COWS BY STEAM!—This curious and ingenious application of steam power is due to Mr. Robinson, of Lisburn, already so well known on account of his valuable steaming apparatus. Belfast Whig.

THE GIPSIES.—INTERESTING CEREMONY.—A short time since a very remarkable circumstance took place in the New Forest, Hampshire, in the instance of a gipsey of the name of Lee having been received into the fraternity. The spot where the [illegible] took place was at Bolton's Bench, near Lyndhurst. Between 300 and 400 gipsies, belonging to different tribes, including the Lees, Stanleys, and Coopers, were assembled upon this unusual occasion. The concourse consisted of a great many females, and so secretly had the meeting been got up, that scarcely a person residing in the neighbourhood was aware that a circumstance of the sort was about to take place. The offender, a handsome-looking man, apparently between 30 and 40 years of age, was placed in the middle of a ring, composed of the king of the gipsies and the patriarchs of different tribes. This ring was followed by a second, made up of the male portion of the assembly, and an exterior circle was formed by the women. The king, who was one of the Lees, a venerable old man, and one who looked as if he had seen upwards of 90 summers, then addressed the culprit for nearly an hour, but in a tongue that was perfectly strange to the bystanders. The address was delivered in a most impressive manner, as might be conceived by the vehemence of the gesticulations which accompanied it. None but the gipsies themselves had the slightest knowledge of the crime which had been committed by the offender, but it must have been one exhibiting very odious traits to the tribe, as the act of expulsion among them is an exceedingly rare occurrence. As soon as the king had finished his speech to the condemned man, he turned round and harangued the whole of the gipsies assembled, and, expressing himself in English, informed them that Jacob Lee had been expelled from among them, that he was no longer one of the fraternity, and that he do leave the camp of the gipsies for ever. The king then advancing towards him spat upon him, and the circles which enclosed him simultaneously opened to admit of his retreating from among them, whilst they saw him with the branches of trees as he left the ground. The meeting then broke up, and the parties assembled went their different ways, some of them having come to witness the tribunal from a considerable distance. The whole ceremony, which took place under an aged oak in the forest, was a very imposing one, and being, as it almost an unprecedented occurrence in these parts, created an intense degree of interest among the bystanders.

MIRACULOUS ESCAPE.—An attempt at self-destruction was made on Monday afternoon by John Martin, a man who is well known on the Brighton beach, as the master of a pleasure-boat. He had been living for several years with a young somewhat his junior, who on Sunday morning disappeared, and at the same time missed a considerable portion of his portable property, which, on inquiry, he learned had been bestowed by her as a marriage portion on a man to whom she was leaving the house, had immediately got married, at St. Nicholas' church. The loss of his companion, the absence of his hoardings, so preyed on his mind, that on Monday he resolved on self-destruction, by throwing himself down the well of his own house. He was observed in the act of leaping down, and a young man, about an hour, at once volunteered to descend in the bucket. He did so accordingly, and brought up Martin, who, to the astonishment of numerous persons who had by this time congregated around the well, proved to have entirely escaped injury. The well, which is at the back of Chesterfield-street, nearly at the top of the hill above Devonshire-place, is upwards of 120 feet deep, and contained 20 feet of water.

THE GREAT FIRE AT LIVERPOOL.—Towards sunset yesterday we visited the scene of the late conflagration, and feel that any attempt at description would fail in the magnitude of the area and vastness and diversity of the ruins. Some 200 men are employed in clearing Formby-street, piling the bricks, excavating, and saving the fragments of scorched cotton and some wrecks of the property. Anything like active fire has subsided, but the masses of ruin and foundations are still smoking, and probably will do so for some days to come. A current of water is continually pouring into the lower floors and cellars, from the sewers communicating with the canal, and all the disposable fire-engines are playing on the parts where indications of fire yet appear. A great quantity of cotton is constantly loading from the ruins, but in a sadly damaged condition. Some few bales of turpentine have got out, but the greater part is lost, and, it is believed, principally melted and floated down the sewer into the Mersey, where portions of it are yet cast up on the Cheshire shore. A large proportion of the bar and rod iron belonging to the British Iron Company has been got at, and, though damaged, will be far short of a total loss. But still the salvage will altogether bear an extremely small proportion to the destruction. Through the mass of ruin which remains a road is now cleared down Formby-street. At the lower part of it the two engines were overwhelmed. The wreck of both are now recovered, and satisfactory proof afforded that no loss of life occurred in that quarter. In the excavation from the upper end of the street, one of the first objects which presented itself was one much more melancholy, in the body of poor Hodgson, the policeman. Hodgson was busy at his work, protecting his fresh against the angle of the warehouse which abutted on the cottages, when the building suddenly toppled over, and instantaneously buried him at his post, branch in hand. Mr. Higbton, of the borough gaol, had gallantly volunteered his services in a quarter in which he had much experience when he formerly held a command in the police force, and shared every danger. Mr. Highton was one of the last, if not the last, person who saw him, and the body was found exactly at the spot where he indicated. He was found on his knees, with his arms extended, his branch under him. It is consolatory to know that his death was instantaneous, as his skull, fractures in his limbs, his head was literally crushed to pieces. His body, far advanced in decomposition, was removed to the deadhouse in Prince's Dock, where it now lies awaiting the inquest. Among the many claims on public gratitude, there are none stronger than those of his surviving relations. The great loss of life took place in the warehouse-sheds fronting to Neptune-street. As they were burning at one end, efforts, in a great measure successful, were perseveringly made to empty them at the other. In the further of the two warehouses, occupied by Mr. Knight, a sudden shrinking or explosion involved three labourers, who were employed in removing the goods, in the flames. Their shrieks for help were truly horrifying. Mr. Rushton, our stipendiary magistrate, Mr. Highton, governor of the borough gaol, with Mr. Whitty, and an inspector of the force, were speedily on the spot, and extricated the whole of them. They were sent to the infirmary, where two died almost immediately, and the third survived dreadfully injured.

In a warehouse-shed, further up the same street, but totally burnt, another fatal accident took place. Mr. Whitty, with a party, was busy endeavouring to save the goods, and to restrain the fire, when the end of the building gave way, and the beams fell on those below. One man literally had his head cut off, another had his thighs broken, and both bodies fell into the flames. It is incorrect that there was any effort made to save these poor men—none could be made. The brick floor of this shed is now cleared, and all that was found of their remains were a few calcined bones, and some metal articles about their persons. Mr. Whitty effected his retreat with great difficulty, and this was one of the many narrow escapes of his dreadful day. These are the principal of the unfortunate events which the survey of the ruins recals. The total loss of life, we are happy to state, falls far short of rumour. It certainly does not exceed eight, and may possibly, for any decidedly certain evidence that appears, be only six.—Liverpool Journal of Mondays.

THE LATE CROPPING CASE AT DOVER.—Macdonald, the turnkey of the Dover borough gaol, tendered his resignation last week, which the justices accepted, and they will proceed to fill up the vacancy on Friday next.

DARING HIGHWAY ROBBERY.—On the night of Wednesday last, just at dusk, as Mr. Hopton's servant, of Dulas, was driving a gig between Landinabo and Dewchurch, he was stopped by two men, one of them holding the horse's head, while the other got into the gig and took four shillings from him; the servant had some money of his master's, but fortunately they did not find that. One of the men was a short thick man, the other tall, with black whiskers, had a fustian jacket and a black glazed hat on.—Hereford Times.

DARING AND EXTENSIVE BURGLARIES.—MANCHESTER, Sunday Night.—Two of the most daring and extensive burglaries have been committed in this town. The parties who have been plundered are Messrs. Solomons and Jacobs, pawnbrokers, Shude-hill; and Messrs. Kendall and Sons, general toy-dealers, Newall's-buildings, Market-street. This morning, about two o'clock, police constable 65, observed the door of Messrs. Solomon and Jacobs' shop half open. He alarmed the inmates, and, upon examining the premises, it was discovered that nearly 200 watches (gold and silver) had been carried off; also a quantity of silver tea and table spoons, snuff-boxes, rings, ear-rings, brooches, pencil-cases, diamonds, pistols, guard-chains, breast-pins, and a variety of other articles of a similar description. The value of the property stolen amounts to about £1000. Between six and eight o'clock this evening, during the absence of the family at church, Mr. George Kendall's house was entered, and completely stripped of almost every moveable article, including wearing apparel, watches, jewellery, cash-box, boots, &c. The value of the property carried off in this case may be about £200.

DEATH ON BOARD A STEAM-BOAT.—On Tuesday week the passengers on board the steamer running between Sheerness and London were thrown into a state of alarm, just as the vessel had left Southend for Sheerness, by the report of a soldier having died suddenly on board. The deceased, with a corporal, had been to London with a prisoner, who was found asleep on his post whilst on guard in the dockyard, and sentenced to two years' imprisonment. On their return the soldiers drank so excessively of beer and spirits that they became dead drunk, and lay down to sleep, and on their being roused the private was found dead.

ANOTHER DEATH AFTER A PUGILISTIC FIGHT.—On Friday week, the coroner for the county of Radnor and a jury assembled, to inquire into the circumstances attending the death of C. Brydges, aged 44 years, dealer in earthenware, who was killed in consequence of fighting with J. Norman. A verdict of manslaughter was returned against the latter; and the said Joseph Norman stands committed for trial at the next spring assizes for the county of Radnor. The death of Brydges occurred from one of those disgraceful scenes, a street fight. The parties fought upwards of an hour; and in that time not one of the town constables made his appearance. Cambrian.

ANOTHER FATAL FIGHT.—Wednesday week, G. Sylvester, Esq., held an inquest in Warminster, on the body of Jos. Tucker. It appeared that on the 6th instant the deceased and his nephew, having been drinking at a public house at the village of Chapmanslade, repaired to a adjoining field, called the Warminster Civilian. The combatants, with their companions, were intoxicated; and while fighting the principals fell together into a stone quarry, and, after struggling for some time, the younger released himself from the grasp of his uncle, and walked home. Either in the struggle, or in the fall or his subsequent treatment, many of the deceased's ribs were broken, his thigh was fractured, and he was much injured. After a protracted and careful inquiry, the jury returned a verdict of "Manslaughter" against the nephew, Urian Ryall, for whose apprehension the coroner issued his warrant. He has, however, eluded the vigilance of the police.

DESTRUCTION OF MAXWELLTOWN CHAPEL BY FIRE.—We are sorry to have to record this week the total destruction of Maxwelltown chapel by fire, which occurred on Wednesday evening last. We are happy to say that the books of the Sunday school were all got out safe; the library numbers upwards of 200 volumes. The general impression here is, that the burning must have been the work of an incendiary.—Dumfries Herald.

HORRIBLE CASE.—SUPPOSED MURDER OF TEN PERSONS BY POISON.—A considerable degree of alarm and excitement was created in the neighbourhood of Folds, Little Bolton, on Thursday week, in consequence of an inquisition held at the Crown Inn, upon the body of William Eccles, a carter, and who has hitherto borne an irreproachable character. The jury were at first summoned with an idea that it was an ordinary case of sudden death, but, from facts which afterwards transpired, the coroner deemed it necessary to have a post mortem examination of the body, the result of which proved that there was a large quantity of arsenic in the bowels of the deceased. The evidence already given does not implicate any individual, but, from inquiries made, there is every reason to suppose that the deceased's stepmother has been guilty of the murder. It appears that Betty, then a widow, was married about two years ago to Henry Eccles, a carter, at present working for Mr. Swift, in the service of Mr. Hardcastle, of Firwood, but was discharged on account of some faux pas on the part of his wife, and has since been working at Manchester, the family remaining at Little Bolton. Shortly before her second marriage she buried two daughters, one about seven, and the other about nine years of age, within a fortnight of each other, and, from the circumstance of their having died suddenly, it is now suspected that they also fell victims to her extraordinary and unaccountable predilection for poisoning. Her first husband also died suddenly, but having been unwell for some time previously there was no suspicion of foul play, although it is now hinted that he did not die from natural causes; in fact, that all her family, excepting those alive, had received a helping hand. She has been the mother of ten children, and eight of them have died suddenly; and if we add the stepson and first husband, she may be supposed to have poisoned ten persons. On Monday morning week her present husband left home to attend to his work, and remarked, "Now, Betty, look to the children while I am away, and in a week or two we will remove to Manchester." She replied, "I always do look after them," and the man went away contented; indeed, there was no reason for complaint as to harsh treatment on her part, but, on the contrary, she was always very kind to them, so far as appearances went. The following are the short particulars relative to the death of William Eccles, who was not her own child, but that of her husband by his marriage with another woman. On Monday morning week deceased went to his work at the usual hour, and continued in good spirits to work until dinner-time. When he returned from dinner he complained of going pain in his stomach, and of being sick, at the same time vomiting a greenish fluid. He left work about three o'clock, in consequence of being ill, and one of his fellow-workmen, on going home upwards of an hour afterwards, found him lying on his back in a ditch, vomiting to a great degree, and, on being questioned, he complained of pain in the stomach and bowels. He said he had had a plum dumpling for dinner. His fellow-workman lifted him up and supported him towards home, and on their way they met deceased's stepmother. Deceased's companion requested her to take him home and give him something warm, and she replied that she would, as she had some tea ready. This evidence having been given, Mr. Taylor, the coroner, said it was clear the jury upon it could not come to any satisfactory conclusion, and he should, therefore, suggest the propriety of adjourning the inquiry until the body should be opened and the contents of the stomach analyzed. This suggestion meeting with the concurrence of the jury, the inquest was adjourned until the following day. At the resumed inquest the coroner said, in opening the case, that he had, in consequence of information which he had received, directed the body of another child to be examined, which, having been buried some time ago, had to be exhumed. The child was named Alice, and it was suspicious, from what the mother had said, that there had been something foul connected with her death. She (the mother), on being questioned, said that deceased had been attended by a doctor in her sickness, but she did not know his name or where he lived. Mr. Taylor said, the testimony given by the medical gentlemen (Messrs. Denham and Howard) went to show that there was a large portion of arsenic in the stomachs of both bodies examined—in that of the deceased, William Eccles, as much as would cover the face of a shilling. He (the coroner) would wish the inquest to be further adjourned till Tuesday, in order that the evidence might be completed. This was complied with, and the inquiry will take place in the police-office, in order to give the opportunity of the public attending, on Tuesday morning, at nine o'clock. Yesterday the bodies of three other children were exhumed. The one was named Hannah Haslam, aged six years, and buried on the 9th of October, 1840; the other, Ann Haslam, aged four years, buried the 3d of December, 1840; and the other, Richard Haslam, aged sixteen months, buried March, 1840. The prisoner, Betty Eccles (for she is now in confinement), denies that she ever had a child named Ann. The prisoner in March last was nurse to a child of Mr. James Haywood, of Bradshaw, which, it is to be feared, also met its death by poison. On the Saturday preceding the death of this child the prisoner went to Mr. Haywood, and requested him to let her have two flock beds, as she was desirous to take lodgers, and wished to have this accommodation. Mr. Haywood told her to call on the following Monday, which she did, and received the beds, and the condition was, payment was to be made for them out of what was given for nursing the child. On the following day the child died, and prisoner has not yet paid for the beds, and the presumption is she put the child out of the way to avoid payment. About five or six weeks ago the prisoner purchased a penny worth of arsenic at the shop of Mr. Moscrop, druggist, Folds-road, alleging that it was for the purpose of poisoning mice. Mr. Moscrop, with laudable caution, at first refused to let the prisoner have the poison, and would not do so until she brought with her another person as witness. Prisoner left the shop and shortly returned with another woman, and Mr. Moscrop then supplied her with the arsenic, which he folded in two papers, and wrote in legible characters on the cover "Poison." Search has been made in the prisoner's house, but no arsenic found. Mr. Taylor has been exceedingly vigilant during the inquiries, and too much praise cannot be given to Mr. Inspector Harris for his exertions in finding out and furnishing information bearing upon the inquest. The bodies of the two children interred two years ago were exhumed yesterday, and the contents of their stomachs analyzed by Mr. H. Watson, and we are informed that one of them was found to have been poisoned. The appearances in the other bespoke something of the kind, but no definite conclusion could be made upon the subject. We should suppose that there never was, in this country, such a wanton and wholesale number of murders without cause. She was not in distress; had not quarrelled with them; and, what is more, could not have done it for the sake of money, as they did not belong to any burial society.

On Tuesday the adjourned inquest was held on three of the bodies, when evidence was adduced which satisfied the jury in returning a verdict of wilful murder against the party charged. The prisoner, Betty Eccles, was brought into court. She manifested considerable indifference at the charges brought against her, and did not seem in the least affected by the horrid details of the case. [The evidence on the present occasion was to the same effect as the foregoing.] The coroner then briefly summed up the case to the jury, who, after a consultation of about ten minutes, found a verdict of "Wilful murder against the prisoner, for having caused the death of William Eccles, Alice Haslam, and Nancy Haslam, by the administration of arsenic." She, on being committed, coolly turned to the jury and thanked them for their kindness, and was then removed amid the hooting of the crowd.

THE COAL-MINES OF LANCASHIRE.—It has been calculated that the available coal seams upon Lancashire ground, in weight, to the enormous sum of 8,100,000,000 tons; the total annual consumption of this coal, it has been estimated, amounts to 3,400,120 tons. Hence it is inferred that the coal-field of Lancashire, at the present rate of consumption, will last 2,470 years.—Preston Chronicle.

GRAND MUSICAL FESTIVAL AT NEWCASTLE.—Thursday, Sept. 29.—The grand musical festival commenced on Tuesday morning, and will terminate this day, the performances being alternately at St. Nicholas' Church in the morning, and at the theatre in the evening. It is upwards of 14 years since the last musical festival was held in Newcastle. Their selections of music have been of the highest cast, and the performers engaged have been of standing reputation. The morning performances, consisting of sacred music, took place in St. Nicholas' Church, which had undergone extensive alterations in the interior in order to adapt it for the purpose. The theatre in the evening was not so well attended as was anticipated, but the company was highly respectable. The whole stage was fitted up as an orchestra, and when filled by the various performers it had a very elegant appearance. The theatre yesterday evening was well attended, and the performances passed off with great eclat. The company this day was more numerous than on either of the two preceding days. The service in the church did not commence till half-past 11 o'clock, having been deferred for half an hour, in order that the Duke of Cambridge, who is on a visit to the Duke and Duchess of Northumberland at Alnwick Castle, might be present at the performance of The Messiah.

IRELAND.

His Excellency the Earl De Grey, and suite, arrived in her Majesty's mail-packet Medusa, at Kingstown, at six o'clock on Monday morning. On the vessel entering the harbour, and on his Excellency's landing, salutes were fired by the Shamrock revenue brig, Lieutenant Keeling, R.N., commander. The distinguished party immediately proceeded to the Vice-Regal Lodge in the Phœnix park.

THE LATE MASTER OF THE ROLLS.—A requisition appears in the papers, signed by the most eminent attorneys and solicitors of Ireland, of all creeds, political and religious, convening a general meeting of the profession, to be held on Wednesday, the 2nd of November, being the first day of term, for the purpose of testifying their respect for the memory of the late Sir Michael O'Loghlen. The funeral of this lamented judge will, it is said, be a public one. The procession is to set out from Marlborough-street Roman Catholic Chapel on Wednesday next, and proceed on its route to the burial-ground in the county Clare. The late Master of the Rolls had his life insured for the sum of £23,000. He is succeeded in his title and estates by his son, now Sir Coleman O'Loghlen, who, although but very recently called to the bar, has given promise of future eminence in the profession of which his father was so illustrious an ornament.

LETTERKENNY, Sept. 28.—An inquiry here respecting the existence of ribbonism in the revenue police is daily being invested with more importance. There is no knowing when this protracted inquiry may close, as Dr. M'Gettigan, the Roman Catholic Bishop, came in yesterday, with twenty-one of his clergymen, from the several parishes in which detachments of the revenue police are stationed, to give testimony for the defence, as the population of the county are alleged to have originated the guilt, and introduced it into the police force. On Sunday, at four o'clock in the morning, Mr. Wood, head Commissioner of Excise, from London, reached here with Colonel Brereton, chief Inspector of the Revenue Police, from Dublin, to watch the progress of the trial.

COMMITTAL OF A POOR-LAW GUARDIAN FOR FORGERY.—Committed to the gaol of Longford, on the 23rd of September, Thomas Bracken, charged on the oath of Thomas Clarke that he forged the name of the said Thomas Clarke to a bill of exchange of £65., and which was passed to the National Bank of Athlone on the 14th or 15th of June last.

EVERY BODY'S COLUMN.

LAWS OF GARDENS.

Annual roots and flowers planted in a garden may be removed by any tenant, and so may young fruit trees and shrubs in the garden or nursery of a person to whom the same has been let for the purpose of sale.—2 East's Reports, p. 88. But unless a garden, or orchard, or other land, has been so let as nursery ground, no tenant can, as between him and the landlord, remove any flower, root, tree, or shrub, not strictly an annual, or not usually taken up at one season of the year and replanted at another; and if without authority he should remove the same, he would be liable to an action for the waste. And if a tenant, of any description, has made strawberry-beds, he cannot, either before or at the expiration of his tenancy, and whilst the crop is likely to continue productive, remove or destroy the same, without being liable to an action for injury to the landlord or succeeding tenant. -1 Campbell's Reports, p. 237.

IMPORTANT DISCOVERY.

The cause of ladies' teeth decaying at so much earlier a stage of life than those of the other sex is attributed to the friction of the tongue upon them But, according to the Hartford Courier, it is owing to the sweetness of their lips, as it is a fact (well established by every body's saying so), that sweet things rot the teeth.

COINING.

Lord Castlereagh made so many new words that Canning called him the literary coiner. "He has got a mint in his mind," said he. "Mint in his mind!" replied Tierney, "would he had sage in his head!"

THE LITTLE HOUSEMAID AT NUMBER SIX.

Heaven alone can tell in what bright colours this marriage is painted upon the mind of the little housemaid at number six, who has hardly slept a wink all night with thinking of it, and now stands upon the unswept doorsteps, leaning upon her broom, and looking wistfully towards the enchanted house. Nothing short of omniscience can divine what visions of the baker, or the greengrocer, or the smart and most fascinating butterman, are flitting across her mind—what thoughts of how she would dress on such an occasion, if she were a lady—of how she would dress, if she were only a bride of her cook would dress, being Irishmen, conjointly with her master "in place" at Fu ham, and how the clergyman, deeming them so many ladies, would be quite humbled and respectful. What day dreams of hope and happiness—of life being one perpetual holiday, with no master and no mistress to grant or withhold it—of every Sunday being a Sunday out—of pure freedom as to curls and ringlets, and no obligation to hide fine heads of hair in caps—what pictures of happiness, vast and immense to her, but utterly ridiculous to us, bewilder the brain of the little housemaid at number six, all called into existence by the wedding at the corner!

When somebody asked Sheridan how it was he succeeded so well in the house, he replied, "Why, sir, I had sat there long there before I found three-fourths of the members were fools, and the whole lovers a joke. I resolved, therefore, not to shock them by too much severity of argument, and to amuse them by a sufficient quantity of humour. This is the whole secret of my success."—Law and Lawyers.

HOW TO ENFORCE SILENCE.

The officers of the Scotch criminal courts create disturbance by calling "Silence!" to the audience. In Cork they manage the matter better: they write "Silence" in large letters on a piece of pasteboard, stick it into the cleft end of a long white rod, and wave it in the face of any one whose voice is heard rising above a whisper. If this does not produce quiescence, the admonition is enforced by a rap on the head with the rod.—Phrenological Journal.

ORIGIN OF THE WORD "LADY."

It was formerly the fashion of those families blest with affluence to live constantly at their mansion house in the country, and that once a week, or oftener, the lady of the manor distributed to her poor neighbours, with her own hands, a certain quantity of bread, and she was called by them the loaf-day, i.e. in Saxon, the bread-giver. These two words were in time corrupted, and the meaning now is the little known as the practice which gave rise to it, yet it is from that hospitable custom that, to this day, the ladies in this kingdom alone serve the meat at their own tables.

ROMAN COURTSHIP.

William, afterwards "The Conqueror," long courted his wife Matilda without success; till at length, provoked by her obduracy, he waylaid her in the streets of Bruges, as she was returning from mass—seized her in his arms regardless of the dirt—pulled her rich garments—beat her most unlovingly—and then rode off. The lady, either moved by this strong evidence of his passion for her, or afraid of a second drubbing, instantly consented to become his wife.

THE BEAUTIFUL STAR.

Where wert thou? where wert thou, thou beautiful star,
When the moon planet first spread her glories afar
Did'st thou rise in thy splendour at night's prime dawn,
And hide 'neath the clouds when first beam'd the bright morn?
Did'st thou cause the deep shadows to flee from the earth,
And shine on its ruin, and smile on its birth?
Did'st thou witness when angels with angels did war,
Or art thou of yesterday, beautiful star?

What hast thou beheld, oh, thou beautiful gem,
In the worlds far above us?—Oh! tell us of them!
Tell of those who have left us to dwell on yon sphere,
Leaving MEMORY alone to say once they were here;
Tell us what we may hope in those regions above;
How fatal was the crown that was promised by love!
Be a beacon to point to those cloud-realms afar,
Thou lamp of the traveller—beautiful star!

Did'st thou shine on the Magi, thou gem of the sky,
Like a flashing of light from the MIGHTY ONE'S eye?
Did'st thou shrink from the darkness that rended the world,
When eternity's standard by death was unfurl'd?
Wert thou first of creation, or wert thou the last?
Wilt thou watch o'er the future, or dream of the past?
Oh! I pray thee, fair orb, as thou sinkest afar,
Be my beacon to-morrow, bright, beautiful star!

Leigh Cliffe, Esq.

NINE TAILORS MAKE A MAN.

In the year 1742 a shop of tailors in London subscribed one shilling each for a destitute orphan, and with the gift, nine shillings, he purchased fruit, which he sold in the street and soon got on in the world. When attained to great wealth as a merchant, he never forgot his humble origin, but constantly said "nine tailors made a man of me."—This could not, however, be the origin of the saying, which is more ancient, though it is a very happy application of it. It must have originated in the days of excessive foppery of dress, when it would require nine different tailors to rig out a single man in the height of fashion.

ON HUMAN LIFE.

Swift as the arrow's flight
Through the summer air,
Reckless the eager sight,
In its quick path there—
Like the vapours at early dawn,
Dewing the grass with pearl,
Sweeping over the sunny lawn,
One moment, then away.

Marked as the vessel's track,
Or the ocean's breezy plain,
From the billows glancing back,
Then swiftly lost again.
As a flower that the proud sun calls
Into birth, with its first bright ray,
Yet an hour, and its beauty falls
Into quick decay.

Such art thou, life—at best
But a waking dream—
A sleep at night, when none find rest,
Though sweet it seem.
For life is a breathless race,
And all must run a fearful course,
Wantonly tossing in misery
O'er its waste of waters dark.

Afar as the deceiving mirage,
It beams o'er the clouded tide;
And yet the frail barque is sparring
That leads to its fatal guide.
Oh, that is religion's ray—
It shines o'er the foaming wave,
To light and warm the weary way
From danger his barque to save.

Tait's Magazine.

That man at a ball who makes the manner of spirit he is of who knows not that peacefulness, and patience, and mercy, as well as purity, are inseparable characteristics of the wisdom that is from above; and that Christian charity ought never to be sacrificed even for the promotion of evangelical truth.—Bishop Hurd.

MILITARY CHIVALRY.

"I heard once," said Father Phil, "a very pretty little bit of anecdote about the way the French behaved to one of our regiments on a retreat in Spain. It's going through a river they were, and the French, taking advantage of their helpless condition, were peppering away at them hard and fast, until some women, the followers of the camp, ran down, poor creatures, to the shore, and the stream was so deep in the middle they could scarcely ford it; so some Dragoons, who were galloping as hard as they could out of the fire, pulled up on seeing the condition of the womankind, and each horseman took up a woman behind him, though they possessed but one power of speed—that of the danger. The moment the French saw this act of manly courtesy, they ceased firing, and gave a cheer for the dragoons; and as long as the women were within gunshot, not a shot was fired, but the moment they were out of the reach, and a fresh cartridge, were sent after the brigade till all the women were over."—Lover's Handy Andy.

RESPONSIBILITY OF AUTHORS IN RUSSIA.

What the Russians think of authors may be collected from another plate, in which part of hell is represented. In the foreground are suspended two kettles; in one of them is a rubber, in the other a bad writer. Under the kettle of the latter the devil is busily engaged in making a roaring fire; whereas under the ban lit there is nothing but a heap of dry wood, and he seems to be enjoying a comfortable warmth. The author, who has lifted up the lid of his kettle, casting an anxious glance at the rubber, complains to the devil that he torments him more than so vile a criminal; but the devil fetches him a thump on the head, and says, "Thou wert worse than he, for his sins and misdeeds died with him, but thine continue to live for ages."—Kohl's Russia and the Russians.

VIEW OF NEWCASTLE.

NEWCASTLE.

The interest of the public has been, within the last few days, attracted towards Newcastle, in consequence of its having, following the example of Norwich and Worcester, become the animated scene of one of those superb musical festivals which, while they promote the interests of charity, and are conducted with due solemnity and pious reverence, in so far as the religious portion of the ceremonial is concerned, tend also to promote civilisation in their particular locality, and, by drawing visitors to it from all quarters of the kingdom, give an impetus to the action of trade, and a spur to the innocent piety and enterprise of all who reside near. In the instance of the Newcastle Festival, his Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge was one of the illustrious patrons, taking the warmest interest in its success, as he ever does in that of every grand and beautiful musical celebration. We shall perhaps not be blamed for selecting the week in which the event occurred to add to our list of provincial cities—that of Newcastle-upon-Tyne.

Newcastle, at the present day, is a great commercial town, and the centre of an important mining district. An historian has observed that "the coal trade hath made this town to flourish in all trades;" and, in addition to this, it has for several generations been a valuable nursery for hardy and skilful British seamen. Besides coals, the exports are cinders, glass, earthenware, cast and wrought iron and steel; pig, sheet, and red and white lead; lead shot, painters' colours, tar, copperas, sal-ammoniac, lamp-black, grind-stones, flag-stones, fire-stones bricks, canvass, soap, &c. The principal articles of import are corn, clover and other seeds, flax, hemp, linen yarn, wine, spirits, fruit, sugar, tobacco, barilla, butter, cheese, tallow, hides, skins, oak bark, coffee, mahogany and other woods, staves, iron, &c. The manufactures of Newcastle and its vicinity are numerous and extensive—the iron and glass works are the most prominent; the latter particularly are of high importance to the national interest, as they contribute an immense duty to the revenue. The foundries, soaperies, breweries, potteries, roperies, sail-cloth manufactories, and tanneries are of great magnitude. The chimneys of several of the salt, lead, and chemical works are very lofty one of them being two hundred and fifty-seven feet high, and a shot tower one hundred and seventy-five feet high. There are corn, mustard, and paper mills, malt-kilns, and colour and glue manufactories.

No fewer than thirty-six royal charters have been received by Newcastle from various successive monarchs, commencing with the one conferred by William Rufus in 1087—the last was granted by James I. in 1604: all these have been superseded by the Municipal Reform Act passed in 1835, which vested the government in a mayor, fourteen aldermen, and forty-two councillors, with the usual assistant officers, under the style of "the mayor and burgesses of the town of Newcastle-upon-Tyne, in the county of the town of Newcastle-upon-Tyne," the same act divided the borough into seven wards, and provided it with a commission of the peace, under which the usual courts are held. The judges for the circuit preside here at the county assizes in March and August. Quarter sessions are regularly held before the mayor, recorder, and aldermen; a court of requests, for disposing of claims under forty shillings, sits monthly; a mayor's court, for determining civil actions between freemen only, is held every Monday; and a county court, before the under sheriff, every fourth Wednesday: a court of common council, court of guild, and a court of admiralty, likewise exercise their functions. Newcastle returns two members to Parliament, and is a polling station at the election of representatives for the southern division of the county. The limits of the borough are by the Boundary Act defined to comprise the town and county of the town of Newcastle, and the several townships of Byker, Heaton, Jesmond, Westgate, and Elswick.

The public buildings, exclusive of those appropriated to divine worship, are the Exchange, on Sand-hill, a spacious stone edifice; the Merchants' Court, at the east end of the Guildhall; the Custom-house, on the quay, presenting a handsome stone front; and the Royal Arcade, erected a few years since: the latter is the most splendid public structure of the kind in the kingdom, and contains a joint-stock bank, savings' bank, post-office, commercial club rooms, news rooms, excise and stamp offices, and numerous well-arranged suites of chambers, occupied by professional persons. The new prison, a massive pile, stands in Carliol-croft, and its appearance is truly indicative of its uses. The places of amusement are the theatre, in Mosley-street; the assembly-rooms, in Westgate-street; the racquet court, behind the assembly-rooms; the circus and riding-school, in the Forth; and the public walk called the Forth, a delightful and healthful promenade. In the middle of June races are annually held on the town moor, about a mile and a half north of the Exchange. The institutions, religious, literary, and philosophical, &c., are numerous in this town—affording by their existence, and the liberal and enlightened manner in which they are supported, ample testimony that commercial pursuits do not exclusively engross the attention of the inhabitants of Newcastle.

SUNDERLAND BRIDGE.

This magnificent work of art is wholly composed of iron, and has, very deservedly, become a boasted possession with the good folks of Sunderland. It was a stupendous undertaking, and evinces the spirit of its daring architect, and the enterprising character of the citizens who suggested the erection. The bridge is thrown over the Wear, and forms one magnificent arch, describing a stretch of 236 feet 6 inches. The arch, at its centre, is elevated 100 feet above the surface of the river at lowest ebb tide; and vessels of 300 tons burthen might safely pass under it by striking their to'-gallants. Last week it was the chosen instrument of self-murder to a suicide, whose fate went the round of our broadsheet-contemporaries, and who met his doom by leaping from the highest point of Sunderland Bridge.

PORTRAIT OF GRACE DARLING.

Here is a portrait of Grace Darling, whose heroic nobility of heart and conduct in saving her fellow-creatures in a great crisis of danger from a dreadful wreck will hardly have faded from the recollection of those who are stirred by the contemplation of glorious instances of virtue and courage. The public interest, moreover, has been brought back to the young heroine by a report which has gone the round of the papers that she had lately died. The fact, however, is not so, as the following paragraph (from a correspondent) will imply:—

"This heroic girl is now residing with her father in the romantic town of Alnwick, in Northumberland, which is not very far distant from the scene of her exploit. She is not in possession of good health; indeed the inhabitants of Alnwick say she is 'come there to die.' Judging from her appearance, the 'consummation' predicted by [illegible] not far from accomplishment. The Duke and Duchess of Northumberland, whose princely domain at Alnwick must be familiar to many of our readers, have shown her many and repeated acts of kindness, and, in any case where advice has been required by her on any particular subject, she has sought and obtained it from the noble duke, whose kindness to her is the theme of much praise. Mr. Darling himself is a man seemingly of much greater respectability than would be supposed from his appearance in the various engravings descriptive of the wreck of the Forfarshire. He himself states that so hopeless did he consider the attempt to save the sufferers, that but from the very strenuous solicitations of his daughter he would have deemed the attempt futile. The circumstance of the late Mr. Yates having offered Grace Darling a considerable sum of money if she would sit in a mimic boat, and be drawn about the stage of the Adelphi Theatre, is well known in the locality of her present residence, and her refusal thus to render herself a public spectacle has tended yet to raise her higher in the estimation of her friends and neighbours."

We need not here go into a repetition of the many affecting circumstances connected with the wreck of the Forfarshire steamer, an event which was recorded in all the forms of public intelligence, poetry, and art; but as we have in our possession a few verses of a poem, by a popular writer, written to illustrate a beautiful painting of the reception of the sufferers into the lighthouse by Grace Darling and her friends, it may not be inopportune to present them here to our readers:—

THE INTERIOR OF THE FERN LIGHTHOUSE AFTER THE WRECK OF THE FORFARSHIRE STEAMER.

The lighthouse, from the heart of storm,
Looks down the dark wild waves.
Where, 'mid a crash of wreck, the sea
Is portioning its graves!
Where mortal hearts are quail'd in death,
By Heaven's avenging rod,
And howl, and groan, and shriek, and prayers,
Mount up the waves to God!

To God, who through the tempest pours
His gleam of mercy there:—
The pillar of the rock sends forth
His answer to the prayer!
A skiff, that two fine spirits guide,
Goes dashing up the wave,
For human love, to sink, or else,
For human love—to save!

'Tis done! around the lighthouse rock
The storm has hushed its din,
And here the painter's master spell
Unfolds the scene within;
As hero deeds exalt the heart,
Or tears bring woe relief,
A group for pity, or for pride,
For glory or for grief!

The gentle girl, of lofty soul
Though of a lowly birth,
Whose proud old father's face shines full
Of venerable worth;
The maiden whose unquailing heart
Storm could not daunt with death;
But when youth, hope, and love, and life,
Hung quivering by her breath—

Cried, "Save or perish!" and went forth,
Call'd by the wail of woe,
Breasted the billows mad, and braved
The roaring gulf below:
She who, amidst the tempest, shone,
The angel of the wave,
Stands, pure and beautiful, to soothe
Whom she was bold to save!

BOASTING.—Make up your mind never to be outdone by a boaster. If such-a-one says, with an air of superiority, that he keeps a yacht, directly affirm that you have a man-of-war of your own private property. It is equally serviceable to drop as much below the mark as to soar above it; and when you hear a "fine" man at an evening party lament aloud that "his fellow has not brought his cab," be very polite, and tell him you expect your private truck every moment, when part of it is entirely at his service.

SCENE FROM THE DRAMA OF GRANDFATHER WHITEHEAD.

Here is a little episode of grouping from Mr. Mark Lemon's pretty drama of Grandfather Whitehead, in which Farren is nightly performing with so much exquisite tenderness and natural truth. Our artist has chosen one of the playful moments of the affecting narrative wherein the old man is putting on the "armour of youth," and thinks he can disport it like a kitten with his grandson, and be sprightly as a little child. How he chuckles with delight, and yet trembles with feebleness, as the merry laughing boy imprisons him in his hoop; and is, even with his infant powers, strong enough to drag the unresisting old gentleman, half staggeringly, about the room. And there is as much joyous innocence, reader, in the old man as in the noisy urchin. He loves all the world; he laughs with everybody's happiness; he weeps with everybody's woe; he is always making sacrifices for others; and, although stricken by the world sorely, he seems to have lived in it only to learn the art of being good. There is not one touch of worldliness, wickedness, anger, or revenge in all his human nature. In itself this is a beautiful character; but Farren clothes it in the poetry of the affection, from which the heart cannot break away. He makes around his audience, through the whole performance, one perpetual rainbow of smiles and tears; the emotion of the listener and the gazer never rests; it varies and changes from first to last; it gladdens, touches, sometimes agitates; but to the fall of the curtain it is emotion still. The little drama conveys a good moral too, and teaches one of those lessons that do honour to the stage. One of the next best characters in the piece, after the "old man eloquent," and his gentle grandchildren, is that of Bob Lincoln, a clerk in an attorney's office, or, as his master calls him, "a gentleman at a guinea a week." This part is undertaken by Webster, who plays it with much vivacity, and throws into it more spirit than the mere sketch would of itself seem to possess. The portrait of him which we give below is merely introduced as à propos to his present performance. We shall, on some future occasion, present him to our readers in a more important character, and with such notice as from his position as a manager, and his merits as an actor, the public will have a right to claim at our hands.

PORTRAIT OF WEBSTER.

PORTRAIT OF CONFIDENCE AT THE WINNING-POST.

THE GREAT TROTTING MATCH.

The great match, between the celebrated American horse Confidence, the property of Mr. Hall, and the American grey, the property of M. North, over two miles in harness, for 100 sovereigns a side, came off on Sunbury-common last Monday afternoon, witnessed by a large and fashionable sporting company. The race was very nearly won by the grey, which kept ahead for the first 1¾ mile, when, breaking into a canter, and Mr. North seeing the impossibility of recovering the ground, pulled up, and walked gently up to the winning post,—Confidence thus winning the match.

Had Confidence been owned by North,
And pledged by him to trot,
It only proved, ere he went forth,
What Confidence he'd got!

But when from North to South the news
That he had won rang through,
"'Tis odd," to say men could but choose,
"What Confidence will do!"

FLORICULTURE.

THE HONEYSUCKLE.
(Caprifolium.)

The Honeysuckle, called also the Woodbine, is, perhaps, one of the most beautiful and fragrant flowers which adorn our land. Its botanical name, caprifolium, or the goat-leaved, is derived from its tendency to climb rapidly over everything which is placed within its reach; and this circumstance, added to the simple beauty of its flowers, and the exquisite fragrance of its blossoms, renders it valuable in the garden, shrubbery, and against walls, arbours, or trunks of trees. In the country the honeysuckle is a favourite decoration to the cottage-door, and confers upon those humble dwellings a character of cheerfulness unknown in other lands.

The Honeysuckle then, or Woodbine, is a climbing plant, belonging to the natural order Caprifoliaceæ, twining chiefly over trees or against walls or arbours. The honeysuckle follows the sun, and has therefore a tendency to climb in a spiral direction from right to left, which requires to be accommodated. It bears pruning well; but is very liable to the attacks of various insects, such as aphides, caterpillar, and hawk-moth, the last frequenting it for the honey which it obtains from the flowers. It commences flowering in May, and continues to put forth its blossoms till the end of autumn.

The honeysuckle may be raised from seeds, but these should not be sown until the autumn, after they are ripe, otherwise they will not come up the first year. It may also be propagated by cuttings, but these are apt to rot from water lodging in their tubular stems. In order to avoid this, some gardeners plant both ends of the cutting in the ground, allowing the portion between the two extremities to bend over in the form of an arch, and this we believe to be the best way.

In the language of flowers, the honeysuckle is the mark of generous and devoted affection. Weakness is fond of strength, and often delights in leading to the latter its own graces. Thus the honeysuckle lovingly entwines the gnarled trunk of an aged oak with its supple and delicate arms. It would seem as if the tender shrub, while climbing upwards, was striving to surpass in height the monarch of the forest; soon, however, as though finding its efforts useless, it droops gracefully down, and encircles the brow of his friend with elegant festoons of fragrant flowers.

THE FASHIONS.

Paris, Rue de la Chaussée d'Antin, Oct. 5, 1842.

Mon cher Monsieur,—Imagine a London linendraper offering a lady an inspection of his album. Yet such is the case at one of the most splendid establishments at Paris. No sooner has the fair visitant in search of novelties entered the shop of M. Gazelin, where silks, satins, étoffes de fantaisie, and stuffs brocaded in gold or silver throng upon the wondering eye with all the profusion and splendour of the Persian bazaars, as described in the "Arabian Nights"—no sooner, I say, has the fair visitant expressed her wish for new fashions, than a splendidly bound album, or livre des echantillons, is placed before her by an attendant youth. Here in each page is set down a categorie of silks in all shades, colours, and diversity of patterns. Here is a leaf on which you will find the most brilliant parures—silks whose richness is fitted to endure the blaze of wax-lights, or those which are as becoming for the morning visits or promenades. As you turn over the leaves you may imagine you see the various changes of life. On this page are a hundred dresses to choose from for a ball; on the next another hundred for dinner parties and theatres; and here, each on their own page and under their own head, dresses a discretion, pour la promenade, pour les visites, pour les reunions chez soi, pour les robes negligées, les robes de chambre, les toilettes de jeune fille, &c., &c., &c., through all the multifarious distinctions into which the Parisian belle subdivides the one dowdy word "dress" of the sober-minded and badly-dressed Englishwoman.

But let me select a few of the new fabrics for the benefit of your fair readers, and the enlightenment of the dull minds of your London drapers. Thus, first, le dernier point d'Angleterre, which unites the freshness, the coolness of lace to the sumptuousness of damask. It is excessively elegant the lightest, the most vapoury designs of our veils are here worked like a fine net-work over a ground of lilac, rose-colour, or blue. This is one of the prettiest eccentricities of the fashions. Second, le royal Louis XV. is a tissu croisé of a blue, rose, or maize-coloured ground, on which are scattered in silk of a silver hue the most beautiful designs of that epoch. Lace of the Louis Quinze period is considered necessary to harmonize with this brilliant parure. And so on might I run through a long catalogue; but as you have advised me not to exceed a column, as one twentieth only of your thirty thousand subscribers can be supposed to be interested in flounces, I shall break off here, saying that embroidered silks, brocades, and velvets braided, in the most profuse manner, will form the staple of fashion both for morning as well as evening dresses this winter. Take an instance in the charming robe de chambre in the sketch of the fur Hortense de Beauce, which I now send you. It is a morning robe of pearl-grey silk, put on over another morning robe of white muslin. The body opens with epaulets from the waist to the shoulder, richly braided, over which falls the lace frill of the body of the robe, cut also to open from the waist to the shoulder. The silk petticoat (shall I call it?) is braided en soutache down the sides and round the edge of the skirt, and lined inside with rose colour. There is an edging on the side of bouillons of fringe; the sleeves are braided richly in the same pattern; they are short and open, hooked up to show the rose coloured lining, and worn short, reaching halfway down the arm below the elbow. Thus the sleeve of the white muslin robe, tightened by a band at the wrist and terminating with a lace cuff, peeps out coquettishly, while a lace border to the stomacher of the petticoat, which is shown through the corsage, being open, and the broad lace flounce which flows gracefully round the bottom, give an air of coolness, elegance, and morning ease to this charming costume, which is considered in Paris the perfection of a morning toilette. I hope your fair readers will not forget to notice in the other figure the piquante effect of the coquettish bow under the chin: this is almost the only novelty in the getting up of bonnets. Marabout feathers have, as you see, flirted again into fashion. A red coloured silk dress with four flounces of fringe, and a shawl of Cachemire Lahore, of a blue colour, with a border of a bright pattern, complete this quiet but elegant costume for walking. Black is still the favourite colour for scarfs. Pelerines and cardinals of velvet, richly embroidered, and lined with levantine of bright colour, are fashionable. Camails are worn very large, and for these velvet has the preference. And now reminding your fair readers that the words "for velvet braiding, for silk brocading," contain all that can be said of the fashions for the present.

JULIE.

LAW INTELLIGENCE.

COURT OF BANKRUPTCY.—TUESDAY.
(Before Mr. Commissioner Evans.)

IN RE JOHN STAMFORD

The bankrupt was described as an architect, of Pall Mall, but it also appeared in the course of his previous examinations that he was also a dealer in pictures, and had assigned over his premises in Pall Mall to a person who had immediately let and sold the same, and had not since been heard of. A copy of the assignment was found tied up in a bundle of papers, and the discovery of the circumstances led to the further proceedings being adjourned to this day, which was fixed for his audit, and final adjourned examination. When the case was called on, a turnkey from the Fleet prison handed in a certificate from the bankrupt, stating that, in consequence of ill health, he would be able to attend the court to-day. The learned Commissioner repeated the great dissatisfaction he felt with the conduct of the bankrupt, who kept no books, and produced no vouchers, and furnished no balance sheet that could be relied upon. Under such circumstances, it would be his duty at once to adjourn him sine die. From the peculiar connexion of the debts and liabilities, their amount could not be ascertained, although known to be considerable; but there is not a farthing of assets.

INSOLVENT DEBTORS' COURT.—OCT. 1.

AN OXONIAN.—William Hamilton, a graduate of Oxford, was opposed by a tailor in Maddox-street. The insolvent, who was described before the court the previous day, owed £795, the greater portion incurred at Oxford whilst a student. He was at college six years, and left two years ago, being now twenty-six. He admitted that when he contracted the debt with the opposing creditors he owed about £500 at Oxford. At college he was allowed £160 a year by his father, and had made about £70 per annum from scholarships and exhibitions. A creditor complained that the insolvent obtained clothes from them in five months to the amount of £48 18s., which he consumed very extravagant for a person in his situation. He was introduced to them by a customer, and knew no payment. The Chief Commissioner asked the insolvent the reason he had not taken his degree before the time he last mentioned.—The insolvent said his debts at Oxford prevented him. He likewise mentioned the facility of credit afforded to students. The Chief Commissioner expressed his belief in both statements. The present debt with the opposing creditor had been incurred without reasonable means of payment, because the involvement of his party were known to himself and his source of income.—It was urged on the part of the insolvent that the complainant had not made proper inquiries of the insolvent, and the creditor, on being asked by the Court, said he could not think of insulting a gentleman by asking such a question.—The Chief Commissioner said there was a good deal in the answer, and singular enough it was the same made to him by his own tailor, when he had occasioned for forty years, and who readed in the same neighbourhood as the creditor in question. He deferred judgment until to-day, in the hope of an arrangement being made, and it was now stated that the opposing creditor had satisfied his agreement with the insolvent's father. The Court said to a complaint was of a personal character, and the creditor having retired therefrom, the insolvent would be discharged.—In this case the Chief Commissioner stated that he had received a letter from the insolvent's father. He condemned the practice of sending letters to persons who were judicially [illegible]

TUESDAY.

David De Lara applied to be discharged under the act. He was unopposed. The insolvent, who was of [illegible] persuasion, stated that he was a sealing-wax manufacturer in Hoxton-square. He had invented a [illegible] sealing-wax," a specimen of which he had the honour of presenting to her Majesty and Prince Albert, who gave him in return an order for £20, which he presented to Messrs. Royal and Consort. The box in which he presented it cost him [illegible] guineas. He had lost about £30 in bringing the invention [illegible] of it to the trade, but it had not taken [illegible] as it was rather too expensive. After a further examination respecting property, the case was adjourned till Thursday to produce a witness, and the insolvent's bail enlarged.

IN RE JOHN CUNNINGHAM.

John Cunningham was opposed by [illegible] Mr. [illegible], bill discounter; by Mr. Cresswell for Josh Ashenham, a jeweller, of George-street, Edinburgh; and by Mr. [illegible] for Messrs. Lucas and Stephens, the former an ironmonger in Hampton Court, and the latter a [illegible] corn dealer at Hounslow. He was supported by Mr. Messrs. Cooke [illegible] of the insolvent, a young man of fashionable [illegible] entered [illegible] was a lieutenant in the 11th Hussars, and the [illegible] son of James Cunningham, Esq., of Rodney-[illegible], Clifton, near Bristol, an extensive West India merchant and proprietor. His schedule exhibited debts amounting in the [illegible] £7,616 8s. 1d., for £5,333 4s. of which no consideration had been received. Amongst the items were incidental expenses consequent upon his first entry into the army £1500. The great proportion of his debts were incurred within the last two or three years, during which time he has indulged in extreme extravagance, occasionally sporting a four-in-hand drag, keeping race horses, and a numerous pack of hounds, expending about £2400 per annum, while his regimental pay as a lieutenant amounted to only £160 per annum, and his allowance from his father £200 per year. To supply himself with means he applied to several bill brokers, who lent him money at most extravagant rates of interest. In some instances he received in cash about one-half the amount of his promissory notes, and in others not even that. His father, who has a numerous family, paid his debts on several occasions, the last of which was in 1841, and then declared that he never would pay them again, and accordingly when the state of his son's affairs was laid before him, he peremptorily ordered him to sell his commission and take the benefit of the Insolvent Act, both as a punishment to himself and to those who had pandered to and encouraged his reckless extravagance. The father made a distinction between the several kinds of debts due by the insolvent, resolving to pay those that appeared to him to have been fairly and honourably contracted, and which were due caution seemed to have been used by the creditor. The insolvent's commission and the whole of his effects were disposed of, and the produce paid into court to the amount of £1978. After a full investigation of the grounds and circumstances of the debts of the insolvent, Mr. Commissioner Harris said, that of all species of gambling, that of advancing money to young men under circumstances like the present was the worst. In the second opposition, where it appeared that no undue advantage was taken, it was very properly settled. With respect to the other two creditors who opposed, the unkeeper and the other, they should both have presented their bills from time to time, and as they were not paid, they had no business to go on. Extreme extravagance had characterised the conduct of the insolvent. That day would affect all his prospects in life, and no doubt he would remember it with deep humiliation. Taking into consideration all the facts of the case, he should declare the insolvent entitled to the benefit of the act.—The insolvent then deposed to the truth of his schedule in the usual form.—Mr. Commissioner Harris reminded him that the whole of his property to the day of his death would be subject to his present liabilities, and then ordered him to be discharged.

POLICE.

MANSION-HOUSE.—On Tuesday a big, lazy, able-bodied fellow, named John Williams, was brought before the Lord Mayor, charged with having obstructed the passengers on the pavement in the neighbourhood of Bow-lane. A policeman observed the prisoner in the midst of a number of people, some of whom evidently acted as blinds to the fellow, while he sold what he called good sovereigns "for sixpence and a shilling a piece." Those who were in league with the prisoner pretended to be enraptured with the purchases of sovereigns which they made, and said they believed them to be genuine, and pretended to buy more. The number of fools gathered together was still greater than the number of rogues, and men of business were obliged to walk out in the carriage-way to please the idle vagabonds who blocked up the pathway. The policeman, who observed his line of duty, had followed the sovereign-seller to the end of his beat, and finding that the nuisance was by no means abated, and that it was likely, if permitted to continue, to work double injury, took the prisoner into custody. The first witness handed over fifteen counterfeits to the officer, when he informed him that he had been in the habit of disposing of such articles, and of course without considering that there was the least offence in carrying on such a business. The following is a description of the counterfeits:—On the obverse was a very good likeness of the Queen; and on the reverse, a Hanoverian soldier on horseback, trampling on a dragon, with the words "To Hanover."—The Lord Mayor remarked that mischief might be done with the counterfeits among the ignorant.—The policeman said the prisoner, in walking round amongst the mob, recommending his sovereigns, cried out that he did not care whether people would have them or not, and that they were all good sovereigns.—The Lord Mayor: Well, Mr. Williams, what have you to say to this charge of collecting a crowd for the sale of counterfeits?—Prisoner: Say, my lord! why, I get my living by counterfeits.—The Lord Mayor: I have no doubt of it; but you have gone too far here. Prisoner: For the last six or seven years I have got my living by selling articles of the kind; and no person ever complained to me. The Lord Mayor: You are fined £5 for causing the obstruction. The prisoner laughed at the idea of paying £5, and was committed to hard labour in Bridewell for a month.

A young man, named John Weeks, was charged with having had in his possession a gallon of foreign brandy, upon which duty had not been paid. The vessel in which the brandy was contained was made of tin, and fitted to the chest as closely as a waistcoat. A tidewaiter saw the defendant go ashore at Presh-wharf from the City of London Calais steamer, and suspected that he was smuggling. On being questioned as to the nature of his cargo, the defendant denied that he had anything of the kind about him, and resisted the officer, who, however, secured him, and deprived him of his treasure. The defendant expressed a wish to throw the officer into the water. The solicitor to the Customs and the commissioners were determined to go for the large penalty of £100 in this case, as the defendant had resisted the officer.—The defendant was then committed in default of the payment of the fine for one month.

Messrs. Morris, coal merchants, were summoned by the Lightermen's Protective Society, at the Three Crowns, Dowgate-hill, for the violation of the act 7th and 8th of George IV., cap. 75, by which persons using steam are compellable to register them. Mr. Child, of the firm of Wire and Child, said the defendants were charged with being the owners of, and with having navigated, a barge without registering their names and places of residence, and the name of the vessel, in the books of the Watermen's Company.—The beadle of the Watermen's Company proved, by referring to the books, that the terms of the act had not been complied with.—The defendant's solicitor said he (and no doubt was entertained of the truth of the statement) that they considered they had done all that was necessary by having the number of the vessel entered.—Mr. Child said the act was a very unconditional conviction, as they were convinced the defendants erred unintentionally.

Messrs. Dalton, also respectable coal-merchants, were charged with similar violation of the act. They pleaded guilty, being ignorant of the law. The Lord Mayor said the defendants must not take advantage of their error. The want of knowledge of the provisions of the act, and that a nominal conviction would answer in both cases.—Mr. Child said the society he represented wished for nothing else in the cases of such defendants. He then read the clause of the act, which he trusted would in future be particularly attended to, as it was of much greater importance than it appeared to be in relation to the trading matters carried on in the river Thames. The clause stated, that "if any such lighter, barge, or other craft shall be worked or navigated, without being registered, or without the number and names being painted and legible, the owner or owners shall for every such offence forfeit and pay any sum of money not exceeding 40s."

CROWN-HALL.—THE PRESTON ROBBERY.—Eliza Bailey, the woman charged with being concerned in robbing Mr. Harrison, of Ashton-street, Preston, in Lancashire, was brought up for re-examination, on Saturday, and William Farrell, charged as an accessary after the fact, appeared upon his own recognizance to answer the charge. Mr. Traill inquired whether any fresh evidence had been collected against the accused parties? The witness from the public-house in Cheshire, where the £100 and the £10 notes were found after the robbery, and which formed part of the stolen money, identified Bailey, yet other parties might have obtained the notes there as well as that woman, and, unless there was evidence adduced against her, he should be compelled to discharge her. [illegible] was no proof to implicate him in the robbery. [illegible] of Stowell, the informer, coming forward and stating how he overheard that person tell another man, at the Elephant and Castle, that the woman (meaning Bailey) had been in for a good thing at Preston, and that she got a good scag. Upon such evidence he (the magistrate) could not send the parties before a jury, because their acquittal would be certain, and would only be entailing expense. Detective constable [illegible] none of the stolen notes were recovered, except the £100 and £10 notes found in the purse of the public-house, at a village in Cheshire, the day subsequently to that on which the robbery was committed. Mr. Traill said that he had no fresh evidence to offer against the parties.—Mr. Traill said that he should discharge the prisoners; and when Bailey left the bar she was [illegible] by a powerful looking man, named Kirby, was [illegible] 80 E, and with creating a disturbance, [illegible] several persons. Sadler's Wells Theatre, on the previous [illegible]. The constable deposed that, at half past eleven o'clock, the prisoner, [illegible] thirty others of the most depraved characters, stationed themselves [illegible] the door of Sadler's Wells Theatre, and hustled and insulted every [illegible] that came out without distinction of sex or condition. Several females complained of the violence of their conduct, upon which he (witness) went over and desired them to disperse, and to allow the people to pass [illegible] annoyance; but the prisoner seized him by the stock, and squeezed [illegible] neck so that he thought he would be suffocated. The whole thirty [illegible] round him, exclaiming, "Don't an order for £20 [illegible] back-door him, trample on him." If the other constables had not come to his assistance he believed he should not have left the spot alive. [illegible] 10 and 75 R corroborated this testimony. The former said he received several blows from the prisoner on his way to the station-house. Mr. Combe said he should fine the prisoner £3, or six weeks' imprisonment. [illegible] Waddington, the gaoler, said the prisoner was one of a gang of desperadoes who were the terror of the neighbourhood in which they lived. Most of the gang were outside the door of the court waiting to hear the sentence, and he had no doubt they would, by subscription, pay the money at once.—Mr. Combe: Then, in point of fact, the prisoner would not be punished by fine. He must go to the House of Correction for three weeks without fine.

A respectable-looking woman, named Mary Austen, wife of Mr. James Austen, the proprietor of several houses in Furnival's Inn-court, came before Mr. Combe, and made the following statement: There were eight Irish people, men, women, and children, in one of her husband's tenements in a state of starvation. They were running about the streets on Friday night. When he met them they said they could find no place to shelter them for the night; that they had applied to several workhouses and been refused admission; that they had not tasted any food during the day, and would perish in the street if he did not succour them. Mr. Austen took them into the house and had maintained them ever since at his own expense. On Saturday her husband applied to Mr. Wilkes, the assistant-overseer of St. Andrew's, Holborn, but he refused to give them any relief or to pass them to Ireland; and when her husband said he paid heavy taxes in the parish, and should bring them down to the workhouse, Wilkes said if he did so he would give her husband and them into the custody of the police. The poor creatures would famish, and it would be hard to expect her husband could maintain them longer.—Mr. Combe then directed Mr. Wilkes to be sent for. In the course of the afternoon Mr. Wilkes and the other parish authorities were in attendance, and the whole case was investigated. It appeared that Mr. Austen found these people in the watchmen's part of Furnival's Inn, which is in the city. His empty house was a few doors up, and in the county. Mr. Wilkes refused, because it was the city that should have relieved them, as it was there they were found. (he said) Mr. Austen brought them into the county, it should be at his own expense. Mr. Wilkes admitted having threatened to give Mr. Austen and the poor people into the custody of the police.—Mr. Combe directed the poor people to be sent to Ireland at the expense of the county.

THE MARKETS.

CORN EXCHANGE.—Owing, in a great measure, to the supplies of wheat of home produce offering at Mark-lane having been extremely scanty since our last, a decided firmness has been apparent in the demand for that article, and the rates have been steadily maintained, while the whole of the quantity brought forward has been disposed of without difficulty. Infree foreign wheat several large sales have been effected, at prices fully equal to those noted in our last report. The sale for all kinds of barley has proved inactive, yet we can notice no alteration in the currencies. Good sound malt has commanded full as much money, but other kinds have been much neglected. We have had a fair average supply of oats, which have moved off slowly, at late figures. Both beans and peas have had a downward tendency; but the value of flour has been steadily supported, the nominal figure of the best town-made flour being 42s per 280lbs.

English.—Wheat, Essex and Kent, red, 46s to 55s; ditto white, 54s to 61s; Norfolk and Suffolk, red, 42s to 56s; do. white, 51s to [illegible]; rye, 34s to [illegible]; grinding barley, 27s to 29s; malting do., 30s to 32s; Grinding oats, 14s to 15s; Suffolk and Norfolk malt, 46s to 56s; brown do., 50s to 54s. Kingston and Ware, 56s to 62s; Chevalier, 62s; Yorkshire and Lincolnshire feeds, 24s to 26s; potato do., 25s to 26s; Youghal and Cork, black, 17s to [illegible] do. white, 19s to 20s; tick beans, new, 34s to 36s; [illegible] 36s to 38s; [illegible] per quarter. Town-made flour, 40s to 47s; Suffolk, 36s to 38s; Stockton and Yorkshire [illegible] per 280 lbs. Foreign.—Free wheat, 50s to 60s. In bond—Barley, 30s; oats, new, 15s to 17s; do. feed, 14s to 16s; beans, 32s to 36s; peas, 32s to 37s; per quarter. Flour, America, 22s to 24s; Baltic, 22s per barrel.

Seed Market.—We have a steady inquiry for rapeseed, at full prices; linseed is also quite as dear; canary is again lower, with a slow inquiry. In all other kinds of seeds we have little alteration to notice. The following are the present rates:—Linseed, English, sowing, 48s to 57s; Baltic, crushing, 42s to 46s; Mediterranean and Odessa, 43s to 46s; hempseed, 35s to 40s; per quarter; coriander, 10s to 18s per cwt.; brown mustard seed, 10s to 11s; white do., 10s to 10s 6d; tares, 5s 6d to 6s 0d per bushel; English rapeseed, new, 30l to 33l per last of ten quarters. Linseed cakes, English, 10l to 10l 10s; do. foreign, 7l to 7l 10s per 1000; rapeseed cakes, 5l 5s to 6l per ton.

Imperial Weekly Average.—Wheat, 52s 5d; barley, 28s 5d; Oats, 18s 6d; rye, 34s 6d; beans, 33s 4d; peas, 33s 8d.

Imperial Averages of Six Weeks which govern Duty—Wheat, 53s 3d; Barley, 27s 6d; Oats, 18s 3d; Rye, 30s 6d; Beans, 32s 4d; Peas, 33s 0d per quarter.

Duty on Foreign Corn.—Wheat, 18s 0d; Barley, 9s 0d; Oats, 6s 0d; Rye, 10s 6d; Beans, 9s 6d; Peas, 9s 6d.

Bread.—The prices of wheaten Bread in the metropolis are from 7½d to 8d; of household ditto, 6d to 7d for the 4lb loaf.

Tea.—The public sale have gone off heavily this week, yet the merchants have refused to give way further in price. The quantity of tea on the market is much greater than the demand can take off. By private contract very little is doing. The deficiency is falling off. The stocks now are [illegible],000lbs.; at the corresponding period last year they were [illegible],000lbs; and at the same time in 1845, 38,875,315lbs.

Coffee.—West India coffee has been in good demand this week, and the prices have declined about 6d. per cwt. At public sale, of 103 bags. Barbadoes, the rates obtained were 61s 6d to 67s 6d per cwt. for low to fine. The arrivals have not been very large since our last report, yet the show of samples is extensive. 5996 bags of Mauritius have been brought to the hammer, and sold slowly, at rather lower rates. Good to yellow fetched 54s to 62s 6d; middling to fine brown 48s to 53s; and low 46s to 48s 6d per cwt. The demand for Bengal has been limited, and 4440 bags went at a shade less than 42s per cwt., middling to fine white selling at 54s to 58s 6d; yellow 52s to 53s 6d. We have had a fair business going in foreign sugar, and full rates are paid for most sorts. At auction 1960 baskets of Java were all sold at 44s to 48s for brown; 52s to 52s 6d for grey; and 51s to 52s 6d for low white. 500 boxes of Havannah went at 52s to 59s for low and middling yellow, and middling white 30s 6d. 160 chests of Brazil 14s to 17s for low to fine brown; but 3000 bags of Manilla were withdrawn. The refined market is dull. Small lumps are 72s. Crushed is firm, at 73s 6d.

Coffee.—This market is rather dull for home use and exportation. Large quantities have been offered publicly. Ceylon, of which nearly 2800 bags have been disposed of this week, has sold at 52s to 60s for good and fine ordinary, and 70s to 91s 6d for superior, being 1s to 2s cheaper. Most of the other parcels have been bought in.

Rice.—About 2300 bags of Bengal rice have been offered, and mostly sold at rather lower rates, good to fine fetching 11s 6d to 12s 6d per cwt.

Spices.—The demand has been steady for black pepper, at full prices. At auction 1200 bags Sumatra pepper sold at 5½d to 5¾d per lb; 200 bags white pepper partly sold at 5½d to 5¾d for middling white; 120 bags of pimento 2½d to 2¾d; 19 casks nutmegs 3s 1d to 3s 3d; 11 cases cloves 2s 1d to 2s 2d per lb.

Saltpetre.—The market is very dull, and prices have declined 6d per cwt. At auction 1340 bags were only in part sold at 29s for 4½ per cent refraction.

Tallow.—We have a good business doing at 48s 3d to 48s 6d for P.Y.C. on the spot, and at 48s 6d for delivery.

We have a large arrival of Irish butter, on account of which the demand for that article is heavy, at a decline of from 1s to 2s per cwt.; fine Dutch is rather lower, 104s to 108s being accepted for fine Friesland. Good bacon is fully as dear, but other kinds are a mere drug.

Hops and Seeds.—Prices of hops and pockets have been fairly supplied with both hay and straw, the demand for which has ruled dull, at the following prices:—meadow hay £3 5s to £4 15s; clover hay £4 10s to £5 15s; oat straw £1 16s to £2 2s; and wheat straw £1 18s to £2 2s per load.

Coals.—Adair's 15s; Carr's Hartley 17s; New Tanfield 14s; West Wylam 15s 6d., Wylam 15s 6d; Gosforth 21s; Lamoton 22s 6d; Hetton 22s 6d; second 22s 6d., Tallies 23s. Ships arrived 13.

Hops.—Although we have a very large supply of new hops on sale here the demand is tolerably steady, at the following prices:—Kent pockets 100s to 130s; Sussex ditto 80s to 105s; and Farnham 175s to 185s per cwt. The duty is £135,000.

Potatoes.—The imports this week have been about 1200 packages. By private contract very little is doing at late rates.

Smithfield. The supplies of stock having been very large this week, the general demand has ruled heavy, at drooping prices. Nearly 100 head of foreign beasts have been on offer. Beef from 3s 8d to 4s 4d; mutton 3s 6d to 4s 8d; veal 3s 8d to 4s 8d; and pork 4s to 4s 10d per 8 lbs., to sink the offal.

Newgate and Leadenhall.—We have been very heavily supplied with both town and country killed meat, with the demand for which we have been inactive, and the rates have had a downward tendency. Beef from 3s 4d to 3s 10d; mutton 3s 4d to 4s 4d; veal 3s 4d to 4s 8d; and pork 4s to 4s 10d per 8 lbs., by the carcass.

ROBERT HERBERT.

THE MARKETS.

BRITISH FUNDS.—(CLOSING PRICES YESTERDAY.)

Bank Stock, 169½
3 per Cent Red., —
3 per Cent Cons., 93
3½ per Cent Red., —
New 3½ per Cent, 101¾
New 5 per Cent, —
Long Annuities to expire Jan. 1860, —
Oct. 1859, —
Jan. 1860, —

India Stock, — [illegible]
Ditto Bonds, —
Ditto Old Annuities, —
Ditto New Annuities, —
Ex. Bills, 1000l., 2d., 82 pm.
Ditto 500l., — pm.
Ditto Small, 83 pm.
Bank Stock for Opg., —
India Stock for Acct., —
Consols for Acct., 93¾

SHARES.

Bristol and Exeter (— [illegible]	London and Blackwall (p.) —
Edinburgh and Glasgow (30 p.) 16	London and Birmingham (90 p),
Great Western p),	Ditto Thirds (— p), —
Ditto New (60 p), 60	Ditto New shares (— p), 30¾
Ditto fifth (4 p),	London and South Western
London and Brighton (50 p), 36¾	[illegible]

DEATHS.

At Caenby Hall, the lady of John Golden, Esq., of a son.—At Windsor, the Hon. Mrs. Tottenham, of a daughter.—At Geneva, on the 30th of September, the lady of Thomas Neville Abdy, Esq., of Albyns, Essex, of a daughter.—In Notting hill-square, the lady of Joseph Lock, Esq., of a son.—At the rectory, Ewhurst, Sussex, the wife of the Rev. George Watts, of a son.

MARRIAGES.

At St. Margaret's, Westminster, Joseph Cubitt, Esq., of Great George-street, to Ellen, youngest daughter of the late Lieut.-J. Moore, R.N., of Hermonsbury, Robert Walkington, Esq., High-street, Bloomsbury, to Emma, daughter of Richard Poppleton, Esq., Grange-road. — At Edinburgh, Robert Ellis Dudgeon, Esq., M.D., of Liverpool, to Emilia, daughter of the late Lt.-Colonel John Sutherland Sinclair, R.A. — At Pyrehford, Somersetshire, the Rev. John Gaselee, rector of Little Yeldham, Essex, to Sarah, daughter of Henry Mant, Esq., of Bath. — At St. Pancras, George Prince Sealy, Esq., Lieutenant Bombay Artillery, to Anne, daughter of Richard Sealy, Esq., of Gordon-place, Tavistock-square. — At St. Pancras, David Edwards, Esq., of Northampton, to Fanny, daughter of John Simons, Esq., of Camden-town. — At St. Andrew's, North Brixton, Charles Harvey Morris, Esq., surgeon of H.M.S. Racer, to Louisa, youngest daughter of Dr. Clatterbuck, New Bridge-street. — At St. Saen, in Normandy, M. Pascal Bazot, of Belle Vue, to Isabella Henrietta, only daughter of the late Captain W. H. Brisbane, R.N., and granddaughter of the late Admiral Brisbane. — At Bellsbank, Ayrshire, David Woodburn, Esq., M.D., Bengal Medical Establishment, to Jane, third daughter of the late John Walker, Esq., Bellsbank. — At Newtown, the Rev. Henry Butler, vicar of Bettus, to Elizabeth, widow of the late Frederic Brandstrom, Esq., of Newtown, Montgomeryshire.

DEATHS.

At his house in Sloane-street, John William Laing, Esq., late of the Bengal Civil Service. — At Sussex-square, Hyde park, Lieut.-General Sir John Sinclair, Bart., of Dunbeath, N.B. — At Edinburgh, Lieut.-Colonel W. R. Cheyne, late of the 47th Foot. — At Herbert Lodge, near Dublin, Francis Doughas, Esq., aged 70, Post Captain, R.N. — At Hampstead, James Ivory, LL.D., and member of the Institute of France. — In his 81st year, the Rev. W. Kirkbank, a native of Cumberland. — At Maidenhead, Berkshire, the Rev. R. Treffry, supernumerary Wesleyan Minister. Mr. Treffry published several volumes at different times, and was President of Conference in 1833. — At Castle House, Wyvelscombe, Somerset, Major-General Charles A. Walker, of the H.E.I.C.S., and of Whetsleigh House, near Taunton, aged 69. — At Portsmouth, William Butterfield, Esq., Rear-Admiral of the Red, aged 78. — At Upper Brook-street, the Hon. Caroline Montagu, grand-daughter of Robert, third Duke of Manchester. — At Mid-Calder manse, county of Edinburgh, the Rev. John Sunsinic, D.D., in the 76th year of his age, and the 46th of his ministry. — At Hull, F. W. Coe, of Gray's Inn, solicitor, son of W. M. Coe, Esq., of Brook-street, Grosvenor-square. — In St. James's-square, Lieut.-Colonel George Thornhill, C.B., formerly of the 13th Light Infantry, and late commanding the lieutenant her Majesty's 14th Foot.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

COMPLETE SUCCESS OF THE ADVENTURES OF A GENTLEMAN AND FIRST NIGHT OF A NEW EXTRAVAGANZA.

ROYAL OLYMPIC THEATRE, Wych-street, Strand. Lessee, Mr. G. Wild. By authority of the Lord Chamberlain.

The whole of the interior entirely re-decorated, and a new Gallery, erected by Mr Mackintosh, capable of holding upwards of 600. Open for the Winter Season.

Monday, October 19, 1843, and during the Week, when will be performed a new Drama (in Three Acts), adapted from one of the most popular works of Sir Edward Lytton Bulwer, Bart., by the author of "My Man Tom," "Gwynneth Vaughan," and other favourite pieces originally produced at this Theatre, to be called THE ADVENTURES OF A GENTLEMAN. The Music selected and arranged by Mr. Calcott. The new Scenery by Messrs. J. W. Brierley, Scott, and Assistants. Mr. Reginald Cannoville, Mr. Pitt-James; Henry Pelham, Mr. Hadford; Dr. Hellebore, Mr. Brookes; Tom Thornton, Mr. Baker; Nat Sursnicle, Mr. Ross; Job Jonson, Mr. G. Wild, with a new Song, entitled "The Life of a Vagabond." Gertrude Dormer, Miss Lavinia Mewis (her first appearance at this Theatre); Letty Lambswool, Mrs. Chamberlain at the "Eying Children"); Miss Lobatt, with a new Song, called "If I were a Lady."

After which, for the First Time, a new Farcical Extravaganza, by the author of "I Artful Dodge," and called JACK ROKES AND DOM STYLES. Mr. Hargreaves, Mr. Turnour; Mr. Newton Vortimer, Mr. Hadford; Jack Rokes, Mr. Wild; Dom Styles, Mr. Parsons' opinion, anybody in the action of the word, and everybody in their own opinion; Tag, Mr. Ross; Rag, Mr. Holeroyd; Bobtail, Mr. Pitt-James; Mr. Debenham, Mr. Brookes; Dame Dorothy, Mrs. Granby; Miss Ellen Tree, Miss Arden; Flounce, Miss Downman.

To conclude with LIFE IN THE CLOUDS; or, OLYMPUS IN AN UPROAR.

Also in preparation, a new Burletta, by S. Lover, Esq., and a variety of Novelties. Leader, Mr. Calcott; Stage Manager, Mr. C. Baker.

Boxes, 3s. 6d., Second Price, 2s. 6d., Pit, 1s.; Gallery, 6d. Private Boxes, £1 11s. 6d., to be had at the Box office. Doors open at Half-past Six o'clock; the Performances commence at Seven; Second Price at Nine. The Box office under the superintendence of Mr. Watts, and will be open from Eleven till Four o'clock.

ROYAL POLYTECHNIC EXHIBITION, extended into CAVENDISH SQUARE. Excellent Specimens of Machinery just completed, and at work by Steam Power, in the Hall of Manufactures, the adopted Patent Printing Machine, Patent Brick and Tile Making Machine, Taylor's Patent Solid Headed Pin Making Machine, &c. The Weekly List of Popular Lectures, delivered by Dr. Ryan, Professor Scanlon, and the other Lecturers, with the appointed hours for each, is suspended in the Hall. The fine Exterior of St. Peter's, at Rome, and the Interior of the Chapel of St. Helena, at Jerusalem, the latter after Dr. Roberts, R.A. (published by Mr. Moon), are the latest additions to the Enlarged Dissolving Views. The Orrery, Diving Bell, Diver, &c. &c. To the Cosmoramic Views, shown in the Evenings, a beautiful addition has just been made. Leader of the Band, Mr. Wallis.—Admission, One Shilling. Schools, half-price.

ROYAL ADELAIDE GALLERY, LOWTHER ARCADE, STRAND, Open Daily, from Eleven to Five, and in the Evening from a Quarter before Seven till Half-past Ten o'clock, with a splendid exhibition of paintings by British Artists, brilliantly illuminated by night; upwards of 3000 Models, Sculptures, Philosophical Apparatus, Daguerreotype Portraits, &c.; Popular Lectures and Experiments every half hour; and the most magnificent series of Dissolving Views ever exhibited.

A Grand Promenade Concert, Vocal and Instrumental, every evening, comprising the services of the following distinguished artists:—Instrumental solo Performers, Cornet-à-Piston, Mr. Laurent; Flute, Mr. Sayler; Concertina, Master Hagreave; Vocal, Mr. T. Baker, of the Italian Opera; Pianoforte, Mr. T. Julian Adams; and a full orchestral band. Vocalists, Mrs. Wilson, Miss Thornton, Miss Taylor, Mr. Martyn, Mr. R. F. Smith. Chorus Master, Mr. Wilson. Musical Director, Mr. T. Julian Adams.

Between the first and second part of the Concert, the splendid Gas Macroscope is exhibited on Monday, Wednesday, Friday, and Saturday; and Magical Illusions, Tuesday and Thursday. At the close of the Concert, a Lecture is delivered on some subject of popular interest, which is followed by the magnificent Dissolving Views.

The Laughing Gas every Tuesday and Saturday evening.

On Monday next that wonderful [illegible] will make her first appearance at this Establishment, and the "Comic Mirror" [illegible] o'clock, and in the Evening [illegible]

GRAND MODEL of the BASILICA of ST. PAUL, ROME, by ANDREA GAMBASIS. [illegible] Under the Patronage of [illegible] Majesty, Prince Albert, [illegible] Majesty the Queen Dowager, [illegible] Majesty Queen Adelaide, [illegible] Majesty the Queen of the Belgians, [illegible] Majesty the Queen of Portugal, [illegible] Majesty the Queen Dowager of Saxony, [illegible] Majesty the Queen of Prussia, [illegible] Majesty the Queen of Bavaria, [illegible] Majesty the Queen of Hanover, [illegible] Majesty the Queen of Wurtemberg, [illegible] Majesty the Queen of Naples, [illegible] Majesty the Queen of Sardinia, [illegible] Majesty the Queen of Spain, [illegible] Majesty the Queen Dowager of Spain, [illegible] Majesty the Queen Dowager of Sardinia, [illegible] Majesty the Queen Dowager of Naples, [illegible] Majesty the Queen Dowager of Holland, [illegible] Majesty the Queen Dowager of Bavaria, [illegible] Majesty the Queen Dowager of Wurtemberg, [illegible] Majesty the Queen Dowager of Hanover, [illegible] Majesty the Queen Dowager of Prussia, [illegible] Majesty the Queen Dowager of Saxony, [illegible] Majesty the Queen Dowager of Portugal

THE CHURCHES OF THE METROPOLIS.—No. XI.

ST. MARY-LE-BOW, CHEAPSIDE.

The early histories of the greater number of old buildings in London, both ecclesiastical and otherwise, are connected with so many and such strange events, placing vividly before us a state of society entirely different from what we are accustomed to, that they have the air rather of romantic fictions than of literal records; but serve nevertheless to show the changes which have taken place, and to impress strongly upon us, amongst other lessons, the advantages which have attended the spread of education. This must have been apparent in many of our former accounts, but in none is it more so than in that of the church we are about to illustrate, St. Mary-le-Bow, which, if not originally a Roman temple, as was generally believed, was one of the earliest churches built by our Norman conquerors; has been destroyed by storm and fire; was at one time garrisoned and besieged; and was afterwards the scene of an assassination. To go, however, a little more into detail:—

We first find mention of it as a Christian church in the reign of William the Conqueror. Stow says, it was the first in the city built on arches of stone, and that it was therefore called St. Mary de Arcubus, or the Bow; although he elsewhere says, but with less apparent probability, that it took its name from certain stone arches, supporting a lantern on the top of the tower.

In the year 1090, which was during the reign of William Rufus, the roof of the church was blown off by the wind, and four of the rafters were driven into the ground with such violence, that, although they were each twenty-six feet long, little more than four feet of their length was visible, the ground in the neighbourhood being then a mere fen. About a hundred years after this event a tumult of a serious nature occurred in the city, which led to the assault upon the church before alluded to. The ringleader was William Fitz Osbert, surnamed Long-beard, an individual of loose morals, who apparently possessed great talents, and was almost worshipped by the lower orders, on account of his assertions as a professed advocate for the poor, against the oppressions of the rich. An attempt being made to seize him, he took refuge in Bow steeple, together with various followers, and being well provided with ammunition and provisions, was able for a long time to defy the authorities. In order to drive him out, the steeple was fired. This had the desired effect; the rioters were made prisoners, and after a hasty trial were hanged at the Elms, in Smithfield, at that time the usual place of execution. It appears that Fitz Osbert did not lose his reputation amongst the people with his life: for it is said, that after his death vast numbers of persons resorted to Smithfield, expecting that miracles would be performed, and that they carried away as holy relics pieces of the earth on which his blood had fallen.

In 1271 part of the steeple, which probably had been much injured during the attack on Fitz Osbert, fell down, and caused the death of several persons. It seems, however, to have been repaired soon afterwards; for in 1284 we find that one Ducket, a goldsmith, who had seriously wounded a person named Ralph Crepin (under what circumstances is not mentioned), took refuge in this church, and slept in the steeple. While there, certain friends of Crepin entered during the night, and violating the sanctuary, first slew him, and then so placed the body as to induce the belief that he had committed suicide. A verdict to this effect was accordingly returned at the inquisition, and the body was interred with customary indignities. The real circumstances, however, being afterwards discovered through the evidence of a boy, who it appears was with Ducket in his voluntary confinement, the murderers, amongst whom was a woman, were apprehended and executed. On this occurrence, the church was interdicted for a time, and the doors and windows were stopped up with brambles.

The old steeple was not entirely rebuilt until 1469, when the Common Council ordered that Bow bell should be rung nightly at nine o'clock. In 1512 some additions were made to the upper part of the steeple, and Stow says, "the arches, or bows thereupon, with the lanthorns, five in number, to wit, one at each corner, and one on the top in the middle, upon the arches, were afterwards finished with stone, brought from Caen in Normandy." It was proposed that these lanterns should have been glazed and illuminated, to serve as beacons for travellers; but it does not appear that this was ever done. The first rector mentioned by Newcourt is William de Cilecester, presented Feb. 1287; and the earliest monument in the church of which we have any record was in memory of Sir John Coventry, who was Lord Mayor in 1425. Weever gives his epitaph.

The advowson of St. Mary-le-Bow belongs to the Archbishop of Canterbury; it is the chief of his thirteen peculiars. By the great fire of 1666 the old church was destroyed; and in 1671 the present edifice was commenced by Sir Christopher Wren. After its erection, the parish was united to two others, namely, Allhallows, Honey-lane, and St. Pancras, Soper-lane; and as the right of presenting to the latter of these is also vested in the Archbishop of Canterbury, and that of the former in the Grocers' Company, the archbishop nominates twice consecutively to the united rectory, and then the Grocers' Company nominates once. The present rector is the Rev. Archdeacon A. Hamilton.

The body of the church is not remarkable as an architectural composition, although in the interior it is bold and handsome. An arcade on either side divides it into a nave and side aisles, and on the face of these arcades rise Corinthian columns, terminated by an entablature which supports a large waggon-headed ceiling, ornamented with bands containing rosettes and foliage. There is a gallery in each aisle, which greatly interferes with the general effect of the interior. At the west end there is a small organ supported on the framing which encloses a doorway below. The altar-piece consists of Corinthian pilasters and entablature, bearing a pediment, surmounted by carved imitations of candles. The interior is well lighted by clere-story and other windows.

Campanili or bell towers, which probably first arose in Byzantium, and were not generally known earlier than the seventh or eighth century, were not originally an essential part of a church; but in those instances where they did occur were at some distance from it, and formed a distinct building. Wren has contrived, in all his churches, to preserve this character for his steeples as much as possible, by commencing them in all cases directly from the ground. In the beautiful example before us, being connected with the main building merely by a corridor, we obtain the campanile, for the most part in its proper shape—distinct and unattached, whereby the effect of its great height is increased, and its form, as the small proportion which the base bears to the height is more apparent, becomes picturesque and striking. To describe, or criticise at length, the steeple of Bow church would now be supererogatory. Opinion has stamped it as one of the most successful works of its class, both as regards design and construction, and with this opinion we perfectly agree.

WALKING DRESS OF THE CLERGY.

The canons by which the clergy of the Church of England are professedly governed, and by which, in fact, they are governed, as far as they are governed at all, require in those "having any ecclesiastical living" a separate and distinctive dress.

The canon in question would be complied with by the clergy wearing a canonical coat or cassock at ordinary times, superadding to it, both on all public solemnities, and on every other dress occasion, the gown of their ministry or degree, the hood, the scarf; and, out of doors, the square cap.

The town clergy might wear the cassock and gown, and the country clergy the cassock alone; and the gown might generally be superadded for warmth, or left off for coolness—omitted at home and worn abroad.

In winter the cassock might be made of cloth, or of any other very warm material. And in summer it might be worn of black cashmere, bombazine, or silk. Indeed in the present day there are so many new inventions for every want—which would extend in this line if what we are recommending were adopted—that there would be no lack of materials, soft and strong, warm and soft, to suit every varied constitution, and liking, and climate, and season. In warm weather, it might probably be worn single-breasted, and buttoned straight up the middle; and in cold, as it is generally now made, double-breasted, it might either be made so loose as to allow for any quantity of wraps to be worn underneath; or, if fitting the body like a coat, the canon provides for a priest's cloak being thrown over it when required. For walking and riding, the cassock might be made the length of an ordinary great coat; and for dress and solemn occasions, it might have that flowing length which seems most proper to it. If these things were attended to, we doubt whether there is any kind of dress worn by any class of persons in this country which would possess equal comfort or healthiness; affording the means of increasing it to any warmth, or depressing it to almost any coolness; and having what are considered the highest requisites of clothing, the qualities of covering entirely, of being warm, and loose. And it may be mentioned, that, when once adopted, it would not be found more expensive, if so much so, as that now ordinarily worn.

THE LONDON GAZETTE.

TUESDAY, OCT. 4.

DOWNING-STREET, OCT. 4.—The Queen has been pleased to appoint General Sir Robert Thomas Wilson, Knight, to be Governor and Commander-in-Chief in and over the city and garrison of Gibraltar; and her Majesty has been further pleased to appoint the said Sir Robert Thomas Wilson to be Vice-Admiral of the same.

The Queen has been pleased to appoint Major Henry Havelock, of her Majesty's 13th Regiment of Foot, to be a Companion of the Most Honourable Military Order of the Bath.

Her Majesty has further been pleased to appoint the following Officers, in the service of the East India Company, to be companions of the said Order:—Brevet-Major James Fraser, of the 11th Regiment of Bengal Light Cavalry. Brevet-Major Augustus Abbott, of the Bengal Artillery. Brevet-Major C. E. T. Oldfield, of the 5th Regiment of Bengal Light Cavalry. Brevet-Major G. Broadfoot, of the 34th Regiment of Madras Native Infantry. Brevet-Major (local rank in Affghanistân) George Hall M'Gregor, of the Bengal Artillery.

FOREIGN OFFICE, Sept. 22.—Her Majesty has been pleased to appoint James Hook, Esq., in the room of Michael Linning Melville, Esq., promoted, to be her Majesty's Commissioner of Arbitration in the mixed British and Foreign Courts of Commission established at Sierra Leone, under the treaties and conventions with foreign Powers for the suppression of the slave trade.

WHITEHALL, Oct. 1.—In pursuance of an act passed in the third year of his late Majesty King William IV., entitled "An Act for regulating Schools of Anatomy," the Right Hon. Sir James Robert Graham, Bart., her Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for the Home Department, has appointed Rutherford Alcock and John Hacot, Esqrs., to be Inspectors of Anatomy in England and Wales; and Andrew Wood, M.D., to be Inspector of Anatomy in Scotland.

WAR-OFFICE, Oct. 4.

Brevet.—To be Lieutenant-Colonel in the Army.—Major Robert Pattison, of the 13th Foot.

To be Majors in the Army.—Captain Henry Havelock, of the 13th Regiment of Foot. Captain Arthur Philip Savage Wilkinson, of the 13th Regiment of Foot. Captain Hamlet Wade, of the 13th Regiment of Foot. Captain James H. Fenwick, of the 13th Regiment of Foot.

To be Majors in the Army in the East Indies only—Captain Augustus Abbott, Bengal Artillery. Captain Christopher Edward Thomas Oldfield, 5th Regiment Bengal Light Infantry. Captain George Broadfoot, 34th Madras Native Infantry. Captain Thomas Seaton, 35th Bengal Native Infantry. Captain Henry Pelham Burn, 1st Bengal Native Infantry. Captain Edward Rowland Mainwaring, 16th Bengal Native Infantry. Captain Julius Brockman Backhouse, Bengal Artillery. Captain Astley George Francis John Younghusband, 35th Bengal Native Infantry.

To be Aide-de-Camp to the Queen, with the rank of Colonel in the Army in the East Indies only—Lieutenant-Colonel Thomas Monteath, 35th Bengal Native Infantry.

To have the local rank of Major in Affghanistan—Lieutenant George Hall M'Gregor, Bengal Artillery.

ADMIRALTY, OCTOBER.

Corps of Royal Marines—First Lieutenant John Fraser to be Captain, vice Palliser, deceased. Second Lieutenant David Blyth to be First Lieutenant, vice Fraser, promoted.

This Gazette contains notices that the following places have been duly registered for solemnizing marriages therein:—St. Marie's Catholic Church, Bury, Lancashire. St. Mary's Chapel, Llanarth, Monmouthshire. The Caledonian Church, All Saints, Newcastle-upon-Tyne.

BANKRUPTCIES ANNULLED.—J. RALEIGH and T. S. GOODE, Manchester, merchants. T. S. GOODE, Manchester, merchant.

BANKRUPTS.—S. YOUNGER, Great Tower-street, merchant.—B. J. Wood, Liverpool, optician.—A. MATHE and S. MOORE, Liverpool, merchants.—B. HARGREAVES, Manchester, tailor. R. HARRIS, Birmingham, glass manufacturer.—M. PEARSON, Workington, Cumberland, chemist. S. THORP, Manchester, merchant.

SCOTCH SEQUESTRATIONS.—H. DONALDSON, Dunfermline, manufacturer.—G. and J. HYMERS, Galashiels, manufacturers. E. STEVEN and Co., Glasgow, cotton spinners.—J. HUTCHISON, Leith, merchant.—B. FORRESTER and Co., Glasgow, merchants.

FRIDAY, OCT. 7.

WAR-OFFICE, Oct. 7.

5th Foot: Lieut. J. D. Bourdieu to be Captain, vice Ward: Second-Lieut. G. B. Milburn to be First-Lieutenant, vice Du Bourdieu.—6th Foot: D. H. Robington to be Ensign, vice Bishop. 7th Foot: Ensign T. Bolton to be Lieutenant, vice Stuart. 22nd Foot: J. P. Molnie to be Assistant-Surgeon, vice Campbell.—27th Foot: Ensign J. T. D'Arcy Hutton to be Lieutenant, vice Prior. 50th Foot: C. F. H. Barlow, M.D., to be Assistant-Surgeon, vice M'Bean. 58th Foot: Assistant-Surgeon R. Bannatine, to be Assistant-Surgeon, vice Denny.—65th Foot: Ensign T. G. Knox to be Lieutenant, vice Wise; G. Meyler to be Ensign, vice Knox.

Rifle Brigade: Second-Lieutenant the Hon. R. Charteris to be First-Lieutenant, vice Ward; the Hon. J. S. Jocelyn to be Second-Lieutenant, vice Charteris.

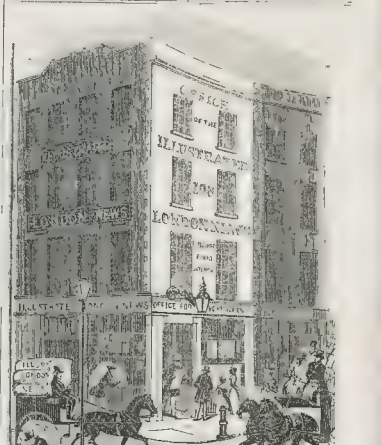
HOSPITAL STAFF.—To be Assistant-Surgeons to the Forces: Assistant-Surgeon W. Denny, vice Cooper, appointed to the 17th Light Dragoons; G. Butler, vice Ross.

MEMORANDUM.—The names of the gentlemen appointed to an Ensigncy in the 36th Foot, on the 27th ult., are Francis Joseph Cresswell, not Frederick, as before stated.

BANKRUPTCY SUPERSEDED.—J. W. PALMER, Old Buckenham, Norfolk, grocer.

BANKRUPTS.—B. HOLMES, Birmingham, bootmaker. W. MATTHEWS, Bushey, carpenter. J. M'CONNAL, Liverpool, tea dealer. J. C. SMITH, Woolwich, Kent, grocer. J. BURTON, Levenshulme, Lancashire, victualler.

PRICE OF SUGAR.—The Average Price of Brown or Muscovado Sugar, computed from the Returns made in the Week ending Oct. 4, 1849, is 35s. 6½d. per cwt., exclusive of the Duties of Customs paid or payable thereon on the importation thereof into Great Britain.



Just Published, Part IV. of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, in a beautiful Tartan Wrapper, price 3s.

CONTAINING the whole of the QUEEN'S VISIT TO SCOTLAND, with the following splendid Illustrations:—

The Royal George Yacht. Woolwich Dock Yard. Her Majesty's arrival, previous to the embarkation for Scotland. Embarkation of the Queen for her northern dominions. Her Majesty going on board the Royal George. Chopping the Hawser. Hauling off the Coal Barge. Passing the Nore. Deer Stalking in the Highlands. The Throne Room, Holyrood Palace, and Ancient Regalia. View of Dalkeith, the seat of the Duke of Buccleuch. Portrait of a Highlander in Ancient Costume. Portrait of a High and Baggage. View of Edinburgh. The Palace of Scone. Carron Water. View of Edinburgh, from the Calton Hill. Edinburgh Castle, from the Grass Market. View of Dunkeld. View of Perth, from Kinnoul Hill. View of Stanley Castle, the Ladies' Rock, &c. Bridge of Earn, Perth. Trafalgar Square. Nelson's Column. Grouse shooting in the Moors of Scotland. View of Loch Erne. Ruins on the Island of Devenish. St. Paul's, Covent Garden. The Fashions. The Queen in Edinburgh, leaving the Royal Institution. The Doncaster St. Leger. The Doncaster Cup. Buck Shooting in the Highlands. Her Majesty leaving the Duchess of Athol's. The Queen entering Perth. Entrance into Dunkeld. Taymouth Castle.—Broadsword Dance. Taymouth Castle.—Highland Reel. The Queen leaving Perth. Her Majesty on board. Group.—Newhaven Fishwomen. The Queen and the Prince viewing "Moose Meg." The Queen and Prince Albert leaving Drummond Castle. Map of the North Eastern Boundary between the British Possessions and the United States. Curraghmore. Portrait of the celebrated Mare, Bessy. Portrait of Lord Palmerston. Tour of her Majesty in Scotland.—Illustrations of seven Triumphal Arches. The Queen and Prince Albert entering Taymouth Park. The Queen and the Prince leaving Taymouth, and passing Kenmore. Her Majesty and the Prince embarking on Loch Tay. View of Taymouth Castle, the seat of the Marquis of Breadalbane. Her Majesty at Loch Erne Head, changing horses. The Royal Barge. Steps erected for the Queen's landing at Auchmore. The Royal Ferry on Loch Tay. The Queen and Prince Albert landing at Auchmore. Auchmore House, Kilun. View of Kilin, from the Bridge. Gate at Drummond Castle.—The 42nd Highlanders marching out. Portrait of a Chorus Church Boy. Somerset House Stamp Office. All Souls' Church, Langham Place. Her Majesty and Prince Albert at Granton Pier, besides many other engravings.

May be had, if ordered, of all Booksellers and Newsmen.

Separate Tartan Wrappers may be had, price 6d. each.

Office, 198, Strand.

LONDON: Printed by ROBERT PALMER (at the Office of Palmer & Clayton), 10, Crane court; and published by WILLIAM LITTLE, at 198, Strand, where all communications are requested to be addressed.—SATURDAY, October 6, 1849.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS

No. 23] FOR THE WEEK ENDING SATURDAY, OCTOBER 15, 1842. [SIXPENCE.

OFFICE, 198, STRAND.

CONDITION OF THE PEOPLE.

There are several circumstances strongly urged upon our attention, by the immediate events of the times, which almost gather themselves into the nature of an appeal to all good men to consider promptly and seriously the present condition of the great body of the people. Towards the close of the last week a sort of mock-meeting of Parliament took place, for the purpose of effecting by commission its further prorogation until the month of November, and we are now led to express a strong hope that it will then meet, without the usual additional delay, for the purpose of legislating upon the practical moral lessons which have been taught it, in all forms and from all quarters, since the last closing of its sessional deliberations.

The distress, the riots, the revenue, the poor-law, all combine to form an imposing array of legislatorial difficulties with which the spirit and virtue and wisdom of the country must be invoked to grapple without delay. The aspect of affairs has, indeed, grown to a crisis, and, for the sake of the future destinies of England, that crisis must be met manfully and at once.

In the first place, all reflective persons must be seriously struck by the last return of the state revenue. Notwithstanding the levy of £313,844 in income-tax, there is still a deficiency upon the quarter of no less than £67,473. This is an alarming progress in the wrong direction, and in the teeth of the strong and decided panacea by which our difficulties were to be cured. It is alarming, not in a mere pecuniary sense, but only as showing that without the income tax there would have been a falling off of £381,277 in one quarter's revenue—deducted by the poverty of the country from the treasury of the state—through the want of means on the part of the people to procure those articles of consumption which determine so much, not only the amount of money resources on the one hand, but of national prosperity on the other. Now, this is a mere fact, though an appalling one; and although it should be discussed independent of party and referred to the acts of no particular Government, yet it is a great confirmation of the existence of a terrible distress which it is the business of the ruling and legislating power to seek to remedy at once.

The riots and disturbances in the manufacturing districts have been, no doubt, terrible drawbacks to the increase of revenue through the Customs and Excise (the case which we printed in a former article from Stockbridge alone would, in a wider application to the entire field of agitation, prove this indubitably); but even these riots have disclosed also a condition of public suffering which the state should alleviate; and they and the new Poor-law combine to impose upon us the necessity of legislating upon some enlarged principles of liberal humanity, to work wholesome and cheering relief, and progressive amelioration in the entire prospects of the labouring poor. It is all nonsense to mix up party in this business—which is the business of Christianity, not of politics, and, although we find the Whigs badgering the Tories, the Tories the Whigs, and the Radicals both, upon this behoof—and although we see the blame beat like a tennis-ball from faction to faction, or from post to pillar of opinion, yet the great truth glares prominent and paramount before us, that the millions are distressed in a paralysing and most afflicting degree, and that their condition must be remedied, as far as human wisdom can remedy it, before the country can hope for any fair and contentful distribution of national happiness.

The evidences upon this head multiply from all quarters—and, among the rest, from the bench of justice, and the carefully qualified admissions of the ever-cautious law. We are just going to quote a sentence from the charge of the unwilling Lord Abinger — a charge, however, which in its general terms we hold to be as reprehensible as that of Lord Chief Justice Tindal, which preceded it, appeared admirable in all respects. We cannot help thinking that Lord Abinger's charge is essentially political, that it is a Tory charge in fact—when it ought only to be Conservative of opinion—that it propounds views when it should only have touched generalities, that it implies an animus when it should have been most scrupulously impartial and pure. We do not mean that it tends to prejudge or harm the case of the prisoners, but that it is clearly a speech of doctrine, and occasionally very bad doctrine too, a political essay that might have excited applause from the House of Lords, but, as having emanated from the bench of justice, will meet with as little favour from the good sense of the community, as did the equivocal taste which conferred upon the unscrupulous pander to the late Marquis of Hertford the dignity and character of "an excellent man." But to our purpose of quoting the truths which we have been thus justified in implying his lordship to have been "unwilling" to admit. Ecce signum—"You are aware, gentlemen, that occasional reverses in the tide of prosperity in a manufacturing and commercial nation must occur, and that when they occur they must produce, to a greater or less extent, much distress and privation among the labouring classes. I presume that the state of the country for some months, if not for some years, back may be traced to some of these checks in the tide of commercial and manufacturing prosperity. Much has been said of the privations to which the working classes have been reduced, and I make no doubt they are considerable, for it cannot be denied that many of the usual channels of trade have been interrupted, and that there was existing a general feeling of despondency among commercial men as to the advantage of engaging in commercial enterprises, the result of which was attended with great uncertainty."

Now, here is in itself an acknowledgment of misfortune within misfortune—of calamity rushing from its own source—of the bubble of distress spreading and widening over the waters of society, until it has blended with, and become a part of, the entire stream. And in another sentence his lordship says, "the dissatisfaction of the lower classes does not seem to have originated in any voluntary feeling:" implying, in other words, that, if their misery and privation had not been excessive, no existing class of agitators would have possessed the power, at once mischievous and melancholy, of leading them so fatally astray. This neither justifies nor much palliates the disturbances; but it does prove a condition of affliction requiring legislation energetic, immediate, and humane. This condition is most completely affirmed by the startling revenue return of the quarter, which is as the very ghost of the country's poverty spreading its arms before its affrighted face.

Nor can we help thinking with a contemporary, that the state of the Poor-laws is among the proximate causes of the distress which is thus admitted and proved. The Standard puts forward a position well worth examining upon this point:—"The excise revenue," it remarks, "and every other branch of revenue which depends upon general consumption, has been steadily diminishing since the new Poor-law Bill came into operation. This surely cannot be the effect of accident; this surely must demonstrate to all men not utterly stupified by the nonsense of the Malthusian economists, that there is something financially wrong in the change — something that affects injuriously classes which once imagined themselves secure from the reflection of blows administered to mere labourers—classes that lately would feel indignant at the hypothesis of any supposed identity between their interests and the interests of the poor. We have again and again endeavoured to show how it is that the new Poor-law affects all classes except the class of monied capitalists, and to prove that the interests of all classes—with the exception stated—are indeed identical. Whether we have succeeded in our proof it is not for us to say; but they who dispute our proposition are surely bound to show how, if that proposition be false, we see the extraordinary phenomenon, that since the new Poor-law came into operation the condition of all classes has steadily retrograded, as proved by infallible financial tests."

Now, whether this be the case or not, the subject is worth inquiry—all subjects, indeed, are worth inquiry—Corn-laws, free trade, any, every thing, the discussion of which will either point to the reasons or the remedies of the distress that is spread abroad.

The fact disclosed by the revenue returns that the people, as a multitude, are fearfully retrograding in their means of procuring the necessaries of human life is a humane question; and its consequence,—that the national treasury is proportionably diminishing in its natural resources,—a financial question which no country can afford to tamper with, and no Government can dare to neglect. The call of all classes should be for prompt, vigorous, and Christian legislation upon this all-absorbing interest, the personal (and, as in some measure bearing upon it, we may add, the religious and educational) condition of the people.

MARKET-PLACE, HANLEY, STAFFORDSHIRE.

We last week presented our readers with a view of the Parsonage House, Hanley, the residence of Dr. Vale, which was burned to the ground, during the late unhappy riots in the Staffordshire Potteries, and for which a number of misguided wretches (as will be seen by a report of the trials, to be found in another part of our paper) are now undergoing the various penalties which the law awards to this aggravated and alarming species of crime. Above all other parts of the disturbed districts, the misguided mob of Staffordshire have acquired a "bad eminence" for being foremost in the work of misrule, and establishing a reign of terror, by the perpetration of atrocities to which the people of this country are happily not familiar. These circumstances invest the scenes of these disorders and outbreaks with more than usual interest, and it is therefore that we have been induced to lay before our readers the above sketch of the town of Hanley. It will be remembered that at this place the mob first commenced those daring violations of the law which threatened for awhile to inspire the most frightful terrors in the minds of the orderly and well-disposed. The following description of the outrage, during the progress of the mob, may not be uninteresting:—

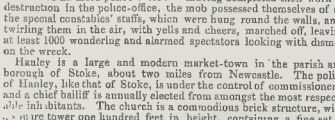
About ten o'clock the cry was raised, "To the lock-up!"—"Release the prisoners!" and in about five minutes they had effected their work, having released some half-dozen prisoners, not one of whom was confined on any charge arising out of the turn-out, or connected with recent disturbances of the peace. Behton, one of the Hanley police, who was at the lock-up at the time of the attack, was roughly handled, and with some difficulty made his escape. After their successful attack on the police station, the mob became more emboldened, and forthwith commenced an attack on the police-office itself, smashed the windows, and completely ransacked the place—tearing up many of the papers and books, with which they strewed the streets; and one fellow was heard boastingly to exclaim, "We shall have no more police-rates!" Having completed their work of destruction in the police-office, the mob possessed themselves of all the special constables' staffs, which were hung round the walls, and, twirling them in the air, with yells and cheers, marched off, leaving at least 1000 wondering and alarmed spectators looking with dismay on the wreck.

Hanley is a large and modern market-town in the parish and borough of Stoke, about two miles from Newcastle. The police of Hanley, like that of Stoke, is under the control of commissioners, and a chief bailiff is annually elected from amongst the most respectable inhabitants. The church is a commodious brick structure, with a square tower one hundred feet in height, containing a fine set of bells. There are various other places of worship belonging to dissenters of all denominations. There are two markets in the week (on Wednesday and Saturday), and four fairs in the year. We trust it may be long ere Hanley is again disgraced by such scenes as those to which we have already alluded. [We shall give an engraving in our next of the burning of Albion House, Shelton, the residence of William Parkes, Esquire, Magistrate.]



FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

CHINA.—The Times of Wednesday contains the following significant paragraph with regard to the Celestial Empire:—"On dit, that overtures have been made by an influential party in China to the British authorities in that country, the objects of which are to depose the Emperor, to establish another form of government, and to enter, should the revolution succeed, into terms of amity with Great Britain, both political and commercial."

FRANCE.—The Journal des Debats informs us that the Algerine war may last three years more, which is not surprising, Jugurtha and others having resisted the Romans much longer, and that, consequently, the 75,000 men demanded by General Bugeaud must be granted him.

The differences between England and America being settled, the American Ambassador to France, General Cass, has signified to his Government his wish to return to the United States, and will leave Paris as soon as he shall have received his letters of recall.

The Egyptian steamer, the Nile, containing the presents from Mehemet Ali to his Majesty Louis Philippe, arrived at Marseilles on the 4th instant. These presents consist of eight beautiful Arabian horses, and several magnificent shawls. His Excellency Artin Bey, the Viceroy's Secretary, who is charged to present them, arrived in the steamer.

By the Paris papers of Sunday it appears that M. Guizot has undertaken to avoid the difficulties of the right of search treaty, by proposing altogether a new treaty, in which France engages to exert herself energetically to repress the slave trade. If so, she must change her commanders, crews, ships, and orders on the coast of Africa. This M. Guizot is prepared to do. But, as General Cass has been consulted in the concoction of the new treaty, it is feared that it is not likely to be altogether to English taste.

The passive resistance of the vineyard owners in the south of France, and the quarrel between them and the revenue officers, continue some disquietude. M. Duchatel is said to have gone expressly to Bordeaux to see into this business. The American tariff has much increased the depression of the vine-owners. Accounts from Lyons and Marseilles are equally gloomy, especially from the former, where the American tariff strikes severely at the manufacture and export of silks.

The new penal code and code of criminal procedure, which, by order of the Pope, have been drawn up by a committee composed of the most eminent legists in Italy, presided over by Cardinal Bernetti, have just been published. These two codes, entitled Regolamento Organico di Procedura Criminale, and Regolamento organico sui delitti sue le pene, are a real work of improvement, and bear the mark of an enlightened philanthropy. By them all the privileges and exemptions hitherto enjoyed by the higher classes are abolished. They establish the perfect equality of all citizens before the law, that no person can be withdrawn from his natural judges. They maintain no exceptional tribunals, except the ecclesiastical ones, and those only for persons in orders, and for crimes and misdemeanours committed in the exercise of their functions. The punishment of death is preserved, but restricted to a very small number of crimes. All other punishments evidently have for object the amendment of the individuals on whom they are inflicted. As to foreigners, the enactments which bear on them are exceedingly liberal. After a delay of two months together in any part of the Pontifical States, they are no longer to be amenable in criminal matters to the police authorities, but to the ordinary tribunals, and in all cases in which they shall be found guilty of misdemeanours, or slight offences with extenuating circumstances, they are to be condemned to the smallest amount of punishment.—Galignani.

Queen Christina of Spain on Monday arrived from Malmaison at her house in the Rue de Courcelles, for the purpose of receiving the distinguished Spaniards who were desirous of paying their respects on the occasion of the anniversary of the birth-day of her daughter, Isabella II.

The Belgian journals announce the departure of the King and Queen of the Belgians on Sunday morning for Paris. Their Majesties were to arrive on Monday evening at St. Cloud.

The Quotidienne having stated that when the royal family were leaving Eu, the officer who commanded the escort fell from his horse, and was subsequently run over by two of the royal carriages, and so much injured that he died on the following day; the Messager asserts that the officer alluded to, after having fallen from his horse, immediately remounted, not having received the slightest injury, and resumed his place at the head of his detachment.

PORTUGAL.—LISBON, Oct. 3.—Notwithstanding the promptitude with which the Bank of Lisbon has again come forward to assist the distressing urgencies of the Government, and the financial arrangement which has just been entered into with some of the first houses of Oporto, the greatest discontent and panic prevails amongst all classes of the public employés, and those immediately interested in the transactions of the money market. Two hundred and twenty-six contos have been already paid for British claims, the holders of these papers are, therefore, unwilling to advance a farthing more till some arrangement in the shape of reimbursement takes place on the part of Government.

On Friday last Count Stroganoff, Chargé d'Affaires of the Emperor of Russia, was presented in all customary form, by the Minister of Foreign Affairs, to their Majesties.

The convention for the settlement of all claims betwixt Brazil and Portugal is about to be immediately brought to a termination.

In the United Service Gazette we read with no small degree of astonishment, "that her Majesty's schooner Lynx, Commander Burslem, had left the river to assist at the wreck of a vessel bound to Falmouth with a cargo of cotton goods!"

GERMANY.—BERLIN, Sept. 28.—The Rev. Messrs. Tydow and Von Gerlach, who have been to England to make themselves acquainted with the nature and ordinances of the English Episcopal Church, are said to be convinced that the German Protestant Church cannot be united with it.—Hamburg Papers, Oct. 7. Oct. 3. Their Majesties the King and Queen have returned from Neufchatel, and Princess Albert and her children from Kamonz. Oct 6.—The marriage of her Royal Highness Princess Mary, daughter of his Royal Highness Prince William of Prussia, to his Royal Highness the Crown Prince of Bavaria, was solemnized yesterday in the Royal Palace. The marriage took place by proxy, his Royal Highness the Prince of Prussia representing the august Bridegroom.

LUBECK, Oct. 4.—The British war-steamer Rhadamanthus arrived yesterday evening at Travemunde, and put to sea again this morning; it is to convey to Cronstadt Lord Stuart de Rothesay, British Ambassador at the Russian Court, and his lady.

LIMBURG, Sept. 19.—The diet of Galicia was opened to-day. A much greater number of members than usual was present. We hear that his Imperial Highness the Archduke Ferdinand will go to the frontier to meet the Emperor of Russia on his journey from Wosnosensk to Warsaw.

The Austrian Government has issued an order relative to the employment of children in manufactories. No child is to work younger than nine years old, nor none then, unless they have been three years frequenting school, and receiving religious instruction. From nine to twelve years, children must not work above ten hours. From twelve to sixteen, children must not work above twelve hours, with one hour's interval. No boy or girl under sixteen to work at night.

FRANKFORT.—The accounts from Leipsic respecting the commencement of the Michaelmas fair are on the whole favourable. Very large wholesale purchases have been made. The Leipsic Gazette contains a letter from Berlin, which says—"It is reported here that the King has rejected a bill relative to the press which was presented to him, observing that it was his firm intention to give the people a measure really founded on the liberty of the press. We are the more tempted to believe this statement, as the King has more than once declared that the liberty of the press, far from being injurious to the existence of a true monarchy, constitutes one of the essential conditions of its existence."

The Frankfort Journal states, under date Zurich, the 3rd inst., that a collision had taken place in the Val de Travers the day on which the King of Prussia had visited that district, in consequence of the exaltés having pulled down the triumphal arches erected on the passage of his Majesty. In reference to this incident, the correspondent of the Times observes—"Although certain of the ultra-Radicals of Switzerland committed, as detailed in the above paragraph, an outrage which would indicate their disapprobation of a trifling act of courtesy paid in the Val de Travers to the King of Prussia on his late visit, his Majesty seems not to have been deterred from pursuing the liberal course upon which he had entered. The Suffragan Bishop of Treves having refused to pledge himself by oath, on the eve of his consecration, not to correspond directly with the Court of Rome, and to send to Rome, as was the case under the Hardenberg ban, all the correspondence, bulls, and briefs, the King of Prussia, who was then at Cologne, ordered that clause to be expunged from the oath."

MUNICH, Oct. 2.—THE INDIAN MAILS.—The negotiations of England with the Austrian and other German Governments, for the transit of the overland Indian mails by way of Trieste, &c. &c., we are assured, nearly concluded, and an English courier, with the mail, has either already taken, or will very shortly take, this route. Leipsic Gazette.

A letter from Copenhagen states that a peasant of Bornlund, in the Island of Zealand, whilst ploughing, discovered two gold urns filled with ashes, classed with following articles, and buried in the top of the cover a figure of Odin, the Jupiter of the Scandinavians. This figure is represented standing, bearing on one shoulder the two crows Hunin (Thought) and Munin (Memory), and, at its feet, two wolves, symbols of his power. The urns are exactly alike, in good preservation, and richly ornamented. The gold is exceedingly thin except at the edges; they are about nine inches in diameter, and nine inches in height from the foot, but not the figure, and their weight is a little more than 2lbs. The peasant has delivered them to the Government, which paid him the value of the gold, and ordered them to be deposited in the museum of Copenhagen. They are supposed to belong to the 10th century.

Some serious differences appear to have broken out between the Grand Duchy of Baden and the Canton of Argau, in Switzerland. It is even apprehended that all communication across the frontier may be broken off.

RUSSIA.—ST. PETERSBURG, Sept. 27.—As soon as his Imperial Highness was informed, while on his journey, of the disaster at Kasan, he immediately resolved to give 50,000 silver rubles from his privy purse towards the relief of the sufferers. The other members of the imperial family have given 15,000 silver rubles. We hear that the department of finance is authorised to allot 100,000 silver rubles to the same purpose. Large contributions are making here for this benevolent purpose, and will doubtless take place throughout the empire. The Emperor immediately resolved to change the plan of his tour, and visit the unfortunate city, which he did not at first intend.

The Morning Post, in speaking of the speech of Mr. Featherstonehaugh, one of the commissioners appointed by the late Government to survey the disputed boundary on the sides of Maine and New Brunswick, delivered last week at the Cornwall Polytechnic Association, says:—"Mr. Featherstonehaugh maintains, that though Great Britain has insisted upon less than her right, she never claimed more than she was entitled to under the treaty of 1783. This will be made matter of charge against Lord Ashburton by those who think that a nation ought to be always extreme in asserting her right, though the thing claimed should be worthless or even burthensome. For our part we were gratified to know that Great Britain never made an unjust claim, and our gratification is not in the slightest degree diminished by knowing, also, that she has not burthened herself with a useless and dangerous addition to her already too little compact North American possessions."

AMERICA.—An American paper says, that copies of the British treaty and correspondence, published first in a certain paper, were stolen from the files of the United States Senate, with the connivance of a United States senator, sworn to secrecy until the injunction was removed. It was then sent to New York and published, for the purpose of depreciating the President and Mr. Webster. We learn further that the whole transaction will soon be brought to light.

AMERICAN NEWS.—ARRIVAL OF THE GREAT WESTERN.—CHANGE OF MINISTRY IN CANADA.—By the Great Western, Lieutenant Hosken, R.N., which vessel arrived at Kingroad, Bristol, on Wednesday night, at half-past eleven o'clock, we have received New York papers to the 29th ult., being 14 days later than previous advices. The Great Western brought 37 passengers, amongst whom was Lord Morpeth, who, we are happy to state, returns to his own country in good health and spirits. The news from the United States is of a very inanimate character. The newspapers are chiefly occupied in discussing the prospects of the contending parties for the next Presidential election. Mr. Clay is to be the Whig candidate, and Mr. Tyler will have the support of the democratic party. The Americans appear perfectly satisfied with the Ashburton treaty.

If the intelligence from the United States, however, be unimportant, not so the news from Canada, by which we learn that the Governor-General, finding it difficult or impossible to carry on affairs with his late advisers, had resolved to try a change, and introduce into the Council, and into public offices, some of the leaders of the French Canadians and the British Reformers. At his urgent request, therefore, Mr. Lafontaine and Mr. Baldwin, with several of their political friends, had joined the Council. The reasons for this proceeding were expressed in a letter, addressed by Sir Charles Bagot to Mr. Lafontaine, who accepts the office of Attorney-General of Lower Canada, in the place of Mr. Ogden. Mr. Draper, the Attorney-General of Upper Canada, has given in his resignation. This appointment, with a seat in the Council, was to be offered to Mr. Baldwin. These changes have given great offence to the Tory party, who are quite furious. Some of them even go so far as to threaten another outbreak, in consequence of yielding to the French party and ultra-Radicals.

Mr. Girouard, who is proposed by Governor Bagot for a seat in the Council, was one of the active movers in the events of 1837-8, and a reward of £500 was offered and paid for his apprehension.

The following, from the Rochester Democrat, shows that the dissatisfaction with the late appointments by the Governor, has extended to the Parliament of Canada:—There is trouble in the Canadian Parliament. The Governor-General, in trying to administer the government upon "conciliation principles," is likely to find himself entirely unsupported. By calling into his cabinet men of liberal principles, he has offended the Tories and a portion of the so-called Reformers, who together command a majority in Parliament. Mr. Draper, one of the highest officers of Government, has resigned; and it is expected that there will be a general breaking up of the cabinet. It is also rumoured that Parliament will be dissolved. If so, there will be another general election, which will be attended with unusual excitement.

NEW ORLEANS.—A duel was fought near the Sugar Refinery, between our postmaster and a gentleman connected with the St. Louis cathedral. The weapons used were small swords. Both parties received flesh wounds. The difficulty grew out of the late controversy between the bishop and members. Two more duels are on the tapis, and these "affairs of honour" will not cease until a frost comes, which always destroys affairs of this kind, as well as the yellow fever.

VERA CRUZ, Aug. 18, 1842.—Letters from the capital, by yesterday's mail, are without anything of interest, except that the murderers of Mr. Egerton and his wife have been, it is thought, discovered, and are now in prison, undergoing their examination. If the persons arrested are really the murderers, the perpetrators of this horrid deed are natives, not foreigners, as was generally supposed at first.

A prolific vein of gold, extending nearly twenty miles, has been discovered near the Bay of Francisco, in Upper California.

The Mexican manufacturers are clamouring loudly for protection duties on coarse cotton and woollen cloths.

The new Mexican tariff goes into operation on the 1st of November. The duties are reduced about one-half.

THE COURT AND HAUT TON.

WINDSOR, Sunday.—This morning her Majesty, Prince Albert, and the whole suite, attended divine service in St. George's Chapel. The Rev. C. W. Knyvett read the first part of the service, the Hon. and Rev. R. B. Stopford and the Rev. W. Cavendish officiated at the altar.

MONDAY.—Her Majesty walked out in the royal pleasure grounds, attended by the Countess of Mount Edgcumbe and the Hon. Miss Hamilton. His Royal Highness Prince Albert left the Castle at half-past nine o'clock in the morning, in a carriage and four, attended by Lord Rivers, General Bowater, Captain Duncombe, and the Hon. C. A. Murray. The royal party drove to Swinley, where they had some excellent sport, shooting in the royal preserves. In the afternoon his Royal Highness drove her Majesty out in the park in a pony phaeton, followed by a carriage and four, in which were the Countess of Mount Edgcumbe and the Hon. Misses Stanley and Hamilton. Colonel Arbuthnot and General Sir Edward Bowater attended on horseback. Her Majesty and the Prince called on her Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent at Frogmore on their return to the Castle.

TUESDAY.—Her Majesty and his Royal Highness Prince Albert rode out in the royal pleasure grounds in a pony phaeton, her Majesty driving. In the afternoon her Majesty, accompanied by the Princess Royal, and attended by Lady Lyttelton, rode out in a pony carriage and four, followed by the Countess of Dalmore and the Hon. Misses Stanley and Hamilton, in another pony carriage. His Royal Highness Prince Albert, attended by Lord Byron, Colonel Arbuthnot, and Sir E. Bowater, rode on horseback. Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent, attended by Lady C. Dundas, took walking exercise in the morning, and in the afternoon rode out in a carriage and four. His Royal Highness Prince Albert did Mr. F. Newenham the honour of sitting to him for a full-length portrait for the Junior United Service Club.

WEDNESDAY.—Her Majesty and his Royal Highness Prince Albert rode out in the Little Park, in a pony phaeton, her Majesty driving. In the afternoon her Majesty, attended by the Countess of Dunmore, rode out in a pony carriage and four, attended by her usual suite.

The Duke of Wellington, on his return to town from attending the funeral of the Marquis Wellesley, did not stay longer than half an hour at Apsley-house, but departed at a quarter-past two for Walmer Castle.

The Archbishop of York and Lady Harriet Harcourt respectively gave the magnificent dinner and ball at Bishopthorpe Palace, on the occasion of those parts of York Minster recently restored and completed by her.

We regret to learn that her Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent has for some days been confined to her apartments. Her Majesty and Prince Albert have visited her Royal Highness daily, besides making frequent inquiries.

His serene Highness Prince Edward of Saxe Weimar, nephew of her

LIGHT BREAD.—An intelligent individual, who signs himself "A stranger in London," has addressed a letter to the Lord Mayor on the subject of the Bread Act, in which he points out the following facts, which will be found well worthy the attention of housekeepers generally. "The last Bread act makes it obligatory on bakers to sell certain descriptions of bread (those in general use) by weight, and to keep scales and weights in their shops, for the purpose of weighing it. If I am not mistaken, the act further obliges them, when they send out bread for delivery at their customers' houses, to send weights and scales with it. This part of the act is not, I think, complied with here, though I have observed it in other parts of the United Kingdom. I understand from those who get their bread weighed at the counter, that most of the loaves are found deficient in weight, and require a piece of bread to be added to make the loaf full 2lb. or 4lb., as the case may be. I have no doubt of this being so, having observed it myself. From this I am warranted in concluding that the greatest proportion of the bread carried round by bakers' servants to customers is under weight. I therefore take the liberty of calling your lordship's attention to the matter, and if such clause be in the Bread act, having it enforced."

EXTRAORDINARY CASE OF IMPRISONMENT UNDER THE BANKRUPT LAW.—A printed circular has recently been published by a Mr. John Dufrene, complaining of the injustice of an imprisonment in the Queen's Bench prison, of which he has been the victim upwards of thirty years. Whatever may be the merits of Mr. Dufrene, or whatever may be the causes which have led to his imprisonment, it is sufficiently apparent the case demands, without delay, an investigation that shall give him his liberty, or if he have acted dishonestly, define his punishment and inflict it. The very fact of a man having been thirty years in prison upon anything but a final adjudication of his case, is a disgrace to the laws of the country, and an evil that should at once be remedied.

ALARMING FIRE IN WESTMINSTER.—Shortly after two o'clock on Monday morning a fire broke out at a Mr. Streak's, baker, Horseferry-road. Several engines soon arrived and subdued the flames, but not before property nearly £200 in value was destroyed. On the outbreak of the fire the turncock of the district was sent for, and on his way was observed to stumble and fall; having regained his feet he proceeded to the spot, cleared the plug, and turned on the water, when he instantly fell back and almost immediately expired—from over-excitement, no doubt.

THE LATE EXTENSIVE ROBBERY OF DIAMONDS IN COVENT GARDEN THEATRE. On Tuesday the reward of £4.30, which had been offered for the discovery of the perpetrators of the extensive and singular robbery of diamonds, to the amount of £2000, which was committed in Covent-garden theatre on the evening of Wednesday, the 6th inst., upon the person of a foreign gentleman, was augmented to the sum of £1000. The most strenuous exertions have been made by the police to discover the perpetrators, but without effect. The general opinion of the police is, that they have escaped with their valuable booty to the Continent.

NEW ZEALAND COMPANY. On Monday a special general court of proprietors was held at the New Zealand House, for the purpose of declaring a dividend on the company's stock. In the absence of the Governor (Joseph Somes, Esq.), H. A. Aglionby, Esq., M.P., took the chair. Among those present were, Sir Isaac Goldsmid, Bart., Admiral Sir Arthur Farquhar, Charles Buller, Esq., M.P., Ross Donelly Mangles, Esq., M.P., Captain Nairne, Mr. Sheriff Pilcher, Messrs. Hibbert, Vincent, Clare, Wills, Young, &c. The minutes of the previous meeting, which contained a resolution recommending an allowance of £1500 a year to the directors and auditors, as a remuneration for their services, were read and confirmed. After which the secretary (Mr. Ward) read the report, from which it appeared that a diminution in the sales of the company's land had arisen during the last few months, owing to the depressed state of the shipping, commercial, and manufacturing interests of the country. The report concluded by recommending a dividend of 2½ per cent. on the half-year ending the 1st inst., being at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum.

THE CUSTOM-HOUSE FRAUDS.—From all that transpires respecting the investigation now going on into the Custom-house frauds, there is every reason to believe that the inquiry is not carried on with that caution which the importance of the case deserves. The testimony of one of the witnesses who was himself engaged in the fraud, but who saved himself from the consequences by giving evidence against his companions, is said to be taken without reserve, though it is obvious that such testimony should be most rigidly scrutinized. Every day, it is said, there are new victims by his word alone; for, as the charges he brings forward extend over a period of five years, it is found impossible even for an innocent man to disprove them. It is even reported that a few days ago a landing-waiter was suspended merely upon the version which the witness gave of a conversation held four years ago. The greatest alarm is felt among the different officers in the Custom-House, for not only can they feel no security while evidence is so unscrupulously taken, but it seems that matters are so managed that the informing party makes a profit of his informations, and is therefore interested in making them as numerous as possible. If these evils exist to such an extent as is thus reported, it is surely an argument against the board being a close court.

INCREASED POLICE FORCE IN THE PARKS. On Wednesday night, in consequence of the numerous recent attempts at highway robberies and extortion from persons passing through the Green-park, Hyde-park, and the Regent's-park, a double number of police constables were placed in the various parks for the protection of the public, and the detection of a gang of offenders who are supposed to be lurking in those neighbourhoods.

THE CONVICT BEAN.—The deformed lad, John Bean, who was convicted of a misdemeano ur at the sessions of the Central Criminal Court, for shooting at the Queen, and sentenced to eighteen months' imprisonment in the Penitentiary, Millbank, has been attacked with illness since his incarceration. He is of a weak constitution, and has been put to tailoring. By the prison regulations his relatives are not permitted to see him more than once every four months, and in the event of a prisoner writing to his friends, the period for visiting is limited to every eight months. It is said that a petition to the Secretary of State is in the course of a matter, praying for a commutation of his sentence.

FORGED BANK OF ENGLAND NOTES.—A CAUTION.—Information was received on Wednesday at the different station-houses of the metropolitan and city police, that on the previous day, about six o'clock in the evening, a person of most gentlemanly appearance went to the shop of Mr. Davis, silk mercer, No. 55, Lower Grosvenor-street, Bond-street, and on the purchase of some trifling articles, passed a forged Bank of England note for £5. He stated that his name was Kennigham, and that he resided at No. 3, Manchester-square. He appeared to be about 28 or 30 years of age, 5 feet 7 or 8 inches high, fair complexion and has a small whiskers. He was dressed in a dark Chesterfield wrapper, dark trowsers, and black hat, and wore one or more gold rings on his fingers. It has also been ascertained that a man answering the above description has during the last few days passed several similar £5 notes at various shops at the west end of the town, and tradespeople should be cautious from whom they take £5 notes numbered "1827," and dated "June 4, 1842," which is the number and date of that passed to Mr. Davis.

WIFE MURDER AND SUICIDE.—The vicinity of Bermondsey Old Church was at an early hour on Monday morning last much shocked by a tragical occurrence which took place in Osmond's-buildings, Bermondsey New-road—a labouring man having murdered his wife by cutting her throat with a razor, and then laid violent hands upon himself. The name of the wretched man was Jessop, and he had, up to the previous Saturday, been in the employ of a tanner in that neighbourhood, but was discharged on Saturday night, and had intended to "go on the tramp" for work next morning, having procured what is called a "tramp ticket." Both the man and his wife had been married before, and each had children by their former marriages. A son of the wife's had caused some unpleasantness between them, and Jessop, it is said, had forbid him the house; notwithstanding which his mother from time to time received him, and gave him food, in the absence of her husband. Both the man and his wife bore a very good character among their neighbours as quiet, honest, and industrious people. On Monday morning, between five and six, shortly after they had got up, a wildness in the manner of his father attracted the notice of one of the children, and seeing him with a razor in his hand, it exclaimed, "What! are you going to murder my mother?" The next moment the miserable man rushed upon his wife, cut her throat from ear to ear, nearly severing the head from the body; and instantly attempted to destroy himself in the same manner. The cries and screams of the child brought in the neighbours and a police-constable, who found both the man and his wife lying on the floor weltering in their blood. The poor woman died almost instantly; but the man was immediately removed to Guy's Hospital by the police, where he expired on Wednesday morning, at half past one precisely. He gradually sunk during Tuesday, having had repeated and violent bleedings from the throat; nevertheless, he was able that night (nine o'clock) to express by signs that he wanted to write. Mr. Cock, the surgeon, instantly handed to him a pencil and paper, and he was just able to write one word, which was "knife." Mr. Cock having asked what he meant, he made a motion with both his hands, giving him (Mr. Cock) to understand that he wanted his fleshing-knife, a knife used in his business as a fleshier. It was quite evident from this that the man was non compos mentis. He gradually got worse after that, displaying much uneasiness by moving his arms and legs about in a very violent manner. He was attended by police-constable Weaver, 277, till death ended his sufferings. It is supposed that the poor fellow was in a state of insanity when he committed these dreadful acts; and that, although he had not shown any symptoms of madness previously, the fact of his being thrown out of work on Saturday, and the destitution which stared him in the face, had deprived him of his reasoning faculties. On Tuesday an inquest was held on the body of the unfortunate woman, by Mr. Carter, the Coroner for Surrey, and a respectable jury, when, after hearing several witnesses, a verdict of "Wilful murder" against William Jessop was returned.

SMUGGLING EXTRAORDINARY.—On Friday week a cargo of Dutch butter was landed at Brewer's-quay, Lower Thames-street, from a trading vessel, and the landing surveyor, Mr. M. Vickers, proceeded to prick the firkins with a spit in the ordinary manner to ascertain if the contents were really what they purported to be. On pricking into one firkin the spit was prevented entering far by something harder than butter, and upon removing the lid he found the contents to be compressed leaf tobacco, in weight above 80lb. A very close examination of the other firkins took place, and six more were found to contain tobacco, which had been substituted for butter in Holland, the shippers not being aware that in consequence of recent transactions and the extensive frauds that have been committed in the Custom-house, the vigilance is now practised to prevent the importation of contraband tobacco of any description. The seven firkins of tobacco weighed 620lb, and they were removed to the Queen's warehouse in the Custom-house.

POSTSCRIPT.

Saturday Morning.

WINDSOR, Thursday.—Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent we are happy to state, has entirely recovered from her late indisposition, and will join the royal circle at the Castle this evening.

The Queen and her illustrious consort rode out this morning in the Home-park in the favourite small pony phaeton, her Majesty driving.

BRIGHTON.—THE COURT.—Mr. Henry Saunders, Inspector of her Majesty's Palaces, and Earl Delawarr, the Lord Chamberlain, arrived at Brighton on Thursday morning, to make arrangements for her Majesty's reception at the Pavilion, which is expected to occur immediately.

ACCIDENT TO MR. G. E. ANSON.—On Thursday last, as Mr. Anson was proceeding with his Royal Highness Prince Albert and Major-General Sir Edward Bowater from the Castle to the Great Park to hunt with the Prince's beagles, his horse stumbled and threw him, severely injuring his right hip.

The vacancy in the Order of the Garter, occasioned by the death of the Marquis Wellesley, will, we are assured, be supplied by the nomination of the Earl De Grey, Lord Lieutenant of Ireland.

The French Ambassador, who has been indisposed with a cold since the return of the countess from Paris, was yesterday able to leave his room. His excellency's grandson, the Duke de Glucksberg, a young diplomatist, is now French Chargé d'Affaires at the Court of Madrid.

We understand that the Rev. Dr. Butler will be appointed to the Deanery of Peterborough, which will be vacated by the nomination of Dr. Turton to that of Westminster. Dr. Butler was for several years the head-master of Harrow School.

We have reason to believe that the postal treaty between Great Britain and France is on the point of completion; and that a considerable reduction in the rates of postage between both countries will be immediately announced. It is stated that the postage to Paris from London, and vice versâ, will be about one-half its present rate.

The Tay steamer is arrived with the Mexican and West India mails; the dates are from Demerara the 24th August, Barbadoes the 3rd September, and Jamaica the 8th September. There is no news from any quarter; all remains quiet. The Jamaica papers, for want of other subjects, have begun to agitate the question of claiming the right of colonial representation in the British Parliament, as being a constituent part of the British Empire. They assume that the West India colonies ought to send forty members to our Parliament. The Tay brings little short of one million of dollars on freight. We hear also that her Majesty's ship Curacoa, which is on her way home from the South Pacific Ocean, will probably bring a freight of four or five millions of dollars, which she has collected at various ports.

Mademoiselle Celeste has met with a most enthusiastic reception in America. Upwards of 3000 persons visited the theatre on the night of her first appearance, after an absence of two years. The entire dress circle was occupied by ladies, a compliment peculiar to America. She has been offered 10,000 dollars for her first ten weeks' engagement, a sum amounting to £3000 sterling.

DIVIDEND-DAY AT THE BANK. Thursday being the first day for the paying of the October dividends, the Rotunda was crowded to excess from the opening of the Bank until the close, by old maids, dowagers, young widows, stockbrokers, and country fundholders, all anxious to receive their independent stipends.

ACCIDENT AND NARROW ESCAPE OF THE BRIGHTON HARRIERS.—On Wednesday the Brighton harriers had a very narrow escape of destruction. In chasing a hare, ten of the hounds rushed over an embankment into a cutting upwards of thirty feet deep. In the fall several of them were lamed, but not one of them killed. The huntsman immediately called the dogs off, and came back to Patcham.

CONSPIRACY TO BREAK OPEN STAFFORD GAOL.—STAFFORD, Thursday.—Yesterday the greatest excitement prevailed amongst the authorities of this county and the parties in charge of the gaol, in consequence of the governor, Mr. Brutton, having detected a deep-laid and well-concocted plan of the rioters confined in it to effect their escape. At an early hour a letter, said to have been written by a prisoner named O'Neill, who is under sentence, was put into the governor's hands. This letter disclosed the plan of the prisoners, and informed the governor of the time when the plan was to be carried into execution. The governor has sent off an express to the Secretary of State, detailing the whole conspiracy, and requesting that immediate instruction may be forwarded. At this moment the gaol is in a state of siege, and is guarded on all sides, so that any attempt to escape on the part of the rioters will be promptly and effectually met. There are four pieces of cannon within the gaol, and all the sentries within the walls are doubled, and constantly visited by the governor. It is supposed that the detection of this conspiracy will hasten the departure of the convicts sentenced to transportation.

On Tuesday evening two lunatics, of Bethlem Hospital, one named James Gardner, and the other not known, escaped through the window of their cell, after sawing the bar apart with an old knife. Gardner was recaptured, but his companion has escaped.

THE MURDER AT STANLEY.—Holmes, the sweep, the third man involved in the atrocious murder of Miss Goddard at Stanley, has been captured at Heage, and has made a confession, in which he endeavours to exculpate himself from the actual murder.

DISTRESSING CASE.—A poor man and his wife, of the name of Slater, both in their 90th year, on returning from the Bank on Thursday to their humble residence, 4, Chapel-street, Waterloo-road, after receiving a dividend of £20 and a few shillings, had the misfortune to lose their little all, as they believe, in getting out of a cab which the poor old couple had taken to convey them home. They are thus deprived of the means of subsistence for the next six months, and must, unless they should recover their money, or be assisted by the benevolence of the public, be consigned to the poor-house until the return of the next dividend-day, in January, 1843.

SPECIAL COMMISSIONS.—STAFFORD, Wednesday.—TRIAL OF COOPER AND ANSON.—The Solicitor-General having concluded his address, which occupied about an hour, the Chief Justice summed up, and the jury, after deliberating for about fifteen minutes, returned a verdict of Not Guilty. The prisoner said: You are right, gentlemen, my wife is as true as gospel. My lord, I thank you for your great kindness and I beg pardon for having interrupted you in your address to the jury. The prisoner was then removed, there being an indictment against him for sedition, which, it was arranged would be tried next day.

George Wilcox and Adam Wood were placed at the bar, charged with being concerned in the demolition of Mr. Parker's house. The jury found the prisoners Guilty, and the learned Judge sentenced Wilcox to twenty years' and Wood to ten years' transportation.

STAFFORD, TUESDAY EVENING.—At a quarter past nine o'clock, when the court was about to sojourn, Arthur O'Neil came into the dock, and entered into recognizances, himself in 400l., and two sureties in the sum of 200l. each, to appear this day week, the next assizes.

A number of prisoners having been convicted, on the clearest testimony, of burglary, during the riots, were sentenced to various degrees of punishment—some to transportation, others to imprisonment with hard labour.

EXETER. (Before Lord Chief Justice Tindal.)—Thomas Murray, Henry Hosk, John Goodman, and William Pearn, convicted, on Monday last, of the murder of the house of the Rev. Robert Eliot Aitkens, were sentenced: Thomas Murray, Henry Howard, and Hills, to transportation for twenty one years; the others for seven years.

LANCASHIRE, Thursday Night.—A number of prisoners were this day convicted of various offences, and sentence passed upon them according to their degrees of guilt. Several prisoners pleaded guilty, and were ordered to enter into recognizances to appear for judgment when called on. When all the cases in this court had been disposed of, Lord Abinger, addressing the counsel for the jury, said he was happy to inform him that they were now discharged. He expressed himself satisfied with the patient attention they had given to the several cases, and concurred in the propriety of a little pecuniary remuneration between them and the sum of twenty guineas was awarded.

POLICE.—BOW-STREET.—Margaret Angus, Alexander Johnson, and Hugh Steele, were placed at the bar, on Friday, on the charge of stealing eight sheets of notes, the property of Thomas Farwell and Co. All the notes were produced, and identified as being the same as those lost by Mr. Farwell. Several other witnesses were called, who connected the prisoners together in a variety of private transactions; and a letter from Steele to Johnson, in which a knowledge of the transaction was given in and proved to be in his handwriting. Mr. Twyford committed the prisoners to take their trial at the next Old Bailey Sessions.

FOREIGN.

The Paris papers of Wednesday are nearly unanimous in their assertion that an obvious coolness between France and England exists, and to remove which, it is now suggested, is one of the causes to which the visit of the King of the Belgians may be ascribed. It was said on the Bourse that "the French Government had demanded of the English Cabinet the motive for the activity now observable in the dockyards of Great Britain, and that the reply had been favourable to the maintenance of the existing good understanding between the two countries."

The Barcelona Constitutional absurdly insists that French intervention in Spanish affairs had only been prevented by the death of the Duke of Orleans, and the decision of Zurbano in clearing Catalonia of the Carlists.

THE KING OF HANOVER.—It is said that the King has not entirely recovered from the illness which seized him at Dusseldorf, but still feels himself very weak. Those about him are not without uneasiness on his account.

INDIA.—With pain, but without hesitation, we lay before our readers the following extract, from a hurried letter written on the 27th August at Bombay, by Major Messiter, of the 56th Regiment. The Colonel is going away in command of a brigade. That therefore fall into the command of a regiment. We take the field immediately. Most disastrous news [have] arrived [from] the interior. The 41st cut to pieces. [A reference to some private affairs follows.]

Yours, &c., JOHN MESSITER."

There is no doubt of the authenticity of this letter, and it is certain that the writer, well known as a gallant and able officer, would not make such a communication without a full conviction of its truth. The Bombay journals, however, of the 27th of August, the date of Major Messiter's letter, are wholly silent, not only as to the disaster spoken of, but as to any immediate probability of such a disaster; and it has not hitherto happened that the Indian press has, with respect to information, been in arrear of the Government. Major Messiter's position was such as to expose him to be misled; he had but just arrived, probably but a few hours, from Sydney; and though it is nearly impossible that he could have been so ignorant of the events of last winter as to confound the 41st with the 44th, Candahar with Cabul, still he was in circumstances to be very easily imposed upon by any fabricated or exaggerated story. Such is the state of the case, and such are the considerations on both sides. Our own opinion—an opinion to which the reader is entitled—is, that Major Messiter has been misinformed, and that his melancholy statement is either altogether groundless, or the gross exaggeration of some trifling reverse. At the Horse Guards returns from the 41st have been received to the 1st of July. The last advices, which represent the 41st as detached from the main army on the way to Quettah, are of the 20th July. —Standard, Friday.

PORTRAITS OF ROYAL PERSONAGES.

PORTRAIT OF HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS THE DUKE OF SUSSEX.

HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS THE DUKE OF SUSSEX.

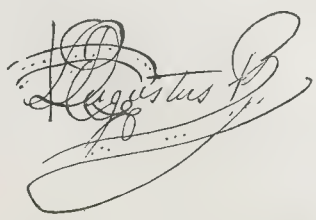
We believe we may say, without the arrogance of a boast, that we are presenting to our readers not only a speaking and characteristic likeness, but a beautifully-executed portrait, of the Duke of Sussex—one of the most honoured of the uncles of our Queen, and perhaps, as far as political principles are interested, the most liberal prince that ever stood in relation to the throne. The portrait is copied, by permission, from one of a splendid series of drawings executed in Paris, by S. Diez, an artist who has been peculiarly patronised by the condescension of the English royal family, and in no instance more so than by the facility afforded him of making so faithful a resemblance of the contour, bearing, and aspect of the countenance and person—as is undeniably given to our readers—of his Royal Highness the Duke of Sussex in the spirited picture before them.

The public life of the duke is fresh in the memory of the world, but it is not in reference to that that we shall now address society. He is known to be a favourite uncle of the Sovereign, by whom he has been invested with the colonelcy of the Honourable Artillery Company, a dignity hitherto only appertaining to the Crown. He is also acting Grand Master and first and principal Knight of the Grand Cross of the Order of the Bath. These, however, are military titles, and we now prefer to speak of the Prince with reference to the cause of Christianity, the progress of civilization, and the arts of peace. Of these (we mean always in a public sense) he has been an enthusiastic and industrious patron. He has loved science, and promoted literature and art: he has accepted and maintained, as long as the condition of his finances would allow him, the Presidency of the Royal Society and the Society of Arts. The former he avowedly abandoned from considerations of retrenchment and expediency. But there is no dignity in which he more rejoices, or in which many thousands of persons are more proud to do him honour, than in that of

GRAND MASTER OF THE FREEMASONS OF ENGLAND AND WALES.

These letters are perhaps his purest and best emblazonment of Christian renown—they are in themselves the symbols of a brotherhood—the most beautiful in its foundation the most widely extended in its influence—the most enduring in its stability—the most binding in its principles of love and charity—the most thoroughly affectionate in spirit, and pervaded with the warmest impulses of the human heart—of all the speculations of mankind for promoting the sympathies of our nature, or adding to the crime-curtailed pittance of man's happiness upon earth. More and more do the beauties and virtues of Freemasonry impress or rather impose themselves upon the world of brethren whom it has gathered within its glorious circle. In all emergencies of difficulty and danger—in war, in plague, in prison—they have softened the asperities of tyranny, and quelled the cruelty of revenge—they have set up "Brotherhood" as the sign of succour, and made peace smile in havoc, in bloodshed, at the mouth of the cannon, and upon the edge of the sword. More life has been saved by Freemasonry—more assistance rendered to distress and misery—more violent passions conquered, and more malice humbled into shame, than by any other foundation short of the divine one of Christianity itself. To be at the head of so grand, so vast, widespread, and philanthropic an institution, in a mighty country like our own, is almost to hold the spring of the fountain from which its beauty and its goodness flow. The Prince whose portrait is before us occupies that noble position in the eyes of our English Brotherhood of Freemasons, and to them we dedicate it, with feelings of veneration and respect. If it should take a place or find a record in the lodges of the empire, we shall rejoice in that little "freemasonry of our own" which has set up in the heart of excellent institutions the honoured likeness of their excellent chief.

Let us turn now in fairness to a general mention of the work from which we have been permitted to make the above admirable engraving. It is published by Messrs. A. H. Baily and Co., and is entitled "Portraits of the Royal Family and most distinguished Nobles and Commoners of Great Britain," and executed in lithography from the drawings of S. Diez. The artist is portrait-painter in ordinary to his Serene Highness the Duke of Saxe Meiningen, under whose immediate patronage he has visited this country, and whose letters have procured him the most flattering notice and great personal encouragement, as well of her Majesty the Queen, and her illustrious consort, as of her Majesty the Queen Dowager. Not only have their Majesties and his Royal Highness Prince Albert honoured Mr. Diez with sittings for their own portraits, but they have personally interested themselves to procure him the notice and co-operation of those to whom he could not, otherwise, have hoped to obtain such favourable access. An anecdotal instance of this sort of interest in the success of the portraits is told us of that of the Duke of Wellington (an excellent one in point of character), who, during his sitting, was honoured by a visit from Prince Albert, who endeavoured for a long period to keep him in conversation, in order that the artist might have the benefit of the animation which the act of speaking upon interesting subjects might arouse.



The Prince himself has been well taken, her Majesty better, and the Duchess of Kent best of all. Lord Hill's likeness is admirable, Lord Lyndhurst's hardly so faithful, while that of the Duke of Sussex will speak for itself in the columns of our ILLUSTRATED NEWS. All the portraits are beautifully lithographed, and the work is got up with much grace, elegance, and enterprise. It can hardly fail to be popular.

FUNERAL OF THE LATE MARQUIS WELLESLEY.

On Saturday the mortal remains of the late venerable head of the Wellesley family—which had previously been lying in state in the council chamber of Eton College—were consigned to their final resting-place in the chapel of that noble school. The occasion created a universal feeling of sympathy; and the arrivals during the morning included several of the nobility, who, while prevented by the express wish of the family from taking part in the proceedings, were still anxious to pay their last tribute of respect to the deceased nobleman. All applications on the part of the public for admission to the chapel during the performance of the ceremony were necessarily refused, it having been arranged that the pupils of the ancient college (640 in number), of which his lordship had been so distinguished an ornament, should occupy their customary places in the choir. A number of tickets were, however, issued for the organ-loft and the ante-chapel, both of which were crowded with spectators long before the commencement of the ceremony.

THE COFFIN.

In the course of the morning the following distinguished connexions of the deceased arrived at the Provost's lodge, where they were received by the Rev. Francis Hodgson, B.D.:—The Duke of Wellington, Lord Cowley, ambassador to the court of the Tuileries, landed at the royal dockyard, Devonport, and was brought home in the Wellesley. Our readers will perceive that the iron crossing, instead of being at the top of the anchor, as in all our anchors, is fixed to the bottom of the Chinese anchor. The arms are but imperfectly welded to the shank, and are kept secure in their position with the aid of two hoops, secured in their hold and in their places with iron bolts driven into a shaft under the hoops. The weight of this anchor, altogether, is 4 cwt. 11 stone. As may be readily seen, it is, at best, but a clumsy article, when compared to the British anchor.

ETON COLLEGE—THE BURIAL PLACE OF THE MARQUIS WELLESLEY.

CHINESE MERCHANTMEN.

NOOKS AND CORNERS OF OLD ENGLAND.

TINTERN ABBEY.

We give below an engraving of the celebrated ruin of Tintern Abbey, estimated with its appendages one of the most beautiful and picturesque views in the kingdom. The chronicle of Tintern Abbey states that William Fitzosbert, Earl of Owe, in Normandy, was presented by the Conqueror with the manors of Tidenham and Woolastone for the maintenance of a garrison and forces to effect conquests over the Welsh. He left a son, Richard, who had the same privileges; and Richard had issue Walter. This Walter founded Tintern Abbey in the year 1131. Mr. Gilpin says, "Tintern Abbey occupies a gentle eminence in the middle of a circular valley beautifully screened on all sides by woody hills, through which the river Wye winds its course; and the hills closing on its entrance and on its exit leave no room for inclement blasts to enter. A more pleasing retreat could not easily be found. The woods and glades intermixed; the winding of the river; the variety of the ground; the splendid ruin contrasted with the objects of nature: and the elegant line formed by the summits of the hills which include the whole, make, altogether, a very enchanting piece of scenery." The rule of the Cistercian monks, who were great agriculturists, was to choose sequestered spots of exquisite picturesque beauty. The resemblance between this church and that of Netley, of the same era, is very striking. The west window (shown below) has the mullions perfect, and most beautiful they are in pattern. The length of the church is 228 feet, and the breadth 150. When the door of the abbey is thrown open the sudden effect is astonishing. The grand background, seen through the east window, is truly sublime; ivy, especially on the right side of the nave, clusters in a manner which no scene of the kind ever surpassed, perhaps never equalled, and all this in a spot around which nature has spread an awful holiness. Such, even in ruin, is "holy" Tintern; what would it be if entire, and, as anciently, "with storied windows richly dight"? The moon in a cloudless sky, shedding her beams through the painted glass on the dim shrines and fugitive memorials of the dead in the immense nave, would form an imposing combination with the glimmering altars of the Deity. The whole would acquire a nameless character from the stillness of an hour broken only by the echoes of a solitary foot-fall or the melancholy cry of the birds of night.

VIEW OF TINTERN ABBEY.

> "In such a place as this, at such an hour,
> If aught of ancestry can be believed,
> Descending angels have conversed with man,
> And told the secrets of the world unknown."

FORREST HILL, OXFORDSHIRE.

On a rising ground to the left of the road from Oxford to London, through Wycombe, and at the distance of four miles from Oxford, stands the little church of Forrest Hill; its gable bell turret, containing two bells in open arches, rising above the surrounding foliage, forming a conspicuous and highly picturesque object. Forrest Hill is a long, straggling village, built on a ridge of land beyond the church, which occupies alone the brow of the hill. The churchyard is small, and surrounded and overhung with trees: the hollies, the yews, and weeping willows, all in the utmost luxuriance, forming a beautiful contrast with each other, and giving to the graveyard that spirit of quiet and holiness which always ought to be the characteristic of sepulchre grounds. The church, which was dedicated to St. Nicholas the Confessor, on the 6th July, 1273, is small and compact, being composed of one aisle, divided into nave and chancel. At the west end is a fine early English bell-gable, and two singularly large buttresses standing out in bold projection.

But it is to its association with the name of Milton, that sublime and immortal poet, and stern republican, that Forrest Hill owes its celebrity; for in this church, in 1643, he was married to his first wife, Maria Powell, eldest daughter of Mr. Richard Powell, of the same place, "a justice of the peace, and a gentleman of good repute in the county." In the register is her baptism, as follows, "Maria Powell, the daughter of Richard Powell, baptized the 28th day of January, 1625." The marriage with her does not, however, appear to have been a very happy one—whether on account of the Powells being staunch royalists, or from private reasons, does not appear; but before they had been married a month she, at the invitation of her friends, and with his consent, returned to Forrest Hill, promising to return at Michaelmas; but, instead of returning, she treated his messenger with contempt, and sent him her determination to remain there altogether. He resented this behaviour, and, having published several tracts in defence of his conduct, he began paying his addresses to a daughter of Dr. David. This frightened his wife and her family, and it determined them to seek a reconciliation, which was brought about as follows:—He had a relation, named Blackborough, in St. Martin's-le-Grand, where he frequently visited, and it was contrived one day, when he was visiting there, that his wife "should be ready in another room, and, as he was thinking of nothing less, he was surprised to see her whom he expected to have never seen any more, falling down upon her knees at his feet, and imploring his forgiveness with tears. At first he showed some signs of aversion; but he continued not long inexorable; his wife's entreaties and the intercession of friends on both sides" soon brought about a reconciliation. It is supposed that this incident was the groundwork of that beautiful part of "Paradise Lost," where Eve,

> Now at his feet, submissive in distress, > is praying Adam's forgiveness.

FORREST HILL CHURCH.

After this, Mr. and Mrs. Powell, with their sons and daughters, were received into his house by this generous and noble poet during their troubles. After having two or three children, she at length died in childbed in 1653.

The house in which Mr. Powell resided was adjacent to the church, but has been nearly all destroyed. There was, until the last few months, a fine specimen of pargetting, representing Adam and Eve, &c., on the end of one of the outhouses, but it has also been destroyed; there is, however, yet remaining at the end of a building now used as a pigeon-house a gable ornamented in the same way, with a rose, a thistle, some fleurs-de-lis, vine leaves, grapes, &c., and on which also are the traces of stairs and balustrades, leading to an upper apartment, which tradition states to have been the poet's study while at Forrest Hill.

Another celebrated poet, William Julius Mickle, is intimately connected with this place. He married the daughter of Robert and Elizabeth Tomkins, of Forrest Hill, and he is buried on the north side of the church, and on his gravestone is recorded, "William Julius Mickle, born Sept. 29th, 1734; died 25th Oct., 1788."

> Mickle who had the strong poetic tide
> Roll o'er Britannia's shores in Lusitanian pride.

A NEUK IN SCOTLAND.

OLD HOLYROOD ABBEY.

Leaving the west wing of Holyrood House, of which we gave our readers a view in No. 17 of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, the visitor is conveyed to the opposite or east wing of the palace, where he is shown the ruins of the old Abbey Chapel. The abbey was founded by David I. of Scotland; and, to this day, affords shelter to those debtors who seek its safety as a "house of refuge," by confining the hunted corpus within the limits of this sanctuary, which extend from the foot of Canongate to the eastern extremity of the royal grounds. Tradition asserts, that Scottish King David "having been out hunting, the royal person was placed in the utmost danger by the attack of a stag. When defending himself from his rude assailant, a cross miraculously slipped from heaven into his hand, upon seeing which the uncourteous stag fled!" The sequel is more credible:—"In a dream which visited the monarch in his slumbers, the King was commanded to erect an abbey on the spot now rendered sacred in being the scene of his remarkable preservation; and, in obedience to the mandate, King David founded the Abbey of Holyrood House." Whether such is the real origin of its institution is matter of less moment to the poor insolvent, than the fact of the asylum being still effective in keeping back hungry creditors, wrathful with the spirit of vengeance, and the law myrmidons who show but little mercy to their crouching victims. According to the authority of a late writer, the chapel "was fitted up by Charles I. as a chapel royal, that it might serve as a model of the English form of worship, which he was anxious to introduce into Scotland. He was himself crowned in it in 1633. James VII. (II. of England) afterwards rendered it a model for Catholic worship, to equally little purpose." It has also been rendered sacred by being made a receptacle for the bodies of sundry Scottish kings and queens, and other illustrious persons. In the preserved list of names whose mortal remains have been consigned to the earth in the old chapel of Holyrood Abbey the following names occur—David II., James II., James V., with Magdalen his queen, and Henry Lord Darnley. Visitors are admitted within the sacred precincts of the palace, and, on payment of a trifling douceur, admittance may be readily obtained to view the crumbling ruins of this last remnant of the old abbey.

VIEW OF HOLYROOD ABBEY.

COCKNEY SPORT.—A gentleman on a visit at Brighton being desirous of enjoying some pheasant shooting on the 1st of October, applied to a friend to obtain permission to sport over a farm. His friend apprised him of the danger he would run if he went out without a license, and he forthwith armed himself with a licence, for which he paid £4 0s. 10d., and he sallied out to Cowfold, where a day's sport was guaranteed to him by the farmer for a consideration, namely, the payment of 30s. After trudging about the farm for several hours without finding a pheasant, he let fly with both barrels at a bird, which turned out to be a fowl from the farmyard, strayed some distance from his proper home. The bird, with which the cockney returned to the farmhouse in high glee, turned out to be a cock of a rare breed, which the farmer had purchased for 30s., for the purpose of improving his breed of fowls. The farmer was of course remunerated for the loss of his bird, and the cockney returned to Brighton without a head of game, his day's sport having cost him £7 0s. 10d.

ARREST OF A FUGITIVE.—Early in August last the chief clerk or cashier of the establishment of a great Manchester house at Montevideo absconded from South America with cash and bills to the amount, it is said, of £19,000. It being considered probable he would go to France, the British Ambassador communicated a description of the delinquent, with a request to the French Government that he might be arrested if he entered the country. The Prefect of Police issued orders accordingly, and the fugitive has been recently secured at Bordeaux, being recognised by the description at the Custom-house within a few minutes after his landing. He was in possession of nearly the whole of the property, which was deposited in the hands of the English Consul.

SHAKSPERE'S TOMB.

> Within this silent sepulchre is tomb'd
> That which was once the very shrine of soul,
> And home of the mind's treasure;—all control
> Had genius in that tenement of clay,
> Though its most free abundance had consumed
> The lamp it burned in, but that ray on ray
> Kept flashing on the world with brilliant play
> Ever to live in its own lustre doomed.
> And so the body that such soul illumed
> Hath found a resting-place, to which men like
> As on some pilgrimage to holy ground;
> For even his mortal power will not die,
> Who took im-mortal genius from the sky
> By Heaven's sweet will, with wondrous glory crowned.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

 Our Colosseum Print is in full progress, and will speedily be ready for all our subscribers for six months. The next number of our Journal will contain a full description of the entire design of this superb "Illustration," together with the plan of its publication, and the method that subscribers must adopt to ensure its delivery.

The removal of our Office has been the cause of throwing our Literature in arrears; but we shall bring up all our reviews in our next number.

"A. Z."—The interest of the letter, although involving principles, is too local.

"A Reformer of substantial Abuses."—His drawing is left at the office. We cannot see it; but perfectly agree with him upon the question of the National Gallery being a failure as a work of art.

The writer of the letter to Sir Robert Peel, has sent us too long a paper for our columns. The instances are very rare in which we can admit political essays.

"G. F. C."—The observations on the new Poor-law Bill, with the proposals on an agricultural subject, are reserved by us for separate consideration.

"A Constant Subscriber," Birmingham.—See the "Court Guide," to be had at any respectable bookseller, or apply to the Admiralty.

"F. F. W." The MS. is left at the office.

"V. V.—The project has been contemplated, but that is all.

"H. W. G."— Will not suit.

"Timothy"—"The Cold Water Cure." Yes; it is what is vulgarly called "a sell."

"W. S." Cantab.—Not adapted to a newspaper; more interesting to purely literary journals.

"Rigidum Feudes," Newcastle.—We are glad of our friend's approval, particularly in reference to the "spokes in the wheel."

"W. H. Rapier."—Can our correspondent send us any drawings of the subjects in question? or refer us to proper sources for engraving or description.

"B. J."—His letter, and the institution referred to, shall receive our attention.

Mr. Wyld's admirable sketch of the North Eastern Boundary deserves our best acknowledgments.

"M. H.," Reading.—No. The old creditors can claim nothing until the new ones are paid.

"H. R. G."—It is impracticable.

"Alpha Beta."—We shall be obliged by the fulfilment of our correspondent's propositions. The paper will be sent.

"T. K."—We shall give an index to the original articles and subjects of illustrations.

"Episcopal." -1. He is entitled. 2. It will most likely be given.

"John Johnston."—The subject will shortly be treated by this journal both in matter and illustration, upon a liberal and extensive scale

"R. B. R." is thanked for his information, and the kindly spirit of his letter.

"Alathos."—We approve the suggestion, but fear to bring these wretches into notice. Holywell-street is, generally speaking, a sad den of infamy.

"Jaques," Liverpool.—Although not a six months' subscriber, will be entitled to the Colosseum Print at the time it is printed, by his taking all the Nos. from the commencement.

Nos. 1, 2, 3, and 11, are again reprinted.

The Colosseum Print.—We again distinctly announce that to none but subscribers who have taken this paper from its commencement, and regularly for six months, will this elaborate engraving be presented. Those who have not all the numbers complete, had better immediately complete their sets; by this plan they will be equally entitled to the engraving, as though they had taken the paper weekly.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

LONDON, SATURDAY, OCTOBER 15, 1842.

Two morning contemporaries have, during the week, directed public attention to the treatment of persons imprisoned for civil and criminal offences against the laws. One, the Times, treats at length the report of an inspector of prisons, together with evidence elicited in reference to particular establishments, and in a way to open the whole question of prison discipline, as having now become a most important subject for the consideration of the community. This field is too wide for us to survey in the present number, but the particular branch of the whole topic which is treated by a correspondent of the Chronicle is too pressing in its appeal to our common human nature to admit of its being passed without immediate and indignant comment. A gentleman of the name of Pigou, writing upon the system of solitary confinement, proves, by the evidence of an American physician, that it demented, in one penitentiary in Philadelphia, no fewer than twenty-six lunatics, and that our own penitentiary at Millbank furnished a proportionate number of mad patients to the lunatic asylum at Hanwell. Mr. Pigou next directs attention to the enactments of a recent measure (the 5th of Victoria) for establishing a model prison at Pentonville, and, in reference to some of the clauses of that act, we shall allow him to speak in his own earnest terms.

> Some of these are of incredible severity, but the twenty-third clause contemplates, with horrid foresight, the generation of madness; and it directs that, when a prisoner shall be reported insane to the Secretary of State, it shall be lawful for the Secretary to remove him to some lunatic asylum, and he shall remain in it til of sound mind. Then, if his sentence be not expired, he shall be conveyed a second time to Pentonville, and there undergo the remainder of it—the Secretary sending his warrant to the keeper of the madhouse for that purpose. No provision is made for the treatment of those incurably insane, nor any remission of punishment in favour of those who had been already driven to madness. Now I challenge the annals of the Inquisition to produce an instance of more deliberate cruelty than this; search its records in Valencia and Madrid, and read all that Florenté has written, for a greater act of rigour than this. You first drive a prisoner mad by your treatment—you restore his reason, and you a second time bring him to the stake. Again, what more inhuman, what more likely to bring on insanity, than a return to the same cells, the same diet and discipline, the same exhortations from the same zealous chaplain, as those that first engendered the mental malady. What unspeakable horror must seize the convalescent who a second time finds himself on the same spot, beset by the same instruments, under which he first felt his reason stagger. Is not such a shock capable of producing incurable mania? Would not humanity dictate the liberation of any person who had once been subjected to an experiment that deprived him for a season of his reason, and which perhaps shook its throne for ever?
>
> Did not Sir Robert Peel, in 1824, when Home Secretary, dismiss the whole body of prisoners in the Penitentiary, when a dreadful disease had broken out among them, caused by low diet, deeming—justly deeming, that their sufferings had made ample compensation for their crimes; and shall dimentia, brought on by the prison discipline, be treated with less mercy?

Really there is no resisting a conviction of the wicked injustice of this bad enactment; of its unchristian and dehumanizing spirit; of its antagonism to the law of mercy which is delegated to us from above; of its outrage to the principles even of simple justice in our moral punishment of crime. This is a flaw in our social system which civilization will cry aloud to repair. Our present notice of the enormity here is rather to prepare our readers' minds for future disclosures and discussions upon a subject so powerfully interesting to the friends of humanity, than to attempt to reflect the impressions and emotions by which we have been actuated by the perusal of many frightful details of which the instance we have selected is only one pressing and appalling example.

Our intelligence from India by the overland mail is of that indefinite kind which still leaves a degree of uncertainty in the public breast with reference to the real nature of our operations in the Affghan territory. The fact is, that the curiosity of this country cannot yet be satisfied with details which circumstances necessarily control, and surmises, which time alone can affirm or contradict; and, in the meanwhile, it is only fair to wait the issue of events, so far as the initiative of active proceedings is concerned. But the public press is fierce enough in its controversial articles upon the whole subject, and the reasoning on either side is of a bold and determined character. The Chronicle attacks the Government functionary upon pure party grounds, and whatever the truth of its position, the spirit in which it vituperates is contemptible enough, but the Herald has, upon grounds of humanity, condemned the whole war; it denounces past and present administrations both, and perhaps in its premises it is mainly right, although circumstances may have tended to defeat the justice of its conclusions. We too sadly fear, however, that blood, treasure, and national honour have been unnecessarily wasted, and we await the fiat of the future with the hope that it may absolve our rulers from any needless continuation of a calamitous war. May it be terminated with justice at all events, and if with justice and triumph both, so much the more consoling will be the issue to our national pride.

The business of the Special Commission is, at length, rapidly drawing to a close, and although it has been found necessary in some instances to enforce, for sake of example, the most rigorous penalties of the law, yet it is admitted on all hands that never were Government prosecutions conducted in a more laudable or perfect spirit of clemency and justice. One regret, however, appears to pervade the public mind in reference to the riots which so lately disturbed the manufacturing districts, and that arises from the timid, vacillating and pusillanimous conduct of the authorities in certain populous districts, where the mob were allowed to occupy the most advantageous positions for the furtherance of their lawless objects without let or hinderance, when to have dispersed them by the strongest means at the disposal of the magistracy would have been an act of common charity towards the deluded people themselves, would have saved many a case of orphanage and ignominious slavery. Regret, however, is neither a safe nor a proper feeling to entertain towards such delinquent cowardice; the circumstance is rather calculated to awaken contempt and indignation in every manly breast; for, had the executive of the present day been disposed to pursue with the vengeance of the law its criminal and besotted violators, in the sanguinary and relentless spirit that has sometimes characterised the public prosecutions of this country, the scaffolds of the north would now be dripping with the gore of thousands who were suffered to make the law "their perch and not their terror." We observe that this subject has already attracted the attention of the Government, and we are not without hope that, through the exertions of the public press, these functionaries who so dastardly compromised the powers of the state may be held up to exposure and execration, and such other punishment as their treason deserves. In the report of the proceedings of the special commission at Chester a few days ago, the Attorney-General in his speech is reported to have made use of these words:—"On the 9th of August the 'turn-outs' marched to Manchester. Their numbers were very considerable, amounting to several thousands. They marched in something like military array, six or seven abreast, and if any lagged behind, there was a cry of 'fall in,' clearly indicating that they wished to give to the procession the appearance of a regular force. They went on to the end of Pollard-street, Manchester; and there they were met by a party of the military, who, having seen what had occurred in other places, thought it exceedingly dangerous that they should be permitted to enter the town. It unfortunately happened, however, that some of the civil authorities of Manchester entered into a sort of parley with the chief persons who were at the head of the mob. They said that their motto was 'peace, law, and order.' They professed to pledge themselves that no breach of the peace should be committed—that they had no desire but to march through Manchester, and that anything like making any mischief, or creating any alarm, or stopping any mills, was far from their intention. In the evil hour the authorities unfortunately gave way to those assurances, and permitted the mob to continue their march. They entered Manchester, and parties of them divided at the cross-streets; they stopped labour of every kind throughout the town; they demanded bread, and, in some cases, money; and for some days the town was entirely at their mercy. The authority of the magistrates was at an end."

This must have been a painful and humiliating picture for the first law-officer of the Crown to draw of the Government functionaries at Manchester; and it clearly behoves them to give such an explanation of the circumstances (if they can) as will tend to relieve them of the fearful responsibility which her Majesty's Attorney-General so unequivocally casts upon their shoulders. Already a noble and high-minded British officer, Sir Charles Shaw (whose official connection with Manchester, as head of the police force there, has just terminated in consequence of the act of Parliament by which his office was created having expired), has stepped forward to vindicate his character from the odium of having participated in the proceedings which the Attorney-General so pathetically deplored, and, in doing so, has delivered "a round unvarnished tale," which not only completely exonerates him from the slightest blame, but puts upon the stipendiary magistrate all the onus of mischief which vacillation, indecision, and incompetence are in every crisis of difficulty so fatal to achieve.

METROPOLITAN NEWS.

THE BISHOP OF LONDON'S VISITATION.—On Monday morning the Right Rev. the Lord Bishop of London commenced the triennial visitation of his diocese at St. Paul's Cathedral. One third of the metropolitan clergy attended; another portion assembled on Tuesday, and the remainder met his lordship on Wednesday. The Bishop then proceeded to other parts of his diocese, according to the following arrangement:—October 13, at St. Alban's; October 15, at Woodford; October 17, at Bishop's Stortford; October 18, at Saffron Walden; October 19, at Dunmow; October 20, at Chelmsford; October 21, at Halsted; October 24 and 25, at Colchester; October 26, at Maldon; October 27, at Southend; October 28, at Brentwood. Shortly after 11 o'clock the Bishop arrived at the cathedral, and was met by the prebendaries and canons, who conducted his lordship to his stall. Full cathedral service was performed, the sermon being preached by the Rev. Thomas Dale, M.A., vicar of St. Bride's, Fleet-street. At the conclusion of the sermon the Bishop took his seat within the altar rails, supported by his chaplains, the prebendaries, and the canons residentiary. The names of the clergy were then called, after which his lordship proceeded to the delivery of his charge, for even a description of which our limits will not allow us space.

The barristers appointed to revise the lists of voters in the various electoral districts of the metropolis have been busily employed in their avocations during the week, but the proceedings were totally devoid of public interest.

ASYLUM FOR AGED FREEMASONS.—A quarterly general meeting was held on Wednesday evening, at Radley's Hotel, New Bridge-street, Blackfriars. The chairman stated that as the meeting had been convened for a special purpose, he could only announce that the affairs of the institution were in a very satisfactory condition. A new Masonic Benevolent Institution, for annuitants only, had recently been established in connexion with the society, which rendered certain alterations in the bye-laws necessary. A resolution empowering the governors to make the required modification was then passed, and the meeting was dissolved.

CITY IMPROVEMENTS.—That part of Leadenhall poultry market, belonging to the Corporation of the City of London, is now in course of being pulled down, preparatory to the erection of a new and more convenient building. The new building is to be entirely of iron, having a concrete flooring; the roof will be lofty and light, the benches are to be re-arranged, so as to allow of greater advantages to the salesmen and poulterers, and also to the public who may visit that part of the poultry market. It is calculated that the yearly returns for poultry, game, and rabbits, in this market alone, are equal to £500,000 per annum.

REOPENING OF ST. PAUL'S CATHEDRAL.—This splendid edifice, which has been closed to the public since July last, is now reopened for divine service. During the time it has been closed the interior, which had become in a most dirty state from the effects of the carbonic atmosphere and dust, has undergone a thorough cleansing. The choir, which is constructed of solid old English oak, has been well scrubbed and newly varnished, and the drapery of the pulpit and seats renewed. Many of the monuments had become nearly covered with soot, so as to prevent the public distinguishing the beauties of the sculptor's talent. They have been so well cleansed that they have the appearance of just coming from the statuary's. The whispering gallery, the interior of the dome, and the magnificent basso relievi are now seen to the greatest advantage, which previously presented but one mass of dust and black. The fine columns have now the appearance of their masterly architecture, which had been for years lost to the view. The whole of the centre and the aisle, which had been enclosed with bars, is thrown open to the public gratis during divine service, from 10 to 12 a.m., and 2 till 4 p.m. A notice has been put up requesting visitors not to write their names on the monuments, or otherwise deface them, under penalty of the severest punishment the law can inflict against Vandalism. Great complaints are made that the charge of 3d. entrance is exacted at the door, except during service.

PORT OF LONDON.—The Lord Mayor and the Navigation Committee have come to the determination that Captain Fisher, R.N., the principal harbour-master of the port of London, shall, in May next, commence the work of clearing away the wrecks of the Apollo and the Waterwitch, which it will be recollected were sunk in the Thames about five years ago. It has been found necessary to direct such operations, as a bank of considerable extent has risen about 120 feet above the wrecks, and between 12 and 15 anchors and chain cables are now foul of them. If Captain Fisher fail in lifting up the wrecks (and a great difficulty may occur in consequence of the decayed condition of the vessels) he is to proceed to remove them by explosion. Downes, the celebrated diver, has already surveyed the engine-rooms.

THE ROYAL MINT.—The employés at the Mint are daily at work in striking the new coinage, both in gold and silver, in order to meet the demand that has been made upon the Bank of England for bullion in the course of the payment of the October dividends, which commenced on Thursday, the 13th inst. The average quantity of specie struck at the Mint since the light gold panic has been £300,000 per week. The Bank has received no less a sum than £6,500,000 sterling in light sovereigns and half-sovereigns since the royal proclamation. In consequence of the demand for bullion, the new half-farthing coinage cannot be issued from the Mint until the commencement of 1843.

ROYAL FREE HOSPITAL FOR THE DESTITUTE SICK, GREVILLE-STREET.—The quarterly general meeting of the governors of this charity was held on Tuesday evening, for, probably, the last time in the rooms of the institution in Greville-street. The Rev. R. C. Packman, the secretary, read the report, which stated that the committee had great satisfaction in congratulating the governors, after the continued exertion on the part of the charity was now making upon public opinion and support. The correspondence between the secretary of the Hospital and the Secretary of State for the Home Department, and the conference between the managers and the Chancellor of the Exchequer, had been published; and after the Government had ultimately determined to decline advising a grant, from the fear of its being construed into a precedent, while they emphatically acknowledged the great utility of the charity, the noble offer of Lord Robert Grosvenor to endeavour to effect the same object by public and private subscription was set forth. The result had been that those large premises in Gray's Inn-road, formerly the barracks of the City Light Horse, had been purchased, which will allow of about 500 beds, instead of the limited number in the present building. Already Lord Onslow has sent 100 guineas; a lady, anonymously, £100; Lord Southampton, 20 guineas; Lord Sherbourne, £20; Mr. Dickie, £50; Mr. Jeremiah Olive, £50; and others, making the receipts of the three months upwards of £420 beyond those of the corresponding quarter of last year. The number of patients during the last quarter was 4014. This report was exceedingly well received, and there is now reason to hope that the sick and friendless poor will be much more largely and adequately provided for than has hitherto been the case. Thanks were voted to the chairman and secretary, and the meeting separated.

Majesty the Queen Dowager, left Dover on Friday week for Holland. His Royal Highness has obtained leave of absence from the Horse Guards, to be present at the nuptials of his Royal Highness the Hereditary Duke of Sake Weimar and the Princess Sophia of the Netherland, daughter of the King of Holland.

DRAYTON MANOR.—His Imperial Highness the Archduke Frederick of Austria, attended by Captain Jurkow, in waiting on his Imperial Highness and suite, after a visit of several days to Sir Robert and Lady Peel, has taken his departure for Chatsworth, to honour the Duke of Devonshire with a visit previous to his Imperial Highness and suite going to Wynyard Park. His Excellency Prince Castelcicala, the Neapolitan Minister, has been passing some days with the distinguished circle staying with Sir Robert and Lady Peel.

The French Ambassador, we are sorry to state, has been suffering severely from a cold for many days; he is still confined to his bed

THE NEW ROYAL GARDENS AT FROGMORE.—The workmen, under the direction of Mr. Phipps, the architect, have fitted up in the Lead gardener's house, which is a very pleasing erection in the Elizabethan style, a small suite of rooms for her Majesty's use wherever her Majesty may feel disposed to visit the gardens. The south front will be an entire range of vinery, greenhouses, &c., terminating with two conservatories. Her Majesty and Prince Albert, unattended, visited the gardens last week, and inspected the works now proceeding there.

PRESENT TO MR FOX MAULE BY PRINCE ALBERT.—A beautiful silver powder flask, enclosed in a handsome morocco case, was presented by Prince Albert to Mr. Maule, upon his Royal Highness leaving Taymouth Castle. Upon one side of the flask is the letter A, with an imperial crown (and accompanying motto), very finely executed and on the other side has been engraved the following inscription:—"The gift of H.R.H. Prince Albert, to the Right Honourable Fox Maule, M.P., Taymouth, September 16, 1842.

Her Majesty, on the morning of her departure from Drummond Castle, presented Lady Willoughby d'Eresby with a bracelet richly set with diamonds, of most exquisite workmanship in design, the emblem of eternity.

Count Colorado, who is confidently spoken of in diplomatic circles as the successor of Prince Esterhazy in the Austrian embassy, is a Hungarian nobleman of great wealth, and nearly related to Prince De Colorado Mansfeldt, grand marshal of the imperial court.

DWARKANAUTH TAGORE.—On Tuesday Dwarkanauth Tagore had an audience of Lord Fitzgerald, President of the Board of Control, at which the noble lord delivered to Dwarkanauth, by command of her Majesty the Queen, a gold medal, as a special mark of her Majesty's royal favour, and of her high appreciation of the public and private worth of the distinguished Baboo. The noble president accompanied the presentation by a complimentary address, distinguished by the kindest feeling, and the most enlightened regard for the interests of the great empire with whose progress Dwarkanauth Tagore is identified.

Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Cambridge, with his Royal Highness Prince George, and their Royal Highnesses Princess Augusta and Mary, and their Serene Highnesses the Hereditary Prince and Princess of Mecklenburg Strelitz, &c., visited the Colosseum on Wednesday, and spent an hour in viewing the panorama of London, the conservatories, the sculpture, and the artificial ice. The royal party all expressed their great astonishment at the resemblance of the artificial to the natural ice, and its complete applicability to skating.

THE ARCHDUKE FREDERICK OF AUSTRIA AND SUITE left Mivart's hotel on Wednesday morning at [illegible] to visit the Marquis of Westminster, at Eaton Hall, Cheshire. His Imperial Highness understand has Imperial Highness is continuing at Eaton Hall, Cheshire. His Imperial Highness is on a visit to the Marquis and Marchioness of Londonderry at Wynyard Park, near Stockton-on-Tees.

Mr. Henry Lytton Bulwer, premier secretary to his Excellency Lord Cowley, at Paris, left Mivart's hotel on Tuesday last, on his return to the French capital.

THE THEATRES.

COVENT GARDEN.

This house has produced not less than three novelties since our last. One an opera (revived), another a new farce, and the third a new Irishman. The opera was Gretry's Richard Cœur de Lion, originally produced in Paris about the year 1786. It was a success upon as far above the common average, and had a fame so great that two versions of it were in a short time produced in London at two different theatres. The version revived on Monday at Covent Garden was by General Burgoyne. In addition to Gretry's music were supplied fresh orchestral accompaniments by Mr. Adolphe Adam, with which the opera has been recently played in Paris. The plot is founded on the escape from imprisonment of the Lion-hearted Richard, through the instrumentality of Blondel. The music is charming. The airs are mostly of a pastoral and romantic cast, and the choruses and concerted pieces masterly and effective. The little air, "O, would the night my blushes hide," sung by Miss Rainforth, in the character of the country girl, Laurette, is a perfect gem; and equally beautiful is the duet "The god of love a bandeau bears," —sung by Miss Rainforth and Harrison (who personated Blondel), and vehemently encored. Blondel's famous air, "O, Richard, O, my king," is the greatest musical feature of the opera; it is a magnificent song, requiring, however, more dramatic power than Mr. Harrison threw into it. This song has acquired an additional celebrity from its being associated with one of the most remarkable scenes of the French revolution, when, at the memorable banquet of the gardes du corps, the loyalty of the assembly was roused to a burst of enthusiasm by the band performing "O, Richard, O, mon Roi!" The song fell like a spell upon the walls of the castle, and responded to by the royal prisoner within, is a sweet melody, and makes a very effective duet. The whole of the music was listened to with much pleasure, and greatly applauded.

Miss Rainforth sang charmingly. Mr. Travers, who was the Richard, had almost nothing to do as an actor; he sang with a sweet but rather feeble voice. Miss Poole was exceedingly clever in the little part of Antonia. The orchestral accompaniments were excellent and nicely executed. The scenery and decorations were beautiful in the extreme.

The new farce is called Cousin Lambkin, and its merits rest chiefly upon the contretemps consequent upon a set of people assuming each other's names. It was well played by Bartley, W. Lacy, Hartley, W. H. Payne, and Mrs. Humby. To the new Irishman we must devote a few words, though he appears to have excited very little attention amongst our contemporaries as yet. This gentleman's name is Hodson, a son of the ci-devant music-seller of that name. He appears to be a very young man; and, from what we saw we have no doubt he will in time become a very fair representative of low Irish characters. His brogue is good, though he occasionally forgets it, and falls into that lamentable mistake so invariably committed by cockney Irishmen, of pronouncing street strate, priest prastc, and so on. Now an Irishman of the lowest class calls a street a street, and a priest a priest, all the world over. Mr. Hodson sang two songs neatly, as far as voice was concerned, but they were rather overdone in point of music and accompaniment. During the week the Jealous Wife has been revived, and the Haunched-back has been played, with Mr. and Miss Vandenhoff sustaining the characters of Master Walter and Julia. Their performance was highly respectable, but Miss Vandenhoff's voice, when strained to a certain pitch, jars most painfully on the ear. This is a defect which, if she cannot cure, she ought to endeavour to qualify. The opera of Semiramide continues to draw crowded houses, and its accessories form the theme of general admiration.

THE OLYMPIC.

This house is doing a better business than it has done since the management of Madame Vestris. It is crowded every night. On Monday a new piece, called Jack Noakes and Tom Styles, was brought out, but was not so successful as the previous productions of its author, Mr. E. L. Blanchard, father of the Artful Dodge, &c. The plot is in this wise: Mr. Twigs, a retired grocer, has a stage-struck sister, Deborah Drawlington, and a daughter, Ellen, whose name, to satisfy her aunt, is changed from Twigys to Tree. Mrs. Drawlington, in her affection for the stage, makes it a condition of her niece's inheriting her fortune that she shall marry an actor. She has, however, already provided herself with a lover, one Valentine Volatile, who determines to secure the old lady's consent to his union with her niece by a stratagem. He, therefore, procures two travelling showmen, who have just completed their engagements at Camberwell Fair, named Jack Noakes and Tom Styles, to personate Macready and Sir E. L. Bulwer, whom Mrs. Drawlington has expressed a great desire to see; and through their means, in their assumed characters, the required consent is procured.

THE ADELPHI.

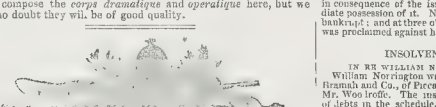
For the purpose of giving greater variety to their entertainments during the necessary preparations for an announced forthcoming novelty, the proprietors of this theatre have been induced to borrow from a larger rival a drama and a ballet, which are now produced here. The first, called the Hazard of the Die, is what the bills describe it to be—"a drama of deep domestic interest. Its two principal parts, David Darrigue and Katner, were powerfully sustained by Lyon and O. Smith. The ballet of the Daughter of the Danube, which of old was an established favourite at Drury, where the Imp, or rather its representative, Wieland, helped much to make it so, reintroduces her to this their present being his first appearance this season. He was received with great favour, which his subsequent performance tended very greatly to increase, until, at the end, he was called for, and gave out the piece for repetition during the remainder of the week. Besides Wieland, this ballet served as an introduction, for the first time to those boards, of Madame Proche Gubilei, in the part of Fleur des Champs, which she supported with her usual graceful agility. Her reception was a warm one, and her performance elicited frequent applause. The house was well attended.

THE SURREY.

The management has judiciously revived, with appropriate dresses and scenery, the interesting nautical drama of Black-Eyed Susan, in which T. P. Cooke has played from time to time over a thousand nights. The characters are well supported by T. P. Cooke, Mr. and Mrs. Honner, Walton, Smith, &c.

PRINCESS'S THEATRE.

This theatre, in Oxford-street, will shortly be opened, under the management of Mr. Maddox, who is in Paris engaging a corps de ballet. He has engaged Templeton, beyond comparison the best British tenor. We are not as yet aware who the others may be that are to compose the corps dramatique and operatique here, but we have no doubt they will be of good quality.



SPORTING INTELLIGENCE.

NEWMARKET SECOND OCTOBER MEETING. MONDAY.

A match for 100 sovs, h ft; st 7lb each; T.Y.C.

Lord Albemarle's Tiarco (Robinson)	.. ..	1
Mr. Goodman's Bother'em (Rogers)	.. ..	0

Even betting. A dead heat.

Handicap Sweepstakes of 20 sovs each, for three-yr-olds, &c. T.Y.C. (11 subs)

Lord Stradbroke's Jeremy Diddler, 3 yrs, 7st 12lb (Wakefield)	.. ..	1
Mr. Bowes's br h Hymen, dun by Perchance, 3 yrs, 7st	.. ..	2
Mr. Ridsdale's colt [illegible] ran the best running he could, followed by Peto's, Camelion, and Rapture, the others being closely tailed up; they kept so to the cords, where the Duke's colt declined, and the lead was taken by Jeremy Diddler, who won in with the running to the end, and won easy by a length; the three first came in at the last	was placed second; Camelion, the Tragedy colt, and Rapture, were well up. Won by a length.

Match, 2,500, h ft.—Lord Eglinton's Dr. Caius, 5 yrs, st (Lye), beat Mr. Petit's St. Francis, aged, st 7lb; 6 to 5 on St. Francis. Won easy by a length

Sweepstakes of 100 sovs each, h ft; First half of Ab. M. (3 subs.)
Duke of Bedford's Nag of the Peak, 5 yrs, 8st 3lb (Edwards)	.. ..	1
Mr. Thornhill's Menalippe, 5 yrs, 8st 7lb	.. ..	2

11 to 8 on King of the Peak. Won by three parts of a length.

TUESDAY AFTERNOON, Four o'Clock. The Cesarewitch, decided this afternoon, although from the indifferent grade of its competitors, the worst, in the estimation of sporting men, that have been run since the race was established, has not been less attractive with the public, from which we may infer, that a thorough racing and betting race never was run in hand together for so many years as it is at present identical with each other, the existence of the turf is not necessarily dependent on "the ring." Whether this is a source of congratulation or not we leave others to settle; sufficient for our present purpose is it to state that the Cesarewitch has assembled on the point of issue when this despatch was made up, proved indisputably that "the race"—as a betting one incomparably had not now of its interest with "the million." The town and neighbourhood have been in a state of bustle and excitement from an early hour, and an excellent day's sport has been made the more enjoyable by weather delightfully bright and warm.

The Cesarewitch Stakes, of 25s sovs each, 15 ft, with £300 added by the Grand Duke Cesarewitch; the second to receive £50. Cesarewitch Course, two miles and a quarter.

Mr. F. Clarke's Arcanus, 3 yrs, 3st 4lb (T. Day, jun.)	.. .. ..	1
Duke of Grafton's Florence, 3 yrs, 7st 5 lb	.. .. ..	2

Betting—7 to 2 agst Bellissima, 10 to 1 agst Arcanus, 10 to 1 agst Portrait, 10 to 1 agst Blue Bonnet, 13 to 1 agst Lord Kelburne's colt, 14 to 1 agst Rhodanthe, 14 to 1 agst Ile Shadow, 20 to 1 agst Ma Mie, 20 to 1 agst Rosicrucian, 20 to 1 agst The Gleaner, 20 to 1 agst Florence, 15 to 1 agst Rapin, 40 to 1 agst Bumbo.

Won by a neck.

WEDNESDAY AFTERNOON. The settling for Tuesday's races took place at [illegible] o'clock, and proved rather heavy. To give time for the Jockey Club meeting, the races commenced early. They were decided as follows:—

Sweepstakes of 10 sovs each.

Mr. Rogers's b c by Hornsea, out of Antelope's dam, 2 yrs (Bartholomew)	.. ..	1
Mr. G. Clarke's Amelie, 2 yrs	.. .. ..	2

The Town Plate, of £30.

Mr. Rogers's Prosody, 3 yrs (Bartholomew)	.. .. ..	1
Mr. Dawson's The Biddy, 3 yrs	.. .. ..	2

THURSDAY.—Lord Kelburne's Give Him a Name beat Lord Eglinton's Jamie Forest.

Lord Eglinton's Pompey beat Lord Kelburne's He has a Name.

Handicap of £100, for three yr-olds and upwards. A.F.

Mr. Stephenson's Mameluke, 3 yrs, 6st 11lb	.. .. .. (Hall)	1
Lord Chesterfield's Rhodanthe, 3 yrs, 7st 7lb	.. .. ..	2
Mr. Charlton's Lasso, 3 yrs, 6st 7lb	.. .. ..	3

Duke of Bedford's John o'Gaunt received forfeit from Mr. Payne's Johnny.

DERBY.—Betting—7 to [illegible] st's 5st; 100 to 60 agst Sir G. Heathcote's colt (taken freely), 11 to 1 agst Mr. Blacklock's A British Yeoman (taken), 20 to 1 agst Mr. Bowes's Colt estone (taken freely); 25 to 1 agst G. Clark's Pinprick; 33 to 1 agst Colonel Peel's Mutrah (taken); 33 to 1 agst Col. Anson's Napier (taken); 33 to 1 agst Mr. Bell's Wimsour (taken freely); 33 to 1 agst Lord Chesterfield's Progress colt (taken freely); 40 to 1 agst Lord Eglinton's Rosicrucian (taken); 40 to 1 agst Lord Chesterfield's [illegible] (taken); 50 to 1 agst Mr. Mostyn's Queen [illegible]rumps colt (taken freely); 50 to 1 agst Sir G. Heathcote's Sirloin (taken freely); 50 to 1 agst Sir G. Heathcote's Amorno (taken freely); 50 to 1 agst Colonel Peel's Voltaire colt, 1000 to 30 agst Mr. St. Paul's Chivalot (taken), 1000 to 15 agst Mr. Bowes's Auld Lang Syne (taken freely); 1000 to 10 agst Mr. Bowes's Baldersale (taken freely); 1000 even, 600 to 300, and 500 to 400 on the field against Scott's and Colonel Peel's lots and A British Yeoman.

A match was made for the First Spring Meeting, 1843, between the Caster and the Cæsar of the Colonel, for £300, h ft, st each. R.M.

OAKS.—300 to 100 agst Lord Westminster's Maria Day (taken).

FRIDAY.—Lord Eglinton's Mulier beat Lord Albemarle's Nuncio, 200 h. ft. Lord Albemarle's Adelphi beat Lord Eglinton's Dr. Caius, 200 h. ft. The Duke of Bedford's Oakley beat Lord Rosslyn's Cancionera, 100 h ft.

The Prendergast Sakes of 50 sovs each, h ft.

Colonel Peel's Mutrat	.. .. (Nat)	1
Colonel Anson's Napier	.. ..	2

Match, 200 h ft.—Lord [illegible]'s [illegible] received forfeit from Mr. Thornhill's Gringo.

Handicap Sweepstakes of 20 sovs each.

Mr. Etwall's Discord, 3 yrs, 8st 5lb	.. .. .. (J. Day)	1
Mr. F. Clarke's Canrobert, 3 yrs, 7st 12 lb	.. .. ..	2

Lord Eglinton's Pompey received forfeit from Mr. Payne's Ch. I

Match; 100, h ft.—Lord [illegible]'s B. filo and Mr. Payne's f by Muley Moloch ran a dead heat.

Handicap Sweepstakes of 15 sovs each.

Mr. Etwall's Palladium, 3 yrs, 8st 10lb	.. .. .. (J. Day)	1
Mr. Petit's Ends and Odds, 3 yrs, 7st 6lb	.. .. ..	2

Mr. Elmore's Solomon received forfeit from the Duke of Bedford's Mr. [illegible]nton's Angury received forfeit from Lord Kelburne's He has a Name.

The attendance this afternoon was very full, the weather favourable as ever, and the racing, which lasted from noon until four o'clock, excellent. The Houghton week is expected to be unusually brilliant.

LAW INTELLIGENCE.

COURT OF BANKRUPTCY. TUESDAY.

(Before Mr. Commissioner Fane.)

ROBBERY OF FRENCH BANK NOTES.—IN RE LOUIS COQUERELL.

This day was fixed for the final examination of the bankrupt, who had, for about the last four years, been the proprietor of the Hotel du Commerce, Leicester-street, Leicester-square. Our readers may recollect that some months ago a French gentleman, of the name of Sadler, on his journey from Paris to London, permitted one of his fair countrywomen to inhabit him of a sum of £180, but at what particular part of the journey he could not tell. On his arrival in London he obtained the assistance of the police in order to apprehend the lady, and on going to the police-office was accompanied by the bankrupt, to whom he stated that he then had French banknotes about him to the amount of 15,000 francs (£600). On their return to the hotel from the police-office, Monsieur Coquerel warned M. Sadler as to the danger he ran of carrying so much money about him, particularly in London, where the most dextrous pickpockets abounded in every direction; but added, that if his friend and countryman would confide the money to his care, everything would be secure. This was acceded to, the bankrupt obtained the money, and in a few hours afterwards was already upon his voyage to New York. The debts already proved to this day's meeting, were about £1200, and the assets are the furniture, &c., of the hotel, which was for some time after the bankrupt had absconded carried on by his wife, but, in consequence of the issue of the fiat, the assignees were put into immediate possession of it. No balance-sheet was produced on the part of the bankrupt; and at three o'clock, not having surrendered to his fiat, outlawry was proclaimed against him in the usual form.

INSOLVENT DEBTORS' COURT.—MONDAY.

IN RE WILLIAM NORRINGTON (SUED AS WILLIAM MORTON).

William Norrington was opposed by Mr. Cooke for the firm of Messrs. Bramah and Co., of Piccadilly, and other creditors. He was supported by Mr. Woo Iroffe. The insolvent was examined by Mr. Cooke. The amount of debts in the schedule, incurred since 1840, was £2350. The insolvent had no property to give up. He was of no business. For a short time in 1837 and 1838 he was a collector and managing clerk at Messrs. Chapel's coal wharf, with a salary of £120 a year. He was discharged for embezzlement, to the amount of £400. All the debts he owed were in his schedule. Messrs. Howell and James, and other tradesmen not in the schedule, had transacted him at the Old Bailey, and he conceived there was an end of all debts. He was indicted at the Old Bailey sessions by the keeper of the Carlton Hotel and other parties, and they obtained a conviction. He resided in the Penitentiary from the trial in January, 1839, till January, 1840. He took the name of Morton on quitting that prison. He had no reason for assuming that name. He was brought up at Faversham, in Kent. He had received winnings at races to a considerable amount. He began to contract debts in January, 1840. There were eight jewellers creditors in the schedule for various sums, to the amount of £334 altogether. There were four dressing case makers to the amount together of £219 16s., and six wine-merchants to the amount of £154 10s., and for cabs and cabriolets, &c., £161. It appeared, in the course of a lengthened inquiry, that the insolvent had pledged some part of his plunder, gambled away other portions of it, and disposed of the remainder to females, and in various ways. The insolvent said if he had not been arrested he should have been married to a lady of considerable property, and would have paid all his debts. Mr. Cooke commented upon the aggravated circumstances of the case, and Mr. Woodroffe replied. Mr. Commissioner Bowen said—In the case a regular system of plunder and fraud has been pursued, and therefore it was not necessary to make any observations. The insolvent was then declared to be entitled to the benefit of the act after he should have been imprisoned for a period of two years from the time fixed upon allowed by the act of Parliament within the walls of the prison, and not to be allowed the range of the rules thereof.

TUESDAY.

IN RE REUBEN MICHAEL.

Reuben Michael appeared to receive the judgment of the court. The learned commissioner declared the insolvent entitled to the benefit of the act, after he should have been imprisoned for a period of six calendar months, at the suit of Thomas Joseph Severn, for vexatiously defending an action.

IN RE JOHN EVANS.

This insolvent, a tailor and draper, was opposed by Mr. Woodroffe. It appeared that the arrest was a friendly proceeding, and that he was examinally called to an action. Mr. Commissioner Harris said that the insolvent had been guilty of a breach of trust with respect to the opposing creditor. He had also caused an unnecessary accumulation of costs by defending the action; his conduct had been of a most aggravated nature. He should be entitled to the benefit of the act after he had been imprisoned for a period of six calendar months.

WESTMINSTER SESSIONS.—MONDAY.

(Before Mr. Sergeant Adams, Chairman.)

The session paper for the present month contained the names of only 16 prisoners, 13 of whom were charged with felonies of a trifling and unimportant character. The court broke up before two o'clock, and the details of the trials were devoid of public interest. There are at present 485 prisoners confined in the Westminster Bridewell, and there have been 911 committments since the last session, notwithstanding the light state of the calendar.

TUESDAY

(Before Mr Sergeant Adams and a full Bench of Magistrates.)

This being the day for the hearing of applications for music and dancing licences, at the opening of the court licences were granted to several establishments, amongst which were the following:—The Hanover square Rooms, Hanover-square; the Thomas Martin; the Lyceum Assembly-rooms, King William-street, Strand, by John Blake; the Prince's Theatre, Kingstreet, St. James's, by John Braham.

The report of the visiting justices of the New Bridewell, the report of the committee for accounts and general purposes, and the annual statement of the chaplain of the Bridewell of the condition of the prisoners, were read and received by the court. An application from Lieutenant Tracey, the governor of the New Bridewell, for an addition to his salary, was read to the court. The application was referred to the visiting justices.

Mr. Beckwester, the chairman of the board of guardians of the West London Union, and proprietor of the Swan Tavern, Hungerford-market, applied under the following novel circumstances for a music and dancing licence.—Mr. Prendergrast stated that the house in question had been licensed previous to last year, but at the latter period Mr. Buckmaster neglected to attend the court, and he (Mr. Prendergrast) was requested by some person to move for the renewal of the licence, which he did. Mr. Beckmaster knew nothing of it until he saw by the next day's newspapers that it had been granted, and not being aware that any further proceeding was necessary, he had let it during the last year to the tenant of the certificate. He now had to solicit the court for a licence.—Mr. M'William said he had been going on illegally for a whole year, he had better try another (Laughter). After some discussion, Mr. Beckwester swore to the facts above narrated, and the bench waived the informality of the application, and granted the licence.

A Liverpool paper gives the following account of the intellectual acquirements of the chartist prisoners:—"Of the hundred and twenty prisoners, who are to take their trials before the special commission, now sitting in this town, there are only six who are described in the calendar as being able to read and write well; whilst thirty-seven are unable either to read or write at all, and the rest of them are only able to do so very imperfectly. These poor ignorant creatures" it adds, "many of whom are mere boys in age, are just the persons to be led astray by designing agitators."

The new royal summer-house or garden pavilion, now in process of erection in the gardens of Buckingham Palace, is rapidly approaching to completion, and the works for the new Chapel Royal, on the site of the conservatory, at the south wing, will shortly be recommenced, as it is to be completed and consecrated by next Easter.

Anti-Corn-Law meetings during the past week have been held at Hounslow, Wapping, and Marylebone.

A meeting of the proprietors of the Clarence Railway was held, on Wednesday, at the George and Vulture Tavern, Cornhill. The state of the finances was considered with closed doors.

Glandier, the end theatre of the Laffarge tragedy, has been sold before the civil tribunal of Tuil to M. Bonnel Laborie, a notary at Vigeois, for 81,000f.

THE INDIAN MAIL.

INDIA.—BRITISH CAPTIVES IN AFFGHANISTAN.—We have been favoured with many extracts from letters received from the captives in Cabul. All the letters we have yet seen breathe one feeling of gratitude towards Akhbar Khan for his treatment of the prisoners, and it is but fair that he should have the full benefit of so honourable a proceeding. One of the communications contains the following passage:—"The Sirdar's treatment of us has been, from first to last, most kind; no European power could have treated prisoners of war better. There is a feeling abroad that we have been ill treated; but it is very erroneous, and Akhbar has enough to answer for without this being added to his sins." We are very willing, as we have always been, to allow the full credit for the actual good treatment of the prisoners, and have never doubted the fact, but not so the motive. The prisoners are allowed to walk in a spacious garden, and bathe in the river or canal, though attended by a guard, and the following is the daily bill of fare:—10 ladies, 19 children, 15 officers, and 2 soldiers' 2 sheep, 72 seers atta (this is all for servants), 6 seers ghee, 3 seers oil, 6 seers rice, 6 seers milk, firewood, and, last, not least, tea and sugar if required. The conduct of all the ladies is spoken of as beyond praise, and such as to make every Englishman prouder still of his countrywomen. Lady Sale and Mrs. Sturt continue to afford examples of magnanimity and patient suffering to those of weaker mould. Since writing the above we have learned that all the prisoners are assembled in the Balla Hissar, and that on the 12th inst. the military secretary to General Pollock gave public intimation that any one wishing to send letters could do so, as an opportunity had occurred of forwarding them. Captain Lawrence had returned to Jellalabad, and is expected to remain there some time. We have also seen a letter from one of the prisoners, no doubt brought to camp by Captain Troup. Although of so old a date as to afford little news, we cannot refuse doing the chiefs the justice they deserve by giving the following extract. The letter is dated "Mountains, near Tezeen, May 20, 1842.—We are all excessively kindly treated by the chiefs, and are in a fine climate, where, in the evening, I am glad to put on a fur cloak. Troup left us at the commencement of this month for Cabul, where he now is with Mahomed Akbbar Khan. I believe all the folks at Cabul are at loggerheads, and, had our army come up a month ago, they would have done so without a shot being fired. The city is almost destroyed."

PORTRAIT OF GENERAL POLLOCK.

A correspondent of the Englishman, writing from Jellalabad, on the 29th July, says:—"The Affghan certainly has a respect for female character, for no account has ever reached us of any having been ill-used." We hope that this lesson will not be thrown away. The Affghans, monsters though they are said to be, appear to have one redeeming virtue—they do not visit the offences of their enemies upon the helpless women who fall into their hands—they do not carry out their schemes of retribution by ravishing the wives and daughters of their enemies. We deeply grieve to think that, in this important respect, our army—an army which ought to command the respect of the world as much for its humanity as for its valour—should require to be taught a lesson of forbearance by its barbarian foes. We hope that we shall hear no more of such excesses as those perpetrated at Ali Baghan; for that which is in itself disgraceful becomes doubly so when contrasted with the different conduct of those who, though less is expected from them, have set an example which we shall do well to imitate. We trust that General Pollock will make a severe example of some of the men who have disgraced their colours and their country by their excesses at Ali Baghan. Wellington would have done so; and in the present case it is most imperative upon those in command, not only with reference to our national character, but to the policy of such an act, to testify in the strongest possible manner their abhorrence of the excesses which have stained the lustre of our arms. Let it not be said that crimes which the Affghan shrinks from find acceptance amongst us.

LORD ELLENBOROUGH AND THE WITHDRAWAL OF THE BRITISH FORCE FROM AFFGHANISTAN.—In reference to the painful rumours, so freely circulated for some time past, with regard to the above subject, our daily contemporary, the Morning Post, has the following: "A correspondent at Calcutta, who has access to the best sources of political information, has favoured us with a communication which enables us to assert, in the most unqualified terms, that the Governor-General of India never gave an order either to General Pollock, or to any other officer, for the evacuation of Affghanistan by the British troops; and to assert, moreover, that Lord Ellenborough, from the moment of his arrival in India to the date of our correspondent's letter, never used any language privately or officially—no single word by tongue or pen—importing that his lordship contemplated the withdrawal of the British force from Affghanistan, until every thing had been done that the honour of Great Britain and the maintenance of her character, authority, and pre-eminence in India could be supposed to require.

"We learn from the correspondent above referred to, upon whose information we implicitly rely, that whatever military movements may recently have taken place at Candahar and Jellalabad, and whatever may be their object, those movements are not the result of immediate instructions from London, but of the deliberate, coherent, and unvacillating system of policy adopted by the present Governor-General, and pursued without the slightest deviation, even for a moment, since his lordship's arrival in India—a policy always in harmony with the wishes and the determination of the British Cabinet, with which his lordship's mind was so fully imbued before he left England, that he could feel no difficulty, and incur little risk of error, in giving to those wishes and that determination their due application and proper force in every conceivable emergency."

The Morning Chronicle reiterates its charges against Lord Ellenborough, that he did issue the order for the withdrawal of the troops, which, it says, all parties at length agree in stigmatising as disgraceful to the character of the British nation; and adds that the disclaimer rests entirely on the unsupported authority of the Morning Post.

GENERAL VIEW OF PEKIN.

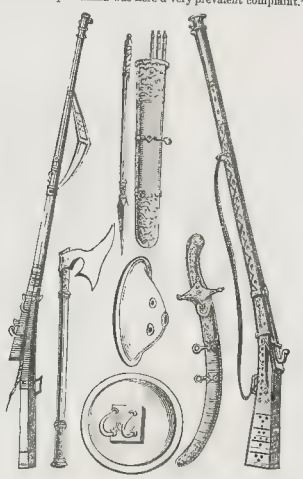
CHINA.—DESCRIPTION OF CHAPOO.—As Chapoo, or rather Shapoo, the town which has been recently taken by the British in China, is not to be found in our best maps, some information respecting it, scanty as it may be, may not be unacceptable at the present moment.

Shapoo is situate on the northern shore of the gulf which receives the river Tsiang-tang-Kiang, opposite to the Chusan Islands, in about latitude 30 degrees 35 minutes north. It is a flourishing place, and the emporium of a great foreign trade. In order, however, to give a nearer and more lively view of Shapoo and the neighbouring coasts, as well as the manner of our introduction to the orderly and ceremonious inhabitants, we extract the following description from the notes of a journal written by an officer of one of the opium traders which visited the coasts of China a few years ago:—

"On going into Shang Hai (in latitude 31 degrees 12 minutes orth), the forts saluted us with three guns each. We were astonished at the great number of junks; 200 came in to-day (21st of December), all of the same size, four-masted vessels, and belonging to this port. The number of wild fowl, ducks, teals, geese, &c., along the shore, is astonishing. Towards the town, as we ascended the river, the junks were so thickly crowded, that I never saw anything like it. There could not have been less than 2000 in the port. The mandarins agreed to trade privately with us, at two per cent. commission. The people were very friendly; the women fair, with small feet. They seemed to admire European clothing, particularly linen shirts. The country is fertile, and beautifully cultivated. December 28.—Finding the gates of the city closed, we climbed over the walls, much to the amusement of the populace, who must think us an odd sort of people; but we could not persuade the respectable merchants to show us the best kind of silk goods. The next day, the gates being still closed, we again scaled the walls, after which the gates were politely opened to let us out. The shipping in the harbour daily increased; of one class of junks (from 100 to 300 tons) I am confident that there were at least 3000 lying there, and there were also some immense junks of 600 tons, and having 400 people on board.

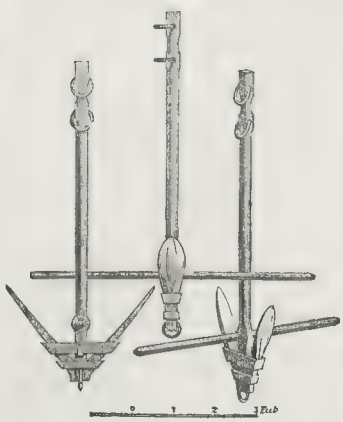
CHINESE SHIP OF WAR.

"We sailed from the Shang Hai river on the 5th of January, and came in sight of Shapoo on the 8th. Here there are six imperial junks in the Japan trade, which make, each of them, five voyages in three years. At Shang Hai, at full and change of the moon, the tide rises only eight or nine feet; here, at so short a distance, it rises twenty-four feet. The town walls are too high to be scaled. From the hills near the town the views are most enchanting. There is an immense extent of low land, intersected by canals, and dotted over with innumerable villages. The country around is all in the highest state of cultivation. Shapoo is not a small town, though yet not equal to Shang Hai, but its celebrity is owing to its being the emporium of the Japan trade. The suburbs are as large and as well built as the city itself, which is surrounded by a wall and deep moat. Altogether it is a very pretty place, and nothing can equal the beauty and regularity of the surrounding cultivation. Ophthalmia was here a very prevalent complaint."



CHINESE ARMS.

Our engraving represents the arms at present in use with our eastern foes. It comprises the following weapons: two matchlocks, spear, quiver, battle-axe, cavalry sword, and shields.



CHINESE ANCHOR.

The anchor, of which the above is a faithful engraving, was POPULAR PORTRAITS.—No. XVII.

LORD MORPETH.

This gifted scion of our nobility landed on Wednesday last upon our shores, after a long absence in America, whither he travelled, partially, perhaps, to escape from the disappointments of politics, and partly to enrich, in a new sphere of travel, a mind, and intellect, already in considerable esteem among men of all parties in his native land. In America his lordship received all the honours of a hearty and convivial welcome, though there was something picturesque and droll in the idea of large bodies of the citizens of a democracy getting up high festivals to do honour to a member of that English aristocracy which, as an institution, they so thoroughly hated and despised. The spirit, however, in which the feasts were dictated was a good one; and, as the guest of honour of his liberal American friends, Lord Morpeth delivered several eloquent orations, which were highly creditable to the people of both countries. His lordship, who is now rather more than forty years of age, is of the best blood of the Howards, being the eldest son of the Earl of Carlisle. He is Whig -perhaps we ought to say Whig-Radical -at all events he was a very liberal champion of the recent administration, under which he held office as Secretary of Ireland. In this capacity, although, like Lord Normanby, he drew upon himself the violent opposition of the Conservative party, he must have made for himself a very important popularity—a fact strongly proved by the circumstance of his having been voluntarily proposed for Dublin, at the last election, although it was known that he intended to pursue his travels on the other side of the Atlantic. His career in Parliament has not been particularly brilliant, his oratory being rather of the "small order," although indicative of general talent and educational polish of mind. He was elected for Morpeth in 1826, and for the West Riding of Yorkshire in 1830. In 1835 he first accepted office under the Whigs; and was then re-elected by an immense majority over his opponent.

In the last great political contest for power he was, however, thrown out; and the event produced the most memorable and, what most won will consider, the most graceful episode of his political life. The new Poor-law had operated fearfully in the West Riding, and that and other causes had produced a complete change in the feelings of the constituency with reference to the members of the last administration. The result was that Lord Morpeth was defeated by a majority nearly as large as that with which he had been accustomed to triumph hitherto; and it was his conduct under that defeat (which it would have been useless to have glossed over, or to have characterized as any other than galling and mortifying in the extreme) which won him the respect, the admiration, and the regard almost of every generous and sympathizing nature in our community. He came forward upon the hustings with the high bearing and deportment of an English nobleman, but with an aspect of sorrow which he could not but acutely feel; he condoled with himself, however, while addressing those of his constituents who had adhered to him, and then made a beautiful oration, in a spirit of the purest generosity, in favour of the opponent who had won the battle-ground from under his feet. Nothing could be finer than this incident — it redeemed half the malice and meanness of the election contests in every other quarter of the kingdom. It raised the nature of the young nobleman in the minds of all parties, and the universal press paid its tribute of respect to the chivalrous manliness of conduct which his lordship had displayed. To crown all, a well-known literary man and avowed political opponent addressed to him a copy of verses, which (as not more than two or three hundred of them were ever circulated) we have the opportunity of presenting almost exclusively to our readers.

LORD MORPETH.

Defeated in the strife for power,
In the mid haunt of his renown,
He proudly brook'd reverse's hour,
And did not wince at fortune's frown.
He stood with sadness on his heart,
At having miss'd an honour'd goal,
But nobly threw all acute regret,
And proved the brightness of his soul!

There, in the place of former pride,
He f humbled with a manly woe,
Dash'd envy's poison'd shaft aside,
To play the fair and generous foe.
To own a rival's triumph grand,
Bow to the gainer of the race,
And give him, with a liberal hand,
The winning courtesies of grace!

While thousands gather'd round to hear
How he would greet his fallen fate,
Warm, earnest, solemn, and sincere,
He charm'd the men who came to hate!
And, while his lofty spirit shone
Al jealous meanness high above,
Bound still more closely to his own
The hearts of those who came to love!

Then, when his eloquence grew still
And admiration's voice rose loud,
There rush'd the warm and generous thrill
Of kind emotion through the crowd.
And strong, 'mong foes, and friends, as round,
The gentle inspiration ran,
All felt that his "farewell" had crown'd
An honoured and honest man!

While quoting this tribute to his honour, we may mention that Lord Morpeth is himself a poet of no ordinary ability and grace. The lines which were recently published on the Falls of Niagara had about them a fine stirring and descriptive spirit; and he has contributed on several occasions to the Annuals for his fashionable lady friends. He has always had a fondness for literary pursuits, and in the outset of his career at Oxford obtained the university prizes for English and Latin verse, and a first class in classics. He will probably on his return from America publish some of the "impressions of his travel," and the world will probably give them quite as hearty a welcome as they are likely to bestow upon the new lucubrations of Boz.

In person Lord Morpeth is slight, and rather tall and thin. His countenance is plain but expressive, and has been compared strongly with that of Liston, the actor—a fact which, we believe, has not proved very pleasing to his lordship, although we do not see why it should be objectionable if it be true. His dress savours slightly of the petit maitre. In disposition his lordship is represented as an amiable and playful person. An instance of this was observed during an adjourned debate, when he played leap-frog with Spring Rice in the lobby of the House, to the astonishment of that business-like gentleman, who, however, joined in the laugh which the "Morpeth jump" created, and walked with him arm in arm to the arena of debate.

FLORICULTURE.

THE PASSION-FLOWER.

(Passiflora.)

The Passion-flowers are a genus of twining plants, so named from a fancied resemblance between the parts of the flower and the emblems of Christ's crucifixion. In the five anthers the Spanish monks saw his wounds; in the triple style, the three nails by which he was fixed to the cross; and in the column on which the ovary is elevated, the pillar to which he was bound; a number of fleshy threads, which spread from a cup within the flower, were finally likened to the crown of thorns. "There are cuts," says Sir James Smith, "to be found in some old books, apparently drawn from description, like the hog in armour upon our signs to represent the rhinoceros, in which the flower is made up of these very things themselves." The implicit believer in the resemblance thus described will be disappointed when he examines the flower, and finds that, like the constellations, it requires no small stretch of imagination to find the semblance of that he seeks.

The genus Passiflora comprehends a large number of species, chiefly found in a wild state in America, and within or near the tropical parts of that continent. They are all twining plants, often scrambling over trees to a considerable length, and in many cases are beautiful objects on account of their large gaily or richly-coloured flowers. Miss Lawrence, in her beautiful delineations of these handsome flowers, enumerates eighteen varieties of Passiflora, viz.—the serratifolia; the maliformis, or apple-fruit; the quadrangularis, or square-stalk; the laurifolia, or laurel-leaf; the perfoliata, or honeysuckle; the rubra, or red-fruited; the vespertilio, or bat-winged; the punctata, or dotted; the hetirophylla, or narrow-leaved; minima, or dwarf; suberosa, or cork-barked; holoserica, or silky-leaved; the fœtida, or stinking; the celiata; the adianifolia; and the carulea, or common. In this country they are favourites only from the extreme beauty of their flowers; but in countries where they grow wild they are valued for their fruit, in consequence of the pulp, which envelopes the seed, being cool and refreshing. Thus, for example, the passiflora quadrangularis is well known in Brazil under the name of granadilla, its fruit being as large as the head of a child. The water-lemon of the West Indies is the produce of the passiflora laurifolia; the maliformis bears the sweet calabash; and the pulp of the passiflora edulis furnishes a delicious material for flavouring ices.

The Passion-flower may be propagated from cuttings of the young wood planted in sand under a glass, and placed in some warm atmosphere. The cuttings are liable to damp off, unless the accumulated moisture be occasionally wiped from the glass. In this country the Passion-flower never yields fruit, unless in the stove, and, as this manner of treating it is of too practical a nature for our columns, we here terminate our notice of this most interesting and beautiful flower.

We understand that the convocation at Stuttgardt of the delegates of the Germanic Customs Union has now broken up, and to our no small gratification we find that, thanks to the enlightened views of the principal state, the many strenuous and vigorous attempts to raise the import duties on some of the most important British export articles have failed, and that consequently these rates remain unaltered for at least three years to come. We allude, of course, to cotton twists, the total imports of which into the Germanic Union from Great Britain amounts annually to 54,000,000lb. weight, and iron, of which the quantity manufactured in pigs now exported from Scotland far exceeds the general estimate.—Times.

AFRICAN CHAPELS.—It is a fact which must be gratifying to every individual who rejoices at the downfall of slavery, that out of twenty-six Wesleyan chapels in Sierra Leone, the roof-timbers, the flooring, and other wood work of twenty, are composed nearly exclusively of slave-ships, which have been taken by her Majesty's men of war on the coast, and condemned by the mixed commission court. Sierre Leone Watchman.

CHEAP FOOD FOR HORSES.—A proposition has been made to the French Minister of War by a M. Longchamp to try a new method of feeding horses, which he asserts will produce a vast saving in the amount of forage necessary for the army. This gentleman proposes to make a sort of bread, three fourths potatoes and the rest oatmeal, with which the horses are to be fed in place of oats. The average quantity of oats for a horse per day, M. Longchamp estimates to be 10lb., costing about 13 sous. He proposes to replace this food by 10lb. of the bread made with oats and potatoes, the price of which will be only 5 sous, leaving a saving of 8 sous a day.

CHESS.

Second game of the match played between the clubs of London and Edinburgh. Begun by the London club, April 28th 1824:—

	WHITE (LONDON).	BLACK (EDINBURGH).
1	K P two	K P two
2.	K Kt to B 3rd	Q Kt to B 3rd
3.	Q P two	K P takes P
4.	K B to Q B 4th	K B to Q B 4th
5.	Q B P one	Q to K 2nd*
6.	castles	P takes P†
7.	Q Kt takes P	Q P one
8.	Q Kt to Q 5th	Q to her 2nd
9.	Q Kt P two‡	Q Kt takes P
10.	Q Kt takes Kt	K B takes Kt
11.	K Kt to K Kt 5th	K Kt to K R 3rd
12.	Q B to Q Kt 2nd	K to K B sq.
13.	Q to her Kt 3rd	Q to K 2nd
14.	K Kt takes K B P	K Kt takes Kt
15.	Q takes K B	K Kt to K 4th
16.	K B P two	Kt takes K B
17.	Q takes Kt	Q to K B 2nd
18.	Q to her B 3rd	Q B to K 3rd
19.	K B P one	Q B to his 5th
20.	K R to K B 4th	Q Kt P two
21.	K P one	P takes P
22.	Q takes P	K R P one
23.	Q R to K sq.	K R to K R 2nd
24.	K B P one§	K Kt P two
25.	K R to K B 5th	Q R P two
26.	Q to her B 5th ch	K to his Kt sq.
27.	K R takes P ch.‖	P takes R
28.	Q takes P ch.	K to B sq.
29.	B to Q 4th	B to K 3rd
30.	Q to her B 5th ch.	K to his Kt sq.
31.	Q to her K Kt 5th ch.	K to B sq.
32.	B checks¶	K to his sq.
33.	Q to her 5th	Q R to his 3rd
34.	Q to her Kt 7th	Q to K R 4th
35.	K B P one, ch.	K takes P
36.	R to K B sq. ch.	K to his Kt 3rd
37.	Q to K 4th ch.	B interposes
38.	Q to K 8th ch.	R to K B 2nd
39.	Q to K Kt 8th ch.	K to his B 3rd
40.	K Kt P two	Q R to his sq.
41.	Q takes Q R	Q takes K Kt P ch.
42.	R to his R sq.	R to Q 2nd
43.	B to Q R 3rd	K to his B 2nd
44.	Q to Q B 6th	R to Q 8th
45.	Q takes Q Kt P	Q to K 5th ch.
46.	K to his Kt sq.	K to his Kt 3rd
47.	Q to her K 2nd	Q to K Kt 5th ch.
48.	Q to her K Kt 2nd	Q takes Q ch.
49.	K takes Q	B to K R 6th ch.
50.	K takes B	R takes R
51.	B to K 7th	Q R P one
52.	Q R P one	R to K B 4th

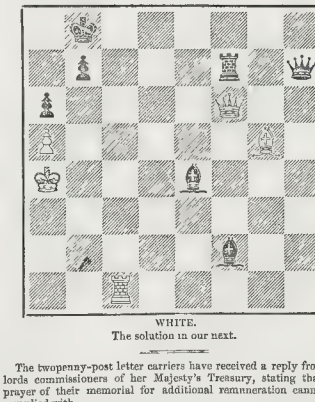
* Badly played. Black gets into difficulties by this move.
† This is also weak. P to Q 6th would be better.
‡ A good move.
§ White should have checked with queen at her B 5th.
‖ The following note to this move is to be found in Mr. Lewis's edition of these games: "It may seem unaccountable to the reader how the committee on the part of the London club could have made so great an error as sacrificing the rook. The following statement of facts will in some measure explain it. The 26th 27th and 28th moves were sent on the same day to the Edinburgh club—this was done in order to save time. It so happened on that day, that the secretary, whose duty it was to write the letter, had an engagement which compelled him to leave the club two hours earlier than usual; the letter was therefore put into the post office at three instead of five o'clock; in the mean time one of the members discovered that the second move had not been sufficiently examined, an application was immediately made at the post-office for the letter, which was refused; in consequence a second letter was transmitted by the same post to the Edinburgh club, retracting the second and third moves, abiding only by the first. The Edinburgh club in answer gave it as their decided opinion that the London club were bound by their letter, and that no move could be retracted; they therefore insisted on the moves being played; the London club conceded the point, though they differed in opinion.
¶ It is rather surprising the London players did not avail themselves of the opportunity of drawing the game.

Solution to Problem No. 7.

WHITE.	BLACK.
R to K Kt 8th ch.	K to Kt 2nd
Kt to R 5th ch.	K to Kt 3rd
R to Kt 6th ch.	P interposes
R takes P, mates

PROBLEM, No. 8.
White to move, and mate in four moves.

BLACK.



WHITE.

The solution in our next.

The twopenny-post letter carriers have received a reply from the lords commissioners of her Majesty's Treasury, stating that the prayer of their memorial for additional remuneration cannot be complied with.

An old man of Couse (Dordogne), who, notwithstanding a great appearance of misery, bore the character of being the possessor of money, committed suicide a short time ago. He disappeared suddenly, and a few days afterwards his body was taken up from the bottom of the Dordogne, into which he had thrown himself, with a bag containing 10,000 francs round his neck.—Galignani.

That well-known seat of gastronomy, the Thatched-house Tavern, in St. James's-street, is nearly levelled to the ground. On its site is to be erected a new club-house for the Junior United Service.

CITY INTELLIGENCE.—The freedom of the city of London, and indeed of England generally, was presented last week to Mr. Jones, on his emerging from the Fleet Prison. He received it with becoming pleasure, not having enjoyed anything like freedom for some months.—Punch.

THE SPECIAL COMMISSIONS.

STAFFORD, Monday, Oct. 10.—The three courts opened at nine o'clock and were more than usually crowded. A great delay occurred to the business in all the courts from the non-attendance of witnesses and persons on bail. To prevent, in future, such an unseemly interruption of the public business, the Judges resolved to extract the recognizances of all parties not in attendance at the proper time.

(Before Mr. Baron Parke.)

Thos. Rowley, John Rowley, Thos. Smith, Mark Baugh, and Cornelius Hicken, were arraigned for a riotous assembly and riot, and for an unlawful assembly, on the 3d of August, in the parish of Tettenhall, South Staffordshire. The jury returned a verdict of Guilty against all the prisoners.

John Rowley, Thomas Rowley, Mark Baugh, Samuel Smith, Matthew Hart, Michael Breese, Joseph King, and Cornelius Hicken, were arraigned for a riot, an unlawful assembly, and an assault on the 13th of August. All the prisoners, with the exception of Matthew Hart, were found Guilty.

TUESDAY, Oct. 11.—The trials of Henry Bithell and his companions for the burning and demolition of the house of the Rev. R. E. Atkins were yesterday proceeded with.

The jury made the following return:—Elijah Simpkins, John Owen, Thomas Murray, Henry Howard, William Ellis, A. Wood, Elijah Clay, Joseph Greene, Richard Croxton, John Rathbone, William Denner, Thomas Roberts, William Pearce, and Nicholas Nicholas, Esqrs.; George Kelsall, Philip Deane, and William Spooner, Not Guilty. Ellis burst into tears when he heard the verdict pronounced.

The court then adjourned to the following morning.

(Before Mr. Baron Rolfe.)

John Brown, John Hobbs, H. Simpkins, Robert Cliff, James Mason, and Francis Taylor, were found Guilty at night. Upon being asked what they had to say, all the prisoners declared their innocence. Mr. Baron Rolfe sentenced the prisoners to transportation for life.

(Before Mr. Baron Parke.)

Joseph Linney, aged 33, a man who appeared much superior to the general class of his co-prisoners, and Michael Byrne were arraigned for an unlawful assembly, riot, and assault on the 27th of August, in the parish of Kingswinford. Mr. Sergeant Lodlow stated the case. He described Linney as one of the itinerant Chartist orators who travelled from place to place poisoning and polluting the minds of the working classes, and making them discontented with their condition by their heated and inflammatory harangues. The jury returned a verdict of Guilty for an unlawful assembly against the prisoners.

The court then adjourned.

This morning the twenty-six prisoners convicted of demolishing and burning the Rev. Dr. Vale's house were brought up for judgment. At half-past eight o'clock the three Judges took their seats upon the bench in the Nisi Prius Court. The Lord Chief Justice addressed the prisoners in a most solemn and impressive manner, and then proceeded to sentence the prisoners as follows, having first desired the prisoner Sampson to sit down:—John Harris, Edward Wright, William Cartledge, John Wilson, Joseph Whistons, Thomas Cotton, and William Cartledge, to be transported for twenty-one years. Jervase Phillips, transported for fifteen years. Thomas Wagstaff, Philip Saunders, Benjamin Whitehouse, Richard Gilbert, Thomas Banks, and Eli Smith, transported for ten years. John Powell, Henry Dimmock, Wm. Toft, and Joseph Hurst, to be confined in Stafford gaol for twelve calendar months, and kept to hard labour for the twelve months. James Millington, Samuel Eaton, and Richard Edge the younger, to be confined for four calender months, and kept to hard labour. James Hurst, in consequence of his extreme youth (twelve years old), was sentenced to only two months' imprisonment and hard labour. His lordship said that he had not sentenced the prisoner, Joseph Saunders, as he had been convicted on another indictment before his learned brother Baron Parke, who would sentence him.

The Judges then separated, the Lord Chief Justice continuing to preside in the Nisi Prius Court.

(Before Lord Chief Justice Tindal.)

Mr. Lee applied for liberty to be granted to Arthur O'Neill to traverse to the next assizes, upon the ground that he was indicted on a charge quite different from that for which he was committed. Mr. Worsley Harrison, in the absence of the Solicitor-General, opposed the application. The Lord Chief Justice would take the affidavit of the prisoner, and a copy of the depositions and indictment, and consult his learned brothers, and he would give his decision to-morrow.

Thomas Cooper, of Leicester, a Chartist lecturer, and twelve others, were charged with assembling and riot on the 15th of August, at Stoke-upon-Trent, on the 15th of August. Mr. Parker is a magistrate. Cooper objected to be tried with the others, and claimed to sever in his defence. Mr. Waddington objected to the prisoner's application, after some conversation with the Lord Chief Justice, consented to Cooper's severing his defence. The prisoner was then placed at the bar and the others were removed. He pleaded Not Guilty, having first challenged the jury to the full number of twenty.

(Before Mr. Baron Parke.)

BURNING OF LORD GRANVILLE'S OFFICES.—Thomas Roberts, W. Turner, James Slack, Edward Smith, Joseph Wild, Hen y Gibson, and Isaac Colclough were indicted for a riot, and demolishing by fire the offices of Lord Granville, on the 26th of August. Mr. Spooner, on the part of Colclough, and Mr. Neale, on the part of Slack, exhausted their challenges. In consequence of the great difficulty there was to empanuel a jury, the learned Judge directed the prisoners to be put to the table, with the exception of Thomas Roberts, who was put upon his trial, and pleaded Not Guilty

CHESTER FRIDAY, Oct. 7. The Judges, being determined to deliver the gaol of Chester as early as possible, the Hon. Sergeant Lord Abinger in the Crown Court, Mr. Baron Alderson in the Nisi Prius, and Sir C. Cross well in the Grand Jury-room.

Thomas Winterbottom, Turner Fry, John Smith, Hugh Winterbottom, and James Kinder, were placed at the bar, charged with rioting at Brookfield, and feloniously demolishing the mill, and dwelling-house of Samuel Shepley. The defendants were all much injured, two seemed to suffer still from the wounds they had received when making the attack.—The Attorney-General stated the case. Several witnesses having been examined, Mr. Yardley, for the defence, submitted that there was no case against Kinder and Hugh Winterbottom. The Lord Chief Baron concurred with the counsel for the defence; and the Attorney-General said he would not press the case as against these prisoners. Kinder and Hugh Winterbottom were acquitted, and the other prisoners were found Guilty. The Attorney-General expressed his hope that, with respect to the wounded defendants, his lordship would, in passing sentence, be as lenient as possible.

The court then adjourned till a quarter past nine o'clock on Saturday.

SATURDAY.—The court having met at the usual hour, James Thorpe, Samuel Foxe, George Taylor, William Wylde, and James Hayne, were placed at the bar, charged with conspiring to prevent her Majesty's subjects following their lawful employments. Ferns and George Taylor pleaded guilty, the others not guilty. The defendants were all found Guilty.

James Derbyshire was then tried, and found Guilty of a participation in the attack on Stockport workhouse. The prisoner, having been previously convicted of felony, was sentenced to transportation for life.

Wm. Turner, Samuel Kay, and Robert Robertson were placed on their trial for conspiracy to prevent persons following their lawful employment. The case having been opened by the Attorney-General, Joseph Smith, Amos Smith, Wm. Rock, John Webb, and Martha Baker, were put upon their trial for stealing money and provisions from the Stockport union. The paupers were all convicted.—The Lord Chief Baron, after a suitable exhortation, sentenced each to twelve months' imprisonment and hard labour.

His lordship then proceeded to pass sentence on the other prisoners who had been convicted during the present commission. After a few observations, his lordship sentenced Robert Wild, Moorhouse, Fanhurst, Lees, and James Wold, to be imprisoned for two years each; S. Shirt was sentenced to eighteen calendar months; Taylor, Ferns, William Wilde, Thorpe, and James Hague, one year each; S. Kay and Robinson one year; and Buckley, Winterbottom, and Smith, who had been wounded in the attack on Mr. Shepley's mill, were, on the latter's account, respectively sentenced to only three months' imprisonment; Lees and Buckley one year each.

All the cases in the Crown Court having been now disposed of, the Lord Chief Baron dissolved the court, observing that the remainder of the prisoners in gaol would be tried at the ordinary assizes.

In Mr. Justice Cresswell's court his lordship, in passing sentence on the prisoners, addressed them in a most impressive manner, observing that they were indebted to the leniency of the Government for not being prosecuted for high treason. They had been found guilty of a very serious offence. They were weak enough to submit to the dictation of others—they were held and daring when they broke the laws and committed plunder. Their offence was also one of great cruelty towards those who were obliged to seek parish relief, for they had gone to those who knew stores were provided, and plundered the stores, and thereby deprived their more unfortunate brethren of their food. It was, therefore, necessary that a severe example should be made of them, and the sentence of the court was, that they should be imprisoned and kept to hard labour for twelve calendar months.

John Smith, William Mellor, James Smith, Joseph Cohen, and John Nuttall, to be transported for ten years each.

Mr. Baron Alderson passed sentences on the prisoners convicted yesterday in his court. The prisoners being placed at the bar, the learned Baron, addressing them, said they had all been found guilty of a felony, and found guilty of different offences against the public peace. All of them were bad examples of the misfortunes into which evil counsel led young men. Many of them, he perceived, were very young, and he feared very ignorant, and they were now abiding the punishment of the law for the violent outrages they had committed against the peace of the country. What possible good could they have contemplated to obtain for themselves by the course they had pursued? They earned by their labour their daily bread; and when it was said they desired freedom (which, indeed, would be a most admirable and virtuous aspiration, if they properly understood what freedom was), why had they refused to others the same liberty they claimed for themselves? If they had understanding they would see that they had been misled by wicked and foolish men; though he could scarcely call them foolish, for [illegible] the most active cause, at the expense of [illegible] and then [illegible] to avoid [illegible] assembled [illegible] and [illegible] assembly, [illegible] to [illegible] and [illegible] to [illegible] and [illegible] to [illegible] and tends greatly when the weather is fine, as it fortunately is on the present occasion, to enhance the appearance and value of the stock and attract purchasers. The show was splendid, and the supply abundant and of fine quality. There was a depreciation of seven shillings per head on an average as compared with any of the last ten preceding years, during which period stock in this county has borne but a middle price, and had it not been that the fair was crowded with speculators from all parts, who calculated on getting stock for nothing, matters would have been much worse. Although the best days is called the show day, it is the greatest selling day also, and those who do not dispose of their stock on that day have a sorry chance on the three succeeding days, when the fairs is held on the common fair green.

AFFAIR OF HONOUR.—The quarrel and assault at took place at the town of Westport some days ago between Lord James Browne and the second son of the Marquis of Sligo, and Mr. George Ousley Higgins, was disposed of by a duel between those gentlemen, at a place called Carrowmore, in the same county. Lord James Browne was attended by Mr. Moore, of Moore Hall, who acted as his immediate friend, and was also accompanied by his brother-in-law, Colonel Knox; and Mr. Higgins had for his acting friend the Hon. Frederick Cavendish, the proprietor of the Castlebar Telegraph newspaper. The parties having taken their ground, Lord James Browne discharged his pistol at his antagonist without effect, when Mr. Higgins fired in the air; and the affair having thus terminated, the parties left the ground without any reconciliation.

In this said town of Westport a very imposing and interesting ceremony took place in the profession of two young ladies of family and fortune, two of the sisters-in-law of the Lord Bishop of Killala

HIGHLAND COSTUME.

(Continued from p. 341, in our last number.)

Caps, or, as they are more correctly termed, bonnets, of the Highland fashion are of great antiquity, and were, at one time, very common in England, where sumptuary laws enjoined their use, in order that the woollen manufacture might be encouraged by their consumption. In the reign of Elizabeth it was ordained that every person above seven years of age, except lords, knights, and gentlemen, should wear them of native manufacture, under the penalty of 3s. 4d. for every day's neglect. They consequently became the distinguishing mark of citizens and tradesmen, and the "City flat caps" were often used as a term to denote their wearers. They are alluded to by one of Shakespeare's characters in sufficiently remarks of another, that "better heads have worn plain statute caps," a name they received from the circumstance of the statute so strictly enjoining their use. In the engraving of the Stewart chieftain he is represented in a similar round flat bonnet; the Gordon wears his bonnet cocked, which was done by means of padding, the broad sort being distended by a hoop. The chieftainer wore upon their bonnets the eagle's feather, and the badge of the irrespective clans, thus the Stewart wears the thistle, the national badge; the Gordon the ivy, Cameron the crowberry, Cummin the cummin wood, Forbes the broom, Fraser the yew, Campbell the fir-club moss, M'Donald the heath, Rose the wild rosemary, &c. &c. The inhabitants of Badenoch, Strathspey, Strathdon, wear the bonnet cocked; the Strathdee men are distinguished by having it flat, of this fashion.

TWA BONNETS.

The military bonnet is depicted in the engraving given above of the bagpiper of the 42nd Regiment. Its undress form is that of a tall round cap; it is, in fact, only denuded of its side feather and the overhanging group of black ones.

The stocking of the Highlander may find its prototype in the ancient Saxon leg-bandages or cross gartering, so common among them, and which give the legs of these people, as depicted in contemporary pictures, much of the appearance of those of Highlandmen. They wear bands of different coloured cloths, linen, or leather, which, commencing at the ancle and terminating a little below the knee, cross each other sandalwise, and reminds one strongly of the Scotch stocking, which, from its similarity, may probably be a relic of the ancient Saxon or Danish dress. The garters worn now are chiefly red, but the native Gaels wear them like their forefathers, striped in various colours. In tying them considerable taste is displayed. In the 42nd Regiment it is fastened in a handsome knot; in the 92nd this ornament is formed like a rose, by the needle, and is attached to the garter, a mode unknown to the genuine Highlander. The 78th, or Rossshire Buffs, leave both ends depending from a tasteful knot. The engraving shows one of these picturesque and ingenious ties.

The purse or sporan of the Highlander is one of the most characteristic features of his dress: it was formed into several distinct pockets for the various articles of convenience to be carried by the wearer. Those worn by the higher classes were frequently richly ornamented, the tassel heads of silver, they were worn by Prince Charles Edward, are still in existence, and are very beautifully enriched

Of their arms the most peculiar are the shields, which are round, and ornamented with raised knobs or inlet ared ornaments of very ancient form, which has been retained from the earliest period, for shields of a similar kind, and which were manufactured by the ancient Britons, have been discovered both in Wales and England, and which are identically the same in taste and arrangement. Two curious specimens are here engraved from Mr. Logan's book the one of metal, showing the arrangement of the ornamental knobs the other, of leather, is covered with intricate knots and flor d designs of a very antique character. In the same group are also given the claymore and dirk, with its ornamented handle, and the Jedburgh axe; that of the ancient Highlander completes the selection.

GROUP OF TARGETS, ARMS, &c.

Of their arms a few words may suffice. The guns of the old Highlanders were long, and of a peculiar construction, like the one represented in the hand of the Gordon previously given, which is drawn from one in the Tower, taken in the rebellion of 1745, where is also preserved that which belonged to the unfortunate Earl of Mar, curiously and richly ornamented with pearls, &c. The pistols of the Highlanders were also richly decorated, and were formed entirely of metal. In battle they were accustomed, after they had discharged them once, to throw them with full force at the heads of their enemy; then drawing their swords, and grasping them sinewdis, they fought hand to hand with great dexterity; and thus they had at Culloden. By slashing at the heads of the horses they were able to rout and defeat numerous bodies of cavalry; and their blows, aimed at the heads of the infantry, rendered steel caps a very necessary article of the costume of their opponents, without which much greater slaughter would have been effected in the British ranks during the rebellion. Mr. Logan relates that Macpherson of Cluny, not aware that the cavalry of the royal army of Falkirk were head pieces of iron, declared with astonishment that he never met with skulls so hard as those of the dragoons, for he had struck at them until or was tired, and was scarce able to breast one!

The female costume of the Highlands was also formed of the venerated tartan. Mr. Logan says—"A favourite pattern of stuff for female dresses was crimson and black, the stripes of three or four threads in the woof, the warp being all black; besides which there was a sort much worn by women and children. It was made partly coloured, by tying cords very tight round the heaps of yarn when undergoing the process of dying; thus, supposing the colour blue, the spots preserved white by the ligatures would appear, irregularly throughout the web, forming a motley texture, or cloud-figured pattern.

"The upper garment of the females of former ages, throughout the north and west of Scotland, was the fu. plaid, which usually contained three yards in length, and two in breadth, for which purpose the narrow webs of the curtain or white sort, but in the Low Country was an manner of showy patterns, either worsted or silk. This garment is worn over the head, and fastened under the chin with a brooch or pin, like the shawl of modern times or otherwise only over the shoulders, as the state of the weather may permit. From the change of manners, the use of the plaid is now almost confined to the elderly females, but was formerly worn by the married, and the young or old." This costume is excellently represented in the accompanying figure, from one engraved in the illustrated edition of the Waverley Novels, now publishing by Mr. Cadel.

"Those who have been in the brae country of Scotland," adds Mr. Logan, "cannot forget the picturesque effect of the congregation of a kirk on Sunday, loitering in the churchyard until the commencement of worship, or moving along the mountain paths, the men in their varied tartans and smartly-cocked bonnets, the married women in their gaudy plaids and snow-white mutches, or caps, the girls with their auburn hair neatly bound up in the snood."

HIGHLAND WOMAN.

An amusing anecdote of the love of a Scotsman for the peculiar garb of his native country is given in Earle's "Journal of a Residence in the Island of Tristan d'Acunha," in the South Atlantic, where a small settlement exists for the purpose of preparing oil from the fat of marine animals, and the chief person of which community was a native of Roxburgh, named Glass, who, to his other accomplishments, added a considerable proficiency in tailoring. "I proposed to him," says Mr. Earle, "when my clothes were completely worn out, to make me a full-dress suit out of my tartan cloak. He agreed to do so; but still my clothes were not forthcoming. One evening, on my return from a fatiguing day's ramble, Glass came to me with a most melancholy face, and began—'It is no use holding out any longer, Mr. Earle; I really cannot find in my heart to cut up that bonnie tartan. I have had it out several times, and had the scissors in my hands, but I cannot do it, Sir. It is the first tartan that was ever landed on Tristan d'Acunha, and the first that ever I have seen since I left Scotland, and I really cannot consent to cutting it up into pieces.'"

Thus exquisite touch of pure native feeling was met by Mr. Earle in the proper spirit, by presenting him with the cloak, and getting made instead a pair of trousers, the front of sailcloth, and the back of goat-skin, with the hair on, the only materials then to be obtained; and in the endurance of which he was consoled by his host's declaration, that "his Majesty himself, God bless him! if he had been left here, as you were, could do no better."

THEATRICAL PORTRAITS.

CHARLES KEMBLE AS DON FELIX.

We had this week intended to present to our readers a beautiful representation of the scene and grouping of the finale to Semiramide, as now so gloriously performing at Covent-garden Theatre. The drawing, however, has been found too elaborate to get engraved with justice in the time, and we therefore reserve it until our next publication, presenting in its stead one of Lane's spirited portraits, in character, of the respected lessee of the theatre, within whose walls the genius of his daughter and of another gifted vocalist is just now eliciting so much homage and applause.

We do not know if Mr. Charles Kemble will again hazard the fatigue of the stage—he has suffered terribly, and can be hardly physically equal to the energies required by performance, although, mentally, we have no doubt that he will be young to the last. It was, however, astonishing to see, only a year or two ago, how he rallied himself into the sustaining a whole round of his former characters, bringing back to the old playgoers all their memories of his grace, finish, and gentlemanly bearing, and adding freshness to their recollections of the bright effervescence and sparkling comedy of his younger days. If he do not resume this arduous trial, and so enable us to give him as he is still, we have him as he was, and in no more faithful form and presence than in his favourite character of Don Felix, in which he is here represented, and which is from a beautiful series of eighteen different portraits of him, by Lane, which Messrs. Colnaghi and Puckle have just published in a collected form. There is the dash and character about this Don Felix which marks Charles Kemble to the letter; but it is only one of the phases which his genius in its versatility was wont to take. He was, indeed, great in many things beside; for, setting apart the characters of the highest rank which he so ably filled, but in which he had rivals for public favour, there were a multitude of parts which for the first time assumed an importance in his hands which they will now, perhaps, never recover. Who can conceive Marc Antony, except in the very form and figure which Mr. Kemble lent to him, and which made the character as exclusively his own as Brutus was his brother's? Who can separate the actor from the part in Cassio, or think of Falconbridge otherwise than as he represented him? When to his was added a universality of power, a capacity to excel in every branch of his art, from the profoundest walks of tragedy even to broad farce, the one became still less easy to repair. And or what other actor on record can it be said that he filled so many and such heterogeneous characters, and filled them so well? Or where shall we find in the annals of the modern stage a man who could with equal grace, deep thought, and cultivation, venture upon Hamlet and Macbeth, Othello and Iago, Cassio, Romeo, and Mercutio? Who was as much at home in the deep pathos of Octavian, George Barnwell, and Beverley, as in the manners of the light and degejé man of the world, Mirabel, Captain Absolute, Charles Surface, Petruchio, Benedick, the gentleman and soldier; who could lend grace and dignity to Archer and Friar Tuck; could make us feel for the parental tenderness of Shylock, even though we rejoiced that his deep-laid plan of revenge for national oppression was foiled; and let us see that, with all his rich roguery and somewhat loose sense of morality, Falstaff was yet a gentleman, born and bred in courts, the page to Thomas Mowbray, Duke of Norfolk?

If it be true that he has retired from the stage, we wish him every happiness in his declining years; and, whether it be true or not, we wish him also every prosperity in the management of a theatre which may be almost said to have been hallowed by his own genius and that of his kindred.

THE FASHIONS.

Paris, Rue de la Chaussée d'Antin, Oct. 12, 1842.

Mon cher Monsieur,—Considerable activity still continues to exist here in the greater part of our fashionable ateliers, and we shall doubtlessly soon see that fashion will draw aside the slight veil which still covers the caprices and coquetries of the present season.

It is not very likely that any material alterations will be made in the capotes and hats now worn, and which will most likely remain in vogue during the winter, with perhaps some slight modifications.

We have lately seen several of these elegant articles in straw, lined with lilac crêpe, and trimmed with a ribbon embossed with green velvet. Others we have observed of poult de soie of a myrtle green colour.

Elegant hats of white gros d'Afrique, with small moss roses round the crown, of rose-coloured crêpe, and of paille de riz, are also exceedingly fashionable.

It is rumoured that we shall have this winter sleeves a la Louis XIV. and à la Richelieu, round full skirts made still longer than those now worn, and garnished with three rows of gathers and flounces, having the space between them filled up with lace and flounces alternately. There will be no change in the bust, but the skirts will be so much lengthened as to remind us of the trains formerly worn,—a fashion from which may Heaven and good taste preserve us.

We have been favoured with a sight of two most beautiful toilettes de ville, and two equally charming evening dresses, of which we send you a description.

The first of these is a robe of chamois poult de soie, having a skirt of the same material. The corsage is made high and quite plain, with a triple seam, and is worn with a sash. It has pagoda sleeves, puffed below en batiste. A double puffing of crêpe runs round the neck, and the waist is worn long. The hat is of orange poult de soie, ornamented with a russet plume on the side, and with small-sized flowers on the interior.

The other is a robe of grey foulard, ornamented up the front of the skirt with a wide wreath en passementerie to resemble a redingote. The corsage, which is plain, is brought down to a rounded point, and is trimmed down the centre with a wreath which joins that of the skirt. The sleeves are quite plain. A very short cardinal is worn with this dress, edged with a similar trimming to that which forms the garniture of the robe. The collar and ruffles are of lace. The hat is of paille de riz, ornamented with a small bunch of ostrich feathers.

The evening dresses are, first, a redingote of grey poult de soie, with skirts of the same material. The corsage, which covers the shoulders, is made open in front, with plain sleeves, and is edged round with small lace frills. The chemisette is of batiste, richly embroidered. The waist is long, and is worn with a sash of rose-coloured taffeta. The cap, which is without a crown, is formed of a single piece of broad lace, plain on the middle of the head, but gathered in at the ears, and trimmed at the sides with three unequally-sized bunches of rose-coloured ribbon.

We have also remarked a robe of shot gros de Naples, trimmed at the skirt with a broad biais, disposed in festoons round the skirt, and returning on each side of the breadth in front, thus forming alternate intervals.

This garniture is fixed upon the skirt by a pretty simple biais, looped up on each side and hanging in festoons, but laid the contrary way.

The corsage of this dress, which is high, is made plain below, but bouillonné towards the top. The sleeves are demi-large, are bouillonné for half the length of the arm, and trimmed at the top with crèves of the same.

The collar and frills are en guipure.

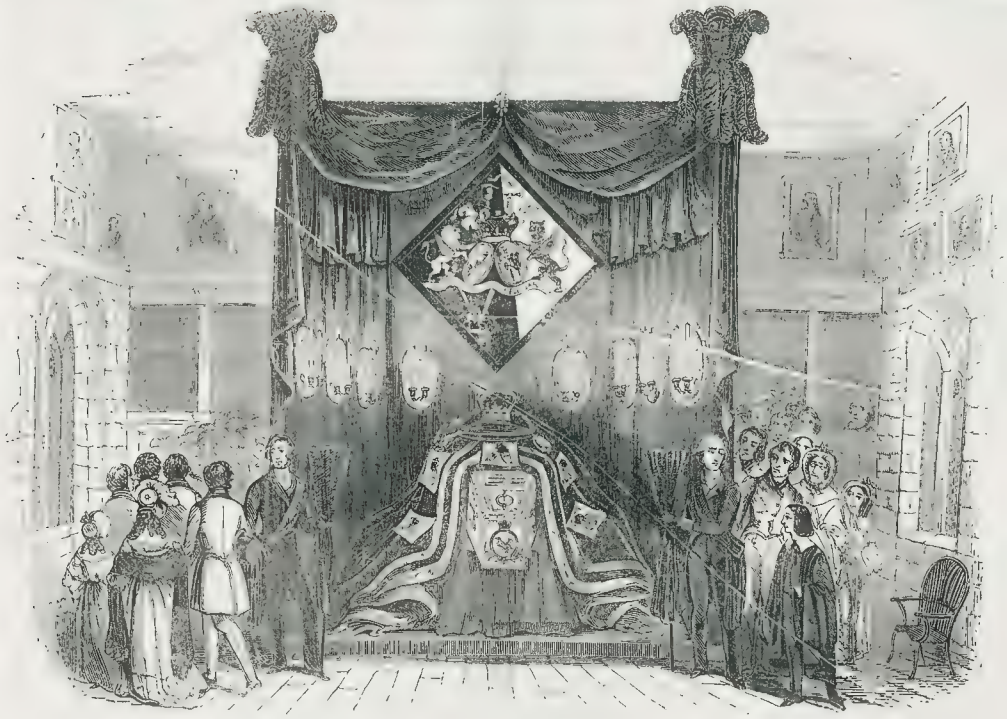
A cap is worn without a crown, garnished with two rows of lace, and relieved towards the centre by a small garland of blue flowers.

HENRIETTE DE B.

It is reported that some of the Masters in Chancery, who are entitled to retire from length of service, will avail themselves of their privilege, and, consequently, we may look for new appointments in these desirable offices.

A metrical translation of Pope's works is now, strange to say, for the first time presented to the German public. It is the joint production of Adolph Boettger and Theodor Oelkers; the former the successful translator of Byron, the latter of Moore. The execution is creditable.

A paragraph has gone the round of the papers stating that Sir Robert Peel has honoured Mr. Moon, of Threadneedle-street, by presenting his son to King's College.



THE LYING IN STATE.]

the Hon. and Rev. Gerald Valerian Wellesley, D.D., Lord Herbertton, the Marquis of Douro, the Rev. Henry Wellesley, R. Wellesley, Esq., Charles Cullen Smith, Esq., the Hon. Gerald Wellesley, &c.

The funeral procession left the Election Hall, and proceeded through the cloisters, entering the quadrangle under the clock-tower, and passed into the chapel at the south-west entrance in the following order:—

The Undertaker.
Two Mutes
Twelve Choristers, in white surplices.
Provost of Eton, the Rev. Mr. Hodgson — Vice-Provost.
Head Master of Eton, Rev. E. Hawtrey. — Under Master.
Other Gentlemen of the College.
Page. — Pages of Honour — Page
Two officiating Clergymen.
2 Pages. — The Coronet, Sword, and Arms — 2 Pages.
THE COFFIN,

richly covered with crimson velvet, and surmounted by a magnificent pall, the ends of which were emblazoned with the emblematical orders of the family, consisting of the arms of Mornington, Wellesley, Cowley, &c. &c. The pall was supported by the following noblemen, all of whom are among the senior pupils of the school: Lord Hatley, Lord Bagrave, Lord Darnley, Earl of Dunkelin, Lord Burghley, Lord Brownlow Cecil.

The coffin was immediately followed by the Earl of Mornington

THE PROCESSION IN THE CHAPEL.

as chief mourner, supported by the Right Hon. O. R. Blake, her Majesty's Chief Remembrancer; and Alfred Montgomery, Esq., the deceased's private secretary.

The Duke of Wellington	Hon. Gerald Wellesley, D.D.
Lord Cowley	C. C. Smith, Esq.
Right Hon. Lord Hatherton	Rev. H. Wellesley.
Marquis of Douro	Hon. G. Wellesley.
R. Wellesley, Esq.
John Thornton Down, Esq., sole executor to the deceased.
E. J. Smith, Esq.	W. Stevens, Esq.
R. Montgomery Martin, Esq.	Fortescue Bate, Esq.

Five of the deceased's upper servants.
Four of the deceased's footmen.

In this order the procession entered the side hall of the college, and proceeded through the sanctuary into the body of the chapel, on entering which the choir commenced chanting the beautiful service for the burial of the dead. The mourners occupied the stalls usually filled by the heads of the college. The service was Croft and Purcell's, and the organ was presided over by Mr. Mitchell. The lesson was read by the Rev. Mr. Hodgson. The coffin, upon being taken into the choir, was set in the centre aisle upon trestels, upon which was placed the coronet of the deceased, the illustrious relatives of the late marquis taking their seats in the stalls appropriated for them near the coffin.

The whole of the Etonians (between six and seven hundred) had previously entered the chapel, and taken their places, with the numerous friends of the college authorities, who were admitted by tickets, and by whom the chapel was nearly filled.

At the conclusion of the burial service, Mr. Mitchell performed the "Dead March" in the sacred oratorio of Saul, and the mournful cavalcade then retired from the chapel, and proceeded to the provost's lodge in the same order in which they walked to the place of interment.

At the conclusion of the service the Provost received the personal thanks of Lords Mornington and Cowley, and the Hon. Gerald Wellesley, D.D., and the Duke of Wellington shook hands with the rev. gentleman on leaving the chapel.

The coffin remained exposed for some time, in order to give the pupils an opportunity of viewing it, after which it was lowered into the vault, and placed close to that of the late provost's, the Rev. Dr. Goodall. The deceased nobleman is the sixth person who has been interred in the vault, the others being the late Dr. Goodall, Provost Briggs, Miskeate, and Provost Bland and his lady. The coffin was elaborately decorated, and bore the following inscription:—

Richard Colley Wellesley,
Marquess Wellesley,
Knight of the Most Noble Order of the Garter, &c., &c.,
Died 20th of Sept., 1842.
Aged 83.

The arms of the deceased were engraved on a silver-gilt plate over the above, the whole surmounted by the memorable motto borne by the late marquis in honour of his exertions in the Eastern empire—"Super Indos protulit Imperium."

The Duke of Wellington and the other members of the deceased's family left Eton immediately after the ceremony, proceeding, as on their arrival, through Slough and Drayton.

The whole of the arrangements connected with the funeral were under the entire superintendence of Mr. W. French, undertaker, of No. 7, Edward-street, Portman-square; they were most efficiently made, and ably carried into effect.

'Neath that old classic roof to-day,
In marble vault of death,
Shall lie his form of torpid clay,
In whose old bosom not one ray
Of life now lingereth!
Its beauty dead,
Its glory fled,
Mute all its voice of love;
Its soul gone up, that soul of fire,
That wisdom's word or virtue's lyre
Would still with glowing truth inspire
On holy wings above!

Here sinks to his last resting-place,—
The death-home of his noble race,—
His mortal form, who once did fill
A world with admiration's thrill—
Who bore within God's image-frame
All elements of human fame—
Who wore in life, as meek as now,
The scholar's wreath upon his brow—
Who sang in smooth and gentle lays,
And twined it with the poet's bays—
Who turned from arts of peace afar,
To wield the flaming sword of war;
Nor e'er its unsheath'd glory stayed
Till victory blushed upon the blade—
Who stirred the senate with a voice
That made old wisdom's soul rejoice—
Who sat on a vice-regal throne,
Calm, self-reposing, and alone,
In silent greatness, till he found
Vast-spreading empires circling round,
And England's realms, grow day by day,
More limitless beneath his sway—
Who ruled with splendour, and resigned
With fine simplicity of mind,
Embracing friends and baffling foes,
With calm, unruffled, grand repose
Of spirit, that bespoke to all the state
A patriot hero, good as well as great!
At last, when all ambition's voice was mute,
The silver warrior grasped again the lute,
Bade life away in minstrel numbers glide,
And, when its pulses ceased, on learning's bosom died!

Now his body sinks to gloom
In the everlasting tomb—
Now his spirit takes his rest
In the palace of the blest:
Beautiful in radiant birth
Of light that cannot glow on earth—
More bright in that angelic sphere
Than even in starlike glory here!

He lies in holy ground—
With classic scenes around—
Where first his fresh aspiring youth
Was taught to tread the pleasant paths of truth.
Where first he met, in learning's happy strife,
The sweet companionships of after life;
And some of those who shared his fortunes there
Now to his grave repair,
And pay the tribute of affection's tears
From aged eyes that time has dimm'd with years!

Lo! yon old mourner—so convulsed with woe—
Whose sobbing sorrows half refuse to flow
Up from the heart in that wild gushing rain
Which robs the soul of grief of half its pain;
But rather—as an earthquake—shake his frame
With an emotion that seems all too deep
To let him weep—
His name?
That is the brother of the honoured one—
The glorious sharer of his earlier doom—
The sorrowing mourner by his marble tomb—
And pilgrim to his grave in grief and gloom—
The warrior Wellington!

Respect the heart-wrung sob—the stifled groan—
He mourns a nature kindred with his own:
Kindred in love, in brotherhood, in name,
In honour, glory, goodness, greatness, fame;
All that can bless the virtuous, wise, and brave,
And bring such grievers round a mortal's grave!

No more! The warrior's brow is clear.
No more the mourners linger near—
For they have seen the drear vault close
Upon its tenant's dark repose—
Deep covered in the silent sod,
Whose soul is now at peace with God!

But earth holds memories of the dead—
All warmly glowing yet—
Of him around whose living head
Honour such lovely lustre shed
As fame shall ne'er forget.
He claims new life of an eternal kind,
For Wellesley's life is now—the Life of Mind!

COUNTRY NEWS.

The Bank of Manchester.—Mr. Edward Burdekin, the managing director of the Bank of Manchester, who for many years has enjoyed the entire confidence of the directors of that establishment, has suddenly disappeared from the bank, from his house, and Manchester, and reports state that he is now on his way to America. A few days ago the newspapers published the particulars of an extraordinary case of bankruptcy (in re Raleigh v. Good), in which Mr. Burdekin and the Bank of Manchester were peculiarly interested, and on Saturday last Mr. Burdekin should have again met the commissioners on the re-examination of the bankrupts. He, however, appears to have absconded on the evening previous. The Bank of Manchester has recently incurred bad debts to an immense amount, but in most cases it has been in some way connected with the business of the parties who have failed in its debt. No blame is attached to the directors for having in the first instance appointed Mr. Burdekin manager of the bank, but the whole evil is attributed to his having subsequently become a director also, which, of course, made him at once a master and servant in the same institution—a position of almost unlimited power, and which never ought to be tolerated in any joint-stock company. A person, signing himself a "Shareholder," published some time ago a circular, addressed to his associates, in which he called attention to the present state of the company, which for some time has paid no dividend, and the shares of which are now unsaleable at £3, while £10 have been paid upon them. The losses of the bank, according to this circular, amounted to £700,000, of which, £170,000 was advanced to Messrs. Joseph Raleigh and Co., since bankrupts. This advance the "Shareholder" considers to have been perfectly unjustifiable. This circular is dated the 15th ult. We are glad to learn that, owing to the considerate forbearance of the London agents of this bank, and an exceedingly liberal advance from the Liverpool and Manchester District Bank, the directors have been enabled to effect an arrangement for promptly meeting all the demands that can be made upon the bank in the ordinary course of business; and that the calamities arising from its present situation are not likely to be increased by any failure in the repayment of deposits, or in providing for current bills.

The Victoria Arch, Perth.—On Monday the proposal to erect a stone arch at the southern termination of Prince's-street, where her Majesty was received by the civic authorities, and presented with the keys of the city, came under the consideration of the Perth Town Council, and was most favourably entertained. The contemplated arch will serve both to ornament the burgh, and to commemorate, in a very elegant and appropriate way, the first visit of Queen Victoria to as fair a city as Scotland can boast.

Consecration of the New Catholic Church of St. Bede, at Masbrough.—The interesting ceremony of consecration of the church of St. Bede, on a site liberally presented to the Catholics, at Masbrough, by B. Badger, Esq., was performed by the Right Rev. Dr. Briggs, vicar apostolic of the district, on Wednesday week, when the proceedings were throughout of a very impressive character, and appropriate to the occasion. The new ecclesiastical structure is an interesting object, not very far from the Masbrough station, and will strike every beholder as being characteristic of the purpose for which it is erected, being in a style of English architecture very prevalent about the end of the fourteenth century, and calculated to impress more by its aptness than many edifices do by either bulk or magnificence.

Maxwelltown Church.—The origin of the lamentable fire which destroyed so completely this edifice still remains a mystery. Nothing has transpired tending in the slightest degree to throw any light on the subject. The managers have already received from the Friendly Insurance Office the amount of the £1000 policy insured with that establishment, and have come to the determination of erecting a new church. We have no doubt that their efforts will be liberally aided by subscriptions.

The Glasgow Wellington Testimonial.—In consequence of an application from the sub-committee of the Wellington testimonial, the directors of the Royal Exchange have agreed to give a site in front of that building for the erection of the equestrian statue in honour of the duke. We understand that the statue is expected to be finished and in Glasgow by the 1st of May next, the birthday of the noble duke.

Opening of the New Docks at Newport, Monmouthshire.—The public opening of these docks, which are remarkable, as including the largest lock in the known world, took place on Monday, in the presence of a concourse of at least 25,000 persons, including most of the leading inhabitants of the county. The event was celebrated by a public dinner. [We shall give an engraving illustrative of the above event in our next number.]

Strange and Dreadful Accident to Sir William Geary.—A dreadful accident happened to Sir William Geary, early on Thursday morning se'nnight, at Oxonhoath, in Kent. It appears that the hon. baronet, on entering his dressing-room, fell over a glass screen, which was broken to pieces, and a large fragment, presenting a very sharp tapering point, inflicted a frightful wound on the right side of Sir William's neck, behind the lower jaw, within the smallest possible distance of the carotid artery, and dividing one of its principal branches. Lady Geary, who was in the next room, instantly ran to Sir William's assistance, with her maid, and the sight that presented itself to her agonized gaze may be more easily conceived than described. Sir William was stretched on the floor, his life's blood gushing out with fearful violence. At her ladyship's suggestion, her maid, a Swiss, courageously seized the wound, and tightly compressing it with her hands, stayed the frightful effusion of blood. In the mean time messengers had been despatched for Messrs. Starling and Vine, of Hadlow, and Dr. Taylor, of Maidstone. On their arrival it was found that the only chance of saving the patient was by performing the important and difficult operation of tying the carotid artery in order to prevent hemorrhage, the least renewal of which must have been fatal. The operation was most skilfully performed by Mr. Starling, assisted by his partner, Mr. Vine, and Dr. Taylor. It was unattended by the slightest additional bleeding, a point of the highest importance in this extreme case, and was borne with extreme fortitude by the previously well-nigh exhausted sufferer. On Sunday evening Sir William appeared to be as low as it was possible to be—still alive, but rallied a little during the night. The last report was, that he had not gone back during the preceding twelve hours.

Extensive Robbery at Bath.—On Tuesday afternoon information was circulated throughout the metropolitan police district, that a youth, named Moses Harding, had, on Monday morning, committed an extensive robbery at No. 41, Guy-street, Bath, and had been traced to London with the stolen property, consisting of a carpet-bag, red pattern on green, with a considerable quantity of plate, comprising spoons and forks of different sizes, an antique fish-slice, silver sugar-spoon and sifter, &c. Some of the articles marked "B.," and others "J. M. B.;" a great variety of valuable jewellery, amongst which were a diamond pin, three enamelled studs, a gold chain with two clasps, representing a hand; numerous rings, brooches, &c., set with pearls, topazes, and other jewels; a perforated antique silver basket, of small size; a silver-gut round snuff-box, with chased representation of the ghost scene in Hamlet; a large round single silver watch, marked "M. B.;" a Spanish silver medal, a copper French ditto, a medal descriptive of the history of Napoleon, and several other silver medals; five guineas of George III., and a quantity of fourpenny pieces. The fugitive is described as sixteen years of age, five feet five inches high, fair complexion, slender, and wore a blue frock coat and brown cloth waistcoat. He, and a young man who was with him, aged about twenty-one, with dark hair and full face, are stated to have arrived in London on Tuesday morning, by the luggage-train, from Chippenham.

Earthquake in Scotland.—On Saturday, the 24th ult., two rather smart shocks of earthquake were felt at Comrie, one in the morning, at five minutes to six, and the other at one minute to seven in the evening. In the usual scale the former is registered at three for shake and four for sound, and the latter as two for tremor and three for sound. By the first the inverted pendulum in the steeple was moved to the N.W. 1-8th inch, the horizontal pendulum about 1-16th inch, and the spring pendulum ranged W. 1-8th and depth 1-16th. In the second shock none of these seismometers were sensibly affected; but the sand-glass (one of which happened not to be set for the first shock) sunk on the latter occasion fully 1-10th inch, which is almost the same effect that a heavy carriage passing the house where it was placed has upon it, and a very delicate spring pendulum attached to this instrument vibrated E. and W. 1-8th inch, with no perceptible dip. The barometer and thermometer, which were strictly watched, seemed neither of them to be in the least affected. The former stood at 29.328 inches, and the latter at 55.10, for more than three-quarters of an hour after the last shock.

Hydrophobia.—About five or six weeks ago, William Thorp, aged 77 years, was bitten by a dog, at Maltby, at which place he resided. The dog, as we understand, turned out to be mad, and in a day or two afterwards the animal died. The wound inflicted by the bite was immediately over the left eye, and, being only a small one, speedily healed, the old man refusing to consult a surgeon, and saying that he should take no harm. At the beginning of last week, feeling unwell, he came by the coach to Sheffield, with the intention of obtaining medical advice, but neglected to do so, and on Thursday week decided symptoms of hydrophobia presented themselves; the unfortunate man frothed at the mouth, became very violent, and died in great agony, on Friday week, about three o'clock, at the house of his son-in-law, in New-street.

The Preston Robbery of £2000.—Birkenhead, Wednesday.—It will be in the recollection of our readers that Eliza Bailey and a male acquaintance were examined on several occasions at Union-hall before Mr. Traill, when she was eventually set at liberty, there not being sufficient evidence to warrant a committal. She was brought to this place, where she has undergone three examinations at the Town-hall, Birkenhead, the last of which took place last evening, and ended in her committal for trial.

The shipwrights and their employers at South Shields have now come to an amicable agreement.

The Colliers' Strike.—We are informed that, with one exception, all the collieries in the Holytown district have commenced work at the rate of wages insisted on by the men when they struck. The colliers in the neighbourhood of Airdrie, Coatbridge, &c., have likewise generally returned to their work, and are paid at the rate of about four shillings per day. The iron-miners, however, still remain out, and there is little appearance of adjustment, for the men are determined on the one hand, and the large stocks of iron-stone which are understood to have been accumulated make the masters equally so on the other. The Lothian colliers are, we observe, to have a great delegate meeting on Wednesday, to try and arrange for an adjustment in that county.

Robbery at the Railway Station, Derby.—On Wednesday evening, during the absence of the clerk, in the locomotive department of the North Midland Railway, the office was entered, and a desk robbed of a sum of money, the exact amount of which is not known, but it is believed to be from £60 to £70.

IRELAND.

Dublin, October 11.—It is stated that the various law appointments in the gift of the Government are at length definitively arranged, and in a manner calculated to give satisfaction both to the profession and the public. The Right Hon. Francis Blackburne goes to the Rolls Court, in succession to the late lamented Sir Michael O'Loghlen, Mr. T. B. Smith is appointed Attorney-General, and the Solicitor-Generalship has been conferred on Mr. Sergeant Greene, a gentleman who had the strongest possible professional claims on the Whig Ministry. Mr. Brewster is to receive the coif vacant by the promotion of Sergeant Greene; and Mr. Keatinge, Queen's Counsel, is mentioned as the former's probable successor as the law adviser at the Castle. This, however, is not yet decided upon. Mr. Litton has at length been offered, and has accepted, the office of Master in Chancery, in succession to the late Mr. Curry, thereby causing a vacancy in the representation of Coleraine.

The order for the removal of Mr. Nicholls, Chief Commissioner of Poor-laws, from Dublin, to Somerset-house, London, has been received, and he takes his departure in a few days from Ireland. He will be succeeded either by Sir E. Head or Mr. Hall, son-in-law of Chief Justice Pennefather.

Ballinasloe Fair.—The great fair of this place, which occupied the minds of all classes in this part of the country and, indeed, in Ireland generally, commenced last week with the show day. This show means an exhibition of the sheep for sale during the three succeeding days, grouped upon this occasion for show in flocks, as they belong to the various owners, hemmed in and tended by their respective shepherds. The grouping runs of between 60,000 and 70,000 sheep in the beautiful domain of the Earl of Clancarty, which is close up to the town, and let for this purpose, has a most pastoral and picturesque effect through the numerous vistas and plantations, and

ADVERTISEMENTS.

THE CHINESE COLLECTION, ST. GEORGE'S-PLACE, HYDE PARK CORNER.—I ns spelendid Collection, consisting of objects exclusively Chinese, surpassing in extent and grandeur any similar display in the known world, entirely filling the spacious saloon, 225 feet in length by 50 feet in width, embracing upwards of Fifty Figures, as large as life, all fac similes, in groups in their native costumes, from the highest mandarin to the lowest in social position, and accompanied by many thousand specimens, both in natural history and miscellaneous curiosities, illustrating the appearance, manners, and customs of more than three hundred million Chinese, respecting whom the nations of Europe have had scarcely any opportunity of judging, is now OPEN for PUBLIC INSPECTION, from Ten in the morning till Ten at night. Admission, 2s. 6d.; Children, 1s.

ROYAL POLYTECHNIC EXHIBITION, extended into CAVENDISH-SQUARE. Excellent Specimens of Machinery just completed, and at work by Steam Power, in the Hall of Manufactures, including Napier's Patent Printing Machine, Amsler's Patent Rack and Pin Making Machine, Taylor's Patent Solid Headed Pin Making Machine, &c. The Weekly List of Popular Lectures, delivered by Dr. Ryan, Professor Hoffmeister, and the other Lecturers, with the appointed hours for each, is suspended in the Hall. The fine Exterior of St. Peter's, at Rome, and the Interior of the Chapel of St. Helena, at Jerusalem, the latter after Dr. Roberts, R.A. (published by Mr. Moon), are among the latest additions to the Enlarged Dissolving Views. The Orrery, Diving Bell, Diver, &c. &c. To the Panoramic Views, shown in the Evenings, a beautiful addition has just been made. Leader of the Band, Mr. Wallis.—Admission, One Shilling. Schools, half-price.

THE MISER'S DAUGHTER.
Published this day, in 3 Vols. post 8vo.
THE MISER'S DAUGHTER. By W. HARRISON AINSWORTH, Esq. With Twenty Illustrations on steel, by George Cruikshank.
London: CUNNINGHAM and MORTIMER, 3, Adelaide-street, Trafalgar square.

This day, circularly printed in royal octavo, price 2s.
THE COUNT DE FOIX:
A Tale of the Olden Times.
By THOMAS POWELL.
"Mr. Powell has selected one of the most graphic and interesting of Froissart's narratives as the ground-work of his poem, which, we trust, will meet with the success it deserves. It must be read to be appreciated."—Church of England Quarterly, October.
EFFINGHAM WILSON, 33, Bishopsgate-street Within.

IMPORTANT TO ALL WHO HAVE GARDENS.
THE First Monthly Part of THE GARDENER AND PRACTICAL FLORIST will be published October 1st, containing information on upwards of fifty articles connected with the management of a Garden. With Illustrations. Price 1s.
London: R. GROOMBRIDGE, 5, Paternoster-row; may be ordered of any Bookseller.

Ready on Wednesday next, price 1s., profusely Embellished,
DEDICATE ? TO THE QUEEN,
A GUIDE TO KNITTING, NETTING, AND CROCHET, containing the most clear and luminous directions on all kinds of work now in fashionable use, and examples of the different styles in which it can be executed. By the Authoress of that highly popular Work, a new and improved edition of which is now ready, price 1s., entitled
A GUIDE TO FANCY NEEDLEWORK AND EMBROIDERY.
Also now ready, a new and much-improved edition, being the 33th thousand,
A GUIDE TO THE BALL-ROOM.
If any difficulty arises in obtaining the above authentic works, the Publisher will willingly send one or all, and pay the double postage, upon his receiving a pre-paid letter enclosing the published price, or Postage Stamps of equal value.
Published by C. MITCHELL, Red Lion-court, Fleet street, London.

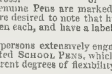
AFGHAUNISTAN.
Now ready, and may be had of all Book and Printsellers in the kingdom,
HAGHE'S BEAUTIFUL LITHOGRAPHIC WORK of the PASSES, FORTS, and CITIES of the Scene of War in INDIA, drawn on the spot by DAMES ATKINSON; including Views of CAUBUL, CANDAHAR, all the celebrated PASSES; PORTRAITS, from life, of SHAH-SOOJAH, DOST MAHOMMED, Sir WILLIAM M'NAGHTEN, &c. &c.
Price: 26 Plates, half morocco .. .. £4 4s.
Coloured and mounted in folio .. .. .. £10 10s.
London: Published by H. GRAVES and Co., her Majesty's Publishers in Ordinary, 6, Pall Mall.

TO SCHOOLMASTERS.
THE situation of Schoolmaster at Priestcliffe having become vacant, the Trustees will proceed to a new appointment on the 8th of November next. He will be expected to teach the Latin and English languages, Mensuration, Geometry, Trigonometry, Arithmetic, Book-keeping, and Accompts.
Candidates, being members of the Church of England, and not above thirty-five years of age, must send in their names, age, and testimonials, on or before the 1st of November, directed "To the Trustees of Priestcliffe School, Taddington, near Bakewell, Derby." The present salary is £76 per annum. There is no house.
N.B.—Those candidates whose letters remain unanswered must consider themselves as not selected.

NOTICE! TO SPORTSMEN.
A CARTRIDGE has been invented by the advertiser, which, by most severe trials, proves to be equally as effective as any patent cartridge now used—killing at astounding long distances, and warranted not to ball. The contrivance is so simple that any person can make it; and the extra expense is barely 1s. on every 500 more than the charge of shot. Directions to make it may be obtained by enclosing a post office order (post paid) for 5s., made payable at Staines, to A.Z.B., Egham.

AN IMMENSE SAVING TO THOSE WHO KEEP HORSES.
IT is not generally known that a cheaper and more nutritious food than oats to feed horses on has been discovered, and proposed to the French Minister of War, whereby a saving is made of 4s. 6d. per week, or £11 5s. 8d. per year, on each horse. By this receipt any one can make their own forage; and may be had on enclosing a post-office order (post paid) for 5s., made payable at Staines, to A.Z.B., Egham.

COMPOSITION FOR WRITING WITH STEEL PENS.
STEPHENS' WRITING FLUIDS comprise the most splendid and durable colours, and the most indelible compositions which art can produce; they contain the fullest proportions of colouring matter—and those to whom economy is more an object than perfect contrast with the paper may dilute them with rain-water, to the extent of colour they may require, and thus effect a real economy, without paying for the cost and incumbrance of large bottles. Also STEPHENS' SELECT STEEL PENS.
HENRY STEPHENS, 54, Stamford-street, Backfriars-road, London.



THE QUEEN has been graciously pleased to command that JOSEPH GILLOTT, of Birmingham, be appointed STEEL PEN MANUFACTURER IN ORDINARY TO HER MAJESTY, dated April 13, 1840.
Joseph Gillott's very superior PATENT and other METALLIC PENS, may be had of all stationers, booksellers, and other dealers in Pens throughout the United Kingdom.
It is gratifying to the Patentee to acknowledge his obligations to the Public for the best proof they can give him of their approbation, in the continually increasing demand for his Pens.

The number of Pens manufactured at the works of Joseph Gillott, FROM OCT. 1838, TO OCT. 1839, AND FROM DEC. 1840, TO DEC. 1841, was 14,654,702, was 65,126,928, or 5,721,225 dozens, or 5,177,244 dozens, or 310,102 gross. or 431,437 gross.

CAUTION.—All the genuine Pens are marked in full "JOSEPH GILLOTT," and Venders are desired to note that no cards of Pens are made up in packets of one dozen each, and have a label outside, with a fac-simile of his signature: "JOSH. GILLOTT."
 At the request of persons extensively engaged in tuition, J. G. has introduced his Warranted SCHOOL PENS, which are specially adapted to their use, being of different degrees of flexibility, and with fine, medium, and broad points.
Wholesale and for Exportation, at the Manufactory, Victoria Works, Graham-street, Birmingham, and at 37, Gracechurch-street, London, under the management of Mr. FOX, from the manufactory in Birmingham.

WATERLOO DISTILLERY.
MESSRS. WM. YOUNG PELL and Co. having considerably EXTENDED their PREMISES, can now supply the public with any quantity of the purest COGNAC BRANDY at the unprecedentedly low price of 32s. for 2 gallons, with a liberal allowance to the trade.
2?, Friday-street; and Distillery, Waterloo-road, Lambeth.

THE VERY BEST BLACK TEA IMPORTED. Rich Pekoe Souchong full flavoured strong tea, 4s. per lb.; pronounced at the price, 3s. per lb., Green Tea, Gunpowder, close twisted round leaf, rich delicate flavour, 6s. per lb. Also the best Coffee, rich mellow flavour, better cannot be obtained, 2s. per lb.; Ceylon ditto, 1s. 4d. per lb. Raw Sugar, 7d. per lb.; Refined, 9d. per lb. Delivered in all parts of London daily.
HAWKINS' Tea Warehouse, 14, Whitechapel High-street.

CHUBB'S LOCKS, FIRE PROOF SAFES, CASH-BOXES, &c.
CHUBB'S NEW PATENT DETECTOR LOCKS give perfect security from false keys, and also detect any attempt to open them. They are made to all sizes, and for every purpose to which locks are applied. These locks are strong, secure, simple, and durable. Chubb's Patent Fire proof Safes and Boxes form a complete preservation for deeds, plate, books, &c., from fire and thieves. Cash Boxes, and Japan Boxes of all sizes, fitted with the New Patent Locks. A large assortment of the above on sale, by C. CHUBB and SON, 57, St. Paul's Churchyard, London.

MORE THAN FOUR YEARS have now elapsed since W. BERDOE introduced his VENTILATING WATERPROOF; also his well-known WATERPROOF FROCK, in lieu of the "Macintosh." The host of imitations of both, and the incresingly extensive sale of the latter, among the friends of those who have adopted it, are sufficient proofs of their success. For the coming season W. B. has now ready a large stock of the most modern and appropriate materials. Also of first-rate Garments for Shooting, Fishing, Travelling, Riding, Driving, &c.; &c., warranted (without confining perspiration) to exclude any description or quantity of rain whatever.
WALTER BERDOE, Tailor, Waterproofer, &c., 69, CORNHILL, (eight doors from Bishopsgate-street).

GREAT COMFORT TO INVALIDS. The Patent Hermetically Sealed Commode Pail, forming, with its mahogany seat and earthen pan, a complete, air-tight, inodorous, portable chamber closet, for £1 6s.; in a handsome japanned box, £2 8s.; in an elegant mahogany box, £3, rendering the sick room and lying in room as fresh and comfortable at all times to enter as a well appointed drawing-room. Sold only at Fyfe's Scientific Repository, 26, Twistock-street, Covent garden; original depot for the improved American Oven, fitted up so as to roast coffee, &c.
Orders from the country, with a reference in London, immediately attended to.

IRONMONGERY
JOHN COX DEAR'S extensive SHOW-ROOMS, contain Stoves from 4s. 6d. to 15 guineas. Kitchen-ranges, 3 feet wide, with oven and boiler, £4 (three feet, £5). Fenders from 8s. 9d. to 5 guineas. Fire-irons from 2s. per set. Dish-covers, in sets of seven, 8s. 6d. to 37s. 9d. (the best raised tops.) Shower baths, best quality made, £5; hip, 20s.; sponging, 8s. Kitchen furniture in great variety equally low. British plate table spoons and forks, 11s. to 16s. per dozen.
Lists containing the prices of every article sent free of cost. Iron bedsteads and stove engravings sent free.
Dear's builders' price list of nails, locks, brass-foundry, &c. &c., may be had on application (without cost, at the Manufactory, 102, High-street, and 5, Great Barlow street, Manchester.

ARGUS LIFE ASSURANCE COMPANY,
63, Thregmorton-street, Bank.
Empowered by special Act of Parliament.
THOMAS FARNCOMB, Esq., Alderman, Chairman.
WILLIAM LEAF, Esq., Deputy-Chairman.
PHYSICIAN—Dr. Jeaffreson, 2, Finsbury square.
SURGEON—W. Coulson, Esq., 2, Frederick's-place, Old Jewry.
CONSULTING ACTUARY—Professor Hall, of King's College.
In addition to the subscribed capital of 300,000 £., the assured have the security of the Company's income of upwards of 30,000£. per annum, yearly increasing, and an accumulating Assurance Fund invested in government and other available securities, of considerably larger amount than the estimated liabilities of the Company.
The rates of premium are reduced to the lowest scale compatible with the safety of the assured and the stability of the Company, thereby in effect giving to every policy holder an immediate and certain bonus, without risk, in lieu of the deferred and frequently delusive prospect of a periodical division of profits.

ANNUAL PREMIUM TO ASSURE £100.

Age.	For One Year.	For Seven Years	For Life.
	£ s. d.	£ s. d.	£ s. d.
25	0 19 7	1 0 7	1 15 1
30	1 1 8	1 2 1	1 19 10
45	1 7 8	1 10 9	3 4 7
60	1 13 6	1 19 0	5 19 3
60	3 1 1	3 15 5	6 0 10

Insurances for advances of money, as security for debts, or as a provision for a family, when the next present outlay is desirable, the varied and comprehensive Tables of the Argus Office will be found to be particularly favourable to the assured.
A Board of Directors, with the Medical officers, attend daily.
EDWARD BAYES, Resident Director.
A liberal commission to Solicitors and Agents.

ROWLAND'S ODONTO, or PEARL DENTRIFICE. This is an efficient White Powder for the Teeth, solely prepared from Oriental Herbs of the most delightful odour, and of sovereign virtue for strengthening, preserving, and thoroughly cleansing the teeth. It eradicates tartar from the teeth, removes spots of incipient decay, polishes and preserves the enamel, to which it gives a pearl like whiteness; and, above all, from its disinfecting properties, gives sweetness to the breath. As an anti-scorbutic, the gums also share in its transcendent powers. ROWLAND'S ODONTO has now for a long series of years occupied a distinguished place at the toilets of the sovereigns and the nobility throughout Europe, while the general demand for it at once announces the favour in which it is held by the public at large.
Price 2s. 9d. per box, duty included.
 Notice.—A. ROWLAND and SON, 20, Hatton-garden, London, is engraved on the Government Stamp, which is pasted on each. Be sure to ask for "ROWLAND'S ODONTO."
Sold by the proprietors, and by respectable Perfumers and Medicine Venders.

SIR JAMES MURRAY'S FLUID MAGNESIA.
PREPARED under the immediate care of the Inventor, and established for upwards of thirty years by the Profession, for removing Bile, Acidities, and Indigestion, restoring Appetite, preserving a moderate state of the bowels, and dissolving uric acid in Gravel and Gout; it also is an easy remedy for Sea Sickness, and for the febrile affection incident to childhood it is invaluable.—On the value of Magnesia as a remedial agent it is unnecessary to enlarge, but the fluid preparation of Sir James Murray is now the most valued by the profession, as it entirely avoids the possibility of those dangerous concretions usually resulting from the use of the article in powder, and in the over dosed liquids of the detective imitators.
Sold by the sole consignee, Mr. Bailey, of North-street, Wolverhampton; Messrs. Hannay and Dietrichsen, 63, Oxford-street, London; and all respectable Medicine Venders, price 1s., 2s. 6d., 3s. 6d., 5s. 6d., 11s., and 21s. each.
 The Acidulated Syrup in bottles, 2s. each.
N.B.—Be sure to ask for "Sir James Murray's Preparation," and to see that his name is stamped on each label in green ink, as follows:—"James Murray, Physician to the Lord Lieutenant."

PARR'S LIFE PILLS.—Read the following Letter; it must convince every one of the wonderful efficacy of this Medicine.
Horncastle, September 30, 1842.
GENTLEMEN,—From the high recommendations I am daily receiving, I have pleasure in informing you that PARR'S LIFE PILLS are effecting wonders in this neighbourhood. Last night, Mr. Grounsell, machinemaker, came to my shop for a packet of pills, as his brother, who is to sail in a few days from Liverpool to New Orleans, Mr. G. having derived more benefit from those pills than any other medicine, health being one of the greatest blessings we enjoy, he is convinced, at present will be found equal to PARR'S PILLS. My last order of 50 dozen boxes have come to hand, being the third lot since the 19th of March, making 150 dozen, or 1800 boxes, for my retail trade in this article.
I am, gentlemen, respectfully yours,
Messrs. Roberts and Co. D. CUSSON.
Purchasers may secure the right medicine if they will be careful to observe the words PARR'S LIFE PILLS, on the Government stamp, in white letters on a red ground, and also the signature of the Proprietors on the directions wrapped round each box, T. Roberts, & Co., Crane-court, London. Sold in boxes, price 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., and family boxes, 11s. each. Full directions are given with each box.
The Life and Times of Old Parr, containing remarks on Disease, Health, and the means of prolonging Life, 32 pages, with engravings, anecdotes, poetry, &c., may be had gratis of all agents.

TO GROCERS.
AN ACTIVE PARTNER WANTED, with not less than £300, or the BUSINESS to be DISPOSED OF, situated in a populous County Town, possessing a good connexion. There is a certainty of doing an excellent business, with a small capital. To a young man this is a desirable opportunity.—Apply by letter to R. W., 98, Strand.

WANTED, a GOOD PONY GIG, or FOUR-WHEEL.—Any person having a good second-hand one to dispose of may hear of a purchaser (if not more than £15), by applying to B. W., 198, Strand, London.

TO POOR LAW GUARDIANS.—400 Wrought Iron FOLDING BEDSTEADS, six feet and a half long, twenty-seven inches wide, with bed-pieces all complete, and in excellent condition, weighing one cwt. and a quarter, for sale, at Eight Shillings each.
Apply to LEMUEL GODDARD, Walpole, London.

BRITISH COLLEGE OF HEALTH, NEW ROAD, LONDON.
PURIFY your Blood and Health must be the consequence—It is the Hygeian system of medicine. 300,000 cures by Morison's pills, published since 1825, have established the truth of the above.
No chemists or druggists are authorised to sell Morison's Pills.

TO GENTLEMEN'S SERVANTS, BROKERS, TINMEN, AND OTHERS.
TO BE DISPOSED OF the BUSINESS of a BROKER and TINMAN, in an increasing neighbourhood, and surrounded by the first families in the county. Satisfactory reasons will be given for leaving.
For particulars apply to J. WALLER, Chinaman, Trafalgar-road, Greenwich.

FIELD'S CHEAP STATIONERY WAREHOUSE, 65, Regent's Quadrant, corner of Air-street.—Postage Envelopes, 1s. per dozen; Envelopes, 4d. per 100; Mourning Envelopes, 2s. per 100; good Letter Paper, 2d. per quire, 4s. 6d. per ream; Foolscap, 6d. per quire, 3s. per ream; Satin Note Paper, 2d. per quire, 3s. per ream; Ruled Bill Paper, 9d. per quire; Blotting Cases, 6d. each; Superior ditto, lock and key, 2s. each; the best Sealing Wax, 10 sticks 1s., 3s. 6d. per pound; the celebrated Magnum Bonum Steel Pens, 6d. per dozen, 3s. per gross; Albums, from 1s. each; splendid Scrap Books, 4s. 6d. each; Copy Books, 4d. each; Bibles, handsomely mounted, 2s. each; Prayer Books to match, 1s. 6d. each; Testaments, 1s. each; Rosewood Ink Stands, 1s. each; Pearl Paper Knives, 1s. each; the newly-invented Pencil Case, containing 12 distinct articles, only 1s. 6d.; new Patent Blotting Pads, 1s. each; Capital Music Cases, lock and key, 3s. each; Club-house Cards, 1s. 6d. per pack, 6 packs 7s. 6d.; Cumberland Lead Pencils, 6d. per dozen; Inland Wafers, 3d. per 100.
Please to copy the name and address.

SURREY AND SUSSEX COMMERCIAL AND FAMILY HOTEL, BLACKFRIARS ROAD, OPPOSITE STAMFORD-STREET, LONDON.
JOSEPH MILLER most respectfully informs the Public, that having furnished and rendered this a new establishment replete with convenience and comfort, he has opened the same on most liberal principles and in strict accordance with the present order of the day—economy. He trusts, by unremitting attention to those who may honour him with their commands, that this old established house will meet with the patronage which extremely moderate charges, and a convenient, central, and cheerful situation will be proved to deserve. Handsomely furnished apartments for families and gentlemen, numerous private sitting-rooms for visitors, lofty bedchambers, &c. Dinners in the coffee-room daily, from 12 o'clock, at 1s. 6d.; half a pint of splendid sherry 1s. Tea or coffee 1s.; bed and breakfast (plain) 2s. 6d. Choicest wines and spirits, and a spacious club and smoking room.
N.B. A person in attendance all night to receive visitors from the country by night trains.—Good stabling.

CARDINAL CAPES AND CLOAKS.
BAILEY and MILNER beg to inform their friends and the public that they have purchased several cases of CARDINAL CAPES and CLOAKS, which they can offer at the following prices:—India cloths, and checked woollens, lined and wadded, with collars, at 2s. each; Genoa velvets and satins, lined and wadded, &c., from 5s. to 50s. each. Several last season's cloaks reduced to one-fourth of their value. In addition to this stock will be found an unlimited assortment of the clan checks for dresses, in a variety of materials; printed velvets, for dresses; an unusual large stock of furs, Welsh flannels, Irish linens, sheetings, blankets, counterpanes, &c. Milliners will find a superb stock of new materials for bonnets, with ribands to match, and every new style, in ties, handkerchiefs blonds, &c.
P.S. The very best India silk handkerchiefs, town printed, full yard square, at 2s. 6d. each; usual price 4s. 6d.
Observe.—Bailey and Milner, Albion-house, 77 and 78, St. Paul's Church yard, near Ludgate-street.

THE BOCCIUS LIGHT.

We are generally disposed to look with considerable distrust on any new discovery or invention which comes recommended to us by a peculiarly outlandish designation; and we readily admit that this was the first impression we were susceptible of on opening the prospectus, commencing with the luminous and somewhat startling announcement, patent "Boccius Light." On going through the document, however, we found that the invention derives its name from that of the patentee, who signs himself "Gottlieb Boccius;" and dates himself from Duke-street, in the Adelphi; and, certainly, if only half the advantages may be derived from its adoption which are set forth in the prospectus, Mr. Boccius's discovery would be well worthy the experiment. It is but justice, however, to the patentee to state that he has submitted his invention, which professes to effect an economy of 83 per cent. in the burning of gas, whilst in point of purity and brilliancy the intensity of the light is greatly increased, to the fairest tests and examinations to which scientific discoveries can be properly subjected. It is proposed to apply it not only to purposes of street illumination, but also to introduce it into churches, halls, public and private buildings, shops, manufactories, &c. &c.; and an experiment has been already made, on an extensive scale, to show its capacity for affecting the first-mentioned purpose, by the erection of a lamp in the Strand, opposite Northumberland House. If all that the patentee says of his invention be true, the advantages to the public will be great, and, therefore, we subjoin a sketch of the tasteful erection in the Strand, which may not be unacceptable to our country readers.

The lamp is cited as a practical specimen not only of the brilliancy, softness, and power of the light, but of its economy, and adaptation to this and other uses. It is found, in practice, to require about 90 cubic feet of gas per hour, which is equal to the consumption of about 16 or 18 common street burners, according to the usual contracts; whereas the light afforded, as ascertained by Messrs. Brande and Parkes, to whom it was submitted for examination, is equal to the concentrated effect of at least 100 such burners. Thus, six times the illuminating effect is produced by this single lamp, with the same quantity of gas; which is tantamount to an economy of 83 per cent. "It is therefore demonstrated" (says the prospectus) "that a hitherto unequalled degree of space-penetrating power, as well as of local intensity of illumination, is to be procured by means of this invention, in places of great public thoroughfare. These important advantages are obtained without any increase of expense to parishes and rate-payers, as a number of common lamps, at least equal in cost of gas to a single "Boccius light," may be dispensed with in such situations; and the public will gain the benefit of additional safety and convenience from the vastly increased amount of light. Lamps suitable to the illumination of areas of greater or less magnitude are constructed on the same principle, and with similar effects, according to the degree of power desired."

Without pledging ourselves to the truth of all the details, we consider the invention of sufficient importance to demand a "fair trial."

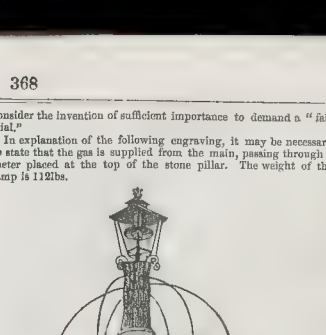
In explanation of the following engraving, it may be necessary to state that the gas is supplied from the main, passing through a meter placed at the top of the stone pillar. The weight of the lamp is 1 1/2 lbs.



THE BOCCIUS LIGHT, CHARING CROSS.

A MAD BULL IN THE THAMES.—A bull of the Scotch breed, purchased on Monday morning in Smithfield by a dealer in Silver-street, St. James's, had nearly reached its place of destination, when the animal broke away, making the passers-by fly in all directions. The animal continued its career down Regent-street, followed by a crowd, such a one as is only to be met with when a mad bull is found. On reaching the steps leading from the Duke of York's column into the Park the animal paused for a few moments, uncertain whether to proceed or make a retrograde movement, the mob at the same time keeping at a respectful distance; the animal chose the Park and down the steps, and, dashing through the gateway at the Horse Guards, crossed the road, through Whitehall-yard, taking water at Whitehall-stairs, that is, he would have done so, but unfortunately it was low tide, and, instead of water, he floundered up to his middle in mud. His pursuers arrived, but he could not get at them, nor they at him. After he had been in the mud about half an hour, a cartload of slaughtermen arrived, and by means of ropes succeeded in dragging the now almost exhausted animal near enough for slaughtering. Two strokes were given with a polexe and the poor animal ceased to exist. He was then dragged in triumph to the cart, which drove off amid the shouting of the mob. Although several persons were knocked down by the animal, no one was dangerously hurt.

On Monday forenoon, shortly after twelve o'clock, a fire broke out in the flax-mills belonging to Mr. Chaplin, Great Guildford-street, Southwark. When discovered by one of the machine-boys it presented a most serious aspect, the principal apartment in the mill being filled with flames. The alarm was immediately given, and in the course of a few minutes an engine and a party of firemen arrived from a station of the brigade force, situate about 200 yards distant, in Southwark-bridge-road. From the nature of the premises, and the inflammatory nature of their contents, considerable anxiety was manifest, in the event of the fire spreading to the houses that surrounded the building; but owing to the prompt exertions of the workpeople, both men and women, aided by the firemen, the flames were subdued. The damage to the building is very slight, but a great mass of flax in its raw state was consumed. The fire was caused by the friction of the "devil," a curious piece of machinery used in dressing flax. The premises have frequently fired with it before. Mr. Chaplin has several times endeavoured to insure the mills, but the offices refused to accept them on account of their dangerous character.

PRISON DISCIPLINE.—The woman who was the mother of Bill Sheen, who some time ago escaped the consequences of a capital indictment laid against him for the murder of his child from a flaw found in it through the legal subtlety of his counsel, Mr. Clarkson, has breathed her last. Some time after the escape of her son Mrs. Sheen fitted up two houses in Wentworth-street, Whitechapel, in which robberies were frequently committed. She, however, managed to keep herself out of "trouble," and by the most nefarious practices, in the interim, made some money, until about two years ago, when she was apprehended as an extensive receiver of stolen property, and fully committed for trial. On her trial it was proved that she had purchased a waistcoat from a youth, who had stolen it from his parents, for 6d., which a few days before cost 15s.; and, on an officer going to her house, a quantity of stolen property was found there. She was tried and convicted at the Old Bailey, and sentenced to seven years' transportation. Previous to her trial, however, she made over her property to her favourite son, "Bill," so as to secure it from the grasp of the sheriff in the event of conviction. The property, consisting of Bank Stock and houses to a considerable amount, was taken possession of by Bill; and Mrs. Sheen, being considered too old to be sent "over the water," was transmitted to Millbank Penitentiary, instead of New South Wales. Owing, it is said, to the prison discipline, and being deprived of those luxuries she had been in the habit of enjoying, her health gradually gave way, and at length her illness assumed so alarming a character that, about a fortnight ago, her sentence was wholly commuted, and she was discharged from prison. She was taken home in a cab to the house of her son, gradually got worse, and expired on Saturday last.

THE MARKETS.

CORN EXCHANGE.—Up to Mark-lane the arrivals of wheat of home produce since our last report have been on a moderate scale, and of fair average quality. On each market day the attendance of buyers has been tolerably numerous, while the finest parcels of both red and white have been taken off on terms quite equal to those obtained last week, but the middling and inferior kinds have sold at a slight abatement, say 1s per quarter, and clearances have not been effected. In foreign wheat a large amount of business has been transacted at about stationary prices. The supply of barley being on the increase, that article has met a slow inquiry, and the rates have had a downward tendency. In malt next to nothing has been doing. Although the receipts of oats have been scanty the sale for them has proved dull, at late rates. In beans, peas, and flour next to nothing has been passing.

ARRIVALS.—English: Wheat, 3180; Barley, 3720; Oats, 8090; and Malt, 5010 quarters; Flour, 6320 Sacks. Irish: Oats, 7330 quarters. Foreign: Wheat, 2800; and Oats, 2000 quarters.

English.—Wheat, Essex and Kent, red, 46s to 55s; ditto white, 54s to 61s; Norfolk and Suffolk, red, 49s to 56s; do. white, 51s to 58; rye, 34s to 36s; grinding barley, 27s to 29s; malting do., 30s to 32s; Chevalier, 32s to 34s; Suffolk and Norfolk malt, 56s to 62s; brown do., 50s to 54s; Kingston and Ware, 56s to 62s; Chevalier, 63s; Yorkshire and Lincolnshire feeding oats, 21s to 24s; potato do., 25s to 26s; Youghal and Cork, black, 17s to 18s; do. white, 19s to 20s; tick beans, new, 34s to 36s; do. old, 34s to 38s; grey peas, 36s to 38s; maple, 38s to 34s; white, 30s to 33s; boilers, 32s to 37s. Per quarter. Town-made flour, 46s to 47s; Suffolk, 36s to 38s; Stockton and Yorkshire, 35s to 38s; per 280 lbs. Foreign. Free wheat, 50s to 60s. In Bond.—Barley, 20s; malt, new, 15s to 17s; do. feed, 14s to 16s; beans, 20s to 26s; peas, 24s to 27s; per quarter. Flour, American, 22s to 24s; Baltic, 22s per barrel

Seed Market.—We have had very little passing in any kind of seeds during the week, and the prices have undergone very little variation. The following are the present rates:—Linseed, English, sowing, 48s to 52s; Baltic, crushing, 42s to 46s; Mediterranean and Odessa, 42s to 46s; hempseed, 35s to 40s: per quarter; coriander, 10s to 18s per cwt.; brown mustard seed, 10s to 11s; white do., 10s to 10s 6d; tares, 5s 6d to 6s 0d per bushel; English rapeseed, new, 30l to 33l per last of ten quarters. Linseed cakes, English, 10l to 10l 10s; do. foreign, 9l to 7l 10s per 1000; rapeseed cakes, 5l to 6l per ton.

Imperial Weekly Average.—Wheat, 51s 6d; barley, 28s 8d; Oats, 18s 6d; rye, 30s 0d; beans, 33s 0d; peas, 33s 10d.

Imperial Averages of Six Weeks which govern Duty.—Wheat, 52s 8d; Barley, 27s 9d; Oats, 18s 6d; Rye, 30s 8d; Beans, 33s 2d; Peas, 33s 3d per quarter.

Duty on Foreign Corn.—Wheat, 18s 0d; Barley, 9s 0d; Oats, 8s 0d; Rye, 10s 6d; Beans, 9s 6d; Peas, 9s 6d.

Bread.—The prices of wheaten Bread in the metropolis are from 7d to 8d; of household ditto, 6d to 7d for the 4lb loaf.

Tea.—The public sales this week, at which nearly 43,000 packages have been brought forward, have been well attended. Comparatively few breaks found buyers, at about previous rates. By private contract little is doing, and the deliveries this week have not amounted to 400,000 lbs.

Sugar.—West India.—There has been a steady demand this week for this kind of sugar, and full prices have been paid for the best qualities, while other sorts have been purchased rather lower. Privately about 1800 hhds. and tierces have found purchasers. At auction 700 hhds. Barbadoes went off at full currencies, or from 61s to 68s 6d for low to fine yellow. Mauritius. Two parcels have been brought to public auction, and all disposed of without alteration in prices, except for the low qualities, which are a shade lower. Good middling and good yellow went at 62s to 65s 6d; middling, 61s to 61s 6d; low and soft yellow, 56s 6d to 60s; inferior, 54s to 55s 6d; and brown, 48s to 53s 6d per cwt. East India. The demand for Bengal sugar is steady, but the prices are rather low. At public sale 850 bags, duty paid, have gone at 60s to 63s 6d per cwt. Refined Sugar.—The market is flat. Standard lumps may be had at 67s per cwt.

Coffee. This market is very quiet. At auction, most of the parcels brought forward have found purchasers. Ceylon, of fine ordinary to mid. sizing, has fetched 83s 6d to 87s; and ordinary to fine do. 75s 6d to 82s.

Rice.—Little has been doing in rice. Madras good fair boil yellowish is selling at 10s to 10s 6d.

Pepper.—240 bags Sumatra were offered at public sale, and bought in at 2 1/2d to 3 1/2d per lb. for fair light.

Saltpetre.—560 bags Calcutta have sold at 28s 9d.

Wool.—The imports this week have been very scanty, while the demand for all descriptions of both English and foreign is heavy at barely late rates.

Hops.—In the Borough the supply of new hops is very large, in consequence of which lower prices have been paid in some instances. The duty is backed freely at £155,000

Oils.—This market is very firm, and a fair amount of business has been doing. At public auction, southern oil realized £43 per tun; sperm £79 10s to £80 15s.

Hay and Straw.—The metropolitan markets have been but moderately supplied with hay, and straw this week, yet the demand has ruled heavy. Meadow hay is selling at from £3 to £4 12s; clover hay £4 to £5 15s, and straw £1 18s to £2 per load.

Provisions. In Irish butter very little business is doing, and the rates are still drooping. Foreign butter has again given way in price, with a heavy inquiry; the best Friesland selling at 102s per cwt. Old bacon continues saleable.

Tallow.—Notwithstanding the large arrivals of tallow during the last three weeks, the market here is very firm, and in some instances higher prices have been paid. At the Corn Exchange on the spot last quarter, 44s per cwt. As most of the tallow is passing into first-rate hands, we think prices will be obtained for some time.

Coals.—Adair's 15s; New Tanfield 14s, Ord's Redheugh 13s 6d; West Wylam 15s 3d; Killingworth 20s; Lamoton 22s; Russell's Hetton 22s, Adelaide 21s 6d; Cowpen 17s 6d per ton. Ships arrived 14.

Smithfield. We have been heavily supplied with fat stock of late, while the general inquiry has ruled heavy at the following prices. Beef from 3s to 4s 2d; mutton 3s 4d to 4s 6d; veal 3s 8d to 4s 6d; and pork 4s to 4s 10d per 8 lbs., to sink the offal. About 100 foreign beasts have been on sale.

Newgate and Leadenhall.—Owing to the large arrivals of country killed meat hither, the inquiry has ruled inactive. Beef from 3s to 3s 6d; mutton 3s 4d to 4s 4d; veal 3s 6d to 4s 4s; and pork 4s to 4s 10d per 8 lbs., by the carcass.

Potatoes.—The supplies of potatoes on offer in the various markets are large, whilst the demand is heavy at from 35s to 70s per ton

ROBERT HERBERT.

BRITISH FUNDS.—(CLOSING PRICES.)—FRIDAY.

Bank Stock, 165	India Stock 251 pm
3 per Cent Red , 92¾	Ditto Bonds 47 pm
3 per Cent Cons. 93¾	Ditto Old Annuities, 90
3¼ per Cent Red., 100¼	Ditto New Annuities, —
New 3½ per Cent. 101¾	Ex. Bills, 1000l., 2d., 57 pm
New 5 per Cent.	Ditto 500l., pm
Long Annuities to expire	Ditto Small, — pm
Jan. 1860, 13 5 16	Bank Stock for Account, —
Oct. 1859, 12¼	India Stock for Account, —
Jan. 1860,	Consols for Account, 93¾

SHARES.

Bristol and Exeter (—p), —	London and Blackwall (— p), —
Edinburgh and Glasgow (81 p),	London and Birmingham (90 p), —
Great Western Railway (63 p), 82½	Ditto Thirds (2 p), 61
Ditto New Shares (50 p), 60½	Ditto New Shares (50 p), 31
Ditto Fifth (4 p), 7½	London and South Western
London and Brighton (50 p), 87.	(£41 6s. 10d. p), 57½

THE LONDON GAZETTE.

TUESDAY, OCT. 11.

DECLARATION OF INSOLVENCY. J. ALLIN, Much Wymondley, Hertfordshire, dealer in cattle.

BANKRUPTS.—J. T. BOOR, Lower Thames-street, coal-merchant's clerk. —G. RIDLEY, Minchin-lane, wine merchant. —T. M'CONKEY and A. HOWIE, Lambeg, Downshire, and of Lancashire, bleachers.—S. THOM and T. THORP, Manchester, merchants.—J. THORP, Manchester, merchant.—R. G. B. THOMAS, West Shrubland-place, grocer.—A. JACOB, Manchester, merchant.

SCOTCH SEQUESTRATIONS.—E. HENDERSON, Edinburgh, wine merchant.—R. TORRANCE, Edinburgh, tin-plate worker.

FRIDAY, OCT. 14.

1st Dragoons—Capt. C. P. Arnold to be Major, vice Farrell; Lieut. R. Wardlaw to be Captain, vice Arnold; Cornet G. Gough to be Lieutenant, vice Wardlaw. Lieut. W. H. Mayne, from the 7th Foot, to be Captain, vice Cornwallis. Lieut. A. H. D. Tynte to be Captain, vice Gough.

3d Foot—Brevet-Major G. L. Christie to be Major, vice Rochfort; Lieut. L. Desborough to be Captain, vice Christie. 7th Foot—Ensign R. Dudgeon to be Ensign, vice Alleyne. 8th Foot—Major J. Forster to be Lieut.-Col.; Capt. T. Wheeler to be Major, vice Messenger, who retires upon half-pay. Lieut. A. Anderson to be Captain, vice Wheeler. To be Lieutenants—Lieut. H. Dane; Lieut. C. Thompson; Lieut. W. G. Meacham; Lieut. G. F. Moore; Lieut. L. N. Maclachlan; Ensign S. Rawson; Ensign S. Cottins; Ensign Eyre Coote Grant. 24th Foot—Ensign H. T. Medge to be Ensign, vice Coote. 44th Foot—Brevet-Major C. Wilkinson to be Major, vice Scott. To be Captains—Lieut. D. Young, vice Swayne; Lieut. E. Woolhouse, vice M'Crea; Lieut. G. E. Turner, vice Leighton; Lieut. W. Evans, vice Robinson; Lieut. T. A. Souter, vice O'Neil. To be Lieutenants—Ensign E. R. Fulton, vice Young; Ensign H. J. White, vice Woolhouse; Ensign W. Swayne, vice Turner. Ensign A. Cary, vice Evans; Ensign H. H. J. Massy, vice Souter. 46th Foot—Major J. Maclean to be Lieut.-Col., vice E. H. E. Napier. 75th Foot—Lieut. J. S. Ireland to be Lieutenant, vice Brunell. Ensign E. J. Dawson to be Lieutenant, vice Ireland; Ensign C. Couche to be Ensign, vice Metge; W. M. Keats to be Ensign, vice Dickson. 79th Foot—Ensign W. F. Hamilton to be Lieutenant, vice Balfour; W. Forbes to be Ensign, vice Hamilton. 87th Foot Capt. W. Boyd to be Captain, vice Harris. 89th Foot—Ensign A. M'Gwechy Alleyne to be Ensign, vice Dudgeon; 97th Foot Capt. R. R. Harris to be Captain, vice Boyd.

BANKRUPTS.—J. BRYANT, West Strand, bookseller. R. KEEN, Old George-yard, Snow hill, cheese factor. E. GOODMAN, Tetford in Lincoln-road, draper. J. C. RAWDON, Huddersfield, wool merchant. E. MANSELL, Chippenham, upholsterer. H. BRAND, Cambridge, slater. W. CASTLE, Wanborough, Wilts, farmer. E. BURDEKIN, Manchester, banker. B. JONES, Llanidloes, Montgomeryshire, banker.

PRICE OF SUGAR.—The average Price of Brown or Muscovado Sugar computed from the Returns made in the Week ending Oct. 11, 1849, is 34s. 11¼d. per cwt., exclusive of the Duties of Customs paid or payable thereon on the importation thereof into Great Britain.

BIRTHS.

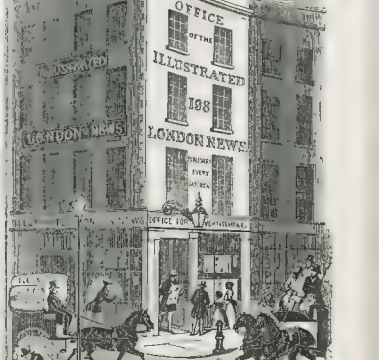
At Glendarnel-house, Mrs. Campbell, of Glendarnel, was safely delivered of a son.——At Edinburgh, the Hon. Mrs. W. Hope Johnstone, of a son.——At Peckham hall, Middlesex, the lady of W. Sheffield, Esq., late of the Madras Civil Service, of a son.——At Paris, Mrs. John Hegan, of a son.——At Formose, Cookham, Berks, the lady of J. G. Bergman, Esq., of a son.——In Chester-square, Mrs. William Stopford, of a daughter.——In New Bank buildings, Mrs. Powles, of a son.——At Longford Castle, near Salisbury, Viscountess Folkestone, of a son.——In Calcutta, on the 4th of August, the lady of Lieut. R. Price, of the 67th Native Infantry, of a son.——In Melbury terrace, Dorset-square, the lady of W. Plunkett, Esq., of a son.——At Streatham, the lady of Mr. Gaskell, of a son.——At Bedford-row, Islington, the lady of J. Brown, Esq., of the Middle Temple, of a daughter.——In Gower-street, Bedford-square, the lady of K. S. Parker, Esq., of Lincoln's Inn, Queen's Counsel, of a son.

MARRIAGES.

At Walcot Church, G. H. Richards, Esq., M.D., eldest son of the late Colonel Richards, to Kate, second daughter of the late A. Mason, of Stonbrook, county of Dublin, Esq.——At All Saints, Southampton, C. J. Longcroft, Esq., of Hilliard, to Mary Longcroft, eldest daughter of the late R. Hilliard, Esq.——At All Saints, Wandsworth, T. Dyke, Esq., of Monmouth, to Harriet Ward, eldest daughter of J. Howell, Esq., of Wandsworth.——At Guernsey, M. R. Daniell, Esq., to Fanny, third daughter of W. P. Cornish, Esq.; and at the same time W. Hutton, Esq., of the 50th Regt., to Matilda, fourth daughter of W. P. Georges, Esq.——At St. Hubert's, K. Pennefather, Esq., of Golden and Knockaderra, in the county of Tipperary, eldest son of the late Rev. John Pennefather, rector of Newport, Tipperary, to Jane Catherine Patricia, eldest daughter of Thomas de Granier de Soulanges, R.N., her Majesty's Consul-General in Servia, and grandaughter of the late Lord Barrymore.——At Wateringbury, the Rev. G. R. Foulson, M.A., rector of Addington, to Fanny, eldest daughter of the Rev. W. Elwyn, M.A., of Watermgbury.——At St. Andrew's, Plymouth, Captain E. Bond, 53rd Regiment, to Arthen Duke, second daughter of the late Rev. Duke Yonge, of Anthony, Cornwall.—— At Mickleham Church, E. H. Parry, Esq., youngest son of the late J. H. Parry, Esq., barrister-at-law, to Mary Emily, second daughter of the Rev. John Warneford.——At Northfleet, Samuel Gould Pratt, surgeon, of that place, to Caroline Amelia, second daughter of Admiral Pratt, Esq., of Graham's Town, Cape of Good Hope, and grandaughter of H. Heath, Esq., of Orme-house, Northfleet.——At Paddington, H. Lovell, Esq., Captain in the Royal Navy, to Caroline Anne, widow of the late J. J. Gregory, Esq., R.N., and sister of Sir E. Palmer, of East sutton-park, M.P. for West Kent.——At Cheltenham, Edward James, Esq., of West-hall, Northumberland, to Theodosia, youngest daughter of S. W. Peile, Esq., late of Scott's-house, Durham.

DEATHS

At Chartley, in the county of Stafford, in the 82nd year of his age, the Right Hon. Washington Curzon Shirley, Earl Ferrers, Viscount Tamworth.——At his residence, Southwark-bridge, Borough, T. W. Fry, Esq., in the 50th year of his age.——At Dover, in his 8th year, Francis William, eldest son of Mr. Serjeant Channell.——John Shewen, Esq., aged 70, of New Inn, St. Clement Danes.——At Vale-place, Hammersmith-road.——At Bayswater, at the house of his nephew, the Rev. C. Sunsley, Mrs. Anne Tierney, aged 81. Killed at Sadoo, in the retreat from Cavul, Lieut. G. W. Cunninghame, 54th Regt. of Bengal Native Infantry, aged 23, only son of the late Major G. Cunninghame, Bengal Artillery, and grandson of General Sir Joseph O'Halloran, G.C.H.——At Fort Beaufort, Cape of Good Hope, Major E. Molesworth, eldest son of the late R. Molesworth, Esq., of Swords, county of Dublin, and grandson of the late Hon. Major E. Molesworth.——At Bombay, Captain C. L. Bennett, 86th Regiment, aged 31.——At his residence, Wargrave, Berkshire, the Rev. R. Gedley, M.A., aged 62.——W. L. F. Scott, Esq., of Woodhall, Yorkshire, Registrar of Deeds for the West Riding, in the 62nd year of his age.



JUST Published, Part IV. of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, in a beautiful Tartan Wrapper, price 3s.,

CONTAINING the whole of the QUEEN'S VISIT TO SCOTLAND, with the following Special Illustrations:—

The Royal George Yacht. Woolwich Dock Yard.—Her Majesty's arrival previous to the embarkation for Scotland. Embarkation of the Queen for the dominions. Her Majesty going on board the Royal George. Coming to the Hawser. Hauling off the Coal Barge. Passing the Nore. Leaving Sea in the Highlands. The Throne Room, Holyrood Palace, and Ancient Regalia. View of Dalkeith Palace, the seat of the Duke of Buccleuch. Procession of Highlander in Ancient Costume. Portrait of a Highland Bagpiper. View of Edinburgh. The Palace of Scone. Carron Water. View of Stirling, from the Ladies' Rock. St. John's Church, Perth. Trafalgar Square, Queen's Colonies. Grouse-shooting in the Moors of Scotland. View of Dundee. Ruins on the Island of Devenish. St. Paul's, Covent Garden. Arrival of the Queen in Edinburgh, passing the Royal Institution. The Procession at Leith. The Lancaster Cup. Buck Shooting in the Highlands. Meeting and Greeting the Duchess of Atholl's. The Queen entering Perth. Entrance into Dunkeld. Taymouth Castle.—Broadsword Dance. Taymouth Castle and Inland Park. The Queen and Prince leaving Perth. Her Majesty on board. Grand Display of Fish Pinwomen. The Queen and the Prince viewing "Mons Meg." The Queen and Prince Albert leaving Drummond Castle. Map of the North Eastern Counties, between the British Possessions and the United States. Curraghmore. Portrait of the celebrated Mare, Beeswing. Portrait of Lord Palmerston. Tour of her Majesty in Scotland.—Engravings of Bishop Chisholm's Arms. The Queen and Prince Albert entering Taymouth Park. The Queen and the Prince leaving Taymouth, and passing Kenmore. Her Majesty and the Prince embarking on Loch Tay. View of Loch Tay, from the seat of the Marquis of Breadalbane. Her Majesty at Loch Erne Head, changing horses. The Royal Barge. Steps erected for the Queen's landing at Auchmore. The Royal Party on Loch Tay. The Queen and Prince Albert landing at Auchmore. Auchmore House, Kilan. View of Killin, from the Bridge. Gate at Drummond Castle.—The 42nd Highlanders marching out. Portrait of a Christ Church Boy. Somerset House Gate. All Souls' Church, Langham Place. Her Majesty and Prince Albert at Granton Pier, besides many other engravings.

May be had, if ordered, of all Booksellers and Newsmen.

Separate Tartan Wrappers may be had, price 6d. each.

Office, 198, Strand.

LONDON: Printed by ROBERT PALMER (at the Office of Palmer & Clayton), 10, Crane-court; and published by WILLIAM LLOYD, at 198, Strand, where all communications are requested to be addressed.—SATURDAY, October 13, 1849.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS

No. 21] FOR THE WEEK ENDING SATURDAY, OCTOBER 22, 1842. [SIXPENCE.

OFFICE, 198, STRAND.

OUR PRISON TYRANNY.

THERE is no duty which society more imperatively demands from its administrators of public justice than a proper apportionment of punishment to the various criminals who offend against its laws. The scale of retribution should in some measure resemble the quicksilver in a thermometer—ascending or descending, so as to indicate the different degrees of crime; but in all cases the punishment should be abstract—a simple infliction complete in itself, not heightened by accessories of circumstance; not subject to be either mitigated or increased by the prevalence of a bad or good system, or by the exercise of indulgence or tyranny on the part of those entrusted to see it sternly and solemnly carried into effect. Every system of justice, in a word, should be purely equalised; and the fact that a punishment for the same crimes can be, although identical in terms of sentence over all England, stringent and terrible in one quarter of the country, and lenient and gentle in another, is to strike at the root of honesty in jurisdiction, and to lay the axe to the tree of human wisdom and philosophy with an unscrupulous recklessness, which not even the mercy of Christianity should be mild enough to defend. When, therefore, we find that a fearful inequality is avowedly bringing into contempt and obloquy the prison discipline of the land—that what is here a crime is there a mockery—that the sentence which wins from one criminal the sneer of impunity, sounds in the ears of others as the tocsin of disease or death—that the punishment awarded is itself not the subject of a thought, but only the place in which it is awarded and the people by whom it is fulfilled—that what is meant as a partial infliction in one place is undergone without regret, while in another it despoils life of its strength and energy, and cripples or palsies those who are not coffined by its tyranny—when, we say, we find such unequal destinies awaiting the same events of crime and sorrow (for the two are often confounded), we should, at least, raise a voice against the enormity, and denounce the infamy of a practical injustice so derogatory to the character of the people, and so adverse to the natural spirit of the constitution, among whose codes they register the happiness and liberty of their lives.

There have been within the last few days two or three deaths recorded, of persons committed to prison for minor offences (vagrancy being among them), whom, upon investigation, their imprisonment has been found to have killed. The victims, however, did not die under the natural punishment of the law, but under the illegitimate causes of starvation—low diet, damp cells, and a brutalizing system of inhumanity never contemplated by Christian legislation. This fact is a dreadful one to acknowledge. The lives of prisoners belong as sacredly to the community as the lives of legislators; and, so long as they are fairly expiating their crimes or errors, it is the province of justice to see that they be saddled with no extra-judicial tyranny, and, above all, with no unmerciful cruelty or neglect. Yet the public mind has been shocked during the week with the details of a coroner's inquest, in which a sickening account has been adduced of what seems almost like the moral murder of a wretched fellow-being in a prison, to which he had been committed for a crime far less in its enormity than that which its punishers were inflicting upon himself. The poor fellow who gave evidence of the sad cruelty gave it almost in the presence of his God. It was his dying testimony, and he had ceased to bear malice even against those who had brought him to his grave. The inquest upon his own body after death elicited its report from a gentleman of the name of Hollis, to whom he had feebly deposed it. Mr. Hollis, one of the guardians at Cheltenham (Charles Beale, the victim in question, died in the Northleach House of Correction), instituted the coroner's inquiry as a matter of duty, and testified thus:—

He appeared sensible that his end was near. I asked him a great number of questions, and he stated, as a dying man, that what he had previously told myself and two other members of the committee was true. He said his death would be caused by his treatment in prison. I asked him if it was true that he had been kept in a cold damp cell? He said it was, he was kept there for fourteen hours a day, for two successive days. He called it the cellar used for placing the potatoes in, and said he was employed in picking them. He said he was placed there when he was too ill to work on the treadmill. I then asked him if this was the cold cell he had before told the committee of, as having been forced into when hot from the mill? He said, "No, it was not; that was the one appropriated for taking his meals in, and the cold he sustained there was the first cause of his illness." I also then asked him, with reference to the gaoler and surgeon, to whom it was that he attributed blame? He replied, "First and principally to the surgeon, and next to the governor." I asked him why he blamed the surgeon? He replied, that the surgeon, he considered, had the power to prescribe for him medicine and food suitable to the circumstances, but all he did was to allow him half a pound of mutton daily extra, but his stomach was so bad that he could not take it. The governor would not allow him (deceased) to see his father, who had come from Cheltenham for that purpose, but this was counteracted by his not having a visiting magistrate's order. He said he was quite well when he went to gaol. I did not see him again until he died.

A fellow-prisoner, who declared that he had never been in prison before, nor charged before a magistrate in his life, and who stated that he and the deceased were "convicted for selling a stolen board" (we presume with a supposed guilty knowledge), swore as follows of the deceased:—

He was partner-sawyer with me for a long time, and was strong and healthy. He was kept on the wheel at Northleach for two months at first. It was not so laborious as sawing, but more irksome, as we had no ease or rest, and it was harder to us. I was weak while there for want of sufficient food, which brought on my subsequent illness. I went on the wheel when I was not able; but I preferred it to being in the cold damp cell, as I was starved there. The cells are all of cold stones, seat and all, and a brook runs under them. In one of the cells we had an iron bedstead to sit on. It ceased and myself got warm on the wheel at first. We were often removed, with our shirts as wet as dung, to a cold cell. They were so wet with perspiration that we could wring them so that it ran on the ground. Deceased was taken ill after we had been there about two months. He had a yellow appearance, as if he had the jaundice. He was taken off the wheel, but put on again long before he had recovered. To my knowledge he was then taking medicine. He walked two turns instead of one, which made it light, for about a fortnight. He was then put on again to his full work, but was soon taken worse again; he had more medicine, continuing his full work; but getting still worse he was taken off the wheel and locked up in the cell for some time, after which he was removed to the hospital. He was employed when ill in the potato-bin, which is on a level with the brook. That was previous to his going to the hospital, from which he was discharged in three weeks, having served his full time of imprisonment. We could neither of us walk, and our friends took a cart for us. This was on the 1st of September. The governor, instead of letting us out at six o'clock in the morning, did not do so until eight. He knew we were very weak. Beale told me when I shaved him that he was so famished he had eaten nearly half a peck of raw potatoes while in the cellar. Deceased had applied several times to the two surgeons (who are brothers) for medicine, who made the remark, "You don't get very fat," but gave him none. He coughed very much at nights, and was very ill at those times. I have often made the same application when I have been ill, but they would not attend to it. I have heard him complain to the surgeons of a pain in his chest. He had medicine for his cough. I heard the surgeon tell him to mind and not take cold, and this was just before they put him in the potato-cellar. When he was taken to the hospital he was laid, and had a blister on his chest and side. I went up to shave him, and had then an opportunity of speaking to him. I have known deceased obliged to leave the wheel in consequence of weakness before his proper time. I have seen many faint and fall down in the yard from the wheel. I never was in prison before, or ever charged with any offence before a magistrate in my life. I was convicted with the deceased for selling a stolen board. In rainy weather the wet often runs down the walls.

The evidence of the surgeon went to show that the deceased died of inflammation of the lungs—that, in a predisposed habit, such disease might be initiated by hard labour, aggravated by damp and cold, and brought to a climax by low diet and starvation—in a word, not to mince plain English or compromise the honest truth, that "the man came by his death by the usage he had received in gaol." The coroner, upon the plea of consulting the authorities (what business had he to consult any other authority than his jury?), postponed his inquiry until this day (Friday), and to-morrow, we presume, we may know the result, though too late to descant upon it in this week's paper.

In the mean while, we have thought it right to place the case prominently before our readers, and to preface it with such remarks as may aid the inferences of the charitable and humane upon a subject which is not the less momentous because it refers only to the correction and well-being of the "stray and erring" of the social fold. If a murderer attempts suicide (one has done so latterly with a razor), we sew up his throat, take him to an hospital, and treat him with every care and delicacy that may bring about recovery, in order that we may try and hang him afterwards, as speedily as the law will allow. If a man turns vagrant, or sells a stolen board, we sentence him to a few months' imprisonment, with a particular sort of labour, as sufficient retribution; and, instead of confining ourselves to that retribution, we starve, rheumatise, sweat, chill, and grind him to death. We kill one man for a minor offence, and save the life of another for a major one, by way of setting off the humanity of saving to kill against the humanity of killing to save. Is not this question of prison discipline and the inequality of our distribution of justice, one deserving of the strong and earnest observation of the public?

VIEW OF CONSTANTINOPLE.

CONSTANTINOPLE—"THE CITY OF THE SULTAN."

Two weeks back we introduced our readers to the Sultan of all Turkey and his non-reforming Vizier. We now give the City of the Sultan, throned on her many hills, with the Bosphorus lined by palaces flowing at her feet. The first view of Stamboul is like the embodiment of a vision of fairy-land: the gilded palace of Mahmoud—the buildings of the Seraï—Galata, with its mouldering walls and warlike memories—and, above all, the graceful outline of its tapering minarets, cut sharply against the sky, and contrasted with the ample domes of the mosques to which they belong. To an European the novelty of the scene vies with its beauty in impressing a recollection of "Queenly Stamboul." The close vicinity of the houses to the sea is a striking feature of the scene; and the shipping of all nations, bearing the natives of many lands, add another dedtional attraction. The "Shin-a-ka," (?) Turkish sentimental ditties with the shrill cry of the Greek, while at intervals the full, rich strains of the Italian contrast with the monotonous chant of the Turk. Graceful caiques, with their sharp prows and gilded ornaments, pass, occupied by turbaned Turks smoking in luxurious idleness—next, perhaps, the nautilus of the Greeks, whose dark eyes flash under the unbecoming fez—then a boat, whose sturdy rowers are soon recognised as Franks—mingle to form a picture not easily to be forgotten. We purpose introducing some other eastern scenes to our readers, and nothing can more fitly follow Turkey than Persia, a portrait of whose Shah is even now employing the pencil of our artist.

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

FRANCE.—The Paris papers of Saturday last contain comments on the last British revenue returns, which by no means conceal the chuckling of the writers at what they please to consider the decline of Old England. The Presse has made a remarkable discovery, namely, that monks are the best civilizers, and it therefore approves of the establishment of an order of Trappists in Algeria, who are to effect sub silentio what the sword has failed to achieve with artillery obligato. Should this experiment prevail, it will certainly exceed anything that has been hitherto achieved by the Quakers.

The Paris papers of Monday, on the authority of a London journal, indulge in some speculations as to the rumoured renewal of the negotiations for a commercial treaty between this country and France. The Constitutionnel intimates that, unless the advantages are all on the side of the French, there will be no prospect of the treaty being relished by our neighbours.

Mr. Henry Bulwer had arrived in Paris, and his Excellency Lord Cowley was expected in a few day.

Some sensation was caused at the Paris races on Sunday by a man (name unknown) ascending an eminence and blowing out his brains with a pistol, in the sight of thousands of spectators.

The last advices from Algiers prove that the Arabs carry on the war with undiminished ardour.

By the Tuesday's accounts from Paris it would appear that some absurd rumours have been current of a change of Cabinet, consequent upon dissensions relative to the treaty with Belgium, now negotiating at St. Cloud between the King of the French and King Leopold. There is not the most remote chance, however, of a change of Ministry.

Reports were also afloat of renewed negotiations as to the treaty of commerce between France and England, and it was said that Mr. Henry Bulwer, who has just returned to his post, was on the eve of departure again for London, to take instructions from the English Cabinet and fresh propositions.

Lord Cowley arrived in Paris on Sunday night. The widow of Marshal Ney was received by Louis Philippe on Sunday evening.

Sir John M'Neill, the British Minister to the Persian court, is now in Paris.

Paris is now very full of English, on their way to Italy for the winter.

The Honourable Charles Manners Sutton, the eldest son of Viscount Canterbury, who met with such a frightful accident some time since whilst out shooting, the contents of the gun of his friend having been lodged in his breast and face, and one eye injured, is fast recovering.

SPAIN.—We learn from our Madrid correspondent, that party feeling was running very high in that capital, and from the differences between the Regent, the Infante Don Francisco de Paulo, the Republicans, the Ayacuchos, and the patriarchs of the progressive party, some new collisions were shortly to be expected.

We learn also that a commission had been appointed by the Government to draw up a fresh project of law relative to the press.

The miscreant Maroto, the signer of the Bergara convention, having lost his property at the gaming table, was preparing to leave Madrid for Cadiz, with the intention of embarking, it is said, for South America, to try and retrieve his fallen fortunes.

Mahon letters of the 18th ult. in the Corresponsal express apprehensions as to the continued presence of French ships of war in that port. An English frigate arrived on the 16th, after a long absence of the British flag.

The Queen's birthday went off after a dull fashion, the weather being unfavourable for the review and illuminations, the only signs of rejoicing ordered by the authorities.

The Augsburg Gazette of the 13th confirms the statement that the Porte had disregarded altogether the European diplomacy on the Syrian question.

By letters from Madrid, dated 11th October, it appears that a joint-stock company, under the title of "Spanish Commercial Society," has been formed, to last twenty years, the object being to increase the external and internal trade of Spain by means of capital and of commissions, and to publish a newspaper to effect this object. The capital of this association is to be five millions of reals, divided into 5000 shares, advantages being assigned to the original shareholders, as well as a premium of 10 per cent. to the takers of the first thousand shares.

The Brussels papers assert that the new Belgian loan has been taken at 104½, less commission, &c., but it is believed that Messrs. Rothschild, the contractors, will not receive subscriptions nor issue certificates for any portion of it at present, either in Brussels or Paris, not wishing to bring it on the market before the new year.

Our readers will, we are sure, participate in our satisfaction, when we announce that the Marseilles road is now definitively open for expresses, and that for the future no impediments will be thrown in the way of London newspaper couriers. We owe it to the spirit and enterprise of our daily contemporaries the Post, Chronicle, and Herald to thank them for the great pecuniary sacrifice they have made in this struggle with the French Post-office Harpies, and for the perseverance and determination with which they successfully contended against such powerful opponents as the underlings of the Finance Department. M. Berryer's powerful and eloquent speech before the Boulogne Tribunal was the basis of the ultimate victory—a victory obtained over combined corruption and ignorance.

HOLLAND.—THE HAGUE, October 17.—His Majesty the King of the Netherlands opened the ordinary session in person with the usual solemnity. His Majesty's speech did not contain any points of very particular interest. At one o'clock the King left his palace, accompanied by the Princes and a brilliant staff. A salute of artillery announced his departure from the palace. The inhabitants, who crowded the streets through which he passed, received him with the loudest acclamations.

RUSSIA.—RIGA, Sept. 29.—A multitude of reports are in circulation here respecting the fire at Kasan, which the alarmists ascribe to a conspiracy of the Tartars against Russia. Some troubles have taken place in the Ukraine, where it is said a conspiracy against the Russian authorities has also been discovered. In our German provinces in the Baltic the discontent of the peasants continues, but it is kept in check by the military occupation.

TURKEY.—The Egyptian news received by the Levant mail, which brought letters and papers dated Constantinople the 27th, Alexandria the 24th, Malta the 6th inst., Smyrna the 30th ult., and Athens the 1st inst., is the same which reached us by the overland mail already published. The Turkish intelligence is interesting, inasmuch as the anticipations we have held out, that the Persian dispute with the Porte would be fully arranged by diplomacy, are realized. Sir Stratford Canning's interview with the Minister for Foreign Affairs, on the 20th, led to the forwarding of despatches to Teheran, on the 2nd, on the part of the Porte.

The Journal de Smyrne of the 29th, in its Constantinople correspondence of the 27th, announces that it was then positive that the Ottoman Government had accepted the mediation of England and Russia in the Persian differences. On the 21st ult. one of the Sultanas gave birth to a Prince, who was named Abdul Kaimed, and was announced the next day to the capital by the customary Mussulman ceremonies. The Kyzler Aga, Chief of the Eunuchs, transmitted the Imperial hatt, or certificate, of the birth, and general illuminations took place. Mr. Bankhead, the British Secretary of Legation, had his audience of leave on the 26th, and had arrived at Malta on the 5th, on his way to this country. The British squadron was seen off Malta on the 2d inst., but disappeared the same night.

The Castellana has Algeciras letters of the 5th, mentioning the refusal of the captain of the English ship-of-war which lately captured a Spanish smuggler to give it up, unless he received orders from the admiral.

AMERICA.—We had barely space in our last number to acknowledge the receipt of letters and papers by the North American mail steamer Acadia, which arrived at Liverpool on Friday night, and which brought a lengthened report of the speech of Mr. Webster, on the occasion of his flattering reception at Boston, a meeting of the inhabitants having been convened for the purpose of welcoming their townsman and former representative in the Senate. Mr. Webster touched upon the new-fashioned, but most unprincipled, doctrine of repudiation, and entered with much feeling on the subject of the deplorable state of the public credit, describing what he believed would be the concern of such men as Washington, Madison, John Adams, and others of the same eminence in the history of the country, could they have an opportunity of witnessing it. He then proceeds to characterise the new system in language well calculated to shame his fellow-citizens into a more honest and reputable line of conduct, declaring the doctrine of repudiation "a stain which they ought to feel worse than a wound." Mr. Webster next professes to be ready to co-operate with those who have the patriotism to join him in resenting as much as possible the foul stigma from the name of America, be the party to which they belong what it may. The hon. gentleman alluded, though somewhat briefly, to the treaty lately concluded with Lord Ashburton on behalf of the British Government. There is a calm and self-satisfied tone in the expressions made use of by Mr. Webster with regard to his own share in the negotiations that have been recently carried on, and he takes credit for having been what he significantly calls "a match" for one whom he terms, we presume ironically, "a cool and sagacious statesman."

WASHINGTON.—A correspondent of the Commercial, under date of the 27th ult., writes that Mr. Fuller did not resign, but was removed by the President. He adds, "We have nothing new in addition to what I have already stated in your columns, in relation to the movements of Mr. Webster. It is understood on every hand that he returns no more to Washington in a public capacity."

Mr. Papineau is said to be in New York on his way to Canada. Mother Rumour, the old hag, with a thousand tongues, gives him a birth as Deputy Postmaster-General of Montreal.—Halifax U. S. paper.

DESTRUCTIVE FIRE IN CHARLESTON, S. C.—We learn by the Charleston Patriot of the 24th ult., that the valuable block of stores on the east side of East Bay, known as Prioleaux's Range, containing much valuable property, were entirely consumed on the evening previous. They were occupied by John C. Burkmyer, Mr. John S. Jones, and Mr. F. Lamotte. Insured to the amount of 70,000 dollars. Loss upwards of 100,000 dollars.

ST. JOHN'S.—By the steamer North America we have received St. John papers to the 28th ult. The Lieutenant-Governor had issued his proclamation proroguing the Legislature to the second Monday of November. It is not expected that the Assembly will then meet, but that a dissolution will take place and writs will be issued for a new general election.

CANADA.—The change of Ministry continues to be the theme of general discussion.

The Solicitor-Generalship of Canada East has been conferred upon T. C. Aywlyn, Esq., member of Parliament for Fort Neuf—the appointment having been declined by Mr. Girouard, to whom it was first offered.

The proceedings in Parliament have been of no general interest since the change in the Cabinet. It is expected, however, that there will be something said on the arrival of Mr. Ogden, late Attorney-General for Canada East, at Kingston. He arrived from Europe the other day, in the Acadia, and first heard of his displacement when he reached Albany.

By the last advices from Canada, intelligence has been received of the failure of the following firms at Montreal, all of whom, we believe, were engaged in the timber trade, namely—Messrs. C. G. Holt and Co.; Messrs. W. Smith and Co.; Messrs. Robert Froste and Co.; Mr. H. Murray; and Messrs. Orlin, Bostwick, and Co. The old-established firm of J. H. Wichman, at Stettin, also engaged in the timber trade, has been obliged to suspend payments.

COUNTRY NEWS.

BECCLES.—On Friday morning week the inhabitants of the town of Beccles, Suffolk, were aroused from their beds by a cry of "Fire." They soon learnt that a portion of the premises of Mr. Brundle, a farmer, residing at Gillingham, not far from the town, was in flames, and lost no time in despatching two engines to the scene of the conflagration. There being a good supply of water, and the engines being worked with great spirit by all present, the fire was prevented from reaching the corn stacks, but the flames spread so rapidly that a large barn containing about 80 coombs of unthrashed wheat fell a prey to the fire, in addition to most of the other outbuildings and the dwelling-house, which were all reduced to a heap of ruins. A portion of the furniture was saved by the exertions of the neighbours; but the family barely escaped with their lives; and one of them was a lady 82 years of age. It is suspected, from the manner in which the fire broke out, that it was the act of an incendiary. The whole of the property was insured.

BIRMINGHAM.—THE QUEEN'S HOSPITAL.—At a meeting of the council of the Royal College of Surgeons, held on Thursday last, the recognition of this hospital was granted, and "such recognition is understood to take date and commence from the 1st October, 1841." His Royal Highness Prince Albert has graciously consented to accept the office of president, and has contributed the munificent donation of £50 towards the funds of the charity.

The trials of White, the Birmingham chartist, appointed to take place at Warwick on Tuesday last and at the Birmingham sessions on Friday, have been removed by certiorari, and will not come on before the next assizes.

BRISTOL.—HORRORS OF THE INCOME-TAX.—The following is from a Bristol paper:—"We have heard of a tragical event having recently occurred at Portishead, resulting from the imposition of this tax. An elderly man, unmarried, and without any incumbrance, whose income amounted to about £170 per annum, was so much annoyed and irritated at finding that he should be obliged to contribute towards the tax, as frequently to declare that he knew it would be the cause of his death. Being determined to claim an exemption, if possible, he applied to an attorney to make out his return; and, on being questioned as to the sources of his income, he was obliged to acknowledge that he had such and such sums of money out on mortgage, the interest to amounted to upwards of £150 per annum. He was then told it was impossible he could avoid the tax, as the persons from whom he received the interest would be sure to deduct it. Finding there was no chance of escaping the payment, it appears that he determined to sacrifice his life rather than submit to part with his money, and which determination he appears to have carried into effect, for his body was last week found drowned in the neighbourhood of his residence."

HOBHOUSE AND CO.'S BANKRUPTCY.—At a meeting of creditors of the separate estate of Mr. H. W. Hobhouse, held at the White Hart, in Bristol, on Saturday last, the commissioners declared a dividend of twenty shillings in the pound. We understand that after this dividend is paid a handsome surplus will be left for the benefit of the creditors of the joint estate.

CARDIFF.—SUSPECTED MURDER.—Cardiff for the past week has been greatly excited in consequence of the death of Captain Carter, whose body was found in an erect position, between the lock-gates under the railway bridge, used for letting in and out canal barges to and from the old Glamorgan canal, at the junction to the new Bute ship canal. The singularity of the position of the body, together with the finding of a pocket-book outside the dock, gave rise to reports that the deceased had been murdered, robbed, and thrown in. A coroner's jury returned the following verdict:—"We find, from the evidence adduced, that the unfortunate deceased was drowned in the canal; but how or by what means he came there we have no reason to adjudge, otherwise than by accident. We fully concur, however, in the mysterious and suspicious appearances touching the absence of the money known to have been in his possession, and consider there is every probability of his having been robbed."

INCENDIARISM.—On the night of Friday se'nnight a great number of ricks of corn were burned at Llanllear, near Talsarn, the property of Captain Lewes, one of the county magistrates. Several persons have been apprehended on suspicion, and we understand that a blacksmith at Talsarn, a tenant of Capt. Lewes, but under notice to quit, has been committed to Cardigan gaol, to await his trial at the next Lent assizes.

DERBY.—CURIOUS EXPLOIT OF A RAT.—At one of the subterranean exhibitions at Matlock Bath the guide went into the grotto with a gentleman, leaving the candles burning as usual, and on his return was surprised to meet a sedate-looking grey old rat walking leisurely off with one of the burning candles, as if in the act of lighting himself about his business. On being observed, he quickly disappeared under a ledge of rock, taking his light with him.

CRIME IN DERBYSHIRE.—Last week's Derby Reporter contains notices of nineteen burglaries and robberies, several attempts at burglary, and one attempt at highway robbery, in and around Derby, This week the same paper contains an account of one highway robbery and four burglaries in that neighbourhood.

On Monday evening last an attempt was made in Bakewell Churchyard, by two men, to disinter a corpse lately buried. They had succeeded so far in their revolting design, but were discovered just as they got to the coffin. The guilty parties are Joshua Birley, the assistant sexton, and a man named Robertson. Mr. Owen, a respectable cordwainer, has his residence near to the graveyard, and was the first to give the alarm, his family being disturbed by the noise made by the resurrectionists. They both fled, but have since been taken into custody.

EXETER.—The arrangements for running the new mail between Falmouth and London, to facilitate the transmission of the West Indian, South American, and Mediterranean mails, are now completed. The new mail from London will reach Exeter soon after six in the morning, and will run the distance between this place and Falmouth, by the way of Okehampton, in about nine hours and a half. It will pass through this city on its way to London late in the evening, so that it will leave Falmouth full half a day after the present mail leaves that place, and arrive in town at the same time.

IPSWICH.—ESCAPE OF A CONVICT.—On the removal of the prisoners from the Town Hall, at the close of the sessions on Friday se'nnight, a convict, William Harrison, on whom sentence of transportation for seven years had just been pronounced, contrived to elude the vigilance of his keepers and make his escape. Harrison, when within a few feet of the van slipped his handcuff, and, mixing with the crowd which pressed round the prisoners, got clear off. The van moved off towards the borough gaol, nor was Harrison missed until it arrived at the place. The borough and county constabulary have scoured the country in all directions, but all efforts for his apprehension as yet have proved unavailing.

The Countess of Clare, the new convert to the Church of Rome, attended high mass in the Roman Catholic chapel, at Ipswich, on Sunday, the 9th instant.

LEAMINGTON SPA.—The period that intervenes between the close of one season and the commencement of another usually borders upon dulness at most watering-places; and a dearth of fashionable amusements is admitted just now to exist at Leamington, although the town is by no means devoid of company, as the lists of arrivals during the last month sufficiently testifies. Among those who have joined the circles of haut ton since my last communication are the Earl Fitzwilliam, Viscountess Milton, Lady Anne Scott, Baron and Baroness de Steinberg, Hon. and Rev. James Douglas, Lady Caroline Copland, Sir John and Lady Campbell, Hon. Mrs. Ramsden, Sir James Williams, Sir Chapman and Lady Marshall, Hon. Mrs. Bowles, Mrs. General Orr, Rev. Dr. Parnell, Major Hurst, Captain Parker, Captain Spencer Cooper, Hon. and Rev. T. L. Dundas, Mr. and Mrs. Biddulph, Mr. and Mrs. Sturch, Mr. and the Misses Gosling, Mr. and Mrs. St. Quintin, Mr. and Mrs. Gurney Barclay, Mr. and Mrs. Parnell, Mr. and Mrs. Cuthbert and family, &c. Lady Brougham is still occupying apartments at the Regent, and Lord and Lady Montagu at the Landsdowne. Lady Elizabeth Monicreiffe left her residence here, in Binswood-crescent, in the course of last week, for Norwood, in consequence of the dangerous illness of her ladyship's daughter the Countess of Bradford, which terminated fatally at that place on the 12th inst.

LIVERPOOL.—THIRD OUTBREAK OF THE GREAT FIRE.—On Tuesday evening, about half-past six o'clock, the inhabitants of Liverpool were alarmed at the report that the property saved from the late great fire in the Waterloo-road had again ignited, and was burning with great fury. Shortly afterwards that part of the town was illuminated, the fire bells were rung, and the engines proceeded immediately to the spot. On arriving at the scene of the disaster the report was found to be true, the premises of Reymer's cotton-shed, in the cellars of which were large quantities of turpentine and cotton, having again taken fire, the flames ascending in immense volumes. In the course of a few hours, under the able direction of Mr. Whitty, the chief constable, it was got under. A large quantity of the turpentine and cotton, however, was destroyed. On the first outbreak some hundreds of barrels of turpentine in the shed, ready to be carted away were saved. When the latest accounts left the fire was still smouldering. It is now three weeks since the first outbreak. About the same time as the above fire two others broke out, the one in Fleet-street and the other in Leeds-street, but they were both speedily subdued.

MANCHESTER.—THE BANK OF MANCHESTER.—The peculiar position in which the Manchester bank and other parties connected with it are placed, and the recent absconding of the managing director, Mr. Burdekin, continue to create considerable interest in the mercantile world, and Friday week being the day of annual meeting of the proprietors, the result of the day's business was looked to with much anxiety. The meeting was convened to be held at the York Hotel, but, in consequence of the great number of shareholders attending, it was adjourned to Heyward's large room in Bridge-street. Mr. William Smith, the managing director of the bank, and a number of other directors, were present. Mr. John Spencer, one of the directors, occupied the chair. The chairman said that the costs of the past year had been of a most unsatisfactory nature. Many bad debts had been incurred, some of them to a very serious amount, by which the bank has sustained considerable loss, and its present condition was most disastrous. For this state of things the directors did not claim to be exempt from blame; one remark, however, might be made in their behalf; it was this—if the money of the shareholders had been lost, the money of the directors was lost also. They had resisted every inducement to dispose of their property in the bank; not a share of any director had been sold, and the gentlemen constituting the present board of directors were at this moment holders of nearly 11,000 shares themselves, independently of the number they held in their character as trustees for other parties. The chairman then called upon Mr. Earle, the present solicitor to the bank, to read the report; which request being complied with, the report, which pledged the directors to spare no exertion to bring Mr. Burdekin (the late manager who had absconded) and his confederates to justice, was adopted, and the meeting adjourned.

Three new churches, one erected and endowed by the "Ten [illegible] officers by the "Manchester and Eccles [illegible]ciety," were consecrated last week by the Lord [illegible]. The first is dedicated to St. Silas, to the incum- [illegible] Rev. W. Butler, B.A., has been appointed. The [illegible] St. Thomas, and is situate at Stretford, near [illegible] the Rev. J. Clarke, M.A., has been nominated to the [illegible] The third, St. [illegible], is situate at Pendlebury. The [illegible] ecclesiastical Rev. R. Wilmer, B.A., to the incumbency. Several other churches are in course of erection in the neighbourhood of Manchester.

NORWICH.—Two accidents from guns have recently occurred near this city. The gun of an officer of the Light Dragoons now in barracks here burst, and his hand was dreadfully shattered.—A gentleman of Attleborgh, returning from sporting, incautiously laid his hand on the muzzle of his gun, which accidentally went off, and carried away the greater part of two fingers. The woodcocks have arrived some days. One was shot at Heringham on Friday, October 7th. A nest was this year hatched off in the covers of Mr. Fellowes, of Haver and.—Four gentlemen, [illegible] Sir Richard Sutton, killed 433 head of game at Buckenham, on Saturday, October 1st., amongst which there were only three rabbits; the greater portion were pheasants and partridges.

READING.—"A COURTEOUS POACHER."—A fellow who was convicted of poaching last week at Reading made his escape from custody while on the coach which was conveying him to Abingdon [illegible] and [illegible] the custody to return the handcuffs which enabled him to Reading gool in a parcel. We have also ascertained that this most considerate of depredators had the grace to pay the carriage of the parcel by rail. It was directed to Mr. Hewett, one of the officers of the gaol.

FOR[illegible] NAVIGATION OF THE ROYAL CANAL. Owing to the unprecedented drought at this period it became necessary to close the whole navigation of this canal on Wednesday last. The stoppage of this water conveyance, at this particular season, is of some consequence to exporters to the Baltic, as, in case of the frost setting in early, there may be some difficulty in landing ships at Hull, but for the facilities now afforded by the Manchester and Leeds Railway Company.

STOCKPORT.—PREVALENCE OF FEVER.—We are sorry to announce that fever, though not of a malignant or infectious character, is very rife in Stockport. It is not confined to those localities most inhabited by the Irish, or the lower class of labouring poor, but is very general throughout the better-conditioned operatives. It is induced, we believe, through the great privations sustained by the presence of the times and of the late turn-out, which, combined with the greater coldness of the weather within the last week, has affected their enfeebled constitutions.

WAKEFIELD. —FAILURE IN THE CORN TRADE.— The York Herald announces the unexpected failure of a gentleman of the highest respectability in the malt and corn trade in Wakefield. The liabilities are about £7000. The excise claim an extent in aid for £2000. The [illegible] has done considerable business in Lancashire, and has suffered heavy losses.

IRELAND.

The Bishopric of Meath is at length disposed of, and the appointment has devolved upon the Venerable Edward Stopford, Archdeacon of Armagh. The new bishop has for many years been engaged in all circles and all measures introduced into Parliament with reference to the Irish Church, and is on the most confidential terms with the Lord Primate.

On Monday evening accounts reached town of the death of Mr. Pollock, Clerk of the Crown for twelve counties, which will now be conferred on twelve different individuals. The situations average £900 a year each, but it is understood that this office will be consolidated with the clerkship of the peace under a new bill to be brought forward next session.

Mr. W. Stanley, who had filled the office of secretary to the Poor-law Commission in Ireland, has just been appointed secretary to the Police Commissioners of Dublin.

William R. Collett, Esq., M.P. for Lincoln, and owner of the Killaloe slate quarries, has signified his intention of carrying out the projected canal from Nenagh to the Shannon, by using his best endeavours to obtain a bill in Parliament next session for the undertaking.

DUBLIN, Oct. 16.—The remains of the gallant Sir Lowry Cole [illegible] were immediately conveyed to the chapel of the Royal Hospital at Kilmainham, where the body lies in state. The troops in garrison were under orders yesterday to hold themselves in readiness to accompany the remains from the steamer to their temporary resting-place; but, from the advanced hour at which the vessel arrived, their attendance was dispensed with.

[illegible] death of Thomas FitzGibbon, Esq., formerly collector of [illegible]ick, a pension of £250 per annum reverts to the Crown.

SIR M. O'LOGHLEN.—It will be gratifying to the admirers of this gentleman, and to those of his friends who are about to erect a statue to his memory, to know that a cast from his head was taken shortly after his death by Mr. Behnes, the sculptor, and that the likeness made from it is exceedingly correct and perfect.

The provisions of the New Election Act are about being enforced by the gentry of every county in Ireland. The gentry of Meath have recently associated themselves for the purpose of carrying the law into effect on the Boyne, where, heretofore, an indiscriminate slaughter of salmon was carried on by every description of nets, weirs, [illegible] and that to such an extent as almost to destroy the fishing of the river.

The Treasury have appointed William T. Mulvany, Esq., civil engineer, a commissioner of drainage under the new bill; he has therefore resigned his office of acting engineer to the Shannon Commissioners. This appointment gives general satisfaction, as there is not, perhaps, in Ireland a gentleman of greater experience and professional talent, or one who possesses a more intimate or practical knowledge of the evils which the Drainage Bill is intended to remedy. To carry the required success, however, it will be necessary to have the cordial co-operation of the landlords.

OCTOBER 18.—NEW LAW ARRANGEMENTS.—It is very generally rumoured to-day that Lord Lyndhurst is about to retire from the Chancery bench in England, to be succeeded by Sir Edward Sugden; that Mr. Pennefather, Chief Justice of the Queen's Bench, is to get the Irish seals, as the successor of Sir Edward; that Mr. Blackburne is to be the new Chief Justice of the Queen's Bench, and Mr. Sergeant Warren Master of the Rolls. Tuis is the report amongst the Tory barristers here; but it stands greatly in need of confirmation.

Mr. Beamish has declined the office of Mayor of Cork for the ensuing year. The reasons assigned are the reduction of the salary to £300 a year and the non-allowance of an official residence.

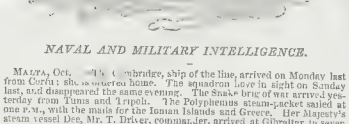
The Kilkenny race-ball was the best attended and best arranged that has taken place in Kilkenny for many years. Amongst the company present were the Marquis and Marchioness of Waterford, the Earl and Countess of Desart, the Earl of Howth, Sir Wheeler and Lady Coffe, &c.

SCOTLAND.

A ROYAL YACHT.—There is, at the present moment, a merchant vessel of a very handsome build lying in Greenock harbour, close to the Custom-house, which in its time played many parts. At one period it was a favourite pleasure yacht of that most extraordinary man, Napoleon Bonaparte. Finding there was need for all the vessels that could be procured to keep up the demand, the French converted the yacht of the "Grande Empereur" into a ten-gun brig; but, as a matter very much of course, it was soon captured by the British. After various ups-and-downs, it is now quietly engaged on the peace establishment, and sails under the modest title of the Thomas.—Ne travail gloria mundi."

THE SYNOD OF MORAY.—[illegible] against the General Assembly. On Tuesday and Wednesday last two motions were made in the Synod—the one not to admit to their places those members of Synod who were suspended by the sentence of the last General Assembly; the other relating to the independence of the Church, as affected by the decision of the House of Lords in the Auchterarder case. Both motions were lost. The suspended ministers were admitted by the majority of 81 to 71; the majority in the other case was 74 to 64.

MURDER AND ROBBERY IN DUNDEE. -EDINBURGH, Saturday, Oct. 19.—We learned last night (Friday) the following particulars relating to a case of murder perpetrated in Dundee on Thursday night, which for cold-blooded atrocity has had few parallels in this part of the country. On Thursday morning two men, who gave their names as M'Kenzie and Duff, and who appeared to be substantial north-country grazers, on their way home from the Falkirk Tryst, called at Mr. Croall's coach-office, Prince's-street, here, and inquired into various particulars regarding the starting of the Dundee coach, which leaves here at ten o'clock. As they had business to transact with the banks, which does not open till ten o'clock, they requested that the coach might be delayed a few minutes, which was promised. About five minutes after ten, Duff, who was a short stout man, returned by himself, and asked whether the coach could not be delayed a little longer till his friend, M'Kenzie, finished their mutual business, although [illegible] This could be accorded to, and the coach set off without either of them. M'Kenzie, who is taller than his companion, and remarkable for one or two projecting front teeth, joined his friend at the coach-office soon after the coach had gone, and both took an omnibus and joined the steamer just as she was about to leave Newhaven. It would appear that M'Kenzie had received Duff's money at the bank, and had it in his possession. They were [illegible] sitting across the water at the same time, and it is remarkable that M'Kenzie took the wrong one; but, as they both shared Petycur at the same time, the mistake was of no moment, further than that it gave rise to much excitement on the part of Duff, who expressed great anxiety lest he should be [illegible] him. [illegible] sat on the outside of the Dundee coach, near the guard, and proceeded in this way to Cupar Fife, without having had much intercourse with each other, M'Kenzie employing himself during the greater part of the way in a low chant or muttering, of which, however, nothing could be made. At Cupar a change of position took place. Both parties came down from the coach, and, on resuming, M'Kenzie took his seat near the driver, while Duff kept his place beside the guard, and continued so to Newport. On crossing the Tay ferry M'Kenzie's manner was observed to be somewhat agitated, so much so that a person who knew him recognised another that that was Mr. M'Kenzie, an extensive cattle dealer, but that he seemed to have got a slap over the fingers, thus referring the strangeness of his manner to some supposed loss he had sustained. The coach arrived at Dundee about four o'clock in the afternoon, and our information regarding them from that time is not so precise. What is certain is, that in the evening two men, answering in all respects to those persons, and of whose identity with them our informant had no doubt, were walking out of Dundee; and when beyond the Law, on the northern extremity of the town, and close to the Newtyle railway, the short man was shot from behind with a pistol, and, it is supposed, left for dead on the road. The poor man, however, recovered a little and was able, we are told, to crawl to some house in the neighbourhood, or otherwise obtained assistance, and had sufficient strength left to tell the whole story, and to fix upon his companion as his murderer, charging him at the same time with having 61000 of his property in his possession. Information was immediately sent to the Dundee police-office, and a search being set on foot, the other was apprehended at eight o'clock yesterday (Friday) morning, in one of the carriages in the first train of the Dundee and Arbroath Railway. The murdered man died at five o'clock yesterday morning. The rumour in Dundee is that our informant left was to the effect that the two parties had dined together in Dundee, and that Duff asked his companion for his property; that he evaded the request under the pretence that that was not a proper place for settling their accounts, but proposed that they should both proceed to a friend of his a few miles out in the country where they would get a bed for the night, and might settle their affairs quietly. To this in an evil hour the unhappy man consented. This horrid case has excited, as well it might, a great sensation in Dundee, both from the respectable parties in which both parties had previously been moving, and from the deliberate villany with which the murder must have been perpetrated.



NAVAL AND MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

MALTA, Oct. 6.—The [illegible]rbuder, ship of the line, arrived on Monday last from Corfu; she [illegible] Admiral Codrington hauls down his flag, and will be superseded in the naval command at Portsmouth on the 22nd of next month by either Sir Charles Rowley or Sir Josh. Talbot, and, should a vacancy occur with either of the present members, Sir Charles, who is deservedly popular, is very likely to be elected a member of Parliament for the borough.

PORTSMOUTH, Oct. 18.—A court-martial was held to-day on board the St. Vincent (of which Rear-Admiral Sir Byam Martin was the president), for the trial of Mr. John Evans, gunner of the Jaseur, for absenting himself without leave, and neglecting his duty. After evidence in support of these charges had been read, the following sentence was pronounced:—"The court is of opinion that the first of the said charges against the said John Evans hath been proved, but that the second of the said charges against the said John Evans hath not been proved to the satisfaction of the court; and that the good character which the said John Evans hath so long borne in her Majesty's navy, as appears by the certificates read to the court, and especially by the certificate given to him by Commander Wm. Jas. Pounder Wilby, on the 30th day of September last, the day of the paying off of her Majesty's ship Jaseur, the court doth only order and adjudge that the said John Evans shall be severely reprimanded, and shall not be promoted to any time hereafter to rise above the third class of gunners in her Majesty's navy; and he, the said John Evans, is hereby severely reprimanded, and so otherwise sentenced accordingly."

WOOLWICH, Oct. 17. Colonel A. Creagh, C.B., late of the 81st Foot, has been appointed Barrack Master of the North District, Gibraltar, vice Captain Claudine, retired on half-pay.

THE FOOT GUARDS. An impression prevails, in quarters generally well informed, that Woolwich will shortly be added to the metropolitan stations of the Foot Guards, and that a permanent body of the regiments of the service will occupy the barracks recently vacated by the 73d Regiment.

PORTSMOUTH, Oct. 18.—The Warspite, 50, Captain Lord John Hay, C.B., was inspected yesterday by Admiral Sir Edward Codrington. She went out of harbour early this morning, and remains at Spithead. It is understood that General Sir Robert Wilson, appointed Governor of Gibraltar, will embark in the Warspite this week, and proceed by her on the first. Dr. Tomlinson, the Bishop of Gibraltar; and his Excellency Sir Alexander Woodford will return to England in that vessel.

The Thunderer, 84, Captain Prince, and the Phœnix war steamer, Captain Richardson, are hourly looked for from the Mediterranean.

We learn that the Wasp corvette has been commissioned at Chatham by Captain Drew, who so gallantly distinguished himself during the revolt in Canada.

The corps of yeomanry employed in the north and midland districts, in co operation with the regular army, in quelling the recent disturbances, have been relieved from permanent duty by his Grace the Duke of Welling[illegible] Secretary of State for [illegible] The Secretary of State (Sir James Graham) also expresses his approval of their behaviour and discipline.

The Commander-in-Chief has issued a circular, signed by the Adjutant-General, approving of general officers commanding districts in Great Britain granting leave of absence to officers, and furloughs to non commissioned officers and soldiers, under certain restrictions and restrictions.

Major-General Sir Wm. Warre, second in command of the Canadian and midland districts of Great Britain, changed his head-quarters from Manchester to Chester on Wednesday last, the 12th inst.

The 16th Regiment move to Scotland on the arrival of the 75th from the Cape at Portsmouth. The 70th Lave gone to Quebec, the 32nd and 71st to Montreal; the 89th to Chambley; the 83d to Toronto; the 74th to La Prairie. The 11th Regiment expect to move to Botany Bay. The first division of the 25th have arrived at Madras.

On Friday week his Royal Highness Prince George of Cambridge, as Colonel of the 17th Lancers, reviewed that fine cavalry force at Woodhouse Moor, in the presence of the Hereditary Prince of Mecklenburg Strelitz, who had previously arrived at Leeds on a visit to his R[illegible]

SHIPPING INTELLIGENCE.

DREADFUL STORMS.—NASSAU, N.P., Sept. 10.—The brig Ann and Leah, of and from Philadelphia, with a cargo of flour, experienced on the 2nd, in lat. 24, longitude 73, a hurricane, in which she lost her sails and rigging, and otherwise sustained severe damage. Captain Sidman reports that [illegible] the several gales he has experienced. At Acklins found a Spanish schooner named La Palmira was totally lost, together with her cargo; and, as nothing has been heard or seen of her crew, it is feared that all on board perished. At the same place a smack was lost with three persons on board. One or two small wrecking vessels have returned to port [illegible], and it is probable that other accidents have happened, not yet [illegible]

September 17.—The brig Ann Elizabeth, of Halifax, Smith master, put [illegible] 11th inst. The captain reports the [illegible] before upon Concepcion Island, but was not near enough to distinguish them, so as to ascertain what they were. The blow here and about the Islands was very severe on the 2nd and 3rd. Every house at Rum Key suffered more or less, and a large portion of them were entirely blown down. Several wrecks [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] the Turks Islands, mostly from the United States, who had just come on the coast for business. Another letter, dated Nassau, Sept. 17, states that the news from the out islands is rather more disastrous than was expected. Most of the plantation houses and the salt crop at Rum Key have been almost destroyed, and the same at Green Key and Watling's Island. Harbour Island has also suffered severely. Several vessels have gone ashore on the island, with their crews, were lost. The schooner Franklin was lost off Eleuthera Island, with all on board except the captain. In the number of passengers lost was a person named Sankey, a performer, and late a resident of the States. He had several hundred dollars' worth of property on board.

SOUTH SEA FISHERY.—The following whalers were at New Holland on February 9: The George and Martha, Bennett, of London, 400 tuns; sperm, and 1400 whale; Plato, Baker, of London, 1600 barrels; the Arabian, Sweetser, of London, with 250 barrels sperm oil.

The British Queen, which sailed from Cowes last month for New York, encountered a most terrific tempest on the 10th ult., which lasted for ten hours. She is now on her voyage to this country, and is expected about the 25th.

By an arrival at Monte Video, from the Falkland Islands, it appears that Captain Biscoe, with his two discovery ships, Erebus and Terror, was at Port Louis. They were refitting, and are again to attempt the voyage south in the tract of Captain Wendel, who passed to the latitude of 74, where he left land, with a sail on board except the captain. In the number of passengers lost was a person named Sankey, a performer, and late a resident of the States. He had several hundred dollars' worth of property on board.

SOUTH SEA FISHERY.—The following whalers were at New Holland on February 9: The George and Martha, Bennett, of London, 400 tuns; sperm, and 1400 whale; Plato, Baker, of London, 1600 barrels; the Arabian, Sweetser, of London, with 250 barrels sperm oil.

The British Queen, which sailed from Cowes last month for New York, encountered a most terrific tempest on the 10th ult., which lasted for ten hours. She is now on her voyage to this country, and is expected about the 25th.

By an arrival at Monte Video, from the Falkland Islands, it appears that Captain Biscoe, with his two discovery ships, Erebus and Terror, was at Port Louis. They were refitting, and are again to attempt the voyage south in the tract of Captain Wendel, who passed to the latitude of 74, where he left land, with a sail on board except the captain. In the number of passengers lost was a person named Sankey, a performer, and late a resident of the States. He had several hundred dollars' worth of property on board.

SHIP ST. LOUIS, OF BOSTON, DESTROYED BY FIRE.—WRECK, &c.—We learn by the schooner Eagle Exchange, from Turk's Island, that on the 30th August the brig Impulse, of Baltimore, fell in with the ship St Louis, of and for Boston, from Orleans, on fire—took off 24 persons. She burnt to the water's edge before they could get clear of her. The fire was discovered in the ladies' cabin at 7 A.M. on the 29th August; and on the 3rd Sept. the brig Impulse was cast away on Caicos Reef vessel and cargo a total loss. All on board were saved, and have arrived at Turk's Island.

RONNE (ISLAND OF BORNHOLM), Oct. 5.—The Helen Mar, from Havannah to Lubeck, laden, grounded on a reef of rocks to the southward of this place on the 30th ult., was got off on the 3rd and into Ronne on the 4th inst., after discharging part of her cargo; the following day a gale sprang up from the northward, when the vessel drove from her moorings, took the ground during the night, and filled; the cargo is now being discharged in a damaged state, and, should the weather moderate, it is expected she will get off and into the harbour.

TRISTED, Oct. 6.—The Pieta e St. Michaele, from Galipoli to St. Petersburg, was stranded on the coast on the 3d inst.; crew (except two) saved. The vessel went to pieces immediately: only 90 to 100 casks of oil saved, part in a damaged state.

GOTHENBURG, Oct. 5.—The Ceabria or Celerias, of Uddevalla, from Cadiz, homeward bound, was stranded on the 1st inst. on the Ne ler Scheere, near Heno, during a gale at N.W.; crew saved; vessel [illegible] damaged.

STETTIN, Oct. 9.—The Phœnix, from Riga to Rotterdam, has put into [illegible] during a heavy gale on the 25th ult.: part of cargo (rye and [illegible] damaged.

LLANELLY, Oct. 11.—The Auckland, hence to Dublin (and not the Oxwell, as reported), foundered on the 6th inst. near St. Govan's Head, after being in company with the John Daniel, from Youghal to Swansea: crew saved.

SOUTHAMPTON, Oct. 15.—Sailed this day the [illegible] for the West Indies, taking out ninety-four [illegible] thirty of whom are for Malaga, joining the full fare to St. Thomas's. In consequence of the number of passengers who at the last hour are obliged to refuse the bay, which arrived here on Thursday, will sail as an extra packet in the course of next week, 60 berths having already been engaged. The steamer Montrose sailed this afternoon for Gibraltar with a full complement of passengers, among whom are Sir C. Napier and family for Lisbon. Sunday, October 16. The Oriental steamer, from Alexandria, was this morning released from quarantine, and arrived here from the Mediterranean, and landed her passengers, 20 in number, who proceeded from hence per railway. Arrived this morning the steam-packet Royal Tar, with full cargo of fruit, 12 passengers, and 30 oxen. A sailing vessel left Vigo on the 3rd inst. with 30 bullocks, and owing to adverse winds has not yet arrived. The cost of beasts at Vigo averages from £5 to £7; freight and railway expenses, £4; and they fetch on an average £10 to £15 each; some have fetched as high as £25.

REPORTED LOSS OF THE BELLONA, AUSTRIAN FRIGATE.—ANCONA, Oct. 13. The Austrian frigate Bellona, of 50 guns, commanded by Archduke of Austria, found from Portsmouth for Holland, is [illegible] letter from the Texel of the 12th of this month to have stranded [illegible] on a thick fog, on the Lauwerse Deep, and that masts were [illegible] afterwards cut away, and the guns thrown overboard, but soon afterwards her back was broken, and the frigate partly went to pieces during the night. Out of the crew, including 11 officers, [illegible] on shore by the [illegible] boat, but the remainder of the crew were drowned. [illegible] one of those singular "fanfe" with which newspapers are [illegible]. The Archduke has been [illegible] half over England, passing his time pleasantly in various fêtes; and his good frigate, the Bellona, has been lying snug at Portsmouth harbour these twenty days!!

ABERDEEN, Oct. 13.—The schooner Fawn, of and from Sunderland, with [illegible] coals for this town and in the North Harbour, part [illegible] has been saved, and measures taken to extinguish the fire.

BARNSTAPLE, Oct. 18.—The wreck of the Betsey from Chester to Newport which was run down by the Rose steamer, was seen on the 13th inst., floating with her keel on above water, Foreland S.W., about eight miles.

SWANSEA, Sept. 20.—The Lady, of Carnarvon, from Waterford, was driven on shore on the 18th inst. at Oxwich, and became a total wreck. Crew saved.

The Lady was a vessel of 79 tons burthen, and was built at Carnarvon in 1826.

GREENOCK, Oct. 15. The Christian, from Jamaica, arrived here to-day, with loss of main and mizen masts, and decks swept. The Chalcedony, from St. John's, New Brunswick, to Dundalk, was abandoned [illegible] 30th ult., in a sinking state.

WATERFORD, Oct. 15.—The Kirby, from Doddon to Youghal, with coals, put into this harbour in a leaky condition, and is now [illegible] with all hands, except one man, who has arrived here in the Maid of Morven.

HALIFAX, Sept. 19.—The Nancy, of Cutch Harbour, was wrecked on the coast of Labrador on the 26th ult.: crew, materials, and cargo, saved. The Mary Jane, of St. Mary's, was wrecked on the coast of Labrador on the 4th ult.: crew saved.

ST. JOHN'S, NEW BRUNSWICK, Sept. 24. The Petrel, of this [illegible] was driven ashore during a gale in St. Mary's-bay, and became a total wreck. crew saved. The Loyalist, from Pictou to Hull, went ashore on the [illegible] of Langlees on the 30th ult., and became a total wreck.

LERWICK, Oct. 11.—A sterin-board, 15 feet long, [illegible] with "Amity of Douglas" on it, has been picked up at Grutness.

SUNDERLAND, Oct. 11.—The Isabella and Jane, of this port, sailed hence on the 6th of April for Newhaven, United States, passed the Pentland Firth on the 11th, but has not since been heard of.

MEETING OF THE ROYAL BRITISH BOWMEN IN FLINTSHIRE.

ARCHERY.

This once famous mode of British warfare, long the theme of many a minstrel lay, when has been for ages shamefully neglected, and allowed to dwindle into a mere childish pastime—ejected from the merry greenwood to take shelter in the squalling nursery, and turning the winged bolt that had ere while pierced many a costly coat of mail into a paltry plaything, the terror of doating granddames and bright-eyed nursery-maids. We are happy to perceive, however, that archery clubs have been numerously established throughout the country, and that a great effort is being made to revive the science of archery, not for purposes of human slaughter, but as a healthy, invigorating, and manly British sport.

"Bold Robin Hood was a forester good,"

The above engraving represents an archery meeting of the Royal British Bowmen, in the neighbourhood of Overton, in Flintshire; and it will be seen by the costumes that the fair sex are not excluded from participating in this really graceful and attractive amusement. The concession of this privilege to the ladies, however, gives them an unfair advantage over the "lords of the creation," considering that they are already well skilled in the archery of the eyes (those fatal quivers that send forth many a deadly shaft) and the doctrine of chance, that "Many a shot at random sent Finds mark the archer little meant."

Dear, delightful creatures! may Cupid instruct you in your every lesson, and may you never want arrows so long as you can find beaux!

It will be seen that a marquee is an indispensible requisite on "field-days;" these light, elegant, and portable structures being easily obtainable, and affording equal protection against heat or rain. The marquee before us was erected by Mr. B. Edgington, of Southwark, who ought to represent that borough in Parliament, seeing that he is the very prince of canvassers.

CABS.

Motto—"De cabibus rebus."

Not de omnibus rebus, as learned Thebans are wont to write, when olla podrida wooes the public to its mixture of paragraphs, which are to be well shaken before taken—not de omnibus, we say, but de cabibus, write we. Oui! we! Right well write we.

Cab!! Why, it burst upon the astonished ears of the metropolitan Jehu like thunder on the tympanum of a flea! The jarvey of old was dumfounded; to the hackney coachman there was something cab-alistic in the sound. It warn't English—it was a dirty French abbreviation—it was a "one-hos innovation upon a two-hos privilege"—it was cabriolet cut down—it was

C..urs'd provoking to be sure,
A..rter spending years in driving,
B..eing scattered like manure,
R..otting just for others' thriving
I..n this most ungrateful town.
O..h! though men knew we did our best endeavour,
L..ondon, without remorse, gives setting down,
E..ven to us, enough so long deem'd clever,
T..o keep on takin' London up for ever!

C. A. B. R. I. O. L. E. T.

It's not only a stick the jarveys would have beaten the cabmen with, but or acrostic, which you will. It was like flooring the old race of charleys with an influx of the new police.

A cross stick,

The original cab was, however, a scurvy affair after all. You mounted it as you best could, found yourself on a dizzy travelling height, with a sort of bird's-eye view of the ground, and a faint hope that it might "Grow soft at the receipt of human bones."

Close at your side was a projecting box of companionship, so that you and your accelerator might hold confab without contact; or, like Pyramus and Thisbe, with a wall between; and, so as he bumpily jolted you along, you could contemplate all the delights of your arrival at that terminus of abuse or imposition, or both, at which you were certain to find yourself as soon as you were set down. Soon, however, "the voice of Reform sounded the tocsin of rebellion;" the old cab was voted "of the past," and there sprang into existence a light, thin, slim affair, with a driver, like William Roof-us, perched up aloft, but not like the sailor's angel, to rather on the "long run" to endanger his own, for no game was ever played more frequently than the game of "pitch and toss" between this sort of cab and its cabman. It was a slice vehicle, which you entered at a back door, and in which you rode only to be reminded of the days of Swing: the couchmen said it looked as if "you had been prigging the fag end of a bus." It soon went out, however; and then appeared a new regiment of cabs and commanders—the disposers of the destinies of the Hanson and the four-wheel; human examples of the beau ideal of the calling of conveyancer of the hackney-coach-dreading, leg-saving, and bus-disposing populace of never-ending London. Look at, or look upon, the like of this genus.

"take care of the life of poor Jack"—

Is he not the impersonification of a lazy, idle, dissolute, and disordered race? There is a redeeming spice of good-nature about the creature we have selected, because he is supposed to be driving ourselves, and therefore knows that he has got a good fare. The time of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS is too precious to be wasted upon a dispute about the "odd half-crown." Besides, if we stopped to listen, his argument about expedition would seduce us into cruelty to animals, and tempt us to pay for unnatural speed. But, apart from circumstance, is he not a disreputable, lazy-looking dog? He has unfitted himself for every other calling but grooming, dog-stealing, or prize-fighting; but he can drive; he is flash and au fait to the ribauds; he will turn out into the theatre of life, "take a private box" upon a public vehicle, and live upon society—to cheat, to bully, or to beg. When Whittle Harvey was Cab Commissioner, it was his boast that he could never starve so long as he had "that plate of Wittles." Even now you see he can afford to carry his whip like a four-in-hand club-man, and

"Smoke his light cigar."

There are exceptions to the rule of wrong; but, generally speaking, the cabmen form the most dishonest, desperate, dissolute, and irreclaimable class of a metropolitan community, whose lower orders are pretty extensively abandoned.

At the head of these rambling strictures we have the modern Hanson—"not Handsome," said a rival builder, "because I say 'handsome is as handsome does;' and this here hinnowater is a running on us hoff our legs." These Hansons are patent, and do go easily and pleasantly over stones and wood; moreover, they have good horses, and speed fleetly. The name upon them is that of "William Greathead Lewis," once City correspondent to the Morning Herald newspaper. But, as we began with "Hanson," so will we conclude with "four-wheel"—the most popular of its kind of the modern vehicles of London; its form and fashion having been set by Brougham in the days when he found that it might be philosophical to substitute a cab for a woolsack, seeing that he could sit in the one, and sit the other was denied him. Broughams, so called, are now even, as private carriages, quite the rage.

NOOKS AND CORNERS OF OLD ENGLAND.

STRATFORD-UPON-AVON CHURCH.

Stratford-upon-Avon Church is a chief ornament of the quiet rural nook in sylvan Warwickshire, which is hallowed by one of the holiest of England's memories. Its appearance and architecture are thoroughly English. Its square tower and pointed windows, its mullions and tracery of the 14th century, its graceful spire tapering above the tall elms which surround it, and the avenue of lines arching overhead the graveyard path to the old porch, are all exactly in accordance with what an Englishman regards as the beau ideal of an old country church. It was formerly a collegiate, and is dedicated to the Holy Trinity. In the plain chancel rests the "poet of all time," Shakspere. The Avon's ripple, as the pilgrim to the poet's tomb stands in the quiet chancel, may be heard murmuring the same placid music which it sang in Shakspere's ear some two centuries ago. The place of sepulture is marked by a flat stone bearing the oft-repeated and quaint lines which the poet himself left for the purpose —

"Good friend, for Jesus' sake, forbeare
To d..g the dust enclosed here.
Blest be the man that spares these stones,
And curst be he that moves my bones!"

Turning to old Dugdale, we find the history of this church and of Stratford, from "above CCC years before the Norman Conquest," but that we have no space for here. Few who go to the church regard the monuments of the good old families which it contains in common with most of our country churches. Shakspere, and Shakspere's tomb, receive, as fitting they should do, all reverence. The wall above the tomb contains a bust—the antique marble, albeit lacking the "golden lustre of the eye," displaying the fair and ample space of forehead, "seeming a palace framed for the habitation of all glorious thoughts."

The church and graveyard are almost as Shakspere left them, except that many of the tombs are now half sinking into earth, as if approaching, from long kindred, the remains of those whose memories they were charged to rescue from oblivion.

CHESS.

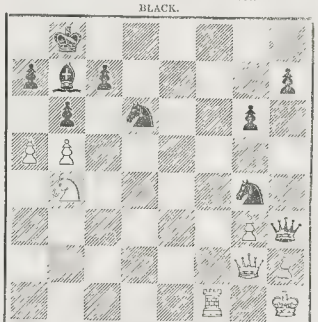
Solution to problem in our last.

WHITE.	BLACK.
R to Q B 8th ch.	K to R 2nd
Q to her Kt 6th ch.	B takes Q
P takes B ch.	K takes P
B to K 3rd checkmate

PROBLEM, No. 9.

White to move and mate in five moves.

BLACK.



WHITE.

The solution in our next.

THE FLOATING ISLAND.—This curious formation has nearly all sunk below the surface of Derwentwater, although the lake is unusually low at this time.

HONESTY.—At a party lately several gentlemen contested the honour of having done the most extraordinary thing. A reverend D.D. was appointed to be the sole judge of their respective pretensions. One produced his tailor's bill with a receipt attached to it; a buzz went through the room that this would not be outdone, when a second proved that he had arrested his tailor for money lent to him. The palm is his! was the universal cry; when a third observed, "Gentlemen, I cannot boast of the feats of either of my predecessors, but I have returned to the owners two umbrellas that they left at my house." "I'll bear no more," cried the arbitrator, "this is the very ne plus ultra of honesty and unheard-of deeds; it is an act of virtue of which I never knew any person capable. The prize is yours."

THE FASHIONS.

Paris, Rue de la Chaussée d'Antin, Oct. 19, 1842.

Mon cher Monsieur,—No material alteration has taken place in our fashions since my last communication, as the return of some few sunny days has retarded our winter preparations; I have, however, sent you such news as I can gather upon the subject of our present novelties. Amongst them I must class some very new and very pretty things for half mourning made of silk and woollen, and which are called Cashmere de Tunis, and a woollen stuff of extremely rich patterns. Mittens also are becoming much worn; they are made in thread embroidered in Algerine patterns of great elegance, and which give to the arm an appearance of being covered with a splendid bracelet. Furs make their appearance upon the slightest indication of cold weather, and large pelerines of ermine are already to be frequently met with, as well as muffs of the same kind. A [illegible] of a perfectly new fashion, and which is called the Venetian mantle, has been just sported by one of the most elegant women in Paris, and we doubt not that this most charming innovation will find numerous imitators among the circle of our bon monde. Winter flowers are also coming into fashion: the reine marguerite of those are purple dahlias in velvet, and interspersed with roses. These flowers upon hats of velvet or of satin are exceedingly beautiful. The great fashion which will, no doubt, predominate during this winter will be redingottes of cloth; but our ladies here are perfectly aware that it requires the talent of the opposite sex to obtain a perfect article of this description. We have, however, seen several from the atelier of Espenetter, of extreme elegance, and of a pattern at once beautiful and convenient: they are made tight, and seem as though they were moulded on the bust. The same observations also apply to the pal[illegible] of [illegible] which are [illegible] now worn on horseback. I had almost forgotten to mention the gloves which [illegible] large, and which [illegible] once elegant pretty. Those [illegible] matching, chiefly of rose-colour or [illegible] citron colour is also much [illegible] your soirées; while [illegible] promenade, violet, deep [illegible], and other dark [illegible] preferred. I have been favoured by a sight of some articles of [illegible] which is an embroidery en tête is about sending to the Court of Russia, and I assure you they are about the most beautiful things I have ever seen.

HENRIETTE DE B.

BRITISH OPERATIONS IN CHINA.

The Gazette of Tuesday evening last contains a despatch and inclosures from Lieutenant-General Sir Hugh Gough, from which we have made as lengthened extracts as our space will permit, and which we have no doubt will be read with intense interest by the British public. The despatch is dated from the head-quarters at Chapo, from which place we have been favoured with a series of beautiful sketches, by an accomplished amateur of considerable rank in the British army, illustrative of Chapo, Naukin, and various other places in China, rendered interesting as the theatres of war, and which we shall shortly have the pleasure of presenting to our readers

"Head-quarters, Chapo, May 20, 1842.

"My Lord—My despatch to your lordship of the 18th April will have led your lordship to expect my present communication, announcing the attack on and capture of Chapo by her Majesty's military and naval forces.

* * * * *

"I shall now beg leave to detail with as much brevity as possible our military movements since the evacuation of Ningpo.

"Having had but imperfect information we could not exactly ascertain the position and defences of the city of Chapo, but we had a very satisfactory examination of the defences of the heights which command it, and which extend from three to four miles to the eastward, as well as of the batteries which defend the suburbs, and apparently a branch of the Imperial Canal, which runs almost round the walls; these heights were strengthened by several breastworks, both in their gorges and along their sides, and small inclosed mud houses crowned their summits. On the extreme right appeared two batteries commanding the anchorage. On these heights, and within the breastworks and batteries, some thousands of Chinese soldiers showed themselves, but not a shot was fired at the steamers, although they passed and repassed within very short range.

"The troops were directed to be prepared to go on board the steamers at daylight on the morning of the 18th, and the whole force, including the light field train, was successfully landed at eight o'clock, under the able superintendence of Commander Richards, of her Majesty's ship Cornwallis, to whom I feel much indebted for his judicious and effective arrangements and zealous exertions.

"The right column, which I accompanied, landed first, and occupied a commanding height, without opposition, covering the disembarkation of the remainder of the force; when the whole were landed and formed, I directed Col. Schoedde, supported by the artillery under Lieutenant-Colonel Montgomerie, in furtherance of the views I have already announced, to move as rapidly as possible round the base of the heights, so as to get in rear of the enemy, and cut off his communication with the city, which now appeared within the ranges of heights already described, while the right column was directed to mount the summit, successively attacking the several works and josshouses as they proceeded. The combined attack on both flanks commenced at the same moment, the steamers shelling the breastworks in the centre. It afforded me the greatest satisfaction, as I crowned each succeeding height, to find my most sanguine hopes realized by the rapid but collected movement of the left column, under Colonel Schoedde, passing between the heights and the city, and obliging the enemy, instead of retreating on it, to move along the heights, which were now, one after another, carried by the right column, with the usual spirit displayed by the corps composing it. The whole of the enemy's troops soon became a mass of fugitives, throwing away their arms, and flying in every direction, with the exception of three hundred, who, finding themselves surrounded, took possession of a josshouse and enclosure, which they defended with wonderful obstinacy, and would not surrender until the house was in flames from our rockets and breached by powder-bags, judiciously placed by Capt. Pears, when not above fifty, and those mostly wounded, could be induced to submit as prisoners

TIRING FROM THE JOSSHOUSE.

Perceiving that the enemy had destroyed the bridge leading to the east gate, I directed the left column to occupy a height close to and commanding the south-east angle of the city wall, and Lieut.-Colonel Montgomerie, with his usual good judgment and alacrity, soon brought his guns into action, effectually covering our advance on this point. I directed the Rifles to occupy the houses close to the wall, to cover the grenadiers of the 55th, and the Sappers, who were directed to ascertain the depth of a canal that intervened. Lieutenant Gordon, attached to the Sappers, fortunately found a small boat, with which he crossed (finding the canal not fordable), and secured two others of considerable size at the opposite side, with which we crossed over the grenadiers of the 55th, under Brevet-Major M'Lean, and a body of Sappers with scaling ladders, and the walls were soon in possession of the left column. Perceiving a body of the enemy in retreat towards Hong-chow, I directed the 55th to pursue and bring them to action if possible; but having had to make the circle of the walls (three miles), as I did not wish to move the force into the city until the gates were occupied, the Chinese had got so far in advance, that Major Fawcett could only come up with the stragglers; but it had the good effect of obliging most of this body to throw away their arms and disperse.

"Notwithstanding, we have found several arsenals, with all kinds of arms and ammunition, together with a foundry and a gunpowder manufactory, which, of course, I ordered to be destroyed, merely taking off the few (eleven) brass guns. The Chinese appear to have placed all their reliance on the positions on the heights, and, possibly, on the supposition of the impracticability of landing a large force within the influence of such extraordinary currents.

"Chapoo hast his peculiarity, that about a fourth of the city is separated from the rest by a wall, within which alone the Tartars reside. This has much the appearance and arrangement of our native cantonments, but that the houses are infinitely superior. Every male adult would appear to be a soldier, as in every house two or three matchlocks, with a quantity of swords, bows, and arrows, were found. This would appear to be a Mantchoo privilege, as the Chinese troops have theirs collected in arsenals.

"The strength of the Chinese force it is difficult to estimate. From the best sources of information, I would say they had about 8000 men in the city and on the heights, 1700 of whom were Mantchoo Tartars. I calculate their loss to be about from 1200 to 1500 men.

"I regret to feel obliged to remark that my loss is greater than I had anticipated, though small when the strength of the position and, for a time, the obstinate defence of the Chinese is taken into consideration. I beg to enclose a list of the killed and wounded.

"The conduct of the whole force calls for my marked approbation. I received the most effective assistance and support—all having accompanied me throughout the operations, in a country where every order has to be conveyed by an officer on foot over most difficult ground, and frequently to a considerable distance. I have particularly to express my obligation to Major Gough, who had, combined with his duties as Deputy Quartermaster-General, to act for Lieutenant-Colonel Mountain, for the (I trust temporary) loss of whose services I have already expressed my regret. My best thanks are also due to Capt. Pears, field engineer, who afforded me every assistance; and I beg to bring to your lordship's notice my senior aide-de-camp, Captain Whittingham. I shall now, my lord, conclude with the assurance, although I am aware as a British soldier it is superfluous, that the force entrusted to my command has but one common object in the bright career which I anticipate for it—an anxious wish to do their duty to their Sovereign, and to meet the expectations of their country.

"I am, &c.,

(Signed) "H. Gough, Lieutenant-General,

"Commanding Expedition Land Force.

"The Right Hon. Lord Stanley, &c. &c. &c."

In a general order, issued by the Lieutenant-General, congratulating his brave comrades on their brilliant achievement, he says he cannot deny himself the melancholy gratification of recording the deep feelings of regret he has experienced at the loss of one of our brightest ornaments, Lieutenant-Colonel Tomlinson, 18th Royal Irish, who fell at the head of his corps, nobly doing his duty.

Return of killed and wounded of the force under the command of Lieut.-General Sir Hugh Gough, K.G.C.B., at the attack of the Fortified Heights and capture of the city of Chapo, on the 18th May, 1842.

Head-quarters, Chapo City, May 19, 1842.

Staff—1 officer wounded.

Her Majesty's 18th Royal Irish Regiment—1 officer, 1 sergeant, 3 rank and file, killed; 3 officers, 1 sergeant, 1 drummer, 27 rank and file, wounded.

Her Majesty's 26th, Cameronians—2 rank and file killed; 3 rank and file wounded.

Her Majesty's 49th Regiment—2 rank and file killed, 2 officers, 11 rank and file, wounded.

Her Majesty's 55th Regiment—1 officer wounded.

Madras Sappers and Miners—1 officer wounded.

Rifle Company 36th Madras Native Infantry—1 rank and file wounded.

Total—1 officer, 1 sergeant, 7 rank and file, killed; 7 officers, 1 sergeant, 1 drummer, 42 rank and file, wounded.

Grand Total—9 killed, 51 wounded—60.

Names of Officers Killed and Wounded—Lieut.-Colonel N. R. Tomlinson, 18th Royal Irish, killed; Lieut.-Colonel A. S. H. Mountain, C.B., Deputy Adjutant General, severely wounded; Captain Colin Campbell, her Majesty's 55th Regiment, dangerously wounded; Lieut. A. E. Jodrell, her Majesty's 18th Royal Irish Regiment, slightly wounded; Lieut. A. Murray, her Majesty's 18th Royal Irish Regiment, slightly wounded; Captain T. S. Reynolds, her Majesty's 49th Regiment, slightly wounded; Lieut. and Adjutant W. F. R. Browne, her Majesty's 49th Regiment, slightly wounded; Lieut. J. G. Johnstone, Madras Sappers and Miners, slightly wounded.

T. B. Gough, Major, Deputy Quartermaster General, acting for Deputy Adjutant-General, Expeditionary Force

HELIOCOPTERS PROFESSIONALLY EMPLOYED.

The engraving represents a group of Muzarees, a Beeloochee wild tribe, occupying the western bank of the Indus. The plundering disposition of these people having, for some time, engaged the attention of our Government Sir A. Burnes made it a point of express stipulation with the authorities in Scinde that they should suppress it, in order that peace might be maintained on the river. The description given of this tribe by Dr. Pritchard in his "Natural History of Man" is, that they are a very numerous people, of simple pastoral life, who dwell under phedans, or tents, made of black felt, and spread over a wicker frame, with which they wander with their flocks over the vast upland of Kelát; and inhabit most of that great region of eastern Persia, which is included between Affghanistan to the north and the Indian Ocean to the south, reaching westward from the Indus to the great Salt Desert. They are a race of Persian Illyahs, and speak a dialect of the Persian language. These men are large-boned, and of considerable stature, for Asiatics; they have dark complexions, and are of a bold and martial bearing. The treaty which has been lately concluded between the Ameers of Scinde and the British Government provided for the dismemberment of the Beeloochee army, supposed to amount to 20,000 men, horse and foot, and for a subsidy of 5000 British troops being kept up in their stead. The Beeloochee chiefs owe a sort of feudal service to the Ameers, and hold, in return for military service, to be rendered as occasion may require, certain grants of land or jahgirs.

Great alarm was occasioned in London, and, indeed, throughout the country, last week, in consequence of a painful rumour which had got afloat that fresh disasters had occurred to our troops in Affghanistan, and that the 41st Regiment had been literally cut to pieces. This intelligence was apparently so authentic (having been conveyed in a letter, dated Bombay, August 27, from Major Messiter, through the house of Messrs. Cox and Co., the eminent army agents) that, for a few days, it was generally believed, and, of course, as generally deplored, until a letter, from which we give an extract below, which contains a gratifying contradiction of the alarming rumour, appeared in the columns of an evening contemporary, which set the matter at rest.

The letter, which is from Captain Wetherall, of the 41st Regiment—which the Standard's correspondent represents as "cut to pieces"—who is in command of a detachment of his regiment at Bombay, is dated "Bombay, Aug. 24," and is addressed to Mr. Wynn Williams, of the Temple:—"We are about to make an attack on Hyderabad after the monsoon, with 5000 men under Sir C. Napier. I shall have about 400 or 500 men of the 40th and 41st, I expect, under my command. The Ameers are possessed of immense wealth, and the place, though strong for natives, cannot resist cannon long, the walls being very high, but weakened by being so much loopholed. We expect to go from this about the 10th of September."

By the late accounts from India it appears that three large armies were in progress of formation, a circumstance which speaks of more extended operations than a mere march on Cabul, or of a campaign in Affghanistan. We have long been of opinion that the treacherous conduct of the Ameers of Scinde would require the presence of a large force in that country, to secure the safety of our commerce and communications with those countries through which the Indus flows. Sir Charles Napier, lately commanding the Poonah division of the Bombay army, has been nominated to the command of the troops about to be assembled, according to the last accounts, in Lower Scinde. Our private letters confirm us that the 2nd Bombay Regiment, H.M.'s 14th Light Dragoons, H.M.'s 22nd, 78th, 79th, and 86th Regiments would compose the European force, together with a proportionate body of Horse and Foot Artillery. This army was to be brigaded near Carrachee by the first week in November. Already we have seen the detail of the large army of observation to be assembled at Peshawur, under the Commander-in-Chief: and we have also learned that General Nott is to proceed to Der ismi Khan with 8000 of his force, and will probably be met in that neighbourhood now under Pollock and Sale. To us it appears quite evident that Hyderabad, in Scinde, Lahore, in the Punjab, and Cabul, in Affghanistan, will before long be in the possession of the British.

Several private letters have reached town from the prisoners at Cabul, by which it would appear (naturally enough) that although upon the whole they are very well treated, yet their hearts are sore to be among their own people again. They are obliged to dress in the Affghan style, and the males are obliged to wear long beards.

An additional volume of travels has just appeared from the pen of the lamented Sir Alexander Burnes, C.B., &c., entitled "Cabool: being a Personal Narrative of a journey to, and Residence in, that City," from the frontispiece to which work the preceding illustration has been engraved, and for which we are indebted to an exceedingly interesting publication, now completed and collated into volumes, entitled "The London Saturday Journal." We are the more readily induced to give a place to this sketch, because we are assured that any fresh information respecting the people of the country in which the British arms are now striving to recover their fame must be acceptable to our readers.

THE PROPRIETORS of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS

have the pleasure to announce that they have made arrangements with one of THE MOST EMINENT AUTHORS OF THE DAY, to produce in their journal a Work of Fiction, UPON AN ENTIRELY NEW PLAN, to be entitled,

THE NOVEL OF THE MOMENT.

The work will be produced with

EVERY VARIETY OF ILLUSTRATION,

executed in the most expensive style of finish, by ARTISTS OF THE HIGHEST REPUTE in their several walks of art. The Novel will be printed in weekly episodes of not more than three columns of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, including embellishments; and arrangements will be made to prevent any encroachment by it upon the established departments of the Paper.

 Early specimens of the design, with further details of the entire spirit of its publication, will be issued to the public in due course of events.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

 We have now the pleasure of fore-claiming the attention of our subscribers to the advertisements which will immediately be issued with respect to the publication and distribution of

OUR COLOSSEUM PRINT.

It will be found, we trust, to more than vindicate the most liberal promise that we have made—whether for the general interest of its commanding subject, its admirable drawing as an achievement of reflection and design, or its exquisite delicacy and finish as a work of art. The whole detail and description of the style of the engraving—the objects embraced, and the plan upon which it will be issued to the public, will form a prominent feature in our next week's announcements; and will yet, we believe, not excite the expectation of our friends and subscribers beyond a point of hope, which we are assured most triumphantly to realize in fulfilment.

"A constant Reader," Yarmouth.—We are thankful for the attention, but the contribution does not suit our columns.

"Regator," Marlborough.—No.

The communication signed "X * ," Knightsbridge, is too lengthy for insertion. We sympathise in the hardships endured by the linen drapers' apprentices, and should be glad to see them employed in some more manly avocations.

"Leon," Newport, is thanked. His future contributions shall receive attention.

"Mr. Bridgeman," Chesham.—This gentleman's communication has been referred to our "botanist."

"J. B.," suggestion is impracticable.

"O. T. K." has been received, but we have no room for favours of the description.

Our Borrash correspondent, who signs himself "A Subscriber," would find his attention more profitably employed in the study of the English grammar.

"R. H. B.," Reading.—Yes.

"Index," Inverness, might have been sufficiently disinterested to pay the postage of his letter, which contained only a mare's nest after all.

"Janina" is quite right. It was an error of the artist.

"Mr. Packer's" does is too strong for us to swallow.

"P. O.," Chichester. The style of communication does not suit.

"Plato," Liverpool.—Yes, through the booksellers. To be leaf of the King's printer at a very small cost.

We shall always be happy to hear on any subject from Dr. Waneborough, who, if we mistake not, was the last faithful attendant of poor Theodore Hook.

"R. H."—Mr. Loop.

"R. H." Eyre, present our compliments to her ladyship, and say we shall have not be, by to comply with her desire, should Lord Lowther voluntarily afford us an opportunity.

"T. E——s."—Like Victorine, we shall "sleep on it."

"Ignotus."—From

"A Subscriber," Warrington.—Apply to Wyley and Putnam, Stationers' hall court.

"C. T."—We really cannot decipher those portions of his MS. which are keys to the whole subject.

While a Subscriber who writes on the subject of fish oil, allow space to dictate for us in the long response of "very like a whale?"

"Lucinda B."—We shall, in gallantry, try to oblige all our lady friends.

"C. D." Hale's Place, will appear.

"A Constant Reader."—His letter is referred to Mr. R. Herbert.

"A. B." We should be glad to receive the "nook," with description.

"Scopus," Sheffield.—Please send description of Beauchief Abbey.

 The many subscribers who complain of the non-receipt of the paper, are earnestly recommended by us to give their orders to respectable book or news-agents in their neighbourhood. We strongly suspect that much blame and neglect is attributable to the post-office (into which we will duly inquire), and which would thus be avoided. With regard to cases where money has been received, there can be no excuse for the non-receipt of the papers from the person from whom they were ordered, unless the post-office can be clearly fixed with what we do not hesitate to call "a breach of public trust."

Mr. Little, 198, Strand, is our present publisher, and letters on the business of the office (apart from the editorial) should be addressed to him only. Mr. Clayton's connexion with the journal has ceased, and any orders that he may be supplying, are in his capacity of general news-agent, and not as publisher of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

NOTICE TO THE PUBLIC.

To prevent mistakes that are likely to occur to parties forwarding the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS to foreign countries, we give the recent post-office regulations.

FREE. To all parts of the United Kingdom, France, Hamburg, Bremen, Cuxhaven and Lubeck, Spain and Portugal, Gibraltar, Malta, and all the Ionian Islands, and the East Indies, via Falmouth, South America, Upper and Lower Canada, Jamaica, and all the British West India and Channel Islands.

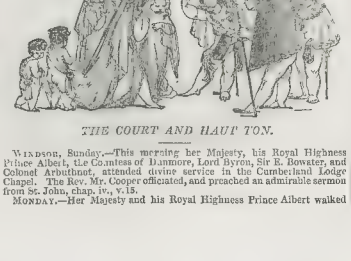
A postage of 2d. is charged upon papers to the following countries, which must be paid when put into the post-office in this country, either by post stamps or money—viz., Belgium, Holland, Sweden and Norway, all Germany, Russia, Switzerland, Italy, Egypt and Turkey on France, the United States of America, Boston, New York, Philadelphia, &c. Cuba and Mexico all the foreign West India Islands—Guadaloupe, Martinique, Haiti, &c.

Papers for St. Helena, the Cape of Good Hope, Ceylon, Australia, New South Wales, Van Diemen's Land, and New Zealand, are charged a postage of 1d. each.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

LONDON, SATURDAY, OCTOBER 22, 1842.

We have some hope that our anxious aspiration in regard to the meeting of Parliament, expressed in our last number with reference to its recent prorogation, may be in some measure realized by the good sense of the Ministers, and that legislature may progress upon the hundred subjects of national interest before the community, with something of the business-like activity which imperative necessities demand. We learn that to this end Sir Robert Peel, Lord Stanley, Sir James Graham, and the principal Cabinet Ministers will return immediately to town, no doubt for the purpose of weighing momentous questions of public policy, and making arrangements for the immediate discussion of legislatorial enactments that may tend to relieve the general depression of affairs, and provide more security for the rich and better and happier destinies for the discontented poor. The recent disturbances have read to our rulers a memorable lesson, the quarter's revenue has struck deeper still into the convictions of public men, the belief that we have an unsound political economy, and that the new poor-law is baffling financial ingenuity; the corn-laws are broadening over even wider fields than they ever occupied before; the tariff is working with a peculiar influence upon the separate interests of commerce and agriculture; the income-tax has failed to serve the purpose of revenue accumulation, and thus there are combinations of difficulties to be grappled, which we have every reason to believe the Ministers will exhibit no disposition to resist. The Government has in a word given up its leisure, and will now rally its members in the metropolis to resume the stern duties of the state. There are measures in contemplation that may yet startle our readers, and tend to the inspiration of confidence, in the vigorous legislation which the ensuing session is likely to produce. Let not the public, however, confound in our columns the circumstance of "exclusive intelligence" from with "exclusive advocacy" of any set or party of public men. We may discreetly indicate a future event without indiscreetly supporting a present Government.



THE COURT AND HAUT TON.

WINDSOR, Sunday.—This morning her Majesty, his Royal Highness Prince Albert, the Countess of Dunmore, Lord Byron, Sir E. Bowater, and Colonel Arbuthnot, attended divine service in the Cumberland Lodge Chapel. The Rev. Mr. Cooper officiated, and preached an admirable sermon from St. John, chap. iv., v. 15.

MONDAY.—Her Majesty and his Royal Highness Prince Albert walked out in the royal pleasure grounds in the morning. His Royal Highness Prince Albert, attended by Sir E. Bowater, enjoyed several hours' shooting in the royal preserves in the Great Park. In the afternoon his Royal Highness Prince Albert, attended by Sir E. Bowater, rode out on horseback. His Highness Prince Esterhazy, the Earl of Aberdeen, Sir H. Wheatley, and Captain Francis Seymour of the Scots Fusilier Guards, arrived at the Castle, on a visit to her Majesty. Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent, Lady C. Dundas, and the Hon. Mrs. Anson joined the royal dinner party in the evening.

TUESDAY.—This morning her Majesty and his Royal Highness Prince Albert walked out in the royal pleasure grounds. In the afternoon her Majesty rode out in a pony carriage, attended by her Royal Highness the Princess Royal, the Countess of Dunmore, and Lady Lucy Byron, with the usual attendants. His Highness Prince Esterhazy, and Sir H. Wheatley took their departure. The following were included in the royal dinner party in the evening. Covers were laid for twenty-one:—Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent, the Earl of Aberdeen, Lord Byron, the Countess of Dunmore, Lady Charlotte Dundas, Lady Lyttelton, the Hon. Misses Stanley and Hamilton, the Hon. Mrs. Anson, General Sir W. Lumley, Col Arbuthnot, Sir E. Bowater, Lord and Lady Hadlo, Sir W. Fremantle, Sir C. Rowley, the Hon. C. A. Murray, and Dr. Pretorius.

WINDSOR, Wednesday.—Her Majesty and his Royal Highness Prince Albert took their usual walking exercise.

In the afternoon his Royal Highness Prince Albert drove her Majesty out in a pony phaeton. The Countess of Dunmore and the Hon. Misses Stanley and Hamilton followed in another pony carriage. General Sir W. Lumley, Colonel Arbuthnot, and Captain Seymour, rode on horseback.

THURSDAY.—Her Majesty and his Royal Highness Prince Albert drove, attended by Lord Byron, in a pony phaeton. The Countess of Dunmore and the Hon. Misses Stanley and Hamilton followed in another pony carriage. General Sir W. Lumley, Colonel Arbuthnot, and Captain Seymour, rode on horseback.

The Earl of Wilton arrived at the Castle to pay his respects to her Majesty on his return from Saxony. His lordship joined the royal dinner party in the evening.

Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent has taken her usual airings.

Their Royal Highnesses the Duchess of Cambridge, and the Princess Augusta of Cambridge, attended by Baroness Ahlefeldt, honoured the performance at Covent-Garden Theatre on Monday evening with their presence.

Prince Esterhazy, the Austrian ambassador, returned to town on Tuesday, from a visit to her Majesty at Windsor Castle.

Col. Lord Charles Wellesley joined his regiment, the 15th Foot, at Windsor, on Tuesday morning.

In consequence of the fatal cases of fever which occurred at Esher a few weeks since, her Majesty has abandoned, for the present, the intention of leaving the Castle for Claremont. This circumstance has caused her Majesty to determine upon paying a visit to Brighton before, instead of after, Christmas, as had been previously intended. The period mentioned for the departure of her Majesty for the Pavilion is about the 1st or 2nd November. The Court is expected to remain at Brighton about a month. The Prince of Wales and the Princess Royal will accompany their illustrious parents to the coast. (We shall treat our readers to two beautiful engravings representing the town of Brighton and the Royal Pavilion on the occasion of her Majesty's visit to her marine place.)

CHRISTENING IN HIGH LIFE.—The infant daughter of the Earl and Countess of Wilton was taken to the baptismal font on Wednesday morning, at St. George's Church, Hanover-square, and there received the name of Alice Grey Egerton, Lady Alice Peel being one of the sponsors. The ceremony was delayed until the return of the Earl of Wilton from Saxony on Saturday, as the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, Sir Robert Peel, and the Duke of Wellington, were to have been present.

ACCIDENT TO PRINCE ALBERT OF PRUSSIA.—Prince Albert of Prussia has been laid up on account of an accident, to attend any of the grand entertainments given on the marriage of the Princess Max with the Prince Royal of Bavaria. On entering the Opera House at Munich from the palace, he happened to meet him, and, in his precipitation, having missed his footing on the staircase, he fell, and received a severe contusion on one of his knees.

Viscount Duncannon has at present the Earl and Countess Cowper, the Hon C. Spencer, Augustus Ellis, Esq., M.P., &c., on a visit to his lordship at Bessborough, in Ireland. The Marquis and Marchioness of Clanricarde, the Duke of Devonshire, Sir John Macdonald (the Adjutant-General), &c., are expected.

Lord Palmerston has recovered from his late severe attack of illness, and is now able to receive several of his most intimate friends.

The Lord Lieutenant has written, by command of her Majesty, a letter to Messrs. Hodges, Figgis, and Co., Dublin booksellers, ordering two handsome copies of each of the engravings which are to be sent to her Majesty for the use of herself and children, per Magnet steamer.

His Royal Highness Prince Albert, as the Patron of the Fine Arts Island School Society, has been graciously pleased to present that national charity with the munificent donation of £50.

The Earl and Countess of Chesterfield proceed to the Continent in about a fortnight. They intend to winter at Rome, and pass the spring at Naples.

Viscount and Viscountess Falkland have returned to Carlton Gardens, from Broadlands, in Hampshire.

Viscount de Cramayel, Chargé d'Affaires from the French Court to Texas, arrived at Manchester House on Monday.

The Grace the Duke of Wellington rode into Dover on Thursday week, accompanied by Lord Mahon; and, after looking at the new wharf and the excavations of the Pent-road, returned to Walmer Castle.

Her Royal Highness the Princess Sophia continues residing at Boxhill-stairs, where she intends remaining until November. It is in contemplation to erect a jetty at this place, which is likely, from the influx of fashionable visitors, to be restored to its previous gaiety.

The Earl of Carlisle continues indisposed, from an attack of gout, at Chatsworth, where Lord Morpeth joined his noble parents on Thursday last.

The Earl of Lauderdale, we are sorry to understand, was very much indisposed in the early part of last week at Dunbar House. We are now happy to state, however, that the noble earl is convalescent.

It is said that the Count Rossi, the husband of Mdlle. Sontag, is about to be named Minister Plenipotentiary from the King of Sardinia to the Prussian Court, where the lady will be called to enact the stately part of Ambassadress in the scene of her first scenic triumphs, eighteen years ago.

METROPOLITAN NEWS.

ACCIDENT TO ADMIRAL SIR C. NUGENT.—We regret to announce that a serious accident has happened to Sir C. Nugent. As the gallant Admiral was leaving Messrs. Drummond's, Charing-cross, on Monday afternoon, he stopped to take a view of the Nelson monument erecting in Trafalgar-square. While in the act of minutely looking at the column, his foot slipped, and the gallant officer fell on the kerbstone, the effect of which was a serious fracture of the thigh bone near the hip. He was immediately conveyed to Charing-cross Hospital, where the most prompt surgical attendance was given, and every attention paid, and we are informed that the gallant officer is going on very favourably, but, from his advanced age (85), no sanguine hope of a perfect restoration to health can be entertained. We ought, perhaps, to take this opportunity of stating that in this truly excellent institution there are apartments in which individuals who may unfortunately meet with accidents, but who are in a situation of life able to maintain themselves and pay expenses, can be admitted without at all infringing on the public contributions raised for the relief of the unfortunate poor.

THE AUSTRIAN FRIGATE BELLONA.—The story respecting the wreck of this ship, which we copied from a Dutch paper, and which will be found in another column of our paper, appears to be entirely without even the shadow of foundation, she never having left Portsmouth harbour since her arrival in our waters. Our Dutch contemporaries, therefore, must have been strangely deceived.

NEW APPOINTMENTS IN BANKRUPTCY. The following gentlemen have been appointed the new Commissioners of Bankruptcy:—Mr. John Balguy, Queen's Counsel; Mr. Walker Saltram, Queen's Counsel; Mr. Sergeant Ludlow, Mr. Sergeant Stephen, Mr. Sergeant Goulburn, Mr. Nathaniel Ellison, Mr. Martin West, Mr. Edward Dunlell, Mr. W. T. Jemmett, Mr. C. Phillips, Mr. Montagu Bere, and Mr. Richard Stevenson.

PRIVY COUNCIL.—Her Majesty will hold a Privy Council at Windsor Castle on Wednesday next, at half-past two o'clock. The summonses for holding the council were issued on Thursday morning.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer returns to town on Monday from the Isle of Wight. Sir Robert Peel and Sir James Graham are also expected in town, the beginning of the week.

ADMIRAL NUGENT.—We regret to state that this gallant officer passed a restless night, but the answer to enquirers at Charing-cross Hospital on Thursday morning was, that Sir Charles, on the whole, was going on favourably.

SIR WILLIAM GEARY.—No accounts had been received in town on Thursday respecting this worthy baronet. It was therefore presumed by his friends, that he was going on favourably.

Mr. Hardinge (eldest son of Sir Henry Hardinge) is so far recovered from the effects of his late dreadful accident as to be able, with assistance, to leave his bed for a short time. The operation of cutting off the foot above the ankle-joint was most successful.

ADDRESS TO LORD PALMERSTON.—On Tuesday last an address was presented to Lord Palmerston, at his residence, by a numerous deputation of the British and Foreign Anti-Slavery Society, expressive of their views of the eminent services rendered by him to the anti-slavery cause, whilst occupying the distinguished office of Principal Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs. His lordship received the deputation most courteously, and returned a suitable reply.

ST. MARTIN'S CHURCH.—The steeple of the above church, which was struck by lightning about three months ago, and suffered such extensive damage as to render it necessary to be taken down, has just been rebuilt, and was finally completed on Tuesday last. The expense of the repairs, amounting to £1000, was defrayed by the Phœnix and sun fire-offices.

DEPTFORD PIER.—The property purchased by the Deptford Pier Company for the purpose of making improvements in the neighbourhood of the pier has been formally claimed by the parish officers of St. Nicholas, Deptford, who, accompanied by their constables, proceeded a few days since to the ground, cut down the gates, levelled the posts, and claimed the several streets as they originally ran through the property.

The Greenwich Railroad Company on Monday adopted the experiment of raising their fares; those of the first class 33 per cent., and the second class 25 per cent. As a novelty, doubtless, smoking is permitted in the second-class carriages. [A word or two anon with regard to this same railway.]

Great complaints have been made by persons traversing the Parks, from Pimlico and Westminster, that the gas-lights are so diminutive as to give little more light than the old oil-lamps.

PRINTERS' ALMSHOUSES FUND.—We understand that as soon as the committee for carrying into effect the building of a number of almshouses for the reception of infirm and decayed letter-press printers shall have raised the sum of £2,000, the Worshipful Company of Stationers have kindly promised to give them a site of ground for the above praiseworthy object.

Last week's loss to the Blackwall Company by the raising of their fares was £122, the number of passengers being 24,567, as compared with 41,091 in the corresponding week of 1841.

On Wednesday evening the Dutch steam-packet Batavier, Captain Dunlop, arrived alongside the St. Katharine's Steam-packet wharf, from Rotterdam, with several cows and a quantity of poultry, chiefly geese, besides a general cargo of merchandise. The cows appeared to be inferior in quality to those previously imported from Rotterdam and other foreign ports since the passing of the New Tariff bill.

THE GREAT WESTERN STEAMER.—A report was prevalent in the City on Wednesday that the Great Western steam-ship would not leave for New York this day, as advertised; but we have reason to believe there is no foundation for such report. The Great Western was offered for sale by public auction on Monday, at Bristol, and, after some very spirited bidding, she was bought in to be sold by private contract at £40,000.

THE BERMONDSEY TRAGEDY.—On Sunday last the remains of Jessop and his wife were buried in the churchyard of Bermondsey Old Church. Although the matter was kept quite secret, there was a great crowd to view the melancholy spectacle. The children will be taken care of by the relatives.

An anonymous contributor, hiding his benevolence under the initials "A. B.," has forwarded the munificent donation of £200 to the Charing-cross Hospital, through the hands of the Rev. C. Bewes, the rector of Covent-garden.

THE WEATHER.—For some mornings past fogs have been threatening, and occasionally made themselves manifest in the vicinity of the Thames. On Monday morning last a fog, which had been gradually growing in intensity, settled down on the Strand, and the gas-lamps were obliged to be lighted in the shops.

Mr. Gregorie, the senior magistrate of Queen-square police court, died on Saturday at his residence in the vicinity of the office. The appointment of his successor is in the gift of Sir James Graham as Home Secretary.

Cornish, the secretary of the Oriental Club, who absconded with £1000 belonging to the funds of that establishment, has not yet been apprehended. We find, by reference to military authority, that he was formerly Deputy-Purveyor to the Forces, and is at present on half-pay of that rank.

A medal has been struck to commemorate the completion of the Thames Tunnel. The obverse presents a profile of Sir Isambart Marc Brunel, the architect. On the reverse is an inscription mentioning the length of the tunnel, and its cost in the proportions paid by the shareholders and the country, with the dates of its commencement and recommencement. The size of the medal is about two inches in diameter.

WINTER ASSIZES.—It was stated on good authority during the late special commission at Stafford that it is intended by Government to have a general winter assizes throughout the kingdom, to commence in the early part of December.

It appears, on certain returns laid before the magistrates of the Westminster Sessions on Monday, that the rental of the county of Middlesex increased in the last year £81,282, the whole rental now amounting to within a trifle of six millions sterling! It is remarkable that this increase of rental has been concurrent with a diminution in the return of the assessed taxes.

SURREY QUARTER SESSIONS.—The General Quarter Sessions for the county of Surrey commenced at Kingston on Wednesday last, before E. Penrhyn, Esq., chairman; Mr. Denison, M.P., Mr. Komble, M.P., Mr. Trotter, M.P., Mr. Hawes, M.P., and a numerous bench of magistrates. There were only 16 prisoners for trial, 14 in a and two women. None of the offences were of a serious character. On Wednesday the court proceeded to renew the licences to the different places of public amusement in the county, and to hear applications for fresh ones. Upon the application of Mr. Chambers, licences were granted to the Victoria Theatre, in the names of John Adolphus Young, William White Smith, and D. W. Osbaldiston; to the Royal Gardens, Vauxhall; to the Castle Hotel, Richmond; the Duke's Arms, Stangate; and to the Jamaica Tavern, Bermondsey. Mr. Wilmanger applied for a renewal of the licence for the Surrey Theatre, in the name of Frances Davidge, the widow of the late lessee.—Granted. Mr. Connor applied for and obtained a renewal of the licence to the St. Helena Gardens, Rotherhithe. Mr. Chambers applied for a licence for Astley's Amphitheatre, in the names of John Chevalier Cobbold and William Batty. The learned counsel said that the name of Mrs. Astley was included in the former licence, but her interest in the theatre had now ceased. The application was granted.

On Saturday evening a fire broke out in the warehouses of Mr. Alderman Humphery, situated in Montague-close, on the Surrey side of London-bridge. In a short time, however, it was extinguished, without any damage being done to the building.

At the late examination of the sixth form collegers at Westminster, Ingram was placed at the head of the senior election; Bedford of the second election; and Randolph, of the third election.

MELANCHOLY SUICIDE.—On Tuesday morning, about a quarter past eleven o'clock, the neighbourhood of Clarendon-square was much alarmed by a report that Dr. Peter Kenny, residing at No. 3, Charles-street, Seymour-terrace, had destroyed himself. The following are the facts relating to the shocking occurrence:—About eleven o'clock a gentleman named Prendergast, residing in Pedrington-terrace, Westbourn-green, Paddington, and who is a friend of Dr. Kenny, called to see him. He was informed he was dressing. On going to Dr. Kenny's room (the back parlour), he knocked and then opened the door. On entering, he saw his friend standing before his dressing-glass with a washing-basin on the table, which appeared nearly full of blood. He thought he had been bled, and himself in the arm at first; but seeing blood on the upper part of his shirt, Mr. Prendergast instantly ran out for the assistance of Mr. Fraser, surgeon, of the Polygon. On their return the deceased was then found lying on the bed, which was also saturated with blood, with his throat cut in a shocking manner, to the extent of several inches, the carotid artery and jugular vein being completely divided. The unfortunate gentleman expired a few minutes after. He had evidently cut his throat, and then held his head over the washhand-basin to catch the blood; a razor, covered with blood, was lying close by the side of it. The deceased gentleman is said to be very highly connected; but pecuniary embarrassments, it is alleged, led to the commission of the fatal act. The deceased was about 42 years of age. An inquest was held to-day (Friday) on the remains of this lamented gentleman at the Coronation Tavern, Somers-town, before Mr. Wakley. The only new facts which came out were, that he was for years in the habit of taking doses of morphine, and that latterly he appeared more desponding than usual. Verdict, Temporary insanity.—[Poor Kenny! This was, indeed, melancholy termination to such a life as his. We have often met him in the world—in public converse and at the social board. He was an Irishman, jovial and joyous beyond compare; eloquent, and with a flooding, exhaustless, resistless humour; witty and pungent, and full of the spirit of retort in the drollest figure into which it could be shaped. There was nothing but good-nature, nevertheless, in his composition; and the man's contentedness of bearing seemed to typify a perpetual flow of happiness and fun. He was the last being in the world whom we could have marked for the contemplation of such a deed as that which took him out of it. By profession he was a physician, and one of undoubted cleverness and skill. He had travelled half the world over, and faced every kind of vicissitude. It is dreadful to think that he should so have died.—ED. I. L. N.

MORTALITY IN HIGH LIFE. It was last week our painful duty to allude to an alarming prevalence of disease amongst distinguished foreigners at present sojourning in this country, and since then we are sorry to observe that a most unusual mortality has been ravaging the circles of our native nobility, thus proving the truth of the adage, "Pallida mors æque pulsat pede pauperum tabernas regumque turres." Amongst the most recent demises are those of the Countess of Bradford, Earl Ferrers, the Duchess of Atholl, Lady Mary Ross, and General the Honourable John B. Hardwick.

Our masonic friends will be glad to perceive, by the advertisement in our pages, that the foundation stone of the Reading Cemetery will be laid on Wednesday next. We intend to present our readers with an engraving of this interesting ceremony.

The Right Hon. Lord Prudhoe has directed, with his characteristic generosity, that 10 per cent. should be returned to his Prudhoe tenants on their half-year's rents, being the same reduction as was allowed to the Stanwick tenants on the event of his lordship's marriage.

Another importation of foreign oxen arrived at Falmouth on Monday last, by the schooner Sarah, from Corunna; they are considered to be of a finer description than any before landed, and another cargo was hourly expected.

GALLANT CONDUCT.—During the passage of the Princess Royal, Captain Brock, from Madras to Calcutta, on the 23d of July, the carpenter, who was working on a stage over the side of the ship, by accident fell into the sea; Mr. Burgess, a cadet, who was on the poop, instantly took hold of a rope and jumped overboard, and succeeded in reaching the man (who was quite insensible), and supported him until the boat took them both up in a very exhausted state.

During the week, from the 7th to the 13th inst. inclusively, the number of passengers between France and England who embarked and landed at Boulogne was 1239. At Calais the number during the same period was 737.

The Leipsic Gazette says that Naples has made a treaty with England for lowering the import duties on English manufactures 15 per cent.

SUMMARY OF LAST WEEK'S POSTSCRIPT.

BRIGHTON. THE COURT.—Mr. Henry Saunders, Inspector of her Majesty's Palaces, and Earl Delaware, the Lord Chamberlain, arrived at Brighton on Thursday morning, to make arrangements for her Majesty's reception at the Pavilion, which is expected to occur immediately.

NEWS FROM AMERICA. LIVERPOOL, Saturday Morning, Three o'clock. The Acadia arrived at this port last night, bringing papers from New York one day, and from Boston two days, later than those received by the Great Western. The only additional intelligence with which they supply us is a speech of Mr. Daniel Webster, delivered at Boston on the 30th ult., and in which he makes many allusions to Great Britain, and developes the foreign policy of the American Government. The Acadia has brought home thirty-six passengers. The Columbia arrived at Halifax on the 2nd inst., from this port.

A letter dated New York, Sept. 29, says:—"I send this with a new novel, published in London, called 'Percival Keene.' The first copy was received by the Great Western, and republished in thirty-three hours after its arrival here, and sold for 12½ cents (about 6d.) all over our city, in a paper called the New World."

THE MURDER AT STANLEY.—Holmes, the sweep, the third man involved in the atrocious murder of Miss Goddard at Stanley, has been examined on the charge, and has made a confession, in which he endeavours to exculpate himself from the actual murder.

COURT OF BANKRUPTCY.—Lord Huntingtower's case of bankruptcy was heard on Friday, and much dispute took place about his lordship's bona fide debts—the total is said to amount to 250,000*l.*! The meeting was adjourned to the 2nd of December.

FOREIGN.

PARIS.—The following changes are announced as about to take place: Marshal Ondinot is to quit the office of Chancellor of the Legion of Honour to become Governor of the Invalides. Marshal Gerard is to replace him in the Legion of Honour, being in his turn succeeded by General Pajol in the command of the National Guards of the department of the Seine.

POSTSCRIPT.

Friday Evening.

WINDSOR, Thursday.—This morning her Majesty and Prince Albert rode out in the Park in a pony phaeton, her Majesty driving. The Prince of Wales and the Princess Royal have taken their usual airings. The Court, it is expected, will leave the Castle for Brighton on the 1st of November, and remain there for a month.

THE HEALTH OF HER MAJESTY.—We have very high authority for announcing the important and highly gratifying fact that our most gracious Sovereign is in that delicate and interesting situation, the intimation of which cannot fail to be received with the most heartfelt interest by every loyal subject in the dominions of her Majesty. Sir James Clark, one of the physicians in ordinary to the Queen, has paid frequent visits to her Majesty of late, at Windsor Castle. Her Majesty has not taken any equestrian exercise for some time past.—Morning Herald.

THE PRINCESS AUGUSTA OF CAMBRIDGE. The preliminaries for the marriage of her Royal Highness the Princess Augusta of Cambridge have been finally arranged, and the nuptial ceremony will take place at no very distant period. The future husband of the Princess is his Royal Highness the Hereditary Grand Duke of Mecklenburg Strelitz, the eldest son of the reigning Duke, George V. It is expected that the ceremony will take place on the Continent. The bridegroom elect was born on the 17th of October, 1810, consequently his Royal Highness has just entered his 24th year. The Princess Augusta of Cambridge is in her 21st year.

OXFORD, Oct. 20.—In a Convocation holden this day, the Rev. Thomas Shadforth, M.A., Fellow of University College, was nominated a Master of the Schools, in the room of the Rev. David Melville, M.A., of Brasenose, resigned.

THE SLAVE TRADE.—A letter from Lord Aberdeen to the Board of Admiralty on the subject of the conduct of our cruisers on the coast of Africa, which has just been published, confirms in some degree the complaints made by the French papers of the British officers cruising on that coast. His lordship informs the Admiralty that, under the advice of the Queen's Advocate-General, "the blockading rivers, landing and destroying buildings, and carrying off persons held in slavery in countries with which Great Britain is not at war, cannot be recognised by the law of nations," and must, therefore, be discontinued.

BUSINESS HOURS IN THE CITY.—The committee appointed at the public meeting of the merchants held last week published a formal notice this morning, that, agreeably to the desire then so generally expressed, the 'Change hours will henceforth be from three to four o'clock. We understand the committee have further agreed upon recommending that on foreign post days all bills should be sent in by six o'clock in the evening, and some of the leading houses have expressed their determination not to receive any bills later than that hour.

The failure of Messrs. Evans, Foster, and Langton, a house of great respectability and long standing in (of late) the Ceylon trade became a matter of conversation on 'Change on Thursday afternoon. The circumstance is much regretted by the commercial world. The stoppage of the Liverpool firm of Gordon and Greenwhale also became known in the City in the course of the day. This house was in the Buenos Ayres trade.

THE INCOME TAX.—We understand that an evasion of the payment of the income-tax on the dividends on foreign bonds is going on on a most extensive scale.

A detachment of the 60th rifles embarked on Thursday at Dublin, on board the Premier transport, from Dublin, for the West Indies, consisting of 1 captain, 4 subalterns, and 100 rank and file.

THE DEATH OF THE HON. AND REV. G. RUSHOUT BOWLES.—This gentleman was second son of the late Lord Northwick, and heir presumptive of the present noble peer. The deceased, who was in the 71st year of his age, married, in 1803, Lady C. Stewart, daughter of the seventh Earl of Galloway, by whom, who died in 1818, he leaves two sons and three daughters.

DEANERY OF FERNS.—His Excellency the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland has been pleased to appoint the Rev. Henry Newland, D.D., to the deanery of Ferns, some time vacant by the demise of the Very Reverend Peter Browne.

The Hon. Louisa Clifford, youngest sister of Lord Clifford, died on Thursday last at Middle Llanfrist, Herefordshire. The deceased lady was in her 42nd year, having been born 14th of May, 1801.

LATEST SHIP NEWS.—BRIDGEWATER, Oct. 18.—Passed, the Bristol Queen, from Quebec; she spoke, on the 8th inst., lat. 50, long. 11, the Dominica, from Jamaica to London, short of provisions and water, and two of the crew dead; and supplied her with provisions.—NORTH SHIELDS.—The Margaret and Ellen, from Leith to London, sank last night off Whitby, having been in contact with the Dispatch steamer (crew all saved except two) saved.

BURGLARY AND ROBBERY AT HAMPTON COURT PALACE.—On Thursday Colonel T. Wood, M.P. for Middlesex, and Mr. Stratton, of Poyle, county magistrates, were employed investigating the circumstances connected with a most daring burglary and extensive robbery of valuable plate and other articles committed on the night of Friday week, at Hampton Court Palace. The portion of the Palace which was entered was that occupied by Mrs. Sheridan and Lady Dufferin, and the persons in custody are, Henry Grover, aged 30 years, a jobbing gardener of dissolute habits, living at Hampton-wick; Martha Grover, his wife, aged 31 years; and Mary Ann Goatly, aged 19 years, formerly cook in the service of Mrs. Sheridan, who, it is said, were charged with the burglary and robbery. The prisoners were fully committed for trial, and in about an hour afterwards conveyed to Newgate.

DREADFUL BOILER EXPLOSION. SCARBOROUGH, WEDNESDAY, Oct. 19. An occurrence of an awful description took place at Middlesbrough yesterday (Tuesday, 18th) morning, at a quarter-past nine o'clock, the steam-boiler belonging to the iron manufactory (principally used for making rails for railroads) of Messrs. Bulcho and Co. exploding, which blew the roof of the building up, and, sad to relate, the principal part fell upon the men at work, who had just arrived from breakfast. About 100 men are employed, but to my latest information it could not be stated how many were on the premises at the moment; two hours, however, after the accident, I had some conversation with a respectable gentleman (resident in the town) who had then left the ruins, and had seen about 14 bodies taken out most sadly mutilated and scalded, of course quite dead. The same manufactory had an explosion about six months since, when one life only was lost. Middlesborough is a town on the south bank of the River Tees, about nine miles from Stockton; the two towns are connected by a railway.

FOREIGN.

The Paris papers of Wednesday contain no news of public interest. A report prevailed that the King's sister, Madame Adelaide, had lately given 1,500,000f. for a fine estate in Brittany, called Carheil, and had presented it to her nephew, the Prince de Joinville.

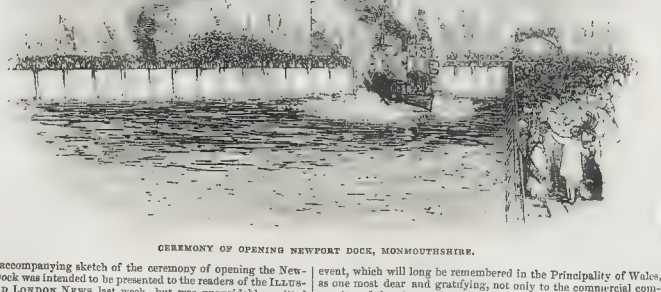
Accounts from Leipsic state that during the last week of September the business of the fair was extremely active. Upwards of 10,000 foreign dealers had arrived, but it was difficult to calculate the full number of buyers. The total number of strangers at Leipsic was estimated at between 80,000 and 90,000.

The Morning Post mentions, on the authority of a Paris correspondent, a report said to be current in political circles, that the celebrated Madame Lafarge, who has been long a resident in the French capital, will shortly be removed to Canada, and appointed to a high station in the Executive.

FINE ARTS

THE NAPOLEON OF DE LA ROCHE.

Those who love to watch the progress of the fine arts in the branch of historical portraiture will hardly have failed to have made themselves acquainted with the existence of the beautiful picture of Paul de la Roche of the Emperor Napoleon. A fac-simile of this noble work of art, engraved by Aristide Louis, has been published in this country by the Messrs. Graves and Co., who issued it to the world of London coincidently with its publication in Paris, thus, by an arrangement made with the foreign printsellers, securing the copyright both in England and France. We believe this was the first instance of a foreign work of art obtaining a copyright in this country. The published engraving, which is in the line manner, is "beautiful exceedingly" and of striking spirit and character, and the kind permission of the proprietors now enables us to place before our readers as faithful a transcript of it as the difference between wood and copper will admit of being realised. Perhaps, were we inclined to be hypercritical with our artist, we might say that some point of resemblance is lost in the character of the nose, which is given with such distinct fidelity in the engraving of Louis; but in all other respects, in port, bearing, expression, the likeness is perfect indeed, and must sure bear the credit of being executed with a blended boldness and delicacy seldom indeed equalled upon wood. It will readily be conceived from the contemplation of this spirited copy that nothing can exceed the fine character of the original print, which a writer in the Art-Union has cleverly described. The portrait of Napoleon is an identity of the man in person and character. De la Roche has read his subject more accurately than any of the artists of all nations, even with Canova at their head, who have given to the world their various semblances of this extraordinary man. French artists generally have painted him in a style too epic—rather as a hero of romance than as an actor in grave history; and, in making him at all times play to the national vanity, they satirize themselves, and give their great captain no credit for greater capabilities. He was adored as the mere soldier, and, consequently, painted as such; and, to express sufficiently the profound devotion of his followers, he was constantly represented surrounded by men expiring in the act of embracing his knees, or saluting him with their last breath. Such circumstance is too dramatic for a portrait of Buonaparte, although no portrait otherwise treated would have been so popular during the tide of his success: it is also too superficial, as pertinent only to the relations between the soldier and his leader. As a despiser of dull ceremonies, the Imperial robes of France become him less than the "redingote grise" which he wears in the Place Vendome; and this, perhaps, he himself was aware of, since he took pleasure, when even surrounded with crowned heads, of reminding them that they were in the society of a quondam lieutenant of the regiment of La Fere. The head of this portrait was painted by De la Roche during the hundred days, and finished by him afterwards, by desire of the Buonaparte family. He is represented in his closet, but standing, and in the position in which he has already so often been drawn. His left hand is clasped behind him, and holds the snuff-box, to which he frequently applied under excitement, or when occupied in deep thought; and the right hand rests within the waistcoat, which is unbuttoned to admit it. The costume is, as usual, the closely-buttoned coat, faced with white; but the entire interest centres, as it ought, in the head, and never was head invested with more character. Writing materials are before him, and he is undoubtedly occupied with the plan of his last campaign; and the anxiety of his position is written in every feature. Nothing can exceed the intensity and power lying within the shadow of the eye; every muscle of the countenance is braced; the entire expression is fully up to the occasion; for "Europe in Arms," and "Waterloo," are distinctly written there. The original picture, in possession of the Countess of Sandwich, and the extreme popularity of the engraving, we believe induced the Messrs. Graves to apply to De la Roche to paint a companion portrait of Wellington. The answer of the French artist was national and characteristic—"No, not for millions!"



CEREMONY OF OPENING NEWPORT DOCK, MONMOUTHSHIRE.

The accompanying sketch of the ceremony of opening the Newport Dock was intended to be presented to the readers of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS last week, but was unavoidably omitted owing to an arbitrary press of matter. We have great pleasure, however, in this day laying before the public the particulars of an event, which will long be remembered in the Principality of Wales, as one most dear and gratifying, not only to the commercial community of that interesting portion of the British dominions, but to all grades and classes of the inhabitants generally.

Newport has for many years suffered great inconvenience for want of proper accommodation for the vessels which crowded to the port, and which each succeeding month increased in numbers, for the purpose of taking in cargoes of the staple commodities of the place—iron and coal, of which large quantities daily poured in from the surrounding neighbourhood. To obviate this inconvenience, many of the principal proprietors of the coal and iron works came to the resolution of forming a capacious dock; and, to carry out that object, a company was formed, to consist of 170,000 shares at £100 each, and a committee chosen to carry the plans into operation. In 1835 the dock was commenced, under the auspices of a company of shareholders formed of gentlemen resident in the immediate locality, and to these gentlemen Monmouthshire must ever feel grateful, for laying the foundation of a commercial prosperity which must render the port of Newport, from the great mineral resources which the neighbourhood possesses, second in importance to none in the kingdom.

The area occupied by the dock company is 24 acres, a portion of which is to be laid out with warehouses, sheds, cranes, &c. The dock is 795 feet by 240 feet, and is capable of affording accommodation to upwards of fifty vessels of the largest size; a reservoir of the same dimensions adjoins it, and it is intended, should the expectations of the company be realised, to convert that into a second dock, or to throw it into the first, which may be done, we are informed, at a small cost. The depth of water is 37 feet, and the gates are sufficient to admit a ship of any size, being 64 feet in width; the length of the lock is 200 feet from gate to gate. A neat and commodious residence has been erected for the dock-master and the clerk of the works.

It may be easily imagined that the completion of this stupendous undertaking was a source of no ordinary rejoicing to the inhabitants of Newport; and so accordingly on Monday, the 10th inst (the day appointed for the ceremony of opening the dock), countless thousands of spectators from afar, as well as the local population, had assembled to do honour to the occasion. At an early hour of the morning, R. Blakemore, Esq., M.P. (chairman of the dock committee), arrived at Newport from Usk, attended by a numerous cortège of public and private vehicles, where he was met by the Mayor and Corporation, and the members of the dock committee, who were in waiting to escort the hon. gentleman to the docks, and the procession, which had been arranged there, opened a space between, through which Mr. Blakemore and the carriages passed, after which it moved forward in the following order:—

The Mayor and Corporation in Six Carriages and Four,
the Postboys in splendid Liveries
The Dock Committee in Six Carriages, the Postilions in handsome Liveries Carriage and Four, containing Sir C. Morgan, Bart., and family.
Capel Hanbury Leigh, Esq., Lord Lieutenant of the County, and a party, including P. Jones, Esq., Capt Jones, &c., in a Carriage and Four,
the Postilions in superb Court Livery
Numerous Carriages and Four, with the Resident Gentry.
The Freemasons, in the Dresses of their respective Lodges; the Officers bearing the various insignia
Two splendid Flags, Inscribed
"The Harbour Commissioners," and "the Shipping Interest."
The Shipwrights, carrying the Implements of their Trade
The Hibernian Society, with several handsome Flags and Banners.
The Charity Boys of the Church school.
Band of Music
Independent Order of Odd Fellows, with Flags, Banners, and Insignia.
The Teetotallers, with handsome Flags, &c.
Inhabitants of the Town, &c. &c.
Carriages from distant places, crowded with Persons.

The procession passed up High-street, and along Commercial-street, to the Docks, the whole way being lined with spectators, and the windows of the houses filled with elegantly-dressed ladies—many of the former testifying their approbation by loud huzzas—and the latter by the waving of handkerchiefs. Almost from every house banners and devices were suspended—some remarkable for their beauty, some for their originality, and others for the appropriate devices and emblems which they bore. Amongst many others which excited great admiration, the following were exceedingly attractive:

"Prosperity to the Trade and Dock of Newport."
"Commerce is the pacific bond of Nations, the cause of Mankind."
"May every prosperous gale waft to
The sight of Albion's port
With Gods and Men far nearer,
And a speedy return our town to cheer."
"Irish potatoes—
Union will cherish;
Strife must cease,
And Commerce flourish."
"Long live the Projectors and Promoters of the Newport Ship Dock!—the supporters of Arts and Sciences, and friends to the Poor."

At the Parrot Hotel—The model of a Foreign ship in full sail, the needlework of a lady.

A spacious pavilion had been erected at the end of the basin, capable of holding several hundred persons, which was filled with ladies, the friends of the directors and proprietors. Every house, and indeed every place which could command a view of the ceremony, was crowded with spectators. The number of persons present has been variously estimated from 25,000 to 50,000; but the computation of the military officers placed it at 20,000. All the vessels in the harbour were gaily decorated, and their yards manned; and, with the band of the 73rd Regiment playing lively and national airs, and the repeated discharge of cannon, rendered the whole one of the most pleasing and animated scenes we ever remember to have witnessed. The ground was kept by the 73rd Regiment, and there was not the slightest confusion during the whole of the ceremony.

The Dock Committee were on board the Henry; and, on the gates being opened shortly after ten o'clock, that ship entered the dock, towed by the Usk steamer, amidst the shouts of the assembled thousands, the roar of cannon, and the band of the 73rd playing "Rule Britannia," and closely followed by the Great Britain, the Eirene channel mission ship, the Samson steam-tug towing the Springfield, then the Eagle, and last the Hercules, in charge of the Rothschild, of 1000 tons. The whole of the vessels entered the dock in magnificent style, and not the slightest accident occurred either to the vessels or to any person on board. To Mr. Green was entrusted the management of the dock gates, while Captain Parfitt superintended the entrance of the vessels.

At the conclusion of the ceremony, a very numerous party of the fashionables, including Sir Charles Morgan, Bart., adjourned to the dock-house, where a very elegant déjeûné was laid out, and at which success to the undertaking was drank.

Various amusements, such as boat races and other manly and athletic sports, filled up the interval between this period and the dinner-hour, when an immense assemblage of persons sat down to a sumptuous entertainment laid out in the national school-room, which was decorated with great taste; festoons of evergreens being relieved by a display of beautiful flags and some excellent models of vessels and other appropriate devices. The large banners bearing the inscriptions of "The Shipping Interest," and "Harbour Commissioners," were displayed at either end. The 73rd band was stationed in the gallery and played during dinner. We regret that our limited space precludes the possibility of giving even an outline of the after-dinner proceedings, which were conducted throughout with the greatest unanimity and cheerfulness.

A brilliant display of fire-works on Rodney Wharf and a large beacon fire on Twm Barlwm closed the festivities, which passed off on the whole with great eclat, the arrangements reflecting the highest credit on the Company and the local authorities, and we trust that day may be remembered in future years as the commencement of a continued prosperity to the county of Monmouth.

*ORIGINAL POETRY.

THE SONG OF LIAROSA,

FROM A MS. DRAMA, BY J. AUGUSTINE WADE.

The songs he taught me (he that's far away,
Perhaps entomb'd) I cannot sing to day!
In all sweet music there's a memory
That brings his presence back most mournfully!
Look, look around there are gay throngs enow
To sing of joy leave, leave me to my woe!

Wouldst have the faded flow'r again to bloom,
Or wake a song from out the night-bird's tomb?
Wouldst bid a heart with early joys to burn,
When ashes now are all that fill its urn?
Go—seek around: there are light spirits here
Whose careless minstrelsy may please thine ear!

There's not a page, as I turn o'er my books,
But from his hand a portrait of him looks;
For they are trac'd with many a gentle line,
Telling his love, in secret wak'ning mine!
Oh, yes! I feel I'm like a broken lute
That must make discord let me thrum as I may!

HANDEL'S BOOKCASE AND AUTOGRAPHS.

THIS precious relic of the great maestro was recently bequeathed by Dr. Ireland, late Dean of Westminster, to his friend, Mr. Brownsmith, lay-vicar of Westminster Abbey, and organist of St. John's Church, Waterloo-road, to whose courtesy we are indebted for the above sketch. The case contains sixty-seven MSS. volumes of Handel's compositions, in the handwriting of his amanuensis, Smith, consisting of thirty-three operas, twenty-two oratorios; the Chandos, coronation, and funeral anthems; Te Deums, jubilates, serenatas, grand and organ concertos, the water music, &c. &c., for which the King of Prussia offered, in vain, the sum of two thousand guineas. This valuable memorial of departed greatness is invested with an extraordinary degree of interest, as belonging to the most eminent genius the musical world ever saw, and therefore a short description of it may not be unacceptable to our readers. It is formed of solid mahogany, of excellent material and workmanship, and its dimensions are eight feet six inches high, four feet wide, and sixteen inches deep. Its history, from the time of possession by Handel, is very simple and brief, for the documents and letters we have politely been permitted to inspect by its present fortunate possessor plainly furnish the chain to its identity, in the following manner:—Handel bequeathed it, with his music, to Christopher Smith, his amanuensis and old schoolfellow, at whose death it was bought jointly by two gentlemen well known in the musical world, Messrs. Harrison and Greatorex, late conductor of the ancient concerts, and organist of Westminster, with the understanding that the survivor should ultimately possess it, who proved to be Mr. Greatorex. At his death it was purchased by the late Dr. Ireland, Dean of Westminster, and from him it has been willed to Mr. Brownsmith, its present owner, and organist of St. John's Church, Waterloo-road.

MISS MARTINEAU AND THE CIVIL LIST.—We learn from a correspondence between Mr. Charles Buller and Miss Martineau, which has now been published, that Lord Melbourne, previous to his going out of his office, was desirous to place this lady's name on the civil list, with a pension of £150 a year, as a proof of his respect for her writings and her character; but that Miss Martineau declined the offer, on the ground that those who provided the means of bestowing the gift had no voice in its appropriation.

THE ORDER OF THE GARTER.—A letter from Dresden informs us that, on the 4th inst., the Earl of Wilton, Colonel Wellesley, and Mr. Mellish, the secretary of the special mission for investing the King of Saxony with the Order of the Garter, had the honour of dining with his Majesty. The insignia, consisting of the garter, the ribbon, and badge, the cap and sword, were sent to the palace in four carriages, escorted by a double line of infantry. The ceremony of investiture took place on the following day, in the lesser hall of the palace. The King was seated on his throne, attended by the Queen, Prince John, and the Duchess Dowager of Mecklenburg Schwerin, who went to Dresden expressly to be present, and surrounded by his ministers. The Hon. F. R. Forbes, the British resident minister, was also present. On presenting the diplome, the Earl of Wilton delivered an address to his Majesty in French, to which the King made a reply in the same language. The ceremonials having been performed, the usual proclamation was made. In the afternoon there was a grand court dinner in the throne-room, during which toasts were given in honour of Queen Victoria and the King and Queen of Saxony.

* Contributed for the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, and copyright.

THE WELSH BARDIC FESTIVAL.

THE ABERGAVENNY CYMREIGYDDION SOCIETY.

On Wednesday the 12th instant, the ninth anniversary of this celebrated Literary and Musical Festival was held at Abergavenny, attended by the usual demonstrations of enthusiasm becoming this great national event. Peals of merry bells gave early note of preparation, and at the appointed hour of eleven o'clock a strong muster took place opposite the Sun Inn, and shortly after the members of the society, &c., moved off in full procession to receive the president, who met them at the Spitty, on the Monmouth road, attended by a numerous body of friends in carriages. An address was here presented to him, and immediately after his reply the procession returned to town in the following order:—

The Secretary and Officers of the Society.
Band of Music, playing National Marches, the performers attired in Scarfs of National Hue.
Druids' Banner.
Druids bearing Regalia of their Order.
Banner.
Dadgernad
Committee and Members of the Society.
Several Banners of the Society, emblazoned with the Red Dragon of Cadwallader, the Plume of Feathers, &c
A Platform carriage, bearing Six Harpers, drawn by Four Horses, the Positions dressed in Welsh Woollen Plaid Caps and Jackets.
Officers of the Order of Ivorites.
The President's Carriage.
A long line of Private Carriages.
Ivorite Banner.
Officers and Members of Ivorite Lodges, bearing Banners and Regalia.

The line of march extended nearly through the whole of the town, as the place fixed for the meeting was nearly opposite the New Church, in the Groffield; the windows throughout were filled with ladies, who evinced the most lively interest in the proceedings, and the streets were crowded to excess in every part.

On the president entering the room and taking his seat, he was received with a grand chorus of harps, which having ceased, the Eisteddfod was opened by sound of trumpet. Mr. Powell was supported on his right by Lord James Stuart, Sir B. Hall, &c., and on his left by the Indian Prince, who appeared to attract much attention. He was dressed in the picturesque costume of his country, and seemed to take great interest in the proceedings. The marquee was one of Edgington's extensive structures, furnished for the occasion, and was very tastefully fitted up and decorated. The president's chair was stationed at the centre of one side, and the platform for the bards and singers occupied the opposite, while one half of the pavilion was fitted up as a platform for spectators, and the other half with seats to which a lower price was affixed. The interior of the marquee was profusely decorated with the flags of different nations, the stars of various orders of knighthood, together with harps and national devices beautifully formed of dahlias. A splendid crown, mounted on a velvet cushion, occupied the centre pillar, and a superb mistletoe bough hung over the platform.

The company being seated, the president opened the proceedings by giving a short history of Eisteddfodau up to the present time, followed by a history of the triumphant progress of the Abergavenny Cymreigyddion.

Several bards then recited Englynion, in honour of the occasion, after which, the Rev. Thomas Price gave an animated and interesting history of the progress of the society, the institution of which had been described by Chevalier Bunsen as the commencement of a new era in European literature, and predicted that it would open new fields of research to the scholars of the Continent. The Rev. Gentleman expressed a conviction that, by stimulating persons of spirit and attainments, the society was likely to effect a great revolution in the literature, not only of their own country, but perhaps of the world.

Mr. John Thomas, of Merthyr, and his talented party, gave a specimen of Penillion singing after the manner of Gwent and Morganwg, in their usual skilful manner.

Mr. Taliesin Williams said, that had he not considered it his duty to address the meeting, he should not have thrust upon their notice an anti-climax to the brilliant addresses in which the last reverend speaker threw a light upon the opening of each anniversary of this society. Mr. W. then noticed the favour shown by our gracious Sovereign to the northern branch of the Celtic family, and expressed a hope, at some future period, of a similar honour to Wales—(Cheers.) He then reviewed the influence of the national customs upon the national character of the different people of Europe. He then referred to the awakened attention of the Irish to their national literature, and said it was a curious fact that England, who furnished literary missionaries for the whole world, could not afford a single critic of our Welsh language. He next alluded to a volume, which he held in his hand, containing the Voice Conventional of the Bards, with the genealogies of Siluria a nation so highly spoken of by the Romans, and relating to whom Mr. Price had on former occasions adduced such interesting facts. Much had been said by the honourable chairman with regard to former Eisteddfodau held under the authority of the royal sign manual; but he could assure them that in the earlier ages the power which convened them was superior to that of the prince himself, who, equally with the peasant, was bound by the authority received from the sanction of those assemblies. At those meetings the Druids conferred their degrees "Yan gwyneb Haul a Llygad Goleu;" and, though they might be ridiculed for imitating those proceedings now, still he would maintain that, in recognizing their principle of seeking knowledge at the source of light, they could not be far wrong. Degrees were now given in colleges; and here we have room to claim priority, for the college of St. Iltutus existed in the fourth century, before Oxford or Cambridge dispensed their learning; the tomb of Iltutus was still legible in Luytwit churchyard, and the present generation could there discern the very characters which Arthur himself had read. Mr. W. then pursued this subject at great length, referring to other monumental stones still in existence, and concluded by stating that the work he produced brought to light the names of several lost Welsh worthies, and thus rendered clear the etymology of several places in the principality.

A poem in honour of the bards of Wales was read by the chairman, who stated it to be the production of a fair unknown.

The Rev. W. Williams (Coleafryn), of Caernarvon, then came forward and announced the awards for the Welsh national compositions, of which he was the appointed judge.

VIEW OF ABERGAVENNY.

The first prize was for the best poetical composition to the memory of Llwydlas, adapted to the Welsh air of "Cwympiad y Dail," to be sung to the harp.

For this prize, consisting of a piece of plate £21 and a premium of £9, there were eight competitors, and the prize was awarded to "Camedyddap Iau," the Rev. John Jones (Tegid), of Nevern, Pembrokeshire.

A duet, "Hob y Deri Dando," by Eos Fach and William Morgan, next followed.

The Rev. T. Price stated that it was the immemorial custom to place the successful competitor for the first prize in the bardic chair, but as he was not present it was the rule to do so by deputy, and he trusted that their illustrious visitor would honour them by acting as such, and by taking a seat which had been occupied by men of rank, as well as talent, in every age.

The noble Indian at once consented, and was installed amidst loud cheers.

The Rev. T. Price, addressing him, said,—"Illustrious Chieftain, in the name of the society, I beg to address you in the aboriginal language of our country. (The reverend gentleman then spoke a few words in Welsh.) He proceeded in English to dwell on the affinity of the Hindoo and Celtic families. He said, if the tradition of the migration of the Celtic tribes from the "summer country" and the coincidences of the Sanscrit and Welsh were worth anything, they clearly proved the relationship. Under this impression he could not but have a opportunity with peculiar pleasure, especially as the individual he had the honour of addressing was himself an instance of the high intellectual attainments so successfully cultivated by many of his countrymen of similarly elevated rank, which were also adorned by divine virtues, which secured him the affection of his countrymen and the esteem of all who were favoured with his acquaintance. It was a sacred duty among our ancestors to speed a departing guest, and in pursuance of that custom he begged to wish him a happy return to his native shores; and, if circumstances should permit, a renewal of this visit, they should ever greet him with the most hearty welcome. He then handed him a written address to his uncle, Dwarkanath Tagore.

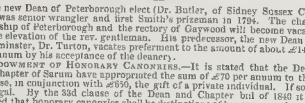
The young Brahmin returned thanks in good English, but slightly touched with a foreign accent, and said that he was quite unaccustomed to address a public meeting, particularly so large and imposing an assemblage as the present. He regretted that his uncle had been prevented by circumstances from being present, but he should carefully convey to him the address with which he had been honoured, and the flattering sentiments they had expressed towards him.—(Loud cheering).

Caledfryn delivered an impromptu Englyn on the occasion, and Mr. John Thomas, of Merthyr, recited the following impromptu:—

A foreign prince now occupies the chair
A Cambrian utterance would ers! not scorn to share.
O let us hope the time is now at hand
This chair may hold a prince of our own land.

After this interesting portion of the proceedings a number of other prizes for the best essays in the Welsh language were distributed, after which "God save the Queen," in Welsh, was sung by the whole musical strength of the society. The meeting was then adjourned to the next day, when the bards and poets assembled to compete for the various prizes awarded to their performances. Prizes were also awarded for specimens of national manufacture.

The dinner took place at the Angel Hotel, where a large party of gentlemen sat down at six o'clock to an excellent dinner, served in Mr. Morgan's usual style; Rhys Powell, Esq., of Wonastow, in the chair, and J. Llewellyn, Esq., of Aberearne, vice-president. After the usual public toasts had been drunk, speeches in reply to their healths given from the chair were delivered by Lord James Stuart, Lord Ebrington, Captain Gore, Sir B. Hall, the Rev. T. Price, and several other gentlemen.



CHURCH, UNIVERSITIES, &c.

The new Dean of Peterborough elect (Dr. Butler, of Sidney Sussex College) was senior wrangler and first Smith's prizeman in 1794. The chancellorship of Peterborough and the rectory of Gayw ood will become vacant by the elevation of the rev. gentleman. His predecessor, the new Dean of Westminster, Dr. Turton, vacates preferment to the amount of about £1400 per annum by his acceptance of the deanery.

ENDOWMENT OF HONORARY CANONRIES.—It is stated that the Dean and Chapter of Saru have appropriated the sum of £70 per annum to this purpose, in conjunction with £950, the gift of a private individual. If so the is illegal. By the 33d clause of the Dean and Chapter bul of 1840 it is enacted that honorary canonries shall be distinctions of honour upon deserving clergymen, who shall be entitled to rank in the cathedral church next to canons, "provided that no emolument whatever shall be taken or he d by any honorary canon in virtue of his appointment as such canon." Such was the compact between Church and State.

The Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's have presented the Rev. Dr. Vivian, of All Soul's College, Oxford, to the rectory of Peter-le-Poer, Broad street, London

The following appointments have taken place:—The Rev. James Hargreaves, M.A., of St. John's College, to the Rectory of West Tilbury, Essex, value £288. The Rev. Robert Wake, B.A., of St. John's College, to the Rectory of Wendon Lofts-cum-Elmdon. The Rev. R. Morewood, B.A., of Queen's College, to the Vicarage of Barton-in-Kendal, Westmoreland. The Rev. Wm Lucius Coghlan, M.A., of Trinity College, to the Vicarage of Swindhurst, in the county of Gloucester. The Rev. Henry Everard Butleyant, B.A., of St. Catharine's Hall, to the Vicarage of Lobberham, Leicestershire. The Rev. George Searle Bissemth, M.A., of Corpus Christi, to the Vicarage of Ilkestone, Derbyshire, value £[illegible]. The Rev. Wm. Lonsdale, M.A., of Trinity College, to the Vicarage of Ashby, Leicestershire, value £170. The Rev. James Watson, M.A., of Caius College, to the Perpetual Curacy of Marr, near Doncaster, value £198. The Rev. John Cresswell, M.A., of St. Catharine's Hall, [illegible] Curacy of St. Paul's, Werneth, Cheshire. The Rev. William Sherwin, B.A., of St. Catharine's Hall, to the Perpetual Curacy of St. James's, Bradford. The Rev. Robert Frost, M.A., of St. Catharine's Hall, to the new church of St. Matthias, Salford. The Rev. R. M. Chatfield, M.A., of Trin. College, to the Rural Deanery of Sarum. The Rev. Charles Lawson, M.A., of St. John's College, to be Archdeacon of Barbadoes. The Rev. Owen Davys, M.A., of St. John's College, to the Vacant Stall in Peter Lovegrah Cathedral

The Bishop of Gloucester confirmed upwards of 1000 children of both sexes on Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday, at Gloucester Cathedral and the parochial churches of Bristol.

The Bishop of Lincoln consecrated Leuton new church, Notts, on Wednesday week.

The Bishop of Exeter has given the vacant prebendal stalls in Exeter Cathedra to the following clergymen within his diocese:—The Rev. George Hole, Rector of Chulmeigh; the Rev. George Cornish, Vicar of Penryn; the Rev. J. Johnson, Rector of Wekeathy; the Rev. Chas Ayne, Vicar of Tywardreath; the Rev. John Medley, Vicar of St. Thomas, Exeter; and the Rev. R. Luney, of St. Andrew's, Plymouth. The stalls are now wholly unendowed.

ALARM OF FIRE AT BALLIOL COLLEGE.—Last week an alarm that Balliol College was on fire spread rapidly through the city of Oxford, and in a few minutes hundreds were seen rushing into Broad-street. It appeared that a servant had laid beds and linen before the fire to air without having taken the proper precaution to prevent accident, and that a spark or coal fell on the linen and communicated with the beds and furniture in the room. The flames were soon extinguished, with no other damage than the loss of the furniture in the room.

OXFORD, OCT. 15.—There will be an election at Lincoln College on Friday, November 11, to fill up a vacant fellowship on the foundation of T. Rotherham, Archbishop of Lincoln, Archbishop of York, and Lord Chancellor. This fellowship is limited to natives of the old diocese of Wells. One of the scholarships founded by Thomas Dyke is vacant. Candidates must be either of the name or kindred of the founder, or born in, and inhabitants of, Somersetshire, whose parents are unable to provide for and maintain them in the university without assistance.

The following heads of houses are appointed Pro Vice-Chancellors to act during the necessary absence of the Vice-Chancellor Dr. Marsham, Warden of Merton College; Dr. Hawkins, Provost of Oriel College; Dr. Symons, Warden of Wadham College; Dr. Humphrys, Master of University College.

Dr. White's Professorship of Moral Philosophy is vacant by the resignation of Dr. Stocker, of St John's College. It is endowed with a salary of £100 per annum, tenable for five years.

The Rev. W. S. Escott, of New College, has been presented to the rectory of Brompton Ralph, Somersetshire. The Rev. L. Louse, of Lincoln College, is appointed curate of Illingworth, Yorkshire. The Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's have presented the Rev. Dr. Vivian, of All Souls' College, to the rectory of St. Peter-le-Poer, Bread-street, London

OCTOBER 18.—Yesterday the Rev. George Denville Wheeler, M.A., and the Rev. Charles Nevinson, M.A., Scholars of Wadham College, were admitted Actual Fellows of that society.

The Rev. John Hodgson, the curate of St. Anne, Westminster, has been appointed to the living of Pa grave, Suffolk. As a testimony of respect to the rev. gentleman, who has been eight years curate of the above parish, the parishioners have determined to present him with an elegant tea-service of plate.

The Lord Bishop of Gibraltar left town on Wednesday morning for Portsmouth, to embark on board the Warspite, on which vessel the new Governor, Sir Robert Wilson, proceeds to Gibraltar. The bishop will be accompanied by his two chaplains, the Rev. Philip Bailey, M.A., of Exeter College, and the Rev. James Lonsdale, M.A., of Balliol College.

CAMBRIDGE.—THE REGIUS PROFESSORSHIP OF DIVINITY.—We hear that the following rev. dignes are likely to be candidates for the important office of Regius Professor of Divinity: The Rev. John Graham, D.D., Master of Christ's; the Rev. Samuel Lee, D.D., Queen's Professor of Arabic and Prebendary of Bristol; the Rev. W. H. Mill, D.D., Trinity, late Principal of Bishop's College, Calcutta; and the Rev. Christopher Wordsworth, D.D., Trinity, and Head Master of Harrow.

CAMBRIDGE, OCT. 14. CAPUT.—The following gentlemen have been appointed the Caput for the following year: The Vice-Chancellor; Rev. H. Hodgson, St. Peter's College (Divinity); Dr. Le Blanc, Trinity Hall (Law); Dr. Haviland, St. John's College (Physic); Rev. J. W. Blakesley, Trinity College, senior non-Regent; Rev. J. Woolley, Emmanuel College, senior Regent.

FRESHMEN.—The number of admissions this term amounts to 426, the chief portion of which were, as usual, at Trinity and St. John's: the former having 134, and the latter 111. Clare Hall had but 2, and King's 1. On the whole, the admissions have been more numerous than those of last year, which were an increase on those of the previous one.

PUBLIC MEETINGS.

At the weekly meeting of the Marylebone vestry on Saturday a proposition was made to grant a site for the erection of a monument to the memory of Scotch Reformers of 1793, which occasioned some argument and questioning, but on which the vestry came to no decision. It appears that certain persons have entrusted to Mr. Hume the sum of £500 for the erection of the said memento, probably supposing that he would make the money go further than others.

PARISH OF MARYLEBONE.—On Saturday, pursuant to notice, a special meeting of the Marylebone vestry took place at the Courthouse, for the purpose of considering the correspondence which has recently taken place between the directors and guardians of the poor and the Poor-law Commissioners in the case of Thomas Phillips and his family; to receive the statement of the relieving officer in that case; and to express their opinion as to the course the board of guardians had pursued, and the right of the Poor-law Commissioners to interfere in the affairs of that great metropolitan parish. The facts of the case having been stated to the vestry, Mr. Locke moved the following resolution:—"That as this board are very anxious that the funds of the parishioners should be distributed with a due regard to economy, as well as to the moral advantage of the applicants themselves, they find, in the above case, those principles fully carried out by the board of directors and guardians, with whose decisions any interference on the part of the Poor-law Commissioners is wholly unnecessary and uncalled for." (Loud cries of "Hear.") Mr. Nisbett, Mr. Gibson, Mr. Biers, Mr. Gomm, and others, supported the motion, which was agreed to unanimously.

ALTERATION OF 'CHANGE HOURS.—On Monday a meeting of the merchants of the City, of Exchange dealers, brokers, and others interested in obtaining an alteration of the hours during which business is usually carried on, was held at the London Tavern. Mr. Joshua Bates, of the firm of Baring, Brothers, and Co., was called to the chair, which it was expected would be filled by the Deputy-Governor of the Bank of England. The chairman having explained the objects of the meeting, Mr. Lionel Rothschild proposed the first resolution, which was to the effect that, in consequence of much inconvenience having arisen from the late hour of meeting and remaining on 'Change, it was desirable that henceforth the Exchange be holden from three o'clock precisely to close precisely at the last named-hour. Mr. Moffat seconded the resolution, which was carried unanimously. It was then moved, seconded, and unanimously adopted, that the committee should consist of the following gentlemen, viz.: Mr. Joshua Bates, Mr. Lionel Rothschild, Mr. Heath, Mr. Huth, Mr. Silem, Mr. Doxat, Mr. Moffatt, and Mr. James Cook. Mr. Simpson asked if the meeting was aware that there was a Treasury minute for keeping open 'Change till five o'clock? Mr. Moffatt—Oh, we shall get over that. Sir Robert Peel will immediately acquiesce in the wishes of the merchants to alter the hour. (Hear.) Mr. Doxatt said that much time would be saved to the merchants if the foreign bills were delivered earlier than they were at present. (Hear, hear) The thanks of the meeting were then voted to the chairman, who expressed his acknowledgments, and the business of the day was closed.

THE LATE EXTRAORDINARY APPLICATION TO THE DIRECTORS AND GUARDIANS OF MARYLEBONE.—At the weekly meeting of the directors and guardians of the poor of St. Marylebone, held at the workhouse, New-road (Mr. S. Grange in the chair), Mr. Thorne, the secretary, read to the board several letters he had received in reference to the extraordinary application of Dr. Smith, described as an LL.D. of Oxford, in Cheshire, at the previous meeting of the board, for permission to adopt three children from the female pauper school, to fit them, by teaching them a system of education peculiar to himself, for governesses in private families of public schools. Amongst the letters the most important was that from a gentleman named Craven, living near Nottingham, detailing the history of a boy who had run away from the Radford union, being met by a Dr. Smith, who offered to place him in a good school near to Derby. Finding the boy had a master in service, application was made by the Dr. Smith for his consent, and two sovereigns were required for him to fit him out. The poor girl raised the money by borrowing, and the boy was taken away by the Dr. Smith. Hearing nothing of her brother for some time, inquiries were made in the neighbourhood of Derby, but no school whatever of the kind described could be found. After a further lapse of time the girl heard from her brother, who had then in a destitute condition, at a great distance, and in want of the means to bring them away. Upon his return the poor boy stated that Dr Smith had exhibited him at three schools as a sort of prodigy, and then applied to two captains of vessels to take him to sea, but, being too small for them, his "benefactor" left him finally destitute, and he is again an inmate of the Radford union. A letter was also read from the Rev. Mr. Emerton, the minister of Hanwell, to whom it will be remembered Dr. Smith referred as having known him for two years. The letter was expressive of the Rev. Mr. Emerton's surprise and annoyance at being referred to by Dr. Smith, of whose moral character he had not the slightest knowledge. The board proceeded to consider Dr. Smith's application, and, on the motion of Mr. Anderson, it was carried unanimously, "That the board cannot entertain the application of Dr. Smith." Dr. Smith was then called in and informed of the determination of the board. He complained of the publicity given to his application by the public press, without his having an opportunity of giving a complete refutation. After attempting to vindicate his conduct, which he contended was suggested by the most benevolent motives, he retired, and the meeting broke up.

ROYAL NAVAL BENEVOLENT SOCIETY.—On Monday a quarterly general court of the directors of this charity, established in 1739, and incorporated by royal charter in 1838, was held at Willis's Rooms, St. James's, when Rear-Admiral Sir Robert Stopford, G.C.B., took the chair. The expenditure, in grants and general expenses, for the past quarter, was £370, leaving a balance in the hands of the treasurer of £1212, out of which £630 would be paid away in grants. The society's votes to the Adult Orphan Institution, besides a gratuity of £20, had been given to the daughter of the late Lieutenant Pim, who was struck overboard and nearly killed, by a blow from a handspike, when boarding a Portuguese slaver, and who subsequently fell a victim to the African fever, after six years' service on the coast, while commanding the celebrated cruiser Black Joke. Upwards of eighty applications for relief were then read, from the widows and relicts of officers in the navy, which were dealt with as far as the finances of the society would permit, and gratuities from between £10 to £20 awarded. A vote of thanks was then passed to the gallant admiral for presiding on the occasion, and the meeting broke up.

WATER COMPANIES.—On Monday evening a numerous and highly respectable meeting of the inhabitants of Lambeth and neighbouring parishes was held at the White Hart Tavern, Kennington-cross, for the purpose of taking into consideration the conduct of the Lambeth and Vauxhall Water Companies, in raising their rates for the supply of that necessary article of consumption to a most unjustifiable extent, varying from 30 to 50, and even, in some instances, 130 per cent, and to adopt such resolutions as might be deemed expedient. W. Baker, Esq., was unanimously called to the chair. The first resolution, moved by Mr. T. Cooper, was as follows:—"That it is the opinion of this meeting, that the conduct of the Lambeth and Vauxhall Companies, in raising the rates for the supply of that necessary article, without assigning any reason, is arbitrary and unjust." After several gentlemen had addressed the meeting in favour of the resolution, it was put and carried unanimously. Mr. Chubb then moved, and Mr. Bird seconded, the following resolution:—"That it is expedient to establish a company for the purpose of supplying the inhabitants of this large and populous district with cheap and wholesome water upon principles that will effectually screen them from being subject to any monopoly." Messrs. Blanche, Orr, Bird, Cooper, Hunt, and others addressed the meeting; they all concurred in condemning the course of the Vauxhall and Lambeth Water Companies, in suddenly and unjustifiably raising the rates, from which it was palpable that both companies had formed a coalition. The resolution was carried unanimously. After some further discussion, resolutions for the appointment of a committee to carry out the objects of the foregoing resolutions were adopted; and a committee of eighteen gentlemen were then appointed.

PROGRESS OF SCIENCE.

At a recent meeting of the Academie des Sciences of France a Monsieur Cornay read an essay on a new and very singular mode of preserving dead bodies. This is termed the Galvanoplastic method. The inventor proposes to cover the body with a metallic layer, in the manner commonly used for the Galvanotype. The body of an infant so covered was submitted to the Academy. M. Gannel, whose name is popularly known in connection with this branch of science, prepared two rams' heads according to this process; one of these was injected, the other coated with copper. M. Gannel states that he had been long in the habit of coating portions of the body in a similar way.

LITERATURE.

AMERICAN NOTES FOR GENERAL CIRCULATION. By CHARLES DICKENS. 2 vols, post 8vo. London: 1842. Chapman and Hall.

A new work by Boz, and probably the most dangerous and graceless book which could well have been produced in England at the present time. It is the most inopportune publication we ever encountered. When poor Doctor Maginn (a man gifted with the shrewdest perceptions of mental ctitlure, and one of the finest scholars of the age) perused the productions of Boz in the days of the Pickwick furor, he predicted that their author would "go up like a rocket, and come down like the stick"—a sort of prophecy of the eventual which the two volumes before us will take the first step to fulfil. We have a great respect for much of the previous beautiful writing of Mr. Dickens; but this new book inspires in us the sort of painful feeling which actuates a warm-hearted man when he sees a friend going obstinately and wilfully wrong. We do not like to blame a favourite any more than the old Roman liked to sentence a son to death:—but we do it nevertheless. We cannot afford to mince the truth in an act of public duty like that which is fairly thrust upon us in the publication now under our review.

Procumbit humi Boz,

There seems something ominously unpropitious in this production. It is conceived, nominated, dedicated, written, and finished in a spirit of evil taste. The title of "American Notes for General Circulation," is ambiguous, if not worse, upon the financial condition of the country. The dedication conveys an idea that the volumes are full of "unpleasant truths," if truths they really be; and the conclusion announces the fact, that the author has bad warning, that his book will not "be tenderly or favourably received by the American people." All this is unfortunate. Lord Ashburton has just arrived with a treaty concluded, an old sign of quarrel closed, the Americans banishing old hostility, and breaking out into new and generous aspirations for our friendship, all discordant jars silenced, and a carpet of good feeling spread for the feet of both nations—and in the teeth of these new and good impulses, an English writer, who for his eminence in literature has been crowned with all the hospitalities of the land he has left, comes back to his native soil laden with sneers, vituperations, ignominious sarcasms, and every other element of dissatisfaction and discord, and pours them out in one endless stream through the columns of flippancy, compared to which the black feathers in Mrs. Trollope's wing, are as the snow upon the bosom of Alp. Moreover we are sorry to be obliged to regard the volumes in the light of a literary imposition. They are a book of small offshoots from a large diary. There is all through them an effort to be smart, a straining after humorous effect, which reminds us of Boz, but does not enlighten us upon America. A sort of vein of ingratitude seems to pervade the book, and it is not honest in its quantities; it is swelled, bladder-blown, eked out by all sorts of advertitious and extraneous matter. It is set in a large type, in a small form, with some twenty-two lines to a page, and a sea of margin around it. The matter itself is of the most flimsy gossip, except when certain pretty episodes of writing creep gracefully in to relieve the incessant flippancy.

In the first volume, the pages from 73 to 95 are occupied with a quoted description of a deaf, dumb, and blind girl, in a Boston asylum; and the pages from 239 to 268, with an account of the solitary prison of Philadelphia, which is something in the nature of an official report —as if Mr. Charles Dickens had been employed upon a commission of inquiry. In the second volume many pages are occupied with reprints of American advertisements. And although all these plagiarisms bear upon some point of political or philosophical conformation, yet the point itself is always too important and elaborate to hold any consistency with the frivolous character of the general work. These "American Notes" are but one day published, and we have perused them with infinite regret; but we now proceed as briefly as we can to vindicate the impressions which they have created in our mind.

The first chapter of the first volume is entitled "Going away;" and Mr. Dickens sneers at the civility which has considerately marked "Charles Dickens, Esq., and Lady," as persons of distinction for the voyage—we need not say that the sneer is also touched with ostentation. Take the author upon the third day of his voyage:—

I am awakened out of my sleep by a dismal shriek from my wife, who demands to know whether there's any danger. I rouse myself, and look out of bed. The water rushes in mirror and breaks like a lively dolphin; all the arrangements are adrift, except my shoes, which are stranded on a carpet-bag, high and dry, like a couple of coal-barges. Suddenly I see them spring into the air, and behold the looking-glass, which is suited to the wall, sticking fast upon the ceiling. At the same time the door entirely disappears, and a new one is opened in the floor. Then I begin to comprehend that the state-room is standing on its head.

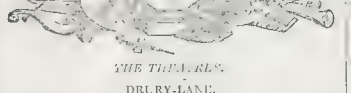
Of course this is the mere nonsense of book-making exaggeration, written to kill time and tickle the reader. The American houses of legislature are so small compared to the English, that to view them is like "looking at Westminster through the wrong end of the telescope." The American people are so inquisitive, that rudeness and curiosity meet you at every turn. So says Boz, vol. I. p. 46. At p. 49 the crooking of American frogs is compared to "a million of fairy teams with bells travelling through the air." The Hudson is a canal-boat is converted into a library, of which the passengers are the books. Let us see what sort of an odd volume Boz made in the collection:—

But the shelf being a bottom one, I finally determined on lying upon the floor, rolling gently in, stopping immediately I touched the mattress, and remaining for the night with that side uppermost, whatever it might be. Luckily, I came upon my back at exact y the right moment. I was much alarmed on looking upward, to see, by the shape of his half-yard of sacking (which has weight and bent into an exceedingly tight bag), that there was a very heavy gentleman above me, whom I at once seemed quite incapable of heading; and I could not help reflecting upon the grief of my wife and family in the event of his coming down in the night. But as I could not have got up again without a severe bodily struggle, which might have aroused the ladies—and as I had nowhere to go to, even if I had I shut my eyes upon the danger, and remained there.

Upon the question of brutal and stupid curiosity which Boz implies to be an American characteristic, we have an example, in reference to Mr. Dickens's fur coat, and the person who took an admiration for it.

Finding that nothing would satisfy him, I evaded his questions after the first score or two, and in particular declined information respecting the name of the fur where it or coat was made. I am unable to say whether this was the reason, but that coat fascinated him ever afterwards; he usually kept close behind me as I walked, and, moved as I moved, that he might look at it the better, and he frequently dived into narrow places after me at the risk of his life, that he might have the satisfaction of passing his hand up the back, and rubbing it the wrong way.

Is not this sort of writing contemptible enough? But the volumes abound in the most illustrative [illegible] of character, which, although individual, are meant to have a general application, and are, we have no doubt, so many libels upon the nation impugned. There is not one course or disgusting feature in the society of the country, that is not almost gloated over by our author; he lingers at every weakness, he sneers at every ill-conditioned want of civilization, he quizzes the slang, and quite riots in the expectoration of the entire people. We have not room to adduce the thousand instances of half venemous flippancy which the book contains. Indeed the imperative claims of space now warn us—as it were in mid-article—to conclude, and we therefore thus suddenly suspend our criticism till a future number.



THE THEATRES.

DRURY-LANE.

Holcroft's comedy, The Road to Ruin, was revived at this theatre on Tuesday evening, and met with that success which ever attends legitimate dramatic writing, when upheld by an

Ingenium par materæ

on the part of the performers. To criticise the play on its wakening from an undeserved oblivion would be only to repeat the eulogies that were bestowed upon it at its birth; but perhaps a brief inquiry into the causes why some dramas, like old pictures, can bear cleaning up and reproduction with a fresh influence on our senses as that which impressed admiration on its first beholders may not be altogether amiss in these days, when again, as in the time of Pope,

"Our scene precariously subsists too long
On French translation and Italian song."

Drama, if it would be a picture of life, must confine itself to objects and manners not merely within the immediate reach of its own consideration, but of that of its spectators also. The Greeks, the fathers of the drama, never produced a subject on the stage with which the audience were not conversant, at least as regarded manners. We now-a-days link up the customs of the kingdom of the earth into such collision and confusion, that individual portraits, national or personal, are totally lost in the general contrast. The consequence is that the life of a modern stage-production is ephemeral in nineteen cases out of twenty; and for the desire, on the part of the public, for mere novelty, as is constantly seen on the production of a new play, is generally satiated or disappointed with its first representation. They go in the hope of finding something homely—something congenial to their moral habits and associations, and meet with nothing but foreign incidents and characters violently naturalized to the scene of their own native and superiorly intellectual drama. Whenever this last-mentioned consolatory chances to be produced, as in the instance of The Road to Ruin, how cordially it is welcomed! Taste at once recovers her tone, and unbiassed moderation (that health of the judgment) follows as a matter of certainty. Holcroft had a keen eye for the perception of the various and conflicting lights and shadows of human character and situation; and opposed or mixed them with the skill of a consummate artist—to use a painter's [illegible]

A varied scene of colour, life & dress."

Moreover, he found the prototypes of his dramatis personæ in the land of his language, and

"Dar'd to have sense himself."

The acting of this comedy was excellent [illegible] Mr. Farren's Sophia as splendidly bodeinlike, [illegible] rounded with a most pleasant levity, without offence. Mrs [illegible] was admirable; Mr. Charles Mathews buoyant and bustling, occasionally reminding us of his father's excellence; Mr. Lambert improves upon acquaintance; but Silky, was the gem of the cast. There are certain characters which this gentleman personifies better than any of his contemporaries—nay, perhaps better than any of his predecessors. His Shakspeare's clown (why does he not play Touchstone and his Messinger's Mirrall are the authors' conceptions [illegible] died forth." We recollect Munden, and have no hesitation in [illegible] as to that sectional actor, with a better economy of [illegible] but it is hardly [illegible] or to attempt to judge of an actor with the lively recollection of Kean (particularly in the part of Sir Giles) before our eyes, or expect to remove the early impressions made by a great man, even when another even man succeeds him. The other characters of the piece [illegible] ornamente. There was much to applaud, and so little to censure, that it would be invidious to point out the few trifling defects, or rather interiorities, that here and there presented themselves.

The house, we are sorry to say, was not so well attended as on the nights of Semiramide. By the way, why in the English version of this opera is the Italian termination of his title adopted? Why not Semiramis? If Zingarelli's opera of Romeo and Juliet were adapted to the English stage, we surely would not write Romeo e Giulietta at the head of the bills. Otello would also sound oddity to English ears.

THE HAYMARKET.

On Wednesday evening Mr. Buckstone made his first appearance since his return from America in the character of Mr Done, in his own comedy of Married Life, and was most warmly received by his [illegible] friends and patrons. There is no [illegible] in his walk of acting since we last had the pleasure of seeing him on these boards, and we might add that [illegible] he would have been for the worse, for, personally recognisable as he is in dissimilar parts, he is one of the few actors whose identity does not spoil his assumptions. The character of Mr. Done is not one of the most prominent in the piece, but as played by the author, who with praiseworthy modesty ceded better parts to others, it stood forth with as much claim to distinguished notice perhaps as [illegible] other of the cast. At the fall of the curtain, being loudly called for, Mr. Buckstone came forward and addressed the audience as follows: "Ladies and Gentlemen.—The warm and generous welcome home that you have this evening given me has been a most [illegible] assurance that absence has not entirely banished me from your memories, and though in the United States I have met with every kindness, troops of warm-hearted friends, and all that success that I could expect, yet the regret that every one must feel at parting with those that regard us is pleasantly lessened by this welcome from my old friends in London. Many things have been named as worth crossing the Atlantic to see, but, believe me, I have thought it worth while to cross the Atlantic to hear once more a hearty English laugh. I have heard it this evening and with delight; and, in return, ladies and gentlemen, I sincerely hope that you have enjoyed, and may long enjoy, the best of health and prosperity; and I also hope there is in store for us many, many evenings at the little theatre in the Haymarket." We need hardly say that such an address, from a favourite author and actor on his welcome home, was most universally and heartily responded to by every one present.

MUSICAL CHIT CHAT.

Princess's Theatre. Mr. Madcox has engaged [illegible] principal dancers, and a corps de ballet, in Paris, for the theatre in Oxford-street, which will be opened on the 26th of December. [illegible] opera in English. The principal singers already [illegible] Mr. Manuel Garcia, Mr. Templeton, and Mr. Balfe. The idea of performing Italian operas has been abandoned.

Mrs. Alfred Shaw will sing at Blackheath on the 27th inst. Mr. John Parry's morning concert, who has also engaged Miss [illegible], Miss Rainforth, Mrs. A. Toulmin, Madame Dulcken, Messrs. Young, Lazarus, Negri, and H. Phillips. The beneficiaire himself will sing a new song, called "Anticipations of Switzerland."

Thalberg will commence a professional tour through the provinces, at Brighton, on the 31st inst., accompanied by Signor and Madame Ronconi, Mrs. A. Toulmin, and John Parry. The party will pay Ireland and Scotland a visit. Brighton is quite full of company.

[illegible]rts on a very extensive scale will be given by some influential [illegible]s of the musical profession, at the Lyceum Theatre, in the [illegible]

The German papers speak of the serious indisposition of the great Standish; and even go so far as to entertain doubts of that great artiste ever appearing [illegible]

[illegible] quite [illegible] Comique.

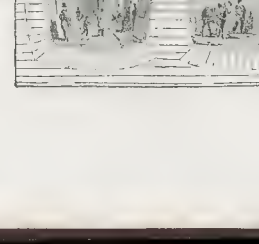
Mr. [illegible]te of Queen Victoria is here (Paris), but has not [illegible] her admirals as yet by any public performance.

[illegible] of the Academie Royale, has renewed his engagement for [illegible],000 per annum, and two months leave of absence each [illegible]

[illegible] Sale Fauvart there has been a very successful production of a new opera, by Adolphe Adam, composer of the Chalet. Postillon de Lonjumeau, His First Campaign. Le Toreador ou le Portefeuille. Giralda, &c. It is in [illegible] Le Roi d'Yvetot, and the libretto is by M.M. Leuven and Brunswick. Couret is excellent as the hero, and the music is very pleasing throughout; not very profound, but light and [illegible]

[illegible] The [illegible] applied to [illegible] who appeared at her Majesty's theatre in 1840, and subsequently [illegible] with the unrivalled Lind in his provincial tour in the country, has created quite a furore in Italy by her admirable performances in [illegible] all the operas which at present jouissent de la vogue in that land of song. At San Carlo, in Naples, she repeated the airs from Lucia no fewer than twenty-seven times, and [illegible] at the conclusion of the last, in the same opera [illegible] with the lady, made his début here in the opera of Torquato Tasso and whose genuine merit, now in the highest reputation in his native land, was here opposed and insulted by an ill-behaved faction. It is rumoured that Madame de Varny, soprano assoluto [illegible] Italians style her, will again visit this country, and appear at the Queen's Theatre, with Madame Maria Goldsmith [illegible] distinguished artistes in the course of the winter.

Thames Tunnel. The subjoined [illegible] the entrance to the Thames Tunnel we offer to the notice of our readers in the form of an illustration of it [illegible] as a specimen of the new system of surface [illegible] Mr. Peto [illegible] street, [illegible]



EVERY BODY'S COLUMN.

ORIGIN OF THE TERM "YANKEE."

The current American term, Yankee, was a cant or favourite word with one Jonathan Hastings, a settler at Cambridge, North America, about the year 1713. The inventor used it to express excellency. For instance, a "Yankee good horse," or "Yankee cider," meant an excellent horse and excellent cider. The students of a neighbouring college were accustomed to hire horses of Jonathan; their intercourse with him, and his use of the word on all occasions, led them to adopt it, and they gave him the name of "Yankee Jonathan." It was dispersed by the undergraduates throughout New England, until it became a settled term of reproach to all new Englanders, a [illegible]

MONUMENT OF MOREAU.

Not much more than a mile from the walls of Dresden stands the lonely mound, about 30 feet high, on the spot where he fell. It is merely a square block of granite, surrounded below by large unhewn stones, and bearing on its upper surface a helmet, a sword, and a laurel chaplet. The brief inscription, "Ihr hero Moreau fiel, here by the side of Alexander," is worth mentioning, merely to notice the audacity with which some ungenerous spirit has dared to violate it. An unknown but deliberate hand has tried to efface the word "hero," and has carved above it, as regularly and deeply as the rest of the inscription, the word "traitor." So professionally has it been pronounced, that it has not been possible to obliterate entirely this degrading epithet of cowardice and meanness.

IMPURITIES AND POLE.

What is a pole? That is a question, oh, benevolent reader, to which the answer varies every ten years! A few decades ago, in the days of Hayley, a pole was a very precise, rather old maidish sort of a gentleman, who carried manuscript epics about with him in his pocket when he was invited to tea, and read to the admiring spinsters, who had been asked to meet him, twelve cantos of his poems, and refreshed himself with a cup between each. Wonder in those days was divided between the powers of his body and mind; and, although the aforesaid spinsters affected to be astonished at his intellect, the highest object of their admiration was, in reality, his unequalled capacity of drinking slops.

MAHOMET'S TOMB.

The Greeks and Latins have invented and propagated the vulgar and ridiculous story, that Mahomet's iron tomb is suspended in the air at Mecca, by the action of equal and potent loadstones. Without any philosophical inquiries, it may suffice, that, 1st, the Prophet was not buried at Mecca; and, 2nd, that his tomb is at Medina, which has been visited by millions, is placed on the ground.

"Gentlemen of the jury," said a western lawyer, "would you set a rat trap to catch a bear? Would you make coils of yourselves by endeavouring to spear a dolphin with a knitting needle? Or would you attempt to swim out the Mississippi with a gourd? No, gentlemen, I know you would not. Then how can you be guilty of the [illegible] my client guilty of manslaughter for having the life of a [illegible]

HOSPITALITY INCULCATED AMONGST THE IRISH.

Many generations of the Irish peasantry, as will be supposed, inculcate the old virtue of hospitality. On a guide at Killarney, "Sir!" Richard Courtney, gave us one. A traveller one day went into a cottage, where he saw a very great man sitting by the fire. The owner of the house told him not to be frightened at anything he might hear or see. "For," says he, "that's my old father; he's been dead twenty years; and when the nights are cold he comes to his cabin to get an air of the fire; but he goes away when the morning dawns. My mother sits outside under the thorn-bush waiting for him; but she daren't come in; and the reason, ye see, is this: the old man, when alive, was always kind to the wanderer, and would give the bit and the sup for God's sake; but the old woman grudged every morsel he gave, and used to send the hungry stranger away when her husband was not by. So both have their recompense."

"Jack, your wife's not so pensive as she used to be." "No, she's left off hand farmed tarnation ex pensive."

THE TITLE OF ESQUIRE.

The number of persons who by birth are legally entitled to the designation of esquire far exceeds any possibility of calculation; for they include the [illegible]sons of peers, the eldest sons of peers by parent, the eldest sons of [illegible]s, and all the eldest sons of these three classes in perpetual succession, [illegible] the sons of baronets; hence tens of thousands of gentlemen who [illegible] this affix, apparently as a matter of courtesy, really enjoy a legal [illegible], though it be more frequently used than any other courtesy distinction, yet the right to it is more extensively possessed than readers are [illegible] in the habit of supposing. There can not be a more vulgar error [illegible] affix of esquire, any more than the prefix of sir or lord, is dependent [illegible] the world calls "respectability."

MAKING IT UP.

Reporting soon is an amusing routine at sea, and exemplifies [illegible] great authority of the captain, for he actually assumes the power which Joshua possessed, of making time stand still. It is usual for the master when he has ascertained that the sun's ascension is at its height, to salute the captain, or officer of the watch, informing him that it is "twelve o'clock." If [illegible] ready, he replies, "Make it so, and pipe to dinner;" but, if [illegible] remains to be done which requires a few minutes' labour, he resists not to suspend the event until such is accomplished: and when ready, and not before, he declares his pleasure that it shall be noon.

THE GERMAN SECRET TRIBUNALS.

In Germany (in the fourteenth century) the Secret Tribunals exercised an awful and mysterious sway. There was no one whose rank was too exalted, or his vassals too numerous, to save him from the judgment of the Secret Tribunal. These trials were held in secret—their sentence pronounced in secret—and the execution of their sentence generally performed in secret. None dare withstand its behests, and none to disobey its summons. He who did so was declared to be "out of the law, and exposed to every lawless attack; his wife a widow—his children orphans—his property consigned to his heirs—his body and his flesh to the beasts of the woods, the birds of the air, and the fishes of the waters; peace and safe conduct everywhere were forbidden;" and, to use the words of one of their solemn decrees of death to its victim, it said, "we denounce you in the four corners of the world, in the name of the devil." Such were the terms of the dreadful doom of a "frey-stahl" and all shuddered when [illegible] lest they should hear such pronounced against themselves.

A TENDER HUSBAND.

All who know young Sniffkins know that he married old Miss Betty Bluchet for her money—that he cannot touch it till she dies, and that he treats her very badly on account of what he calls her "unjustifiable jealousy." The other day Mrs. Sniffkins, finding herself unwell, sent for a doctor; and, in the presence of Sniffkins and the medical man, declared her belief that she was "no longer," and that he (Sniffkins) "done it!" "I didn't do it!" shouted Sniffkins; "it's all gammon, she isn't poisoned. Prove it, doctor—open her upon the spot—I'm willing."

Although great brewers of whom history takes notice, from Odin and Camalader, down to Tarrie and Sir Felix Booth, are prone to hospitality [illegible]

A foolish fellow, when addressed by a man of rank, [illegible] "Thank God an't your lordship." "How many children have you, honest man?" "Nine, by the grandeur to him." "For shame, fool, and your lordship!"

Mary Queen of Scots, writing to Lord Bothwell, on the murder of the [illegible] the following words: "Spare not to kill the king I hold good," [illegible] may be read two ways; either "Spare not to kill the king I hold good," implying her wish that he should die; or, "Spare; not to kill the king I hold good." [illegible]

An undertaker is an ill-willer to the human race. He is by profession an enemy to his species, and can no more look kindly at his fellows than the sheriff's officer; for why, his profit depends upon the number of the dead of the community. He is the death-look on a falling man so doth he, and with the same hope, namely, to take the body. To be friends with an undertaker is as impossible as to be the enemy of a reconcilable. He is by trade a hypocrite, and deals of necessity in mental reservations and equivokes. Thus he drinks to your good health, but hopes secretly it will not endure. He is glad to see you so hearty as to be unpleasant, and rejoices to see you so cut-and-withered look. He bids you beware of your cold gout, and recommends a quack doctor. He laments the malignant fever so prevalent, and wishes you may get it. He compliments your complexion when it is sallow or yellow; admires your upright carriage, and hopes it will break down; wishes you good day, but means everlasting night; and commends his respects to your father and mother, but hopes you do not honour them. In short, his good wishes are treacherous, his inquiries are suspicious, and his civilities are dangerous, as when he proffereth the use of his coach, or to see you home. [illegible] To conclude, he is a personage of ill presage to the house of life: a raven on the chimney pot—a deathwatch in the wainscot—a winding-sheet in the candle. To meet with him is ominous. His looks are sinister, his dress is loglorious, his speech is prophetic, and his touch is mortal. Nevertheless he hath one merit, and in this our world, and in these our times, it is a main one—namely, that whatever he undertakes he performs.—T. Hood in the New Monthly.

PAUPERISM IN EUROPE.

Among the 178,000,000 individuals who inhabit Europe there are said to be 17,500,000 beggars, or persons who subsist at the expense of the community without contributing to its resources. In Denmark the proportion is 5 per cent.; in England, 10 per cent.; in Holland, 14 per cent.

The whole world is put in motion either by the thirst after fame—the sayings of ambition—the desire for riches—or the dread of poverty.

GOING DOWN OF THE BRIGAND STEAMER, OFF THE SCILLY ISLANDS.

LOSS OF THE IRON STEAMER BRIGAND.

The above sketch represents the loss of the Iron steamer Brigand, on Wednesday, the 12th inst., off the Scilly Islands. We cannot better convey an idea of this lamentable catastrophe than by giving the subjoined narrative, written by an eye witness, of the awful event:—"We left Liverpool at two, P.M., on Monday last, and proceeded on our voyage, without any thing particular happening until a quarter before five, a.m., on Wednesday, going from 11 to 12 knots an hour, with a strong current, light wind from the north-east, the morning being hazy, when she suddenly ran foul of the breakers, and struck twice; the first time right abreast of the foremast in the bluff of the bow, and the next blow was of such great force that it carried off her paddle-wheel, and drove it right into the engine-room. We saw the St. Agnes light, but in consequence of the haziness of the weather we considered it was at least 15 miles off. Soon afterwards we saw the breakers, but too late to avoid them. We put the helm hard aport, however, to endeavour to do so, and immediately received the shocks on our broadside. Where she struck was in lat. 49. 56. N., long. 6. 16. W., on the Crim Rock, near the Bishop's Rock, about three miles and a half from the spot where the Thames was lost, and 67 hands, in January, 1841. Both compartments of the vessel were stove in, and she began to fill rapidly. The captain and crew immediately exerted themselves to the utmost to save the vessel. The carpenter placed a board against the side, and placed stays against the cylinder, and stopped up the crevices with "waste" and grease; but these efforts were ineffectual, as were likewise the endeavours to lighten her by throwing the fuel overboard, which we continued to do till the hold filled with water. The engines had become completely useless, and the fires were out, but the crew continued to exert themselves for nearly two hours, when the captain ordered all hands on the quarter-deck, and ordered out the jolly-boats. At this time she had drifted about seven miles from the breaker, and after waiting a quarter of an hour we got into them, the captain and mate still remaining on the quarter-deck; the boats stood by the vessel another quarter of an hour, and then, as she was sinking fast, the captain and mate got into one of them and we shoved off. In about half an hour after we saw her go down by the head, in about 45 fathoms of water. We rowed for the Rock, and got on it, to see how the land lay; the other boat came after us, and we joined in a small bay leading to St. Agnes light, where two boats from the shore came out to us, having seen our lights, and took us in tow for the harbour, St. Mary's, which we reached about three o'clock. The same night we went in the Antelope pilot-boat to Penzance, and from thence to St. Ives, where we got a passage to Bristol in the Herald."

The Brigand has only been built about two years since, by Messrs. Grantham, Page, and Co., of Liverpool, for Mr. Redmond, of Wexford, at a cost of £32,000, and intended to trade from Liverpool to Bristol, calling at Wexford, which she continued to do till a short time since, when she was superseded by the Troubadour, another iron steamer, of 250 horse-power, and she was now on her voyage from Liverpool to London, having merely 200 tons of fuel to carry her to St. Petersburg. She was an elegantly-built vessel, and fitted up in the most elegant style. She was 600 tons burden, and 200 horse power, and built with bulk-heads, having four compartments, and had she not been struck a complete broadside, so as to stave in both compartments, she would have been saved. We understand she was not insured.

BURNING OF ALBION HOUSE, SHELTON—THE RESIDENCE OF WILLIAM PARKER, ESQ.

Instead of wishing to perpetuate the recollection of the frightful excesses which disgraced the manufacturing districts during the recent disturbances in that quarter of the kingdom, we should rather feel disposed, with the removal of their causes, to consign them to oblivion, in the hope that the lenity which has been shown to the guilty but misguided rabble might not be altogether without its effect in restoring them to a state of sanity and compunction. There is something, however, so painfully humiliating in the degraded condition to which the working classes allowed themselves to be reduced by the wily but dastard influence of a band of wicked and mercenary traitors, that we have felt it a duty which we owe the country to convey to posterity in the most imperishable way we can, a record and delineation of some of the most striking events of these troublous times, convinced that it will act as a beacon to the labouring population in future ages to resist, the infamous blandishments of hollow patriots and trading and deceitful politicians. The subject of our present sketch is the destruction of Albion House, Shelton, the residence of William Parker, Esq., an excellent and upright magistrate of Staffordshire. From the history given of this lawless and sanguinary outbreak by the local papers we give the following extract:—

"An intimation had been given to Mr Parker of the design of the populace, and he left his house in the care of his son and a servant, having barely time to secure a few valuables. About half past eleven the first body of incendiaries made their appearance, approaching by way of Pall mall, deliberately, as if engaged in perfectly lawful business. Once or twice they stopped, and conversations took place, as if they hesitated to perpetrate the deed, which was overruled by some of the more daring spirits. As they approached the front of the house, signals were given, and small bodies of men advanced with equal deliberation from several directions, till the premises were nearly surrounded. Some few of these fellows were persons who, from their general carriage, self-command, and abstinence from indulgence in the drink which was freely poured out soon after, were evidently a superior to the wretches whom they made their instruments. Some were disguised by dress, some had masks, some painted faces, and the conduct of all was either that of calculating villains, or ferocious savages. Here we may appropriately mention that between nine and ten, while Mr. Forrister's premises were burning, a man in women's clothes—a black gown and bonnet—was observed near to the King's Head, led by a tall man, looking like a groom: they went along Bethesda-street. The party who afterwards came from nearly the same direction to commence the attack in front of the house, consisting of about a score, had amongst them three women, or men personating women. Silence was imperatively ordered by one of them, on a noise occurring in the party. They afterwards raised a shout, and whistled, which being answered, a rocket was discharged, and soon brought the whole mob. In a moment the front gates were forced, and an entrance was effected through the back door at the same time. The front door was entered by bursting in the upper half, which consisted of glass; the back door was forced by violent blows from some heavy instrument. Lights were seen in the outhouses before the dwelling was entered, but, in a moment after possession was gained, lights appeared in all the upper rooms. After the house was once fired, most of the gang walked off, leaving five or six only to complete the work. There was comparatively little pillage of the premises, but the wine and ale were brought out, and most of it poured down the streets, though some was distributed amongst the crowd, many of whom evidently rejoiced in the fearful spectacle, while most looked on in silence. As the roof and floors fell in—as the flames shot up, and the sparks showered around—the joy of many who did not assist in the outrage seemed almost boundless. Shouts of exultation and fearful yells rent the air; while the flames, pouring from the windows and doorways of the edifice, shed a horrible glare on all surrounding objects, lighting up countenances disfigured by every evil passion. The sight was awful in the extreme. Not a hand was raised in opposition. The town fire engines even were not fetched, nor was any effort made at any moment to save the property, or drive back the ruffians by whom it was destroyed. We are told that, when the news reached Etruria, Mr. Wedgwood's engine was despatched, but it was stopped by a band of men at the toll-gate, and sent back. Everything, indeed, bespoke organisation among the rioters. When the attack commenced, a body of colliers, apparently strangers, mistook the house, and commenced breaking the windows of Edward Ridgway, Esq., Bank House, near by opposite, but they were called off, and their fury directed to the intended object. The whole of the interior of Mr Parker's house was destroyed, with the furniture, valuable paintings, books, &c., to a,worth several thousand pounds. So complete was the havoc, that scarcely a piece of timber was left unconsumed throughout the building. Amongst the plunderers the women were conspicuous."

The history of this event would be incomplete without the following just and appropriate appendix:—

STAFFORD COMMISSION.

(Before Chief Justice Tindal.)

George Wilcox was put to the bar, and indicted for having, together with others, on the 15th of August last, demolished the house of William Parker, at the parish of Stoke-upon-Trent. A witness named Jefferies, a hairdresser at Shelton, stated that, hearing of an attack on Mr. Parker's house, he went there with a friend, and, approaching the house, saw one of the upstairs rooms on fire. There were hundreds of persons looking on, and about 20 persons inside, who were afterwards joined by 50 or 60 others. The prisoner was seen in one of the rooms to take off the bed-furniture, then go to a wardrobe, open it, and strew its contents on the floor; and, having piled the things into a heap, he then went into the next room and did the same, piling up the furniture also. He was then seen to go into the first room and set fire to the heap with a piece of ignited rope, which some of his confederates held ready for the occasion. The prisoner had been in the habit of coming to the house of the witness to be shaved, and he went there on the following morning to have his hair cut. The witness asked him if he was not sorry for what he had done last night, and the ruffian replied, "No, I am not; all I am sorry for is that we could not find the old parson Aitkens, as we intended to have put him in his little chair and frizzled him. We looked in every room of the house, but could not find him, and then looked for the steward, to serve him in the same way." (Mr. Aitkens, it appeared, who is 70 years of age, is in the habit of going about in a Bath chair, and, from what the prisoner said, he seems to have been implicated in the attack upon Mr. Aitkens's house as well as Mr. Parker's.) The prisoner also told the witness that when he was at Parker's he had "picked up a slap-up gold repeater."—The evidence as to the conversation was corroborated by the testimony of another witness, the apprentice of Jefferies. The prisoner called a witness to character.—Lord Chief Justice Tindal summed up, and the jury immediately returned a verdict of Guilty. He was sentenced to transportation for 21 years.

Adam Wood was next placed at the bar on a similar indictment. The prisoner, who is only 18 years old, was seen by two boys, one of whom had known him two years, and the other six or seven, coming out of Mr. Parker's house after it had been set on fire, and he threw two chairs through a window near the door on the fire. Two witnesses were called, who gave him the character of being of a peaceable disposition. He was found Guilty, and the Lord Chief Justice said that he would so far tender his youth as not to send him out of the country for so long a period as he might have done, but leave it the prisoner must. His lordship then sentenced him to 10 years' transportation. The prisoner had been previously convicted of the attack on the house of Mr. Aitkens.

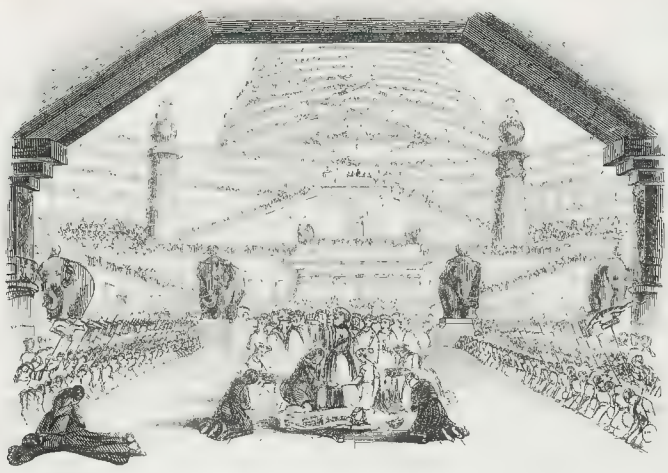
Elijah Simpson was indicted for setting fire to the house Mr. Parker. Witnesses clearly proved the offence against the prisoner. The prisoner said he never knew the house of Mr. Parker, and was consequently never in it at all. Verdict, Guilty.—The Judge said the prisoner had been already found guilty of assisting in the destruction of Dr. Vale's house, but he was unwilling to pass sentence upon him until he could ascertain the full extent of his participation in the outrages which were then being inquired into. Beyond all doubt he was a guilty person; and he should order him to be transported for twenty-one years.

Thomas Turner was charged with destroying Mr. Parker's house. The witnesses in this case were the same as in the last, and equally conclusive. The jury returned a verdict of Guilty. The prisoner loudly craved for mercy, saying "My Lord, I have a wife and small family." The learned Judge pitied his situation, but he could not, in discharging his duty, sentence him to less than twenty-one years' transportation.

John Sutton was indicted for a similar offence and found guilty. Sentence, twelve months' imprisonment.

Edward Ellis, charged in the same indictment, was proved to have been actively engaged at the demolition. An alibi was set up. The jury found the prisoner guilty. The learned Judge said, he considered the attempt to set up an alibi under such circumstances an aggravation of the offence. He should sentence him to ten years' transportation.

MERCHANT MEN-OF-WAR.—The Queen, East Indiaman, 1360 tons, built in Blackwall-yard, and launched on the 21st July, was fitted out for Calcutta in the East India Dock, which she left on Friday, the 9th of September, commanded by Donald M'Leod, Esq. This beautiful vessel is built on the principle of a frigate and pierced for 50 guns; and measures 208 feet from the fore part of the stem to the after part of the taffrail, and 40 feet in extreme breadth. She has been fitted with every accommodation, and carries out a great many passengers. In her passage through the Downs she was struck by a sudden squall, which carried away her fore and main topmast and flying jib-boom, and was obliged to put into Deal to refit, and finally sailed from Portsmouth on Sunday, the 18th of September. She is a sister ship to the Prince of Wales, which was launched from the same yard a fortnight previous, and is, in every respect, as near as possible of the same dimensions. It will be seen from the foregoing description that this vessel is built to suit either the public or private services, and it is expected by the owners, should the Chinese war continue, she may be "taken up" and commissioned by the Government; a tolerably significant hint of the state of the war question in that country.



THE CLOSING SCENE IN THE GRAND OPERA OF "SEMIRAMIDE," AT COVENT GARDEN THEATRE.

LAST ACT OF SEMIRAMIDE.

Those who have witnessed the splendid scene as well as artistic denouement to the opera of Semiramide, as produced at Covent Garden Theatre, will, we trust, have their memories lively refreshed by the above graphic and powerful sketch. In the absence of moving multitudes, graceful but excited individual forms, and the soul that animates the ensemble,—Rossini's immortal music, the artist, it may be said, has given a catotype representation of a still but faithful depiction of one of the most beautiful scenes that ever were produced upon any stage. The magnificence of the architecture (and oh, what superior grandeur there is yet, even in the ruins of the mighty structures of antiquity!) the gorgeous dresses, most faithfully adhered to with antiquarian skill—the immense masses of prostrate slaves and soldiers in the foreground surrounding the principal picture-group—the middle distance, and "though last, not least," the mystic tower in perspective, whose head seems to be as hidden in the skies, as its story is wrapt in the gloom of antiquity—all combine to form the beau ideal of scenic perfection.

Though the music of the finale to this opera might very independently stand by itself, like still it is pretty to see the sister arts go hand-in-hand together, "giving and partaking," as the old glee says, and kindling a harmless jealousy between the eye and ear.

"Beauty unadorn'd,"

The whole of the music of Semiramide is remarkable for a new species of originality—namely, that of being, for the greater part, composed of common-places turned into elegancies hackneyed phrases removed from familiarity by the addition of new idioms, and a daring violation of the proprieties—the relationship that ought to exist between sense and sound; yet, with all these faults, and faults (however ingenious) they certainly are, there is something irresistibly captivating in the strains of the gran maestro, indebted as he may have been for his first thoughts to contemporaries or precursors. Nihil tetigit quod non ornavit; and who is there that would not prefer the finished statuary of a sculptor to the first rude chiselling of his apprentice or assistant?

POPULAR PORTRAITS.—No. XVIII.

RICHARD LALOR SHEIL, M.P.

Here is little Lalor Sheil, member for Dungannon, ex commissioner of Greenwich Hospital, ex-promoter of Catholic emancipation, ex-counsellor for the Beresfords in Ireland, ex-vice president of the board of trade; find still a scion of her Majesty's privy council, although finding the dignity a sinecure, under the administration of Peel. Sheil is one of the "memorable men" of his day—sharp, clever, bustling, ambitious, eloquent, sagacious, and full as much alive to his own interests as to those of country or kindred, family or friend. Sheil is a man of whom the public have blended less personal admiration with their political than of almost any other of the public characters within their ken. We never yet heard of any body either loving or hating him; but able men have paid tributes to his talent—have been caught by his shrewdness, startled by his enthusiasm, or dazzled by his brilliancy—and in conning the newspapers, during a session of Parliament, have "turned their ears to his voice in the debate." Beyond this no great amount of either public or private respect has ever been paid to him; and a lurking suspicion seems to have found its way into the general apprehension that he is not a pure patriot, nor altogether without a touch of the mercenary and the mean. His consistency was more proved in the struggle for emancipation, when he was comparatively poor, than at any period since he achieved competency and wealth. He is said to have played his literary fried Banim a shabby trick, in regard to his tragedy of Damon and Pythias, brought out under Sheil's auspices in Dublin with so much success. He did not come with clean hands out of the celebrated "who is the traitor" question with Lord Althorp. O'Connell had some trouble in vindicating him for his defence of the Tory Beresfords in Waterford; and there is no denying that he has displayed to his warmer and more generous countrymen a decided predilection for place. On the occasion of the Waterford election, when he took the Beresford retainer, he was reminded, by a bootmaker of the name of Maher, of a former stirring oration of his, in which he wound up the feelings of his auditory with a beautiful description of that picturesque spot of loveliness in the scenery of Ireland which elicited from Cromwell the ejaculation to his army of "Oh! men of England, this is a country worth fighting for." "Arrah! ye little scoundrel," said the bootmaker, "thin, if it was worth fighting for, why did ye desert it? I wish I had the making of a pair o' boots for ye; by Jakers, I'd put pegs in the heels o' them that 'ud make ye tramp light." The feeling for O'Connell at the worst ebb of his popularity was never akin to this; but the truth is that Sheil has not won the affections of his party, although he has grasped with a vain success and a successful vanity at a large share of its applause.

It is impossible, however, not to arrive at a conclusion that there is something contemptible about this Liliputian of Hibernian oratory. His studious getting up and rehearsal of speeches (he was foiled by accident of one speech in the House which he had been observed practising, and the non-delivery of which not a little amused the detecters of its preparation); his sensitiveness over the publications of the press and readiness to write down his declamation for certain of the newspapers; his avidity in pursuing the substantial things of the world, and making his patriotism subservient to them beyond a doubt; the contrast of his steady, sure, "tak' tent" personal conduct with the florid exuberance of his political professions; his avoiding the Repeal question and his not avoiding place—all indicate interestedness and insincerity, and leave him in the shade of public opinion upon all occasions but those where his talent admits no shadow, and his natural genius hides his defects in the blaze and effulgence of immediate and transcendant light.

But, having indicated what we believe to be the general impression of Lalor Sheil as a man and a patriot, we now turn to the "bright side" of him as exhibited by his friend, countryman, and brother of the bar, who has, depicted him in glowing colours, that have caught a tinge of his own eloquence, but which our readers will take cum grano salis, as we have given it above, and rather regard it as being couleur de rose, than in strict accordance with justice in portraiture.

Speaking of one of the earlier meetings of the Catholic Association, and immediately after an oration of O'Connell's, the writer says:—

When Mr. O'Connell had ended there rose loud calls for Mr. Sheil. A little man started up to the right of the chair, with a low, prominent brow, hair rather inelegantly arranged, small but sharp features, the mouth strongly expressive of passion, and an eye meteoric and instinct with life. There is in every human countenance a history or prophecy which the thinking observer may read; the eye, particularly, is the symbol of the spirit; and none could have looked a moment on the deep and troubled lustre of his, burning with without a conviction that there was a power within which kindled and animated it for high and daring purposes. * * * He commenced in tones intended to be slow, but they resembled more the caravanses of a reined-in blood-horse than the gentle hesitation which the most eloquent must occasionally adopt, until the mind, heated in its progress, stretches forward on the course—his tongue seemed impatient of the imposed restraint, and glowing for a full sweep round the hippodrome: and indeed he did not remain long under the yoke of the irritating repression, for before half-a-dozen periods were exhausted he was off at the full bent of his speed. His eye kindled, dilated, burned; his gesture, before adapted to the elegant and dignified gracefulness of the stage, increased in irregular vehemence; his words went forth in a tornado; and, when the action was suited to the word, the reader may form an estimate of the unsteady energy of the former—his whole frame shook with terrible convulsions. I read of the inspired priestesses of antiquity. Mr. Sheil alone gave me a notion of the impressive reality. No orator, living or dead, ever had a more omnipotent command over an audience. * * From the moment Sheil rose until he resumed his seat the audience appeared to be touched with frenzy, reason or judgment was nowhere, no man had the power of thought, all were hurried away in the rapid torrent of his oratory; and the universal inflammation he excited attested the maddening influence of an eloquence rarely surpassed in the intensity of its effects. I was of course one of the infected Thracians, and the alternating motions which vibrated through me left impressions on my mind which the utmost stretch of imagination could scarcely have reached: his harsh but not unmusical tones penetrated like lightning; and his strong passion, robed in a beautiful phraseology, pleased while it absorbed me. Sometimes his fiery energy slackened, and then he indulged in the diamond corruscations of a playful and pungent wit, that covered the enemies of liberty with cutting scorn.

That fierce vivacity which fires the orb
Of genius fancy-crazed,

Mr. Sheil was born in Waterford. His father at one time possessed considerable property; but his circumstances became subsequently embarrassed from a failure in some commercial speculations. Mr. Sheil was originally intended for the church, and, to promote that object, was placed at early age under the superintendence of M. le Prince de Broglio, conductor of a Jesuit establishment at Kensington. From thence he went to Stoneyhurst, at that time an institution of great celebrity, where the Catholic nobles of England, and the most aristocratic of that persuasion in Ireland, completed their course of philosophy and philology. Even then Mr. Sheil displayed emanations of that splendour and originality which his more mature years exhibited; his reputation had no slow dawning—celebrity gathered round him from the beginning—his boyhood was a brilliant anticipation of his distinguished career. He accordingly devoted himself with a laudable voracity to the accumulation of the material which afterwards nurtured the prodigal blaze of his genius. His great rival in composition at Stoneyhurst was Mr. Beaumont, whose style was more cold and correct than strong and impassioned, and consequently not pleasing to the balanced regularity of jesuitical judgment. On one occasion, when the prize had been awarded to his adversary, he seized his own composition, tore it in pieces, and gave vent to his anguish in a flood of indignant tears. Age never altered that feeling. The fountain of tears is dried; but the same irritable impatience of opposition, the same headlong precipitancy, the same sallies of acid indignation, stamp and individualize his character.

Mr. Sheil entered Trinity as a fellow-commoner, and, of course, took an active part in the debates of the Historical Society, which, after a glorious existence of half a century, was then in the last stage of exhaustion—Plunket had given way to Phillips, Burke to North, and Curran to Sheil. He was often a successful competitor for the annual compositions.

He became a student of Lincoln's-inn in 1811; and, while preparing for the bar, he composed his first tragedy, Adelaide, or the Emigrants, which was produced at Covent Garden with great success. Mr. North said that "Mr. Sheil erred in the choice of a profession; for, had he applied himself to the study of the drama, he would have ranked with the great tragic writers of England." His first great distinction was his celebrated reply to Dr. Dromgoole on the Veto question, when, in opposition to the Pope's wishes, conveyed through Cardinal Quarantotti, the Irish clergy daringly declared their independence of the Conclave. Mr. Sheil gave his most ardent aid to the Vetoists, and was its most brilliant supporter.

The doctor, having reprobated, in a strongly-worded resolution, any "innovation or alteration to be made by authority of Parliament," was opposed by Mr. Sheil, in a speech which, even in those days of eloquence—when Grattan, Curran, Plunket, Burke, Burroughs occasionally revived the recollection of their ancient glory—called forth the following eulogy from the Dublin Evening Post of that day: "We shall not pronounce upon certainly one of the most brilliant harangues ever delivered in a public assembly: it is a proud honour to his country, although we cannot help thinking it directed against his country's dearest interests."

This speech led to an angry recrimination of speeches and letters between him and Mr. O'Connell, and Mr. Sheil retired from the Catholic Board. He then produced in rapid succession Bellamira, The Apostate, and Evadne. In 1814 he was called to the bar.

In 1823 O'Connell and Sheil met by accident (for ten years a coldness had existed between them) at the house of a mutual friend in the County Wicklow, and became reconciled; from which place they immediately issued an address full of fire and spirit, and directed it to the most influential of the Catholic body, which led to the formation of the Catholic Association.

From the commencement of the association till its close, his appearance was always hailed with a piercing cry—half exultation, half enthusiasm. His biting and bitter satire; his fascinating and dazzling poetry, conveyed in a luminous pomp and prodigality of words, his elegant balance of sentences of an artificial construction, sufficient not only to satisfy but attach the ear; his ever-springing profusion of imagery and fancy like the energy of vegetation; the exaggeration of his sentiments, and fervid inflation of his style; his earnest labour under the paroxysms of patriotic inspiration, until he seemed to vibrate on the very verge of delirium, all produced such an effect on the sensitive minds of an Irish audience, that they seemed more like a crowd of maniacs than men gifted with reason. O'Connell was the incarnation of Irish wrong—Sheil of Irish feeling. When he shook his torch of lava the angry elements of combustion were plentifully scattered underneath. He knew the sensitive material he had to operate on—how and when to fire the train; and accordingly a fierce outburst of indignant feeling never failed to respond to his cutting sarcasm and scorching brilliancy. In the association he was the author of the plan for taking the census by means of the Catholic clergy, and for holding simultaneous meetings. On the 21st January, 1828 (Sunday), the whole population arose for the first time as at the call of an enchanter. Meetings were held in 1500 chapels, and 2,000,000 men assembled at the same hour before the altars of their worship, and bound themselves never to relax until all stood citizens on the same elevation of liberty. In this blow the association conquered. Then was a meeting of the association (the last day of the association). It was the last. There was a vacant space at the right of the chair where the Jupiter Tonans of the association was wont to issue his thunder and lightning. Mr Shiel was there all smiles, and a flame of pride and exultation darted from his quick intellectual eye. A debate commenced—a stormy one—on the propriety of continuing or dissolving the body. Opinion was divided until he arose, and, in one of the most luminous and argumentative displays ever heard within the walls where there had been so much of both, urged its final termination. He is completely successful. The association was dissolved sine die * * *. When the chair was vacated, and the assembly was about to disperse, all turned, as if instinctively, to bestow a last look on that famous ground, and regret passed over many a brow as they gazed on that memorable field of so many fervid struggles for liberty, unparalleled, perhaps, in the moral vindication of that noblest heirloom of man. They passed out lingeringly, one by one, when the sexton locked the door, and they remembered their old feasts of enthusiasm and eloquence, all were touched with a shade of melancholy. When Shell reached the outer door, a few thousands of the old life-guards of the association leaders were in attendance, and accompanied him to Leinster-street with shouts of acclamation, as the noble Roman, after leaving his dictatorship in the street, was accompanied home with the applauses of every lover of liberty in Rome. He next appeared as the agent of the Beresfords at Waterford. He refused to join the Repealers in 1832. He first sat for Milbourne Port in the Imperial Parliament.

SPORTING INTELLIGENCE.

ROWING MATCH FOR ONE HUNDRED SOVEREIGNS.

The long-pending match between Coombs, of Vauxhall, and Newell, of Battle-bridge-stairs, came off on Saturday morning. These men have for weeks ago contested for the same sum, when, owing to the rough state of the weather, an accident occurred to Newell off Wandsworth, his boat getting swamped, and himself narrowly escaping by jumping into his cutter, where he was a hundred yards ahead of Coombs, who was awarded the money. A second contest was made to row for fifty a-side, and that it should be from Westminster-bridge to Putney-bridge, with the tide, and start from either place at the option of Coomb

On Saturday morning, at ten o'clock, it was agreed that the start should be Westminster-bridge. At half past ten they took their stations. Bets were in favour of Newell; and the tossing for stations gave him the favour. Newell took the outside, and his opponent the Middlesex shore. They went off in good style, and continued nearly equal up to Millbank, when it became evident that Coombs was gaining slightly ahead of his adversary, who was, it appeared, loosing his confidence, as he appeared to row rather wildly. Coombs, however, still kept to his work, and succeeded in going through Vauxhall-bridge about a boat's length ahead, and continued to gain gradually on his adversary, and, arriving at Battersea-bridge Coombs was at least eight boats' length in front of Newell, and ultimately came in first at Putney, being the winning man by some minutes. Newell, upon his coming in, seemed very distressed, and to suffer much in his right arm. The match, considering the time of year, was well attended.

RACING IN FRANCE.—Notwithstanding the death of the Duke of Orleans, it seems to be determined that every thing shall be done to keep up with spirit the amusement of horse-racing in France, and, in consequence, to encourage the breed of horses. The King has given his patronage to racing; the government supports it by liberal donations; the aristocracy, in imitation of the King, favour it with their patronage, and the mass of the people follow the general example. At Chantilly the races went off with spirit, but the attendance of fashionables was not large, owing, however, to the very unfavourable state of the weather. On Sunday last the Paris races took place on the Champ de Mars, and, the day being beautiful fine, there was a good attendance of all classes of people from the aristocracy down to the small tradesman. In the midst of the course were the carriages of the ex-Classes of ton, and many dashing equestrians on noble steeds; and around were the people in circles of two and three deep, kept back by a goodly array of soldiers, armed with sword and bayonet. The racing was exceedingly good, and excited the very highest interest, and altogether the affair went off to the great admiration of the gay and unwonted Parisians. One of the races was for £120, and was won by M. Lupin's Augora, ridden by Hardy, an English jockey; and another race for £120 was won by Muse, to be ongiug to the Baron De Rothschild. At the Chantilly races one of the Baron De Rothschild's own horses won the splendid silver plate which the Baron De Rothschild presented—a piece of luck which the donors of racing cups rarely meet with, especially as in addition to the plate, the Baron came off the winner of the amount of the entries.

The Racing Calendar contains the following official announcement:—"At a general meeting of the Jockey Club, held at Newmarket on Wednesday, the 12th of October, 1832, it was unanimously resolved—'That the Jockey Club, and stewards thereof, will henceforth take no cognizance of any disputes or claims in respect to bets. That they would recommend all persons having disputes thereupon to decide the same by referees, one to be chosen by each of the parties, and the two to select a third.'"

ASSIZE INTELLIGENCE.

MIDDLESEX SESSIONS.—WEDNESDAY.

(Before Mr. Serjeant Adams, Chairman, and a Bench of Magistrates.)

The only case of importance tried before this court was that of Bernard Gorman, who was convicted of barbarous cruelty to his own daughter (a child nine years of age), and sentenced to six weeks' imprisonment and hard labour in the House of Correction. The mother of the child was also put on her trial for the same offence; but, owing to some discrepancy in the indictment, the prosecution failed

POLICE.

MANSION-HOUSE.—A Jew named Lewis Lyons, who keeps a clothes-shop at 107, Houndsditch, was charged before the Lord Mayor with having robbed a boy named Alfred Billing of two yards and a half of cloth, value £2 12s. 6d. Alfred Billing sworn, said, on Friday, the 30th of September, as he was going along Houndsditch with a piece of cloth which his father had given to him, Mr. Lazarus, who was touting at his door, asked him what he had got under his arm? He replied that he had a piece of cloth, and Mr. Lazarus, without any more ceremony, snatched the cloth from him and ran up stairs, and witness followed him and demanded it. Mr. Lazarus then told his shopman to bring up a pair of trousers and a pretty waistcoat, but witness said that he would not have any thing of the kind, and that what he wanted was his piece of cloth. Mr. Lazarus said to him, "Oh, you have stolen the cloth, and I shall charge you with the police." Witness was alarmed at such an intimation, and again asked for his property; but Mr. Lazarus refused to give it up, and said, "If you do not be off immediately I shall give you in charge of the police, for you have stolen the cloth." Witness then took the trousers and waistcoat and went away, and told his father what had occurred. Lazarus declared upon his honour that he never knew any thing of what had just been stated. He had never seen the boy or the piece of cloth describe; neither had he ever heard one word uttered about the transaction.—The Lord Mayor: What! do you deny that you ever had any transaction of the kind with this boy. Lazarus: I wish to know whether the boy means to say I am the person who had the dealing with him?—Alfred Billing: Certainly you are. You know it perfectly well. You snatched the cloth from under my arm, and you threatened to charge me with a robbery if I did not go.—Lazarus: I do assure you, my Lord, that I know nothing at all about the business. I have been a respectable tradesman for twenty years in the neighbourhood, and it is dreadful to have a thing of this kind said against a person by a boy that nobody knows any thing about.—The Lord Mayor: Oh, Mr. Lazarus, I have examined this boy, and I have no reason whatever to doubt his statement. I must commit you for trial.—Lazarus: I hope you won't do that, my Lord.—The Lord Mayor: Indeed I will not, Mr. Lazarus. I think it a very gross case of felony.—Lazarus: Oh, dear me, it is quite a mistake. I know nothing about it; nothing at all. Really, my Lord, this is very hard. If a man of character is to be subject to the persecution of every person that chooses to come forward in this way, we are all liable to be ruined.—The Lord Mayor: Now, really, Mr. Robbery, this is ridiculous. Alfred Billing said it was quite impossible that he could have mistaken any other person for Mr. Lazarus. Mr. Lazarus knew that himself well.—Mr. Lazarus: Not at all; I don't know you.—The Lord Mayor: Well, Mr. Lazarus, you must find out to answer this elsewhere.—Mr. Lazarus: I can get forward my shopman, my Lord, to contradict this boy.—The Lord Mayor: No doubt you can bring forward the person who brought up the trousers and the pretty waistcoat to supply the place of the cloth.—The prisoner then made some strong efforts to get out of the difficulty by showing a readiness to compromise the matter, but the Lord Mayor declared the case was too glaring, and directed that the prisoner should be bound over to prosecute.

On Thursday Joseph Walton, driver of the Cambridge [illegible] was brought up before Mr. Alderman Gibbs, who sat for the Lord Mayor, charged with robbing a fellow-passenger, named Frederick Kitchen, about six years of age, and [illegible] him on the spot. The prisoner said it was entirely accidental, and he was very sorry for what had happened. He had several witnesses to prove it. Alderman Gibbs remanded him for the inquest. Bail was offered, but refused.

A man named John Green was charged with having received a silver watch from two boys, knowing that it had been stolen. It appeared that [illegible] had given the watch to the prisoner to pawn, and had he read them over this [illegible] he would not have been apprehended in consequence, but he was detected while [illegible] the boys. The prisoner said he merely gave them a little [illegible] and [illegible] he was ignorant of the offence. Committed for trial.

CLERKENWELL.—William Edwards, a clumsy, vulgar-looking fellow, who was described as a medical student, and who seemed much amused whilst listening to the details of his own audacious, was charged on suspicion of having committed several robberies in dwelling-houses during a pretty extensive course of medical practice. The case was of a remarkable one. [illegible] number of medical practitioners, resident in the district of [illegible] attended to hear the case and identify the prisoner. From the [illegible] a servant of Mr. Burrowes, corroborated by that gentleman's [illegible] appeared in the prisoner called at their house, No. 1, Parkstreet, Islington, on Thursday, the 6th inst, saying he wanted to see Mr. Burrowes, as something was the matter with his thumb. He was left in the surgery about a minute and a half, when he went saying that he would return in the evening, and he did not. When Mr. Burrowes returned home he missed a case of medical instruments that he had left in the surgery in the morning. No stranger had been in the house in the interval except the prisoner. Several other cases of a similar nature were established in evidence, and, from the testimony of one medical gentleman, it would seem that the prisoner had a power of acting upon the joint of the thumb so as to give it the appearance of dislocation. Some of the parties were bound over to prosecute, but the prisoner was remanded for further evidence. Prisoner I wish to have my money restored to me that I may fee counsel.—Mr. Combe: When you restore all the articles to the owners the money will be returned.—The prisoner was then removed.

On Tuesday Joseph George Isop, police-constable [illegible] having neglected his duty, was brought up [illegible] conveyed to the station-house. The case was [illegible] and Mr. Greenwood, superintendent of the prisoner's division, [illegible] on the part of the commissioners. The prosecutor having given his evidence, which went to show that the prisoner was intoxicated at the time of the affray, the accused called as a witness on his behalf John Halford, the pot-boy of the Cock public-house, who said that the prisoner did not strike the prosecutor. The prisoner was then committed, and witnesses were examined so much forbearance, when the sergeant acted with such violence. A gentleman fetched half a pint of beer to the constable. Witness did not know that it was poisoned. He had never seen the prosecutor in a state of drunkenness. Mr. Combe said, there was a fine of £10 for so doing, and directed Superintendent Greenwood to lay an information against the house forthwith.—Halford, on being cross-examined, stated that he had been in the habit of admitting that the prisoner was drunk, and at another time insisting that he was quite sober. Mr. Combe said that the witness called for the [illegible] had rendered himself liable to a penalty of £5 for each offence, and, should he succeeded, the poor man would have been ruined for ever. Subordination must be enforced, and policemen must be taught their duty to their superiors. If a policeman in the road, and he was carried in a cart drunk, which in itself was a gross offence in one who had so responsible a duty to perform, but the offence was much aggravated by his subsequent conduct, and still more by the line of defence which he thought proper to adopt. He would, therefore, fine him £5, or one month's imprisonment. [illegible] was locked up in default of payment.

On Wednesday Thomas Read and Edward Waddilove, who had been twice remanded, were brought up for further examination, charged with having conspired to defraud, and with defrauding, several tradesmen of goods to various amounts. Samuel Woodhouse, who had been admitted as evidence, was also placed at the bar, charged with being implicated in the conspiracy. A number of additional cases were taken, and the witnesses bound over to prosecute. The prisoners were further remanded to Tuesday next, when several other charges, it is expected, will be brought forward.

BOW-STREET.—On Tuesday William Russell, a general-post letter-carrier, was placed at the bar, before Mr. Twyford, for final examination, charged with stealing a letter, containing a sovereign and a half sovereign, the property of the Postmaster-General.—Mr. Peacock attended on behalf of the prosecution.—It appeared that in consequence of a great number of money letters, addressed to persons residing in the district which the prisoner was employed, not having been delivered, a letter was made up at the Post-office, in which a sovereign and a half-sovereign (which had been previously marked) were placed, and handed over, with others, to the prisoner, for delivery. Finding that the letter in question had not in due course been delivered, the prisoner was taken into custody, when, upon being searched, the marked sovereign was found in his pocket.—The prisoner was fully committed.

Thomas Holloway, a letter-carrier, was next placed at the bar, charged with embezzling and secreting upwards of fifty letters, and also with embezzling the postage thereof.—The prisoner was committed to take his trial upon four charges of the first description.

LAMBETH-STREET.—On Tuesday Frances Rugg, Charles James Rugg, alias James Lesson, alias James Mollead, Henry Rugg, George Nathaniel Stephens, and Thomas Morris, were placed at the bar before Mr. Henry for further examination, on a charge of conspiring together, and by means of forgery and perjury, defrauding the Accountant-General of the Court of [illegible].

A clerk from the office of Mr. Maule, solicitor to the Treasury, and Mr. Wellington, the barrister, were present, on the part of the Crown, for the prosecution, and Mr. Hunt appeared on behalf of the prisoners.—Several witnesses having been examined in support of the charge, the prisoners were again remanded for a week.

On Wednesday Miss Martha Ann Layell, charged with being accessory, with her brother, in uttering a forged bill of exchange for £100, underwent a final examination. It was considered that there was sufficient ground for the case when should go to a jury, upon which the prisoner was committed for trial, but bail accepted.

Two cases were heard on Wednesday at the Thames Police-office, in which the free watermen and lightermen of the river prosecuted individuals for invading their privileges on the river. They were respectively fined.

MARYLEBONE.—On Wednesday James Redmond, residing at No. 18, Brown-street, Grosvenor-square, was charged with having intermarried with Lucy Withers, his former wife, Mary Redmond, being still in existence. Lucy Withers stated that about a year and a half ago, at which period she was a widow, the prisoner proposed marriage to her; and on the 31st of August last they were united at Christ Church, Marylebone. She had previously been informed that he had a wife living, but on her taxing him with it, he denied that such was the case. A certificate of his marriage with Mary Gay, in 1837, was here handed to the magistrate.—The prisoner, who said that he was willing to support the prosecutrix, and that she was aware, at the time she went to church with him, that he was a married man, was remanded till Wednesday next, in order to afford time for the production of further evidence as to the former marriage, and for proof of the existence of the first wife at the period of the second unlawful connection.

UNION-HALL.—POOR-LAW CHARITY.—On Tuesday 11 men, the chief part of whom were without shoes or stockings, were brought before Mr. Traill, charged, under the new Poor-law Act, with refusing to break stones and chop wood for four hours in return for a night's lodging and breakfast provided for each of them in Newington workhouse. Mr. Traill questioned the defendants individually. One said that he came up out of the country in quest of work; but, failing in his attempts to obtain any, was driven to the necessity of applying at the workhouse for shelter for the night, as he intended to make the best of his way back into the country again. Mr. Traill asked him why he refused to work for the four hours, as it was on those conditions he was provided with bed and breakfast the next morning?—Defendant: The bed I had was some dirty straw, and no covering, in a place where a number of us were stowed away together. I felt so ill in the morning, my limbs shook under me; and I found that, instead of being refreshed, I was as bad, or worse, than when I lay down, so that I could not work. As for the breakfast I got, it was a piece of dry bread and some thin gruel that ran through me very soon after I had eaten it, and that was no support for a man to commence work in [illegible] and after being three hours there, then to be turned out without [illegible] farthing to get it; and, being knocked up, I could not go on the road towards home, but was compelled to linger about town and apply again at the workhouse. Mr. Traill said that he should commit the defendants for four days each to the House of Correction, and, should they be rescued there, at the expiration of their imprisonment, to make the best of their way to their respective homes.

GREENWICH.—On Saturday, Henry Wheat, a man about 35 years of age, very respectably and superiorly dressed in his appearance, was placed at the bar before Mr. Jeremy, charged with having broken one of the public lamps in Greenwich. It appeared that the prisoner had given himself into custody for breaking a lamp in order to get sent to prison.—Mr. Jeremy: What have you to say to the charge? Prisoner: Why, your worship, I was destitute and starving, and I preferred going to prison. I have walked miles and miles day after day, and could not get work.—Mr. Jeremy: But why did not you apply to the relieving officer?—Prisoner: I did, sir, and he gave me an order to go into the Greenwich Union; but when I got there they told me the place was full, and I must go back again to the relieving officer, and he must find me a bed. I went back to him and took the order, on which, I believe, he was told to find me a bed. but he told me he could not find me a bed at any lodging-house I must do the best I could for myself. I then went to the station-house, and begged for a shelter there; but I was turned away, and being quite exhausted through wandering about, I committed the offence I am charged with.—Mr. Jeremy: Whatever your distress might have been, you had no right to injure the property of others. This kind of offence is now so common, that I shall enforce the law in every case. You must pay a fine of £5, or be imprisoned three months. The worthy magistrate, addressing Mr. Stronger, one of the relieving officers, said that sore stop must be put to the ground of complaints so frequently made, and he would not sit there to be made an engine to carry out a system, if that system was unreasonable. The chief cause of all the difficulty was misconstruing the law. The guardians, or some of the officers, had begun taking in common vagrants, and as they had begun so they must go on—they must now build 20 more vagrant wards, if necessary. He did not complain of the relieving officers, but the system.—Mr. Stronger: Shall I be justified, then, in giving these vagrants in charge to the police when they come to me?—Mr. Jeremy: Certainly not; they are coming to you for a legal purpose, to ask you for relief; and if they are actually casual poor, being on their way home, you are bound to give it to them, and you must not turn them on the wide world to starve, or drive them to vagrancy. It is the idle wanderers who go about from parish to parish and never work, but whom you admit over and over again, that I speak of.—Mr. Warman, the relieving officer, who had refused to find the prisoner a bed, having been sent for, arrived at the office, and said, the fact was, so many applications were made for admission at Greenwich, that, when the out-parishes sent, the answer was that the ward was full; but it was clear that under the new law the vagrant ward was part of the union-house, and if they could not be accommodated there they ought to be admitted.—Mr. Jeremy: Something must be done. Suppose now, for instance, Parliament had limited down exhausted at your door, and had died because he had not been relieved, how would you have answered it? I do not like to be continually complaining, but the poor people are driven backwards and forwards to get relief. The system is wrong, and you had better apply to the board of guardians on the subject.

CORONERS' INQUESTS.

SUICIDE OF A CABMAN. An inquest was taken on Saturday at the Ship, Tottenham-place, Tottenham-court-road, on the body of Robert Potter, aged 33, residing at 27, Tottenham-place. It appeared that the deceased had been labouring under inflammation of the lungs, and on Wednesday night he had 35 leeches applied to his stomach, and was bled; he became delirious, and was put to bed at half past ten o'clock in the evening by the nurse who attended him, and she left him laid down by the side of him and got into a doze. She was awoke by his hand falling upon her, and she got up and saw some blood on the pillow; she aroused his wife, who was in a child-bed in the next room, and it was discovered that he had removed the razor, by reaching out of bed, from the washhand stand drawer and inflicted a wound in his throat. A surgeon was sent for, who sewed up the wound, but he was dead. The surgeon was unable to say whether the wound was the cause of death, or the disease of the lungs, and the jury returned a verdict accordingly.

On Tuesday the circumstances of a death was held before Mr. T. Wakley, M.P., at the sign of the Three Jolly Gardeners, Hammersmith, on view of the body of Thomas Smith, an omnibus driver, aged 43 years. It appeared from the evidence that the deceased was in the employ of Mr. G. Cloud, omnibus proprietor, of Hammersmith, and on the night of Friday week, when at the White Horse Cellar, Piccadilly, on the return journey, told the conductor that his head is very giddy, and asked him to drive, saying that he (deceased) would act as conductor. At about half-past eleven o'clock, while passing Earl's-terrace, Kensington, the deceased was observed by some of the passengers to fall from the curbstone to fall from the back of the vehicle, and they endeavoured to make the coachman acquainted with the circumstance, but were unable to make him hear until the omnibus had got nearly to Hammersmith turnpike. Assistance was then immediately rendered the deceased, who was found lying insensible in the road, and he was carried in a cart to his residence at Hammersmith. Medical assistance was instantly called in, but the deceased never rallied, but gradually sank, and expired on Saturday night. The jury returned a verdict "That the deceased died from the rupture of a vessel on the brain, but whether occasioned accidentally, or by natural causes, there was no evidence before them to show."

The Bishop of Jerusalem, in a letter to a friend in England, dated the 1st of August, states that every one of his household (himself and lady included), excepting only the native servants, has had an attack of fever, more or less severe.

Saturday last a person named Bates, of extraordinary size and weight, though only 38 years of age, was buried at Brussels. He was no less than forty stone, within five pounds. His coffin was three feet nine inches in breadth, and seven feet nine inches in length. As no hearse of sufficient magnitude could be found to contain it, he was carried to the grave by twelve bearers.

THE GUADALOUPE IRON WAR STEAMER.—Many of our readers will remember this beautiful iron war steamer, built by Mr. John Laird, of North Birkenhead, for the Mexican Government. She was manned by an English crew and engineers, and commanded by Lieut. Charnewood, R.N. On arriving at Vera Cruz, she, with the old City of Dublin steamer, formed the leading vessels in an expedition, consisting of 2000 men, against Yucatan, which had thrown off the Mexican yoke, and set up as a republic on its own account. The expedition, mainly owing to the efficiency of the steamers, was completely successful. Yucatan was deprived of her navy, and the whole coast placed under the command of Mexico. From steam-vessels of war are thus playing as conspicuous a part in the naval wars of the western as they are in those of the eastern [illegible].

THE CUSTOM-HOUSE FRAUDS.—MEETING OF SPITALFIELDS WEAVERS.—On Monday an adjourned meeting of the Spitalfields weavers took place at the Duke of Gloucester, Sebright-street, Bethnal-green-road, for the purpose of determining what course they should adopt in consequence of the discovery of the frauds which have been committed at the Custom-house, on the importation of foreign silks and other goods, Mr. Forster in the chair. The committee having made their report, to the effect that some immediate plan should be adopted, [illegible] to prevent the [illegible] of French and foreign silks through the Custom-house, added that a notice had appeared in the public journals, which had the appearance of being official, intimating that it was the intention of Government to prosecute the inquiries into the fraudulent transactions at the Custom-house, under the authority of a special commission. They wished for advice. A lengthened discussion ensued, in the course of which it was stated that very important information had been obtained of the practices at the Custom-house; when it was resolved for the present not to call any meeting of the trade, but to wait to ascertain the result of any investigation instituted by the Government. It was also resolved that the committee should continue to act, and, if necessary, call a meeting of the trade. They were also to make inquiries as to the extent of the frauds in the importation of French silks, and the mode adopted by which foreign silk goods were brought into the home market. Thanks were then voted to the chairman, and the meeting broke up.

ABSENCE OF MIND.—Absence of mind appears to be gaining ground all over the country. A young married woman the other day threw her infant into the cooking-stove, while she very affectionately nursed a leg of mutton.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

ST. JAMES'S THEATRE

GRAND PUBLIC CONCERTS.—The Public is respectfully informed, that a series of CONCERTS will be given at the above Theatre, under the direction of a body of Professors, whose object is to perform works of the highest order in both Choral and Instrumental. The first Concert will take place on WEDNESDAY EVENING, NOVEMBER 2, to commence at Eight o'clock precisely, and to be repeated at Nine. In the course of the series, the following works will be introduced:—Rossini's STABAT MATER; Beethoven's celebrated Oratorio, THE MOUNT OF OLIVES; Spohr's new oratorio, THE FALL OF BABYLON, for the first time in London, as performed at the last Norwich Festival, and conducted by Professor Taylor. Principal Vocalists—Miss Birch, Miss Dolby, Mr. Hobbs, and Mr. H. Phillips. The Band and Chorus will consist of 140 Performers, including the following eminent Professors:—Messrs. Willy, E. Perry, Hill, Lucas, Howell, Carte, Barrett, Lindley, Blagrove, Piatt, Harper, W. L. Phillips, H. J. Banmister, C. Severn, Card, Hill, Kearns, H. Westrop, Payton, C. Betts, Irwin, J. Jewell, Griesbs, H. Graves, Godwin, &c. &c. Leader—Mr. Willy. Conductor—Professor Taylor. Acting Manager—Mr. H. Westrop.

Doors open at Seven o'clock. Stalls, 5s.; Gallery, 3s. 6d. Private Boxes, £1 11s. 6d., and £2 2s.

SACRED HARMONIC SOCIETY, EXETER HALL.—On Friday Evening, November 4, will be performed Handel's oratorio, ESTHER. Principal Vocalists—Miss Birch, Miss Dolby, Mr. Hobbs, Mr. Lodger, and Mr. Phillips. Band and chorus will consist of 500 performers.

Tickets, 10s. 6d. each, may be had of the principal music-sellers; of Mr. Mitchell, Royal Library, 33, Old Bond-street; of Mr. Mitchell, Royal Library, 33, Old Bond-street; of Mr. Hill, Exeter-hall; and at the Institution.

T. BREWER, Hon. Sec.

Attendance will be given at Exeter-hall on the two next Friday evenings from 8 till 10 o'clock, for the purpose of renewing subscriptions due at Midsummas, and for receiving applications from persons desirous of becoming subscribers for the ensuing year.

SUBSCRIPTION CONCERTS. The first Concert will take place at the Hanover-square Rooms, on Wednesday evening next October 30th. Principal vocal performers, Miss Birch, Miss Rainforth, Miss Hassard, and Mrs. Alfred Shaw; Mr. Bennett, Mr. Hargreaves, Mr. Jones, Mr. Parry, Mr. Weiss, and Mr. Phillips. Solo performers, Madame Dulcken and Mr. Willy. The Band will contain a grand and extensive scale, and will consist of no less than—first Violins, Mr. Willy, and sixteen others; Second Violins, Mr. Dando, and sixteen others; Violas, Mr. Moralt, and seven others; Violoncel los, Mr. Lucas, and seven others; Contra-Basses, M. Howell, and seven others; Flutes, Messrs. Card, Schmidt, and Pratten; Oboes, Messrs. Barret and W. Keating; Clarionets, Messrs. Lazarus and M'Donnell; Bassoons, Messrs. Baumann and Cocking; Horns, Messrs. Platt, Rae, C. Harper, and Calcott; Trumpets, Messrs. Harper and T. Harper; Trombones, Messrs. Smithies, Mason, and Albrecht; Ophycleide, Mr. Ellison Serpent, Mr. Standen; Drums, Mr. Camp. The Chorus will comprise the whole of the members of the Lond Professional Chorus Society. Leader, Mr. Cooper. Conductor, Mr. G. F. Harris. Tickets, 10s. 6d. each, may be had at all the principal Music Shops. Doors open at half-past seven; chair to be taken at half-past eight.

ROYAL POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTION, extended into the CAVENDISH BUILDING, in the Hall of Manufactures, including Napier's Patent Brick and Tile Making Machine, &c. The Week's List of Novelties:—Professor Brande's Lecture, Professor Faraday, and the other Professors, at the usual hours for each, as suspended in the Hall. Dissolving Views, by Dr. Ryan, and the Interior of the Cavendish Building, at Jerusalem, by Mr. Roberts, R.A. (in this Building only). Models are among the latest additions to the Exhibitions. Admission, One Shilling; Schools, half-price.

TO SCULPTORS.—ART-UNION OF LONDON.—The Committee have to notify that they will be ready to purchase, for THIRTY POUNDS, a FIGURE or GROUP, 18 inches high, in Gutta Percha or Plaster, carefully finished, fit for Public Exhibitions by [illegible]

GEORGE GODWIN, jun.,} Hon. Secs.
PUGIN,

Office, 4, Trafalgar-square, 10th October, 1849.

TO ARTISTS.—ART-UNION OF LONDON. SIXTY POUNDS will be given for the next Consecutive Series of TEN DESIGNS IN OUTLINE, size 12 inches by 9, the subject is left at the option of the artist, but must be [illegible] which may be taken from the Works of some English author. Simplicity of Composition and Expression, severe Beauty of Form, and pure, correct Drawing, are the qualities which the Committee are anxious to realise in this series. It should be deemed expedient to engrave the compositions selected, the artist will receive a further remuneration on to superintend the publication. The Designs, accompanied by a sealed letter containing the name and address of the artist, must be forwarded to the Honorary Secretaries on or before Lady-day, 1849.

GEORGE GODWIN, jun.,} Hon. Secs.
LEWIS PUGIN,

Just ready, price 1s.

WHIST; its History and Practice. By AN AMATEUR, Author of "Illustrations Deslignes Humoristiques" by Meadows, and engraved by Smith and Linton.

"The play's the thing"—Hamlet.
London: BELL and WOOD, 76, Fleet-street.

ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.—T. S. BARTON has the pleasure to inform his Friends and the Public throughout the county of Lancaster, that he has been appointed by the proprietors of the above elegant and talented news [illegible] AGENT for Manchester and the neighbourhood; and that he can now supply all of the previous numbers, whole sets, or month y parts.

Published weekly, and may be had [illegible] every Saturday morning [illegible] 6d.—The trade supplied, and prospectuses forwarded when required.

Office, 4, Dean-place, Deansgate.

IMPORTANT TO LADIES:

A [illegible] country [illegible] presenting to a dear [illegible] friend, the means of cultivating a branch of elegant [illegible] among the Loves to [illegible] and delightful [illegible] in lieu of suffering from the accumulated [illegible] of ennui and idleness.

Now ready, Dedicated to the Queen, price 1s., finished.

A GUIDE TO KNITTING, NETTING, AND CROCHET. By the Author of that highly popular Work, a new and improved edition of which is now ready, entitled

A GUIDE TO FANCY NEEDLEWORK AND EMBROIDERY.

The two form a useful, elegant, and indispensable appendage to the workstable, not only on account of its portable size, but also by reason of these illustrative appendages, which can never be misunderstood.

Also now ready, a new and much improved edition, being the 36th thousand, of

A GUIDE TO THE BALL-ROOM.

Many disappointments in obtaining the above authentic works, the Publisher will gratefully avoid one [illegible] upon his receiving a pre-paid letter enclosing the published price in Postage Stamps of equal value.

Published by C. MITCHELL, Bolt-court, Fleet-street, London.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS
[illegible]

WE insert a letter from our Printer, stating the number Printed of the above Paper. It will require no doubt as to its being decidedly the most medium for Advertisers of all the Weekly Papers, being the first as regards respectability, and second in circulation to only one in the Kingdom:—

"2, Crane-court, Strand, Sept. 15, 1849

"SIR,—For the satisfaction of our Advertising Friends, we should be obliged by your stating the number of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS since its commencement to No. 18. Please to state also the average number of the last Four Weeks.—Yours, respectfully,

"THE PROPRIETORS of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

"To Mr. R. P. Brewer, 10, Crane-court, Fleet-street."

"10, Crane-court, Sept. 16, 1849

"GENTLEMEN,—In compliance with your request, I beg to state and positively to say, that to the best of my belief the number of stamped sheets printed for the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, from No. 1 to No. 18 inclusive, is 329,330; and that the number of the last four weeks' papers

AVERAGES 23,488 PER WEEK

The Stamp-office returns, when published, will bear out the above statement. I am, Gentlemen, yours very obediently,

"To the Proprietors of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, 198, Strand."

The charge for Advertisements is 6s. 6d. for Ten lines, or under, 5s., and 6d. per line after. Advertisements must be sent to the Office, 198, Strand, on Thursday at latest.

All the numbers are now reprinted. Orders received by all Booksellers and Newsmen in the Kingdom.

THE ROYAL ALBUM! The most elegant and unique Periodical ever attempted; which, when completed, will be a facsimile of an Album in the possession of her Majesty! Publishing in weekly numbers, each comprising not less than four pages of brilliant literature, with costly illustrations in lithography, and engravings on steel, copper, and Wood. Price threepence. Office, 1, Bouverie-street, Fleet-street, London. Country booksellers will receive specimens, free, on forwarding two penny stamps.

WANTED TO PURCHASE.—A SMALL FREEHOLD TENEMENT, in the neighbourhood of London, within Six Miles of St. Paul's. The purchase not to exceed £400.

Letters addressed I. L. N., 198, Strand, will be attended to.

THE GERMAN FLUTE which formerly belonged to His Majesty FREDERICK II., of PRUSSIA, which was among the effects of his Privy Treasurer. Its authenticity can be proved by an official document. For further particulars, amateurs will be pleased to apply to Mr. CONRAD, Post Director, at Trier, on the Moselle, Germany.

THE METROPOLITAN LOAN COMPANY, Offices, No. 1, CRAVEN-STREET, STRAND, London

Comes are granted by this Company to persons of [illegible] of reasonable householders, in sums of 10l. 10s., 15l., 20l., 30l., 40l., and 50l., for periods, at the option of the borrowers, of twenty-six or fifty weeks: to be repaid by weekly instalments.

Forms of application and particulars may be obtained at the Offices, No. 1, Craven-street, Strand, London; which are open daily from Eleven to Three o'Clock: and the money is granted, if the securities be approved of, without delay.

OLD HAT INN AND TAVERN, EALING.

ROBERT EMERSON respectfully announces that he has re-opened this ancient Inn, and most tastefully fitted it up for the accommodation of gentlemen and families travelling on the Uxbridge road. The resident gentry of the neighbourhood may confidently rely upon having Wines, Spirits, and Liqueurs, of the same quality as at the best houses in London, and their patronage is earnestly solicited. Dinners and Suppers will be on the table. The house is delightfully situated within a short walk of the Ealing station, from whence passengers are conveyed to Paddington in a quarter of an hour.

WELSH FLANNELS.—To Purchasers of Welsh Flannels.—The largest and best STOCK of WELSH FLANNELS of every quality, width, and substance, in the possess on of any retail house in the kingdom, will be found at BROWNE and SON'S, Household Drapers and Linen Factors, 61, High-street, Islington. The double milled and fine wove Welsh flannels and coatings, as well as real German flannels (sold by very few houses), will be found here.

COMPOSITION FOR WRITING WITH STEEL PENS

STEPHENS' WRITING FLUIDS comprises the most splendid and durable colours, and the most indelible composition which art can produce; they contain the fullest proportions of colour, [illegible] and the [illegible] to whom economy is more an object than powerful [illegible] with the pauper, may obtain the same [illegible] matter, to the extent of [illegible] per [illegible] a real economy, without [illegible] [illegible] incumbrance [illegible] Also STEPHENS' SELECT [illegible] INKS

HENRY STEPHENS [illegible]

PELL'S CHINESE [illegible] VARNISH [illegible] gent's Quadrant, [illegible] per dozen; Envelopes, 4d. [illegible] Letter Paper, 4s. per ream [illegible] per ream; Satin Note Paper, 2s. per quire [illegible] 9d. per quire, Blotting Cases, 6d. each; [illegible] each, the best Sealing Wax, 10 sticks [illegible] per pound; fine [illegible] Benham Steel Pens, 6d. per dozen [illegible] per gross; Albums,

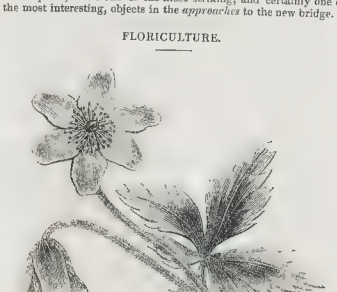
THE CHURCHES OF THE METROPOLIS.—No. XII.

ST. SAVIOUR'S CHURCH.

Crossing London-bridge to Southwark, the church of St. Mary Overy, or St. Saviour's, on the right hand, divides attention with the first glimpse of the noble Hospitals which attest so proudly the charitable munificence of our country. Southwark, as early as any accounts exist of London, was a place of some importance; and on the marching of the Conqueror to the metropolis it had the misfortune to be selected for burning, by way of example to the inhabitants on the London side, who were somewhat disinclined to favour the pretensions of William. The site of the present church was, at an early period, that of the Priory of St. Mary Overy; of this considerable remains still exist, and, indeed, portions of the present building formed a part of it. The priory was twice destroyed by fire, and the present church was most probably (there are no positive records) built in the reign of Henry IV. At the dissolution of monasteries it was surrendered to Henry, purchased from him by the good folks of Southwark, and converted into a parish church. An act of Parliament afterwards united it with that of St. Margaret-at-Hill, and changed its old Saxon name of St. Mary Overy into that of St. Saviour's, Southwark.

It is a beautiful Gothic pile, built like a cathedral, with nave, side aisles, transepts, and a choir, the last also with side aisles. It has two chapels—that of St. John, and the far-famed specimen of its peculiar style, the chapel of the Virgin Mary—the LADYE CHAPEL. The massy clustered columns which support the roof of the nave are very much like those in the cathedral at Salisbury. There are many monuments—amongst others that of Gower, one of the fathers of English poetry; another to the memory of the pious Launcelot Andrews, Bishop of Winchester, who died in his palace, then close by, in 1626. A third is to the memory of Alderman Humble, and stands near the entrance to the Ladye Chapel. But the monuments are numerous, and the entire building one of the most interesting of the many interesting ones which London boasts. The Ladye Chapel is admitted to be an unique specimen; beautifully correct in all its proportions—admirable in its detail—in fine, a school for the student in Gothic architecture. It is a pure, chaste specimen of the style of the thirteenth century. When the approaches to the present London-bridge were forming, it was proposed to demolish this architectural gem to give room for the improvement. Fortunately, sufficient taste and public regard for the relics of antiquity existed to prevent this outrage, and the site which was devoted to destruction, having been repaired by public subscription, forms one of the most striking, and certainly one of the most interesting, objects in the approaches to the new bridge.

FLORICULTURE.



THE ANEMONE.
(Anemone Hortensis.)

This elegant flower, a beautiful illustration of which graces our columns, derives its name from a Greek word, signifying wind-flower; and this appellation has been given to it for the reason that it is found in its native colonies growing wild in elevated places much exposed to the wind. All the varieties are showy, flowering plants, with white or purple, scarlet, or even yellow blossoms. Many members of the genus are met with growing in a wild state in this country; but the only one which may be looked upon as a garden flower—the anemone hortensis—is a native of the south of France, Italy, and Greece. A curious anecdote, relative to its introduction into this country, is related. An individual residing in Italy had devoted many years to the cultivation of the flower, but would on no account part with any of the seeds. A visitor, however, resolved to possess himself of the treasure; and, to effect his object, dropped his cloak, as if by accident, on the anemone bed in passing. He apologised for his awkwardness, recovered his cloak, and thus obtained the seed which had adhered to it.

The garden anemone has long been cultivated in England, and is much valued, both for its hardy nature, and for the reason that it will flower at almost any season, according to the time that the roots are kept out of the ground, and the season when they are replanted. The colours are white, red, and blue in different shades. The flowers are single, semi-double, and double; and those that are semi-double are nearly as valuable as the double. The root is a solid flattened mass, and the propagation of the plant is effected by the division of the root. They may also be multiplied by seeds; but in selecting the seed some little care is necessary. It should, if possible, be saved from semi-double varieties, with petals broad, thick, and in three or four rows. At all events, the plant should possess always two rows of petals, and form a noble cup-like flower. The usual time for planting is in October, but, if they be required to flower early, they may be set in September. We have already said that the anemone will flower at almost any season. If, therefore, it be required to have a bloom every month, it is but necessary that the root or seed should be placed in the ground each month. The soil best adapted for favourable growth is fresh loam, with as great a proportion of stimulating manure as they can be made to bear. They should never be exposed to the severe frosts, but should be protected by a covering of some kind. It is true that they are hardy enough to exist and flower without this care; but the beauty of plants protected is infinitely greater than that of such as are left exposed in the open border. Like all other roles relative to horticulture, these rules may be modified and departed from without any great evil; but, if the object be to cultivate the anemone in perfection, these directions will be found too important to be materially neglected.

MR. BUCKSTONE, IN "MARRIED LIFE."

Here is our friend Buckstone—the merriest little actor and author of modern time—once more before his hearty Haymarket patrons, performing with his wonted gusto and triumph in his own lively comedy of Married Life. We give him cordial welcome; and our readers will find all the particulars of his reappearance before us, after his return from America, under our general department of theatrical criticism.

THE FRENCH REGALIA.—The general inventory of the diamonds, pearls, and jewels of the crown of France was first made under the empire in 1810. A verification of that inventory took place under LOUIS XVIII., on his return from Ghent, whether those jewels had been carried during the hundred days, and all the different pieces having been taken asunder, the diamonds, pearls, and jewels which composed them weighed and valued; it was found that those jewels amounted in number to 61,312; that they weighed 18,761 7-32 carats, and were worth 20,020,260f. A new verification was lately made, in virtue of the law of the 2d of March, 1832, by Messrs. Bapst and Lazare, the jewellers of the crown, and no change was found either in their number, weight, or value.

THE MARKETS.

CORN-EXCHANGE.—The arrivals of English wheat up to Mark-lane since our last, coastwise, as well as by land-carriage and samples, have been very moderate, but of fair average quality. On each market-day the stands have been fairly supplied with samples, the demand for which has ruled inactive. However, the finest descriptions have sold at full rates of currency; but all other sorts have declined quite 1s per quarter. Foreign wheat has been pressing upon the market in large quantities, owing to which the sale for it has ruled heavy, at an abatement of 1s per quarter. The supply of barley has been large. The best malting sorts have fallen 1s; other kinds, 2s per quarter. The supply of malt has been good, while very few transactions have taken place in it, at about late rates. In oats scarcely anything has been doing, and the quotations have suffered a slight decline. Beans, peas, and flour, have been a mere drug, the highest or nominal price of the latter being 47s per 280 lbs.

ARRIVALS.—English: Wheat, 3090; Barley, 3050; Oats, 570; and Malt 9120 quarters; Flour, 3930 Sacks. Irish: Oats, 17,310 quarters. Foreign: Wheat, 8470; and Oats, ——quarters.

English.—Wheat, Essex and Kent, red, 45s to 55s; ditto white, 54s to 61s; Norfolk and Suffolk, red, 42s to 56s; do. white, 51s to 58; rye, 34s to 38s; grinding barley, 27s to 29s; malting do., 30s to 32s; Chevalier, 32s to 34s; Suffolk and Norfolk malt, 56s to 62s, brown do., 50s to 54s; Kingston and Ware, 50s to 62s; Chevalier, 63s; Yorkshire and Lincolnshire feed oats, 23, to 24s; potato do., 25s to 26s; Youghal and Cork, black, 17s to 18s; do. white, 19s to 20s; tick beans, new, 34s to 36s; do. old, 34s to 38s; grey peas, 36s to 38s; maple, 32s to 34s; white, 30s to 35s; boilers, 32s to 37s; per quarter. Town-made flour, 46s to 47s; Suffolk, 36s to 38s; Stockton and Yorkshire, 36s to 38s, per 280 lbs. Foreign.—Free wheat, 50s to 60s. In Bond.—Barley, 29s; oats, new, 15s to 17s; do. feed, 14s to 16s; beans, 20s to 20s; peas, 25s to 27s, per quarter. Flour, America, 22s to 24s; Baltic, 22s per barrel.

The Seed Market.—For linseed and rapeseed we have a steady inquiry, at full rates of currency; but caraways and tares have a downward tendency. In all other kinds of seeds scarcely anything is passing.

The following are the present rates:—Linseed, English, sowing, 48s to 37s.; Baltic, crushing, 42s to 43s; Mediterranean and Odessa, 45s to 46s; hempseed, 35s to 40s; per quarter; coriander, 10s to 16s per cwt.; brown mustard seed, 10s to 11s; white do., 10s to 10s 6d; tares, 5s 6d to 6s 0d per bushel; English rapeseed, new, 30f to 32f per last of ten quarters. Linseed cakes, English, 10f to 10f 10s; do. foreign, 7f to 7f 10s per 1000; rapeseed cakes, 5f 5s to 6f per ton.

Imperial Weekly Average—Wheat, 51s 1d; barley, 28s 10d; Oats, 18s 0d; rye, 31s 7d; beans, 32s 4d; peas, 33s 3d.

Imperial Averages of Six Weeks which govern Duty.—Wheat, 52s 4d; Barley, 28s 0d; Oats, 18s 3d; Rye, 30s 3d; Beans, 34s 0d; Peas, 33s 5d per quarter.

Duty on Foreign Corn—Wheat, 18s 0d; Barley, 9s 0d; Oats, 8s 0d; Rye, 10s 6d; Beans, 9s 6d; Peas, 9s 6d.

Bread.—The prices of wheaten Bread in the metropolis are from 7d to 8d; of household ditto, 6d to 7d for the 4lb loaf.

Tea.—At the public sales this week the biddings have been rather brisk, and prices have undergone further depression. On the whole, however, the sales have gone off heavily, and, of 44,000 packages offered, only 15,000 have been actually sold. The deliveries by private contract have been about 460,000 lbs this week.

Sugar.—We have had a steady inquiry for this description of produce, and the rates have been fully sustained. The private transactions have comprised nearly 2800 hhds. and tierces for the week, while the public sales have comprised 109 hhds. Barbadoes, which went off with spirit, at 62s to 68s 6d per cwt. for low to fine colours. The imports have exhibited a decided falling off, compared with those of some preceding weeks. Mauritius.—The inquiry for this sugar is tolerably steady. A very inferior parcel, consisting of 2260 bags 188 casks, has been offered by public sale, the whole of which sold at full prices, except for some of the low samples, which went a little easier. Good middling colourey yellow sold at 61s 6d; strong middling yellow, 59s to 59s 6d; low and dingy yellow, 52s to 54s 6d; grey, 56s; and brown, 46s to 51s per cwt. East India.—Three parcels of Bengal, comprising nearly 1100 bags, went off steadily, and the whole sold at previous rates. Middling yellowish white produced 65s to 66s; middling good strong white and colloury yellow, 64s 6d to 65s; middling bright yellow, 62s to 63s; dingy yellow, 58s to 61s; low yellow, in casks, 52s to 54s, and damp brown, 47s to 49s per cwt. Foreign.—A parcel of Bahia, of 350 chests greyish white, went at 19s to 23s 6d per cwt., being rather stiffer prices. 200 boxes yellow Havannah sold at 16s 3d to 20s per cwt., or at full rates.

Coffee.—This market has remained rather inactive, yet prices are very firm. At auction an advance of 1s per cwt. has been obtained for Ceylon. Foreign is dull.

Indigo.—The quarterly sales have gone on steadily, and the prices have maintained their advanced position of from 8d to 1s. Nearly two thirds of the quantity offered have been sold.

Pimento.—This article is in steady inquiry, at full prices. 200 bags offered at public sale were disposed of at 2¾d to 2¾d for low and middling quality.

Rum.—We have a fair sale at previous rates. Sales of Jamaica, at 32 to 36 over proof, have been made at 2s 3d to 2s 7d; and superior marks, at 3d to 4s 4d per gallon. Proof Leewards, 1s 6d to 1s 9d per gallon.

Fruit.—Valencia raisins are dull, and have declined to 36s per cwt., at which prices not a large business has been done, the time of year considered.

Oils. This market is very firm, and the prices are well maintained, as well at public sale as by private contract.

Tallow.—A public sale of 63 barrels Canada pot, and 183 barrels ditto pearl has taken place. The former sold at 39s to 39s 6d for first sort, and the latter at 36s 6d to 39s 6d for first.

Yellow.—A fair business has been done in tallow. Holders are firm P.Y.C. on the spot 46s 9d.

Provisions Irish butter is still dull, but holders do not seem inclined to force sales; hence no further abatement has taken place in prices. Foreign butter is in steady request, and quite as dear; fine Dutch selling at 106s to 108s. New bacon, landed, is in good demand, and all the arrivals cleared off at full prices. All other kinds of provisions are unaltered in value.

Coals Adair's, 15s 6d; Old Tanfield, 14s 6d: New Tanfield, 14s 6d; Townley, 14s 6d; Wylam, 15s 6d; Hilda, 19s; Kilmarnorth, 19s 3d; Lambton, 21s 6d; Stewart's, 22s; Caradoc, 22s; Adelaide, 21s 3d; Evenwood, 18s; Gordon, 18s 3d; Wemyss, 14s. Ships arrived, 25

Hops.—On account of the supply of hops being large, and the reports of the great district markets and fairs unfavourable, the demand here is excessively heavy, and the prices are barely maintained. The duty is called £100,000.

Wool.—The imports of wool this week have been very scanty, yet we have no variation to notice in the prices of either British or foreign, the demand for which is excessively inactive.

Potatoes. From Scotland, Yorkshire, various other parts of England, and the Channel Islands, nearly 2000 tons of potatoes have arrived in the Borough and Spitalfields markets this week. The demand being dull, many of the holders have been compelled to land their supplies to prevent demurrage. The best Scotch reds are selling at only 70s, while other sorts vary from 40s to 65s per ton.

Smithfield.—The supplies of stock on offer in this market have been again moderately good, but of very inferior quality. Although a slight improvement has been apparent in the general demand, no advance can be noticed in prices. We have had about 120 foreign beasts brought forward this week. Beef, from 3s 2d to 4s 2d; mutton, 3s 4d to 4s 6d; veal, 3s 8d to 4s 6d; and pork, 4s to 4s 10d per 8lbs., to sink the offal.

Newgate and Leadenhall.—These markets have been heavily supplied with each kind of meat, the demand for which has ruled inactive at the following prices:—Beef, from 3s to 3s 6d; mutton, 3s 2d to 4s 2d, veal, 3s 0d to 4s 4d; and pork, 4s to 4s 6d per 8lbs., by the carcase

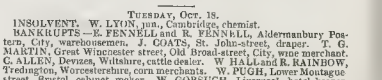
ROBERT HERBERT.

BRITISH FUNDS.—(CLOSING PRICES)—FRIDAY.

Bank Stock, 164¼	India Stock, —pm.
3 per Cent Red., 92¾	Ditto Bonds, 49 pm.
3 per Cent Cons., 93¾	Ditto Old Annuities, —
3½ per Cent Red., 103¾	Ditto New Annuities 93
New 3½ per Cent, 101¾	Ex. Bills, 1000£, 56 ; 58 pm.
New 5 per Cent, —	Ditto 500£., 58 pm.
Long Annuities to expire	Ditto Small, 58 pm.
Jan. 1860, 12¾	Bank Stock for Opg. —
Oct. 1859, —	India Stock for Acct ,
Jan. 1860, 12¾	Consols for Acct., 93¾

SHARES.

Bristol and Exeter (p), —	London and Blackwall (p.) 5
Edinburgh and Glasgow (50 p), —	London and Birmingham (90 p),
Great Western 65 p), 83	Ditto Thirds (p), —
Ditto New Shares (50 p), 60¼	Ditto New shares (p), —
Ditto Fifth (4 p), —	London and South Western
London and Brighton (50 p), 36¾	(£41 6s. 10d. p), 57¾



THE LONDON GAZETTE.

TUESDAY, OCT. 18.

INSOLVENT.—W. LYON, jun., Cambridge, chemist.

BANKRUPTS.—E. PENNELL and R. PENNELL, Aldermanbury Postern, City, warehousemen. J. COATS, St. John-street, draper. T. G. MARTIN, Great Winchester street, Old Broad-street, City, wine merchant. C. ALLEN, Devizes, Wiltshire, cattle dealer. W. HALL and R. RAINBOW, Tredington, Worcestershire, cotton brokers. W. PUGH, Lower Montague street, Bristol, cabinet maker. W. GORSUCH, Liverpool, hotel keeper. J. C. HAWDON, Leeds, wool merchant. H. BARTON, jun., Liverpool, merchant.

SCOTCH SEQUESTRATIONS.—A. HALKET, Affleck, Forfarshire, dairyman. A. STEEL, Blacksideend, farmer. W. NEILSON, Hamilton, spirit retailer. W. SIM, Glasgow, merchant. D. FORBES, sen., and D. FORBES, jun., Blairhallunag, Perthshire, graziers. C. GIBB, Dunfermline, baker. W. ALLAN and Co., Leith, merchants.

TUESDAY, OCT. 21.

ADMIRALTY, Oct. 18.—Corps of Royal Marines: W. E. Farmer, Gent., to be Second Lieutenant: J. F. Herring, Gent., to be Second Lieutenant; J. C. D. Morrison, Gent., to be Second Lieutenant.

INSOLVENT.—J. BREAKENBRIDGE and J. REID, Liverpool, tailors.

BANKRUPTS.—W. STARLE, Cutler-street, Houndsditch, Carpenter. S. SIMSON, Shirley, watchmaker. W. EAST, Spalding, Lincolnshire, builder. H. BARTON, jun., Liverpool, merchant. C. O'NEIL, R. SALKELD, and G. S. DIGBY, Brinder Works, near Margam, Glamorganshire, iron-founders. D. BRANDON, Barbican, shoe manufacturer. J. COOPER, Liverpool, provison dealer. M. HARRIS and S. A. HART, Cullum-street, Fenchurch-street, merchants. W. ROWORTH, Wellingborough, Northamptonshire, confectioner.

PRICE OF SUGAR.—The Average Price of Brown or Muscovado Sugar computed from the Returns made in the Week ending Oct. 18, 1849, is 25s. 0d. per cwt., exclusive of the Duties of Customs paid or payable thereon on the importation thereof into Great Britain.

MARRIAGES.

On the 6th inst, at Walcot Church, Bath, by the Rev. John Daintry, rector of Patney, Wilts, the Rev. Edward Elton, M.A., of Balliol College, Oxford, to Harriet Vasliea, younger daughter of the late Rear Admiral Volant Vasbon Ballard, C.B. On the 8th inst, at Trinity Church, Bath, by the Rev. John Acres, Edmund Lloyd Bagshawe, Esq., son of the late Sir William Bagshawe, of the Oaks, Derbyshire, and of Bath, to Elizabeth Anne, only daughter of John Acres, Esq., of the same place. On the 13th inst, at Penrith, J. W. Prust, Esq., M.A., Oxford, barrister, to Elizabeth, daughter of Anthony Preston, Esq.——On the 14th inst., at St. Mark's, Stydd-square, Pentonville, Thomas Walter, eldest son of Benjamin Alder, Esq., to Margaret Elizabeth Louise, third daughter of Major T. G. Alder, Bengal Army.——On the 12th inst., at St. George's, Everton, the Rev. Samuel Smith, Rector of Barrowford, Lancashire, to Frances Jane Matilda, third daughter of the late Major Joseph Brooke, Hon. East India Company's Service, of Everton.

DEATHS.

On the 10th of June, on board the Nith, on his passage to Calcutta, of a rapid decline, Isaac Oakley, son of the late Colonel Oakley, and Ensign of her Majesty's 10th Regiment of Foot, in the 17th year of his age. On the 13th inst., at his seat, Crowcombe-court, Somerset, deeply and universally lamented, George Henry Carew, Esq. He was descended from the ancient family of Broughton, and by marriage with Miss Carew, the lineal descendant of Sir Coventry Carew, of Antony house, Cornwall, he became possessed of the Somersetshire property, and also of Carew-castle, Pembrokeshire. He is succeeded by his eldest son, Thomas Warrington Carew, Esq. At Paston Hall, Northamptonshire, on the 14th ult., Captain John Madden of Holywich, East Grinstead.—On the 14th of October, at Brighton, whither he had been removed for the recovery of his health, Lieut.-General Sir James Lyon, K.C.B. and G.C.H., Colonel of the 24th Regiment.—In his 59th year, J. H Kearsley, Esq., late M P for Wigan. On Monday, the 17th instant, at Sandford passonage, Wilts, aged 25, Thomas Bolton Girdlestone, Esq., R.N., first son of the Rev. Henry Girdlestone, and grand-nephew of the illustrious Nelson. Following the example of the Lord of Trafalgar, he entered the navy in 1831; and after serving eleven years as midshipman and mate, in the West Indies, East India and China, and the Coast of Africa, he invalided from the latter station, to die in the bosom of his family, a victim of consumption and disappointed expectations.

LONDON: Printed by ROBERT PALMER (at the Office of Palmer & Clayton), 10, Crane-court; and published by WILLIAM LITTLE, at 198, Strand, where all communications are requested to be addressed.—SATURDAY, October 22, 1849.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS

No. 25] FOR THE WEEK ENDING SATURDAY, OCTOBER 29, 1842. [SIXPENCE.

OFFICE 198, STRAND.

RECREATIONS OF THE PEOPLE.

Next to the all-important question of provision for the people—of the means of finding them subsistence for labour there is no subject that should more occupy the attention of society than that which involves their health and recreation—two of the most fertile and beautiful physical sources (the highest moral source is virtue) of all the happiness of mankind. Public writers have latterly found a hard topic in the extent and misery of prevailing distress; and the question of food has been, as it will be ever, most paramount and absorbing. But there are other spokes in the wheel of social destiny that should be marked as it revolves; and among them the sanatory condition and recreative enjoyments of the lower classes are of very primary consideration and consequence. With regard to the subject of health, we shall make it the theme of a separate article. The recently-published report of commissioners—the powerful appeals against metropolitan burial in graveyards—the fresh instances adduced to us of desecration and corrupting influences in the crowding of coffinless human bodies into narrow dens of death—are so many features of the great question which require "ample room and verge enough" for discussion; and in resuming them we the more readily turn to the consideration of popular amusements, as elicited from us by the immediate events of the time.

The recent meeting of the Middlesex magistrates, to discuss the propriety of granting licences to the purveyors of recreation to the lower classes, has provoked some disquisition from the public press, in which we are not disinclined to join. And let us first set out with the declaration that we would put no limit to the innocent diversion of the lower classes, so long as industry is not infringed nor morality degraded. Abroad we have witnessed with delight the abandon of the people to their holiday pleasures—the genuine joyousness with which they give themselves up to the participation of quiet happiness with their friends and families—the relieving excitement of spirit which takes all alloy from toil—the pleasurable gaiety which for its season wins the world into sunshine, by filling the place of care. This abroad. But at home we gaze on popular enjoyment with something like a national feeling of pride. Our English have such a homely domestic character about them in their pastimes of peace. They go thronging into the parks and public places with a sort of smiling consciousness upon them that they are the spirit of the holiday and the cheerful life of the scene. They give themselves up at the theatre, the concert, or the dance with a hearty earnestness of purpose, a kind of honest independence of heart and voice which is, under different aspects, the essential characteristics of the whole community. They give an idea of the bone, muscle, and sinew of a nation. They are, to speak of them generally, a people who labour diligently, and cannot be too well recreated with that sort of happiness which extends beyond the fireside. We are, therefore, glad to know that, independent of a larger demand for public parks and promenades, as viewed in a healthy sense, the progress of civilization has produced a desire for innocent evening diversions, which may include whole families in their little treat of pleasure, and wean the labouring classes from the alehouse and gin-palace to places where the nature of the amusement has a blending of instruction, and tends to raise the relish for mental and rational over animal and sensual enjoyment. The position has been granted by all parties in the State, that the cultivation of music among the lower classes has an elevating and civilizing tendency, and the love of that "sweet sister art" is fast growing amongst them. We forget the name of the political philosopher who said, "Get your people after their daily labour to gentle and humanizing pleasures during the evenings of six days of the week, and you will find them at church upon the seventh." One of the virtues of happiness is that it makes people good, and deserts them only when they cease to be so. Let us hear the address of Mr. Sergeant Adam to his brother magistrates upon this interesting subject. The learned Sergeant observed that, "It had been well said by George III., that he hoped the day would come when every one of his subjects would be able to read his Bible. No person could more cordially join in that sentiment than himself, but it should be borne in mind that, whilst they gave every one the means of reading the Bible, they at the same time gave them the means of reading other works. (Hear, hear.) The result of this was, that the great mass of the people had become more intellectual, more intellectual in mind, more intellectual in inclination, more intellectual in spirit, and more intellectual in the nature and character of their pursuits. (Hear, hear.) The people, then, having become more intellectual, it became the duty of those who had the means of doing so to provide them with some intellectual amusements. (Hear.) If such amusements were not thrown open to them, the court might rely upon it that the people would seek and find it for themselves. (Hear, hear.) The old system of sitting and sotting in a public-house was, thank God, happily being abandoned by the lower orders of society, and rational and intellectual entertainments must, therefore, be provided for them. (Hear.) The great evil was, that there was no act of Parliament authorising the opening of proper places only for the performance of music, except that which compelled the magistrates, on regular application being made to them by respectable parties, to grant these licenses to taverns and public-houses. (Hear, hear.) What they wanted was a proper act of Parliament—an act suited to the exigencies of the day. (Hear, hear.) He did not wish to name any particular place, but it at that moment occurred to his mind that some such room as that of the Music-hall, which was, he believed, entirely devoted to music and musical purposes, was the sort of thing that was required. They wanted those places separate and distinct from public-houses. (Hear, hear, hear.) He derived much delight upon one or two occasions in having witnessed the vast multitudes who had flocked to the Musard concerts at the theatres. The crowds he had seen there had filled him with wonder, but not more so than had the excellent conduct of the mass who were present. But this was one of the admirable results of education (Hear, hear.) All, therefore, they had to do was to find places where the large masses of the intellectual inhabitants of the country could be accomodated with a view to their rational and moral edification and amusement. (Hear hear.) Let them, now that they had removed the blinkers from the eyes of mankind, take care that they were provided with such food, in the shape of entertainment and profitable amusement for their minds, that the day might never arrive when that which had been intended to be a blessing to the people—namely, their education and enlightenment—should lead to evil results (Hear, hear.)" Now, these remarks embody the precise point, with reference to popular recreation, which we would wish to have met by the legislature. We want to see a whole host of temples of amusement rising up in the metropolis and the country towns, uncontaminated by the associations of debauchery and drink. We are far, however, from believing that the magistrates have at all accomplished the desideratum of drawing the line between dissipation and intellectual pleasure, in the disposal of their licences to the various noted taverns in which allurement and mischief are combined. On the other hand, we know how difficult it is to draw, and would rather tolerate the exercise of indiscretion than of tyranny in this regard. We therefore view with some regret the refusal of a licence to the "Hall of the National Association" in Holborn. We would not for a moment uphold a meeting-house for sedition; but, let Chartism (which we oppose) play what pranks it will, music and dancing form no part of its danger, but rather engender the "feeling social," which might drive the "feeling political" away. The Chronicle has well remarked, that "to most people it might have seemed a very good thing, and deserving of all possible encouragement, that the Chartists and working people were disposed to employ their winter evenings in song and dance, rather than in the mutual excitement of recounting their wrongs and sufferings. Mainzer is a less perilous leader than Feargus O'Connor, so far as peace and quietness are concerned. A choral class is the most innocent sort of conspiracy. What would be the damage to the state if every Chartist in the land could sing at sight? Of all staves, the musical is the least obnoxious." And to these remarks it should be added, that the withdrawal of the "licence musical," does not fetter the "licence political" in any degree. Multitudes may still spout Chartism there as long and loudly as they please; but, be they ever so harmonious, they may not sing. This example, however, is only noticeable as a symbol of the tendency of even the most inflamed and grievance-goaded of political agitators to resort to innocent and relaxing diversion and enjoyment. The worst human nature is not all made up of bitterness and strife. On the other hand, the tavern licences, and that sense of the occasional profligacy of these places of resort which provoked divisions among the magistrates while granting them, exhibit glimpses of the evil of immorality creeping in among the amusements of the people; and prove that while it is deemed more prudent to run a partial risk of this mischief, than to debar the enjoying public of more than counteracting advantages, there is an imperative necessity for creating independent places of resort, where happiness may be engendered without the alloy of crime, and relaxation cheerfully communicated to the toiling million without one demoralising influence, one bad example, one regretful association with depravity or shame. Educate, but do not dissipate, your working poor.

CUMBERLAND LODGE, WINDSOR PARK.

We have here one of the lodges of the Windsor Park, appropriated as the residence of the Hon. George Anson, the private secretary to his Royal Highness Prince Albert, whose stables for hunters immediately adjoin, and some half mile from which are erected the new kennels for the different packs of hounds. The buckhounds of her Majesty had, by the way, two private meet during the past week. Upon each day the field was pretty numerous considering the usually necessary private nature of the arrangements previously to the commencement of the regular season. On Tuesday the meet was at Swinley, in the forest, where a fine deer was uncarted, which afforded an excellent run, making for Bracknall, on to No-man's-land, to Hawthorn-hill, where it was taken after a good one hour and twenty minutes' run. On Friday the locality selected for uncarting the stag was near King's Beech, but, from the severe pace maintained throughout the run, and other little drawbacks, very few of those present at the start were up with the hounds at the take. Numerous ups and downs occurred during the first twenty-five minutes. The stag bounded off at starting as if bent on mischief, going to the right of Ascot, on to Hardiman's-gate, in the Great Park, by St. Leonard's and Spital, to Surley-hall, where it was taken after a splendid run of fifty minutes. The day for the first public meet has not yet been fixed. As her Majesty has postponed visiting Brighton until the 8th of next month, it is not at all improbable that his Royal Highness Prince Albert may honour the opening gathering" with his presence.

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

FRANCE.—The Paris papers of Saturday did not contain any news of consequence. His Majesty Louis Philippe continued to enjoy excellent health and spirits, and took, daily, horse and carriage exercise, by visits of inspection to the fortifications, the Versailles Gallery, and Sevres Collection. The Duke de Nemours gave frequent audiences in Paris to military officers. On Friday M. Guizot went to St. Cloud to present M. de Ribeaupierre, formerly Russian Ambassador at Berlin. The Belle Poule frigate, commanded by the Prince de Joinville, the corvette Coquette, and the steamer Asmodée, sailed from Brest on the 16th, for Gibraltar. The Duke d'Aumale, who accompanies his brother, will there embark for Algiers, whilst the Prince de Joinville will proceed to Lisbon, and from thence to the Brazils, his presence at Rio Janeiro, according to rumour, not being unconnected with a projected marriage with a sister of the Emperor of the Brazils.

The changes in the command of the National Guards of the Seine department (Paris) are officially confirmed in Saturday's Moniteur. The Duke de Reggio succeeds Marshal Duke de Conegliano as Governor of the Invalides, and Marshal Count Gerard leaves the command of the National Guards to replace the Duke de Reggio as Grand Chancellor of the Legion of Honour. Marshal Gerard has for successor Lieutenant-General Jacqueminot (a Deputy and one of the leaders of the Conservative party). Lieutenant-General Jacqueminot was long Chief of the Etat Major under Gerard. The ordonnances are dated October 21, and are countersigned by Marshal Soult (Duke de Dalmatie), President of the Council and Minister of War.

The Moniteur announces that a royal decree of the 5th instant grants rewards for the arrest of every individual who manufactures secretly, and sells without license, gunpowder. This ordonnance has reference to the machinations of the secret societies, which have lately caused the police authorities to be on the alert.

Lord Cowley had a long conference with M. Guizot on Saturday, on the subject, it was presumed, of the commercial treaty.

The Paris journals of Sunday comment with great severity on Lord Aberdeen's letter with regard to the right of search. It is evident that an attempt will be made in the Chamber of Deputies to compel the Government to annul the treaties of 1831 and 1833, by refusing to grant warrants to the English cruisers, and to demand from the English Government a new treaty similar to that which has been entered into with the United States

The Paris papers of Monday and Tuesday were utterly destitute of news, being chiefly occupied with disquisitions on subjects of local interest merely. The review which was to have taken place on Monday was postponed on account of the weather, the King wishing to spare the soldiers the pelting of the pitiless storm. His Majesty arrived at the Tuileries at noon, and received the officers of the staff; a proof that his Majesty was not indisposed, as had been rumoured.

The Semaphore of Marseilles states that a stranger of the very worst reputation has lately visited that town, from Brazil. During the voyage the individual in question remained so quiet that the passengers did not even suspect that they had such a companion on board. It was only on the arrival of the vessel, and when the cargo was being unshipped, that this terrible personage was observed. It was a serpent of the most dangerous kind, lying in a heap of Campeche wood. The operations of unloading were suspended, and no person has since ventured on board the vessel which contains so formidable a passenger. The approach of cold weather would, it was hoped, reduce this visitor to such a state as to enable him to be destroyed without danger to his captors.

SPAIN.—The Heraldo and Posdata of the 15th, Christino organs, appear in mourning, that day being the anniversary of the execution of General Diego Leon. The Castellano, Correspondal, and Trono, have articles on the shooting of this unfortunate insurgent, by no means flattering to the Regent. The church of St. Louis, where a mass was celebrated to the memory of Diego Leon, was crowded by Moderados of all ranks. It was reported that Espartero had resolved on prosecuting some of the journals which had attacked him so violently, as well as the cura of the parish, for not having informed the authorities that a religious manifestation was to take place.

The Heraldo states that a soldier was executed on the 14th, for having assassinated a traveller. He gave as a reason for the act, "that it was long since he had killed a man."

The Ministerial Patriota positively declares that no speech from the throne would be delivered on the opening of the Cortes.

The Posdata (Moderado) organ was found guilty on the 15th, and sentenced to two months' imprisonment and 500 reals fine, by eight against four, of a libel on Senor Don Antonio Gonzalez, the ex-Minister, by accusing the latter of corruption.

A St. Sebastian correspondent writes on the 13th, that orders had been given by the Spanish Government to demolish the fort constructed by Lord John Hay on the heights commanding the Port of Passages. This order is general, and all field-works erected in Spain during the civil war are to be razed. Many people deprecate this sweeping proclamation; for by it Government deprives itself of many points d'appui. It may be that Espartero wishes to show the Spaniards that Queen Isabella relies more upon their affections than on the strength of fortifications. There may be another reason, viz. that these fortifications, if taken possession of by enemies, would serve to protect rebels and annoy legal subjects. As it is, many of them have afforded lurking-places to robbers.

The Madrid journals and letters of the 16th are almost without interest. They confirm all that has been said lately of the excessive penury of the Spanish Government, and mention that the Minister of Finance, on the 14th inst., endeavoured to revive the negotiations for a loan with some capitalists whose terms he had previously rejected. The attempt was unsuccessful; he was offered 5 per cent. less than in the first instance.

BELGIUM.—BRUSSELS, Oct. 20. -We learn, from good authority, that whatever may be the result of the commercial negotiations which are now on foot at Paris for a custom-house union between Belgium and France, King Leopold will leave the French capital about the 3rd or 4th of November, at the latest, so as to be at Brussels at least three days before the opening of the session of the Belgian Chambers. Scarcely a day passes without an exchange of despatches between the Belgian Ministry and his Majesty.

AFFAIR OF HONOUR.—On Wednesday, the 19th inst., an affair of honour took place upon the Belgian frontier, between Mr. P. Simpson, of Cloncorrick Castle, county of Leitrim, and Mr. H. Griffiths, Port Royal, county of Sligo, the former attended by Major Orde, Jamestown Lodge, the latter by Mr. R. Fawcett, Willsborough, Sligo. Upon the first exchange of shots, Mr. Simpson received a slight graze on the leg. The parties exchanged second shots without effect, when Mr. Fawcett withdrew his friend.

GERMANY.—We learn from the German papers that the works for the fortifications of Ulm and Germersheim are actively promoted by the Wirtemberg and Bavarian Governments.

The anniversary of the battle of Leipsic, and the bestowal of a free constitution on the free city of Frankfort, were duly celebrated on the 17th and 18th inst.

Great political agitation continued to reign in the Grand Duchy of Baden, and Dr. Grune, a Prussian by birth, and editor of the opposition Manheim Gazette, had been expelled the Baden territory.

The Cologne Gazette has Berlin letters of the 16th, announcing that the Emperor of Russia had arrived on the 15th; but that his Imperial Majesty left instantly by a special train for Sans-Souci, where the King of Prussia was expecting him.

On the 10th inst., says a letter from Stettin, a steamer from Lubsin to Stettin, with about thirty workmen of the railroad on board, went down, and nearly all were drowned.

HAMBURG, Oct. 18.—The Post Office has just found out an extensive fraud by its boatman, who takes the ships' letters on board, by pocketing the postage. Some 6000 or 8000 letters have been destroyed in this way, and their non-arrival of course the means of detection.

THE HAGUE, Oct. 21.—We learn from Berlin that his Majesty the Count of Nassau left that city on the 17th to go to the Hague. We learn that the convention with Belgium was signed the day before yesterday by the respective plenipotentiaries, and that it now wants only the ratification to be binding on the two governments.—Oct. 22. There is no foundation for the report given in some foreign journals of a projected marriage between one of the Dutch princes and a French princess.

AMSTERDAM, Oct. 22.—A person (said to be an English missionary) went in a vigilante to the Breestraat, inhabited by the Jews, and distributed papers in the Hebrew and English languages, the object of which was to convert the Israelites to Christianity. The missionary was, however, not well received, and was obliged to take flight. We believe that we may affirm that this Englishman has already left the city.

RUSSIA.—WARSAW, Oct. 14.—His Majesty the Emperor went yesterday to the fortress of Nova Georgiewsk. Oct. 15.—The Emperor set out yesterday afternoon to return to St. Petersburg. His Majesty's brother, the Grand Duke Michael, arrived here last night. The Prince of Warsaw, who accompanied the Emperor to Nova Georgiewsk, returned yesterday, to receive the Grand Duke, in whose honour the city was illuminated.

THE EAST.—We have received advices from the East, brought by the Levant mail of the 21st inst. The dates are Constantinople and Alexandria the 7th inst., Smyrna the 9th, Athens the 11th, and Malta the 15th.

The Egyptian political news is of little interest. The Cyclops steamer left Alexandria on the 6th for Malta, having been replaced by the Medea. The Cameleon French steamer-of-war had arrived from Algiers, with pilgrims for Mecca. Ibrahim Pacha left Alexandria on the 27th ult. for Cairo, where Mehemet Ali, his father, who had been out at Mehemet Bey's, near Alexandria, was to join him about the 14th, a sign that the Viceroy was going to Upper Egypt to avoid diplomacy.

Our Alexandria correspondent mentions the discovery of a coal mine near Suez. When it is considered that £4 10s. per ton is now paid at that port for coal to supply the Bombay steamers, and that if it be supplied on the spot it will cost only 7s. or 8s. per ton, the magnitude of this discovery will be appreciated.

The accounts from Syria describe the outrages of the Albanians as being past all endurance, the Europeans being robbed or assaulted in the most barefaced manner.

There is no news of consequence from Malta. The Malta papers are making a grievance of the dismissal from the navy of Lieutenant Alston, of the Cambridge, tried and condemned by a Court-Martial on the 13th inst. for manifest indifference in the execution of the orders of his captain and commander, and for having been and abused a volunteer of the first class at Besika. The Court-Martial was composed of some of the most distinguished officers of the naval service.

The Great Liverpool left Malta on the 14th for Alexandria, to fetch the Bombay mail of October 1. The Ajaccio arrived at Malta on the 13th from Marseilles, with the London (India) mail of the 4th.

The Greek news is unimportant. The King and Queen were making the tour of the Cyclades in a war steamer, and were not expected in Athens before the end of October.

The news of a revolt in the island of Samos, given by the German papers, is not confirmed by the Levant advices, which are of a later date.

The Vanguard, after visiting Suda, Beyrout, Athens, Syra, Besika, and other places of interest, arrived at Corfu on the 22nd, en route to Malta.

From Constantinople we learn that the Ottoman Government is in possession of positive proofs that Prince Michael had excited the rebellion in Bulgaria, at the suggestions and instigations of the Russian Government.

Every mail from Constantinople brings additional evidence of the increasing influence of the Pacha of Egypt in Ottoman councils. Sami Pacha, who had been sent by the wily old viceroy to return his thanks for the appointment of Grand Vizier, had been extremely well received at the Turkish capital.

The quarantine establishment at Constantinople is to be transferred to the Dardanelles, a measure which will be productive of great annoyance and inconvenience.

The Smyrna Journal of the 9th states that the news from Persia continued to be of a pacific nature.

The Grand Vizier presided at a Council on the 3rd, to consider the reply of the representatives of the five great powers on the subject of the communication dated the 26th ult., made to them by the Porte, as to the government of the Lebanon. England, France, and Austria have protested, it is said, against the decision of the Porte.

CAPE OF GOOD HOPE.—By an arrival from the Cape of Good Hope we have papers to the 6th August, which bring news of the termination of the insurrection at Port Natal, and the return of part of the expedition under Lieut.-Colonel Cloete, after he had completed the pacification of the colony. The emigrant farmers having made a solemn declaration of their submission to the Queen; having released the prisoners, whether soldiers or civilians; having given up the cannon captured, as well as that belonging to themselves; and having restored all public as well as private property seized by them; the lieut.-colonel granted a general amnesty, or free pardon, to all persons who might have been engaged in resistance to her Majesty's troops and authorities, with the exception of the ringleaders. Prinsio, A. W. Pretorius, J. J. Burger, M. Van Breda, and S. Van Breda. All private property to be respected, and the emigrant farmers to be allowed to return and keep possession of their farms. The existing administration and civil institutions to be retained till the pleasure of her Majesty should be made known. The arrival at Simon's Bay, en route for Graham's Town and Cape Town, of a part of the troops employed in this arduous service furnished occasion for much congratulation, and a testimonial of some kind to mark the sense entertained by the colonists of the admirable conduct of the party was, it appears, in contemplation.

COUNTRY NEWS.

ARUNDEL.—THE ARUNDEL BANK.—Monday a meeting of creditors in this bankruptcy took place at Arundel, for proof of debts, audit of accounts, and declaration of a dividend. The auditing of the assignees' accounts, since the last dividend meeting, was then gone into. On the joint estate the accounts showed a balance in hand amounting to £8206 8s. 5d., out of which a dividend of 4s. in the pound was declared, making on the joint estate 14s. in the pound. On the separate estates of both the bankrupts 20s. in the pound has been paid.

BRIGHTON.—DREADFUL STORM.—During the whole of Saturday last Brighton was visited by a tremendous storm of wind and rain. From twelve to three o'clock it blew a dreadful hurricane, and the greatest anxiety existed amongst the fishermen, as a number of boats were out at sea, and it was thought impossible that they could weather the storm. Two boulden boats, with two men in each of them, endeavoured to enter Newhaven harbour, but in their attempt went down, within a short distance of the shore, and the four men perished in sight of a number of persons who had assembled on the pier, but were unable to render the slightest assistance. In the course of Sunday the whole of the Brighton fishermen returned home; they fortunately succeeded in running ashore in various parts of the coast between Brighton and Worthing. The poor fellows' boats were almost knocked to pieces.

A young man named Treherne, whose father has carried on the business of an upholsterer in Oxford-street, London, for more than twenty years, underwent an examination on Monday before the bench of magistrates in Brighton, charged with stealing five £5 notes of the Bank of England from the Crown Inn in Grafton-street, where he lodged. The prisoner was committed for trial.

CHELMSFORD.—Little Coggeshall, in the neighbourhood of Chelmsford, was last week the scene of a very interesting spectacle—the lying in state and funeral of a gipsy girl, named Cecilia Chilcott, who was said to be a very beautiful creature, and of great distinction and consideration amongst her tribe. No expense was spared in giving splendour and effect to the obsequies, which were attended by upwards of 5000 persons. The watch of the deceased and a purse of money were deposited beside her corpse in the coffin.

CHELTENHAM.—THE NORTHLEACH CASE. ADJOURNED INQUEST.—At eleven o'clock on Wednesday the jury proceeded in the custody of the officer left in charge of them to the Bellevue Hotel, where the coroner was, and delivered the following verdict:—"That Charles Beale died of disease of the lungs, brought on and aggravated by the punishment and mode of treatment he received whilst a prisoner in Northleach House of Correction, and the jury express their unanimous disapprobation of the conduct of the governor, Townsend, the surgeon, Bedwell, and the under-turnkey, Harding." A memorial to the Secretary of State, Sir James Graham, praying him to cause an investigation into the treatment of prisoners confined in, and the discipline of Northleach House of Correction, and the other prisons of the county, was signed by all the jurors, and was to be forwarded by the next mail to the Home Office.

CHELTENHAM.—A daring robbery was committed between this place and Brunington last week on the person of a man named Elret, a clerk in the Stavely Iron Works, whom the villains deprived of a quantity of gold and silver, and maltreated in a shocking manner. Three men have been since apprehended on suspicion, and fully committed for trial.

COLCHESTER FAIR.—For the last twenty years there has not been so little business transacted as at this fair on Thursday week. Out of 8500 sheep and lambs penned, no more than about 1500 changed hands, and the sales effected were at such prices that the dealers sustained a considerable loss. Several dealers left the field without even an offer for their sheep.

DOVER.—Saturday and Sunday the weather was very boisterous, with heavy showers of rain and hail. On Saturday afternoon it blew a perfect hurricane from the west, and the packets from Calais and Boulogne were, in consequence of the heavy swell, unable to enter the harbour. Same day an inquest was held on the body of a young female, a stranger, who had poisoned herself on the previous night by swallowing laudanum, when the somewhat extraordinary verdict of "Felo de se" was returned—amongst the arrivals were the Marchioness of Douro and suite, Lord Chief Justice Tindal, Judge Ball and family, Sir E. Smith and family, Viscount St. Vincent, Viscount Tamworth, Major-General and Mrs. Arnold, Colonel Chichester and family, and Major Cox and suite.

DURHAM.—A stranger, who stopped at the Temperance Hotel, in the city of Durham, committed suicide last week by cutting his throat in the bedroom where he slept. George Moukhouse, butcher, stated that he saw deceased on the preceding night, and showed him to the hotel. Witness inquired as to how far he came, and deceased replied from Hull, and that he had not tasted anything for two days. He appeared to be very depressed in his mind. Verdict—"Temporary derangement, from want of the common necessaries of life."

HEREFORD OCTOBER FAIR.—We do not remember to have ever witnessed so large a number of Hereford cattle in this city, with so few inferior animals among them, as we witnessed on Thursday se'nnight; nearly every street was crowded with the most splendid description of stock. Nevertheless, we hear on all hands that it was one of the worst fairs that has been held in Hereford for the last twenty years.

HULL.—At the Hull sessions, on Thursday se'nnight, Francis Fortune, late cashier of the Agricultural Bank at Hull, was found guilty of having stolen a parcel containing £870, in bank notes, which he had been entrusted to take to the post-office at Hull, to send to York, in July last. He was sentenced to be transported for seven years.

ISLE OF THANET.—The anniversary meeting of the proprietors of the steam-vessels, shipowners, merchants, and agriculturists, took place at Ramsgate-gardens, in the centre of the Isle of Thanet; John Wilkin, Esq., in the chair. The dinner was served up in excellent style by Mr. Cramp, the lessee of the gardens. About eighty gentlemen sat down to dinner, among whom were many of the most respectable inhabitants of the island.

LANCASTER. FIRE ON THE LANCASTER RAILWAY.—On Wednesday night, as the mail train was passing from Lancaster to Preston, a spark or flake of fire from the engine fell upon the top of the third carriage, and ignited the cover thrown over the luggage. Damage to the amount of £300 was done to the property upon the carriage, but the flames were extinguished before they communicated any further.

LEAMINGTON.—This fashionable watering place is fast filling with company; and the winter galeties and amusements will commence immediately and continue throughout the season. Among the attractions of this nature during the ensuing month of November may be mentioned the morning and evening concerts, at which Thalberg, Signor and Madame Ronconi, Mrs. A. Toulmin, and John Parry, will perform.

LEEDS.—We understand that the magistrates of this borough have received an intimation from Government that all the military and other expenses connected with the late riots, incurred within the borough, will be defrayed by the Government, except the payment of the police and special constables. A special county rate to the amount of £2000 was laid at the West Riding Sessions at Knaresborough on Tuesday, to defray the extraordinary expenses connected with the riots in the West Riding. The cost of the late Bolton insurrection will form no inconsiderable item in the next year's budget.

LEICESTER.—On Saturday last George Copser was charged before the Rev. J. P. Newby, at the County-office, Leicester, with stabbing John Kenny, his uncle, with intent to murder him. The prosecutor owns some houses at Wherstone, one of which the prisoner had occupied for some years without paying any rent, and having at length issued a warrant of distress, he went to have it executed, when his nephew no sooner caught sight of him than he rushed towards and stabbed him in the left side with a clasp-knife, inflicting a wound three inches in depth and an inch and a half in width, penetrating through a fustian coat, waistcoat, and belt. The prisoner had withdrawn the knife, and was in the act of repeating the blow, when his arm was arrested by another person of the name of Copser, who secured the prisoner. Medical assistance was forthwith procured, and the attendant said, that, had not the knife taken an oblique direction, death must have been instantaneous. The prisoner was fully committed to the assizes on the capital charge.

LIVERPOOL.—CHARGE OF ARSON.—A limeburner, of Liverpool, named Thomas Henry, has been twice examined at the police court of that town, upon the charge of having set fire to his own shop, and stands remanded for a third examination. The case at present only amounts to one of suspicion. The accused had premises insured for £1000 in the Phœnix, and immediately made a claim for the full amount of his policy. Some discrepancies were shown between his statements to the officers and to the insurance agents, and it was testified that his stock and furniture were of little value; neither were the remnants of the goods burned such as he had represented his stock to consist of.

MARGATE.—So vast and unprecedented have been the shoals of herrings this season upon our coast, that the Jane, one of our fishing smacks, arrived at the jetty on Sunday morning, with a cargo of the miraculous number of 50,000; the whole of which the crew disposed of to a fish-curer for £50, being less than a farthing each.

MONMOUTH.—A flock of wild geese were seen at Hadnock on Monday last, flying in a southerly direction. We believe it to be a very unusual circumstance at this period of the year. Snow fell at Monmouth and its neighbourhood on Wednesday evening.

NOTTINGHAM. FATAL ACCIDENT.—A lamentable and fatal accident occurred near Chesterfield on Friday se'nnight to Mr. George Stirling, a respectable inhabitant of Nottingham. On Friday night he started from the George Hotel, Sheffield, in a state of intoxication, against the advice of his friends. He got through Chesterfield safe, but about a mile from that town was thrown out with great violence on to the road. The wheel had gone over a heap of macadamizing stones. He had just strength left to crawl to an adjoining house and crave admittance; but it being a lonely place, and they thinking it was a ruse of some robber to get in, refused to open the door, and the unfortunate man lay upon the road four hours in the greatest suffering before he was discovered. He never spoke after he was found, and died shortly afterwards.

OLDHAM.—On Thursday se'nnight Gen. Sir Thos. Arbuthnot, and Major-General Sir William Warre, visited Oldham, and had an interview with the magistrates and head constables, for the purpose of inquiring in what respect the late strike has affected the conditions of the working class of Oldham, &c. Amongst the military officers at present stationed in Oldham is a nephew of Sir Robert Peel and a son of Colonel Sibthorp.

WARRINGTON.—On Monday morning Edward Knight, well known in Warrington, Lancashire, as the landlord of the Eagle and Child, and as a confidential servant to Messrs. Smith and Dutton, maltsters, was placed at the bar of the police-court, charged with embezzling various sums of money to the amount of nearly £1000, the property of his employers. He had been apprehended at Wigton, in Cumberland. Having absconded from Warrington on the 2nd of September, he then set up in the business in the name of Pickering, at Wigton. He was fully committed for trial.

IRELAND.

CLARE.—Jonas Studdert, Esq., of Atlantic Lodge, Kilkee, captured an enormous shark on the western coast of Clare on Saturday last. It was with great peril and amid terrific difficulties that he and his men succeeded in bringing the animal safe to shore. He at once forwarded it to Kilrush, for Limerick, to be prepared and deposited in the museum of the Philosophical and Literary Society.

COLERAINE.—Two candidates have now formally addressed the electors of Coleraine, namely, Sir Henry Hervey Bruce and Dr. Boyd, both on Conservative principles.

DUBLIN.—Mr. Baron Pennefather has sustained a domestic affliction in the decease of Mrs. Pennefather, who died on Tuesday, the 18th inst., after a long illness, at Arley Cottage, the seat of her son-in-law, the Hon. Somerset R. Maxwell, in the 64th year of her age, and 45th of her wedded life.

The price of the 4lb. loaf, of first quality, in Dublin, is 7d.; second quality, 6d.

The works upon the new line of railway (to be travelled over by atmospheric propulsion), from Kingstown to Dalkey, are proceeding with great rapidity, and several hundred men are daily employed in sinking and clearing the road.

At the head police-office, Robert Lyndsay Crawford, who claims to be entitled to the earldom of Crawford and Lyndsay, was brought up in the custody of a policeman, charged with having returned from transportation before the period specified by his sentence had expired. The prisoner was fully identified by Mr. Lambert, the governor of Enniskillen gaol, and late governor of the hulk. The magistrates committed the prisoner for trial.

The Marquis of Drogheda entered Trinity College during the present term. His lordship, who is in his 17th year, is the first nobilis, or filius nobilis, who has been a student here for many years—the last members of the nobility who received their education in our University having been Lord Mountmorres and Adair and the Hon. Randal Plunkett.

DUBLIN.—We learn from a well-informed quarter that Sir Robert Peel, in reply to representations made on behalf of the "Church Education Society"—which is patronised by Primate Beresford—has stated his unwillingness to interfere with the national system of education, established upon the basis laid down by Lord Stanley, when Chief Secretary for Ireland. But the Premier also intimated that he was disposed favourably to consider an application from the "Church Education Society" for a separate grant of small amount, with the distinct understanding, however, that the national system should be continued to be administered in the present form.

The new Bishop of Meath (Dr. Stopford) is cousin to the Duke of Buccleuch.

The annual meeting of the Roman Catholic Bishops of Ireland will be held this year on Tuesday, the 8th of November next, in Dublin.

Sir Edward Sugden, accompanied by Lady Sugden, and other members of his family, arrived at his residence in Stephen's Green on Sunday last.

Col. Acton, M.P., C. B. Baldwin, Esq., M.P., and other gentlemen, members of a deputation, attended a meeting in Drogheda, on Thursday, with a view to establishing a branch of the London and Dublin bank in that town.

KILKENNY.—An alarming accident occurred at the residence of Captain Helsham, in Kilkenny, on Monday evening. Three of his children were playing in his dressing-room, where there was a fire, and having got access to a powder-horn filled with powder, commenced amusing themselves by igniting small portions of it. A spark, however, reached the interior of the horn, when a tremendous explosion took place, which was heard at a great distance. A table, at which the children were gathered, was driven to the extremity of the room; one child was dreadfully scalded in the arm, and another lacerated seriously in the hand; nevertheless, their escape with life under the circumstances was almost miraculous.

SCOTLAND.

BUTTESHIRE.—We understand that the Hon. James A. Wortley, third son of Lord Wharncliffe, will come forward for the representation of this county, vacant by the death of the Lord Advocate.

EDINBURGH.—ASSEMBLY HALL STEEPLE.—The last stone of the spire of this superb and towering edifice was fixed in its place about half-past three o'clock on Friday se'nnight, and the event was announced by five or six workmen at the top, who stood up on their topping he gat, lifted their caps, and gave three loud cheers. The vane, which is ten feet high, and in the form of a cross, was placed on the top on Monday morning.

PAISLEY.—ATTEMPTED PRISON-BREAKING.—On Saturday morning an attempt was detected to smuggle a parcel, containing gaol-breaking instruments, into Paisley prison. The parcel was neatly made up, and consisted of saw-blades for cutting iron, and some other things, with a letter accompanying them, containing directions for their use, and for guiding the conduct of the prisoner when he made his escape. The package was addressed to a prisoner of the name of Young, who is commonly denominated the "Laird," and who is at present under sentence of transportation. The letter was evidently written by a companion in crime, and subscribed with a slang signature.

Mr. Smith, of Deanston, is commissioned by a son of the Duke of Dalmatia, Marshal Soult, to send to him from Scotland a considerable number of breeding stock, to consist both of cattle and sheep.

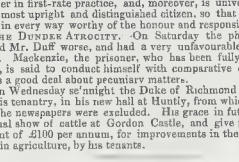
PRESBYTERY OF STRATHBOGIE.—At a meeting of the Presbytery of Strathbogie on Wednesday se'nnight, the Rev. D. Dewar, of Bellie, gave so far obedience to the Presbytery's citation as to appear before them. The reverend gentleman, however, instead of answering to the complaints against him, gave in a protest denying the status of the Presbytery, and its competency to deal with him, and upon this protest took instruments in the hands of the Presbytery clerk. It is understood that Mr. Dewar acted by legal advice from head-quarters. Mr. Dewar was again cited to appear before the Presbytery on the 9th of November, to answer to the complaints against him; and a new complaint was given in, charging him with having intruded himself on a late occasion into the parish of Rhynie.

CAPTURE OF WHALES IN LOCHRYAN.—On Wednesday week two whales of the hottle-nose species were seen disporting themselves in the loch, but no one was found adventurous enough to attempt the capture of the polar visitors till they approached Wig Bay, the scene of destruction to some of their congeners on more than one occasion within the last three years. They were first observed approaching the bay, by a son of Mr. Robertson, farmer, Clendrie, who on being informed of the circumstance, as he was par excellence the whaler of Lochryan, immediately equipped himself with musket and balls, and hastened to the shore, where he procured a boat, and with two men boldly launched out toward the monsters of the deep. Captain Osborn, of the Hero, Mr. Robertson's son, and another man, took a second boat, and proceeded to the assistance of Mr. Robertson, who soon put three balls into the larger whale, and one into the smaller. The large fish, evidently wounded in a vital part, immediately made for the shore, where it soon expired; but the small one was not to be so easily mastered, and passing under the boat in which Captain Osborn was, upset it; but fortunately the crew escaped with a good ducking and fright. This fish too, however, got on shore, where it floundered about, lashing the water into foam for more than an hour. It was ultimately despatched with knives, &c. Mr. Robertson, with the aid of his horses and about 50 men, got the animals drawn on shore, where they were soon cut up, and 16 barrels of blubber taken from them. The value of the blubber alone is between £30 and £40; and the carcases are very valuable as manure. Our readers may remember that two whales were captured in the same bay, by Mr. Robertson, three years ago. From these 190 gallons of oil were obtained, and it is expected that more will be got from the two now taken. The larger whale was 27 feet in length, by 16 in girth, the tail 8 feet in breadth; and the smaller one 18 feet by 12. An old woman, on hearing of Mr. Robertson's fortunate capture, observed to him, "Weel, Clendrie, the Lord put it into your head to get up a subscription for the puir lately, for a pickle meal; but noo, he has put it in your power to gie them some licht in the dark winter nights."

SCOTTISH LAW CHANGES.—Amongst the changes already announced, it is rumoured that the Government have it in contemplation to raise Patrick Robertson, Esq., advocate, to the bench. He is a lawyer in first-rate practice, and, moreover, is universally esteemed as a most upright and distinguished citizen, so that all will consider him in every way worthy of the honour and responsibility.

THE DUNDEE ATROCITY.—On Saturday the physicians considered Mr. Duff worse, and had a very unfavourable opinion of his case. Mackenzie, the prisoner, who has been fully committed for trial, is said to conduct himself with comparative composure, and talks a good deal about pecuniary matters.

On Wednesday se'nnight the Duke of Richmond dined about 200 of his tenantry, in his new hall at Huntly, from which the reporters for the newspapers were excluded. His grace is in future to hold an annual show of cattle at Gordon Castle, and give premiums to the extent of £100 per annum, for improvements in the breed of cattle, and in agriculture, by his tenants.



NAVAL AND MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

PORTSMOUTH, Oct. 22.—The Resistance troop ship, Commander Patey, arrived on Tuesday, from Quebec, with the second battalion of the Grenadier Guards. The Resistance came into harbour, and this morning the Guards disembarked, and proceeded by railway to London. The Calcutta, 84, arrived at Quebec the day the Resistance sailed, on the 1st of October, and will bring home the second battalion of the Coldstream Guards. The following is the list of officers who came home in the Resistance:—Colonel C. F. R. Lascelles, Lieut.-Colonel J. R. Crauford; Captains C. W. Ridley, Hon. W. Leveson, C. A. Lewis, R. B. Coulson, R. H. Gunn; Lieutenants H. B. Powell, J. T. Oswald, J. Reeve, R. Bradford; Captain Hon. J. Lindsay, Adjutant; Assistant Surgeons E. G. Blenkins and C. R. Nicoll; Quartermaster C. [illegible]; other with 23 Sergeants, 14 Grammers, 550 rank and file, one private [illegible] women, 40 children total, 710.

The Racer, 16, Commander Harvey, arrived this morning from Quebec, which she left on the 8th ult., and on the following day passed the Calcutta going up the St. Lawrence; and on the same night, at midnight, passed a man-of-war frigate, which must have been the Pique, of 36 guns. Colonel Codrington, of the Coldstream Guards, came home passenger in the Racer.

The Volcano steamer, Lieut. Featherstone, arrived on Thursday from [illegible] and Hollins. She left the former place on the 22nd of September, [illegible] after on a visit of October. Captain Denison, of the Royal Regiment, returned in her. Lieut. Cumberlege, of the 64th Regiment, was also a passenger.

The old Sans Pareil, of 80 guns, long used as a sheer hulk, at Plymouth, has been broken up.

The Belgian steamer, British Queen, was not to leave New York till the 10th or 12th instant.

The Java transport, Lieut. Imrie, agent, now in the harbour, is to take out to the Cape of Good Hope the 91st Regiment, and recruits for other corps in that island; she will then proceed onwards to China, with [illegible] for the expedition.

APPOINTMENTS.—Lieutenants—W. G. Buchanan and Dougl[illegible] to the St. Vincent; Donald Mc. L. M'Kenzie and H. B. Beresford to the Excellent; Charles Seaver to the Shearwater. Surgeons—Dr. Alexander Stuart, from the Orestes to Haslar Hospital; John Andrews to the Orestes, vice Stuart. Mas[illegible]ones Matthews (from the Queen) to be Acting Second [illegible] Musshipman—F. P[illegible] Owen to the St. Vincent, Volage, [illegible] Peters to the Warspite.

DEVONPORT, Oct. 24.—The Thunderer, 84, Captain D. Pri[illegible] is yet at anchor in the Sound. Her defects are ordered to be repaired [illegible] present at Devonport. The party of workmen [illegible] until they are [illegible] Her destination is not known, but it is supposed to be Halifax or Quebec. Lieutenant Colin C. A. Kane is appointed [illegible]

WOOLWICH, Oct. 25.—The Dee steam-vessel, Master [illegible] Driver, is expected to sail from Woolwich about the last [illegible] for the West Indies, and will embark at the Dockyard here Captain Trevor's company, 2nd battalion, and other troops from the Island of Mauritius, for a passage to Barbadoes, to relieve Major Haultain's company, 77th [illegible] and Captain Griffith's company, 3rd battalion, then [illegible] station having expired. The former having left Woolwich on the 8th of March, and the latter on the 1st of May, 1837, rendering their services in the West Indies about nine years and a half.

The Salmon, Arab ship-of-war, undergoing a complete renovation in the basin in the Woolwich Dockyard, is now nearly completed, and is expected to sail about the end of next week. This is the vessel which brought the beautiful little horse and other presents from the Imaum of Muscat to her Majesty some time ago. The Imaum or mate has got married to an Englishwoman and [illegible] this country, and the Sultan or native captain went to the parish church of Woolwich this morning to be married to a young girl from Deptford, with whom he had become acquainted at the time his vessel was lying there. The Rev. Mr. Greenlaw put several questions to the girl, and ascertained that she was an orphan, and had no relations alive, and, therefore, he at once declined to perform the ceremony, as the bridegroom could not speak one word of English. In answer to a question put by the pilot captain, one of the natives stated that the Sultan had two wives in his own country already.

The Rhadamanthus steam-vessel, Master Commander Thomas Low, arrived at Woolwich at five o'clock this afternoon from St. Petersburg, and has brought despatches from the Court of Russia, which were immediately forwarded to the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs.

MINING EXPERIMENTS AT CHATHAM.—Some very interesting experiments, illustrating the methods of blowing up stockades, bridges, counterscarps, &c., and also exhibiting the mode of attack with hand grenades, &c., were exhibited on Wednesday on the ordnance ground for field practice at Chatham. Notwithstanding the very unfavourable state of the weather, there was a large company of spectators assembled, and a very strong muster of military men. The whole of the arrangements were under the direction of Sir Frederick Smith, Lieutenant Colonel of the Engineers, to whom it is only justice to say that they were excellent, both for the practice intended to be afforded to the military employed, and for the facility given to the public of witnessing what was going forward.

Three squadrons of the 4th Light Dragoons, consisting of 350 men, have arrived at Brighton from Canterbury. The officer chief in command is Colonel Daly. The 19th Foot have taken their departure from the same place.

Monday the four-company depot of the 99th Regiment marched from Chatham to Sheerness; the 77th depot from Sheerness to Tilbury Fort; and the 75th at Tilbury Fort are ordered to Chatham. Wednesday the 97th depot, 600 strong, under the command of Captain Colvel, marched into their barracks; they are under orders to embark for the Mauritius. 500 rank and file belonging to the 98th Regiment will embark for Bombay the beginning of next month.

Henry Franklin, Esq., surgeon, has been appointed Deputy Inspector-General of the Forces at Bombay.

No definite arrangements have yet been made for filling up the vacant colonelcies occasioned by the decease of General the Hon. Sir Galbraith Lowry Cole and Lieutenant-General Sir James Lyon; but we believe the Commander-in-Chief intends removing Sir John Maclean from the 60th to the 27th Regiment, and that Lieutenant-General Middlemore and Major-General Reeves will succeed to the vacated offices.

THE GUARDS FROM CANADA.—The 2nd battalion of the Grenadier Guards, 800 strong, arrived on Saturday last at the Wellington barracks, Birdcage-walk. The men appeared to be in excellent health and spirits.

THE ARMY IN INDIA.—We have seen letters from Bombay which state that the greatest difficulty was experienced there to quarter the regiments lately arrived. The rains were at their height when the 28th, 78th, and 86th, with numerous detachments for the other regiments in the Presidency, landed at Bombay. Part of the 28th are quartered on the Island of Colaba, and part in the Fort of Bombay; the 78th had been marched up to Poona, and the 86th were huddled together in the barracks at Colaba, where the men were suffering severely from cholera morbus. As soon as the season would admit, the troops were to embark for Scinde. Sir George Arthur, the Governor, had quite recovered and was deeply engaged in investigating the affairs of the late expedition. Sir Thomas M'Mahon and Sir Charles Napier were making arrangements for the army about to be assembled in Scinde; which we learn with pleasure is to be equipped in a superior manner, and that nothing will be spared to make the force perfectly efficient and worthy of their able and zealous commander.

We are led to understand that it is the intention of government to place all available disposable pensioners, who are willing to assist the civil authorities, under drill at stated intervals: and that arms and accoutrements for 200 of these aged veterans are shortly expected at the barracks in Birmingham. This is as it ought to be: a force like this upon the spot is worth ten times a greater one at the distance of forty miles.

SHIPPING INTELLIGENCE.

BRIDPORT, Oct. 21.—The Mayflower, from Jersey, after taking in ballast, fell over and filled, but has righted, without sustaining much damage.

PARIS, Oct. 20.—The Evelina, of Dunkirk, from St. Pierre, Martinique, was wrecked near Fort Royal on the 1st ult.

BERWICK, Oct. 20.—The schooner Betsy Ann Deas, from Shields to Dundee, got on the rocks at Eyemouth in a gale on the 18th inst., and has become a total wreck. Crew saved, with part of materials.

FORELAND, Oct. 18.—It has blown a gale from the northward the greater part of to-day. The Good Intent, of this port, arrived here from Aberdeen, got on the rocks, and is expected to become a wreck. The Favourite, Sunderland, which took fire on the 13th inst., had it extinguished, but it has again broken out, and it is expected the vessel will be consumed. The William, of Sunderland, in taking the harbour struck on the rocks at the mouth, but got off with little damage.

The Jane and Emma, from South Australia, landed by a pilot-boat off Brighton, four boxes of specie and newspapers. In consequence of the regular mail coach being taken off, and the mail-bag conveyed in a cart from Brighton to London, it was necessary to hire a special conveyance for the bags.

DEAL, Oct. 23.—The Mandingo, from London to Jamaica, and the Venice, bound to Genoa, in running for the Downs, got ashore between Deal and Walmer Castle, but were assisted off with loss of rudder, &c., and proceeded to Ramsgate. His Belgian Majesty's brig Comte de Flandre, put back from Beachy Head, with loss of foremast, &c., and proceeded to Ramsgate. A water cask, marked Nassau, has been washed on shore.

RAMSGATE, Oct. 23. The Diligence, from Newport to Stockton, has put in here leaky, with loss of bowsprit, &c., and other damage, having been in contact with the Hope Emma, from Hoodstone. The Fame, from Ramoski to London, is totally lost on the Goodwin Sands: crew saved.

LYDD, Oct. 23.—The Rebecca and Eliza, of Newcastle, from Rouen, in ballast, got on the bar Beverley, and is expected to go to pieces: the cargo ashore this evening during a gale, and are expected to become total wrecks.

HARWICH, Oct. 22. The barque, City of Jerusalem, from London, foundered during a gale: crew saved.

COWES, Oct. 23.—The Laddell, from Quebec, arrived in the Channel, 20th inst.: has the crew of a Dutch ship on board which had foundered at sea.

LIVERPOOL, Oct. 24.—The schooner Charles Cobbs, from Senegal, laden with gum, went on shore on Burbo Bank, off this port, early this morning. She has filled with water, and will become a total wreck. Crew taken off the bank by H. M. steam-vessel ——, hence to Dublin, with the mails, and afterwards transferred to the Magazine life-boat, which landed them safely at Liverpool. It was blowing fresh at the time from the northward.

BERMUDA, Oct. 20.—The Havre, M'Kown, of New Orleans, lying in this port ready for sea, bound for New Orleans, took fire this morning, is now burning, and it is said will be entirely consumed. The masts and rigging have been cut away and saved.

PLYMOUTH, Oct. 23.—It has blown a gale from W.S.W. to N.W., with heavy squalls, for the last 36 hours. 1 P.M., wind at N.W., heavy squalls. A brig or schooner, with stern above water, was passed on the 20th inst. by the June and Betsy, arrived here.

BRISTOL, Oct. 22.—The Pacquet, arrived here from Zante, passed on the 3d inst. the wreck of a vessel (supposed to be foreign), bottom up, off Cape de Gatt.

The following whalers have arrived in the Downs: The Defiance, Resolution, and Recovery, all from the South Seas.

HAVRE, Oct. 24.—A French brig (supposed the Victorine), from Marseilles to Rouen, is totally lost near here: crew saved.

CHESTER, Oct. 25.—The St. James sailed from the Clyde for Quebec on the 21st April, and has not since been heard of.

DOVER, Oct. 25. The long-boat of the Hope of London, lost on the Goodwin Sands, has been picked up and landed here.

HASTINGS, Oct. 25. The Watt of Plymouth, from Quebec, laden with timber, has gone ashore on the Bonder bank, Eastbourne, and expected to become a wreck: crew saved. The vessel had been picked up at sea, and six men and one boy put on board to navigate her.

ILFRACOMBE, Oct. 21.—The boat of the William Wilberforce have been found under the cliffs, stove to pieces.

PADSTOW, Oct. 24. The Timbuctoo, from Africa to Bristol, was driven on shore yesterday at Port Isaac, during a heavy gale at N.N.W., and is injured: crew saved.

GIBRALTAR, Oct. 13. The Henrietta schooner, of Rotterdam, got in contact with a Spanish or Italian brig (unknown) on the 30th ult., and carried away the bowsprit, &c. The former, it is supposed, bore up for Carthagena, and the latter was subsequently discovered a wreck by the Edmund Castle, arrived here. The wreck of a large vessel of about 350 tons name unknown, on her beam-ends, sails in the water as if upset in a squall, long-boat in its place, but no boat astern, was passed off Cape de Gatt on the 1st inst., by the Fortuna, arrived here. The Belina, from Marseilles to Cork, put in here on the 10th inst., leaky.

SHIPWRECKS OF RAMSGATE.—On Saturday morning last, at nearly one, the town of Ramsgate was thrown into a state of the greatest excitement on account of two large vessels being wrecked on the Goodwin Sands, during the storm which raged furiously the whole night from the south-west, unequalled in violence since the hurricane of November, 1824. The first proved to be a barque called the Hope, belonging to London, commanded by Captain Steel, on her homeward voyage from Quebec. She had struck on the outside of the Goodwin sands. It appears, from the accounts given by the crew, that the ship struck shortly after midnight, when running for the mouth of the Thames. The wreck has since entirely disappeared. Her loss is estimated at between 40,000 and 50,000. The crew were all saved. The other wreck was a barque, nearly of the same size, named the Nancy. It took place close to the Light of all Nations. Much is reported to have been destroyed about the same time: it was supposed by the ship passing over it. From the fact of the boats being still attached to the wreck, there is little doubt but the entire of her crew perished, as none of them have since been heard of. The ship is valued at £8000.

NEW CATHOLIC CHAPEL AT WOOLWICH.—On Wednesday an imposing ceremony took place at the laying of the foundation-stone of a new Roman Catholic church, at Woolwich, on ground granted for that purpose by the Board of Ordnance. The new church is dedicated to St. Peter, and the ground was consecrated by Dr. Griffiths, titular bishop of the London district.

CATCHING A WHALE, OFF DEPTFORD PIER.

A WHALE SPECIES IN THE THAMES.—On Sunday afternoon, between four and five o'clock, several watermen on duty at Bell-water-gate, near the Deptford pier, observed a huge dark substance projecting above the surface of the river. The animal was moving down the river between the pier and the Dreadnought Seamen's Hospital-ship. Five of them put off in their boat, and one of them, armed with a large bearded spear, commenced the attack upon the monster, which soon showed symptoms of weakness, and threw up large quantities of water from the aperture on its back. The other boats surrounded the animal and pushed it along with their boat-hooks close under the pier, where they finally despatched him, and with strong cords and pullies raised him, with much difficulty, upon the pier. In a short time afterwards such immense numbers of persons congregated to gratify their curiosity, that Mr John Taylor, the high constable of Deptford, was compelled to call for the aid of the R division of the police to keep order. The fortunate captors, having measured him, state that his total length is 14 feet 5 inches, and that he weighs about two tons. His mouth is 3 feet 10 inches long, and his tail measures the same length from point to point. (The following sketch of the monster was taken by our artist on the spot.) At daybreak on Monday morning, a large number of carriages being procured, this enormous fish was, after great labour and time, removed, and secured by chains to it, and conveyed, by means of several horses, to the premises adjoining Mr. Williams's, the Bull and Butcher, Old Kingstreet, and placed upon a stand erected for the purpose. The animal is what is known by persons accustomed to the whale fishery as a fin back or fin fish. The following is an accurate description of the prize:—The fin fish is as long as a whale, but is two-thirds less in bulk. It is distinguished by a fin on its back next the tail, and by spouting up the water more violently and higher than the whale. The bunch on the head is divided according to its length, that is, at the blowing-hole through which it spouts the water. The back, which is black, is more straight than that of the whale, and the lips are of a brown colour, appearing like a twisted rope. The whalebone hangs from the upper lip, as it does in the whale; but it does not hang out of the mouth at the sides, as in that animal. The colour is like that of a tench, and is of a perfectly india-rubber texture; the body is long and slender, and not so fat as the whale, for which he is generally neglected. He is much more dangerous to kill than a whale, because his motion is quicker, and he beats more with his tail, so that seamen dare not approach too near in their boats. The tail is flat, like that of a whale, and he seldom appears until the whale is gone off. The belly is of a white colour. He is supposed to have gone blind in the river while in pursuit of herrings.

DESTRUCTION OF THE CAISSON ON THE GOODWIN SANDS.—The destruction of the caisson lately formed on the Goodwin Sands, by Mr. W. Bush, and the loss of life which attended the event, are a subject of much regret to the commercial body. Great benefit to the public, especially the shipping and trading interest, had been anticipated from Mr. Bush's contrivance; and the circumstance that it should have been run foul of and annihilated by that for the protection of which it was invented, namely, a ship in distress, is rather an aggravation of the disappointment felt at the unfortunate issue of Mr. Bush's active and persevering exertions in bringing his undertaking to the requisite point of efficiency. The merits of the work, as a practical instance of what may be attained by the application of genius and science to objects of this nature, are in no way touched by the calamity just communicated from Deal, regarding the embryo "Light of all Nations." The caisson has, it seems, totally disappeared.

EXTENSIVE SMUGGLING.—A few days since, on the arrival of the Caledonia steam-ship off Horselydown, two custom-house officers, named James Jordan and Henry Bayley, who had received information that an attempt would be made to run a great quantity of contraband goods ashore, boarded the vessel, and after a very diligent search succeeded in seizing a large quantity of tobacco and cigars. The net weight of the tobacco, which was of a very superior description, was 500lb., and of the cigars 176lb., the whole of which, being foreign manufacture, was liable to a duty of 9s. 6d. per lb. The Caledonia, which has become liable to forfeiture under the law of Customs, was put under seizure by the revenue officers, but has been since restored to her owners (the General Steam Navigation Company), on their giving bond to pay any fine that may be imposed.

EXPLOSION AT THE CITY GAS WORKS.—On Sunday morning, about eight o'clock, an immense body of flames and smoke, which had the appearance of a burning volcano, was seen issuing from a portion of the City Gas-works, which is situate near the bridge. The alarm quickly spread, and the engines from Farringdon-street and other stations were seen in attendance; neither the firemen, however, nor any other person were permitted to enter the premises. On inquiry it was ascertained that the apparent conflagration rose from an escape of gas from one of the cast-iron retorts which had burst, having ignited. The flame continued for about half an hour, when it gradually disappeared, without any material damage having been sustained.

"The King will knight you," said Anson to Campbell, as they were proceeding to Court. "I ken nae use that will be to me," was the reply. "But your lady might like it," said Anson. "Weel, then," rejoined Campbell, "his Majesty may knight her if he pleases."—Memoirs of Keppel.

VACANCY IN THE COURT OF ALDERMEN.—The death of Sir John Cowan, Bart., occasions a vacancy in the Court of Aldermen, which, it is rumoured, will probably be filled by Mr. Pilcher, the present sheriff.

FARRINGDON-STREET IMPROVEMENTS.—It is not expected that the buildings to be erected in the new Farringdon-street will be commenced before the ensuing spring, for which purpose two plots of ground have been taken by contractors. The houses are to be second-rate, having a frontage of about 18 feet, by a depth varying from 50 to 60 feet. They are all to be of a similar elevation, and to be erected according to plans and specifications at the Office of Works, Guildhall. During the next session of Parliament it is intended to apply for an act empowering the commissioners appointed to carry into effect the City improvements to extend the line of street to Cow-cross, by which there will be an open communication with Clerkenwell-green, and from thence to Islington, and which will be the means of removing a very dense and closely-populated neighbourhood.

ST. THOMAS'S HOSPITAL.—The medical officers and lecturers of St. Thomas's Hospital gave their first conversazione for the season last week in the Grand Hall, when upwards of 800 individuals were in attendance. Mr. R. D. Grainger, lecturer on anatomy and physiology, read an interesting paper, giving a summary of recent discoveries, by means of the microscope, relative to the ultimate structure of muscle, after which the company adjourned to the theatre, to witness the exhibition of the powerful oxy-hydrogen microscope, constructed by Mr. Ross. The spectators were delighted with the splendid effect of the crystallization of tartaric acid, as seen by means of polarised light.

WESTMINSTER MEDICAL SOCIETY. The first meeting for the present session was held on Saturday evening at the rooms of the society in Exeter Hall. The officers and committee for the present session were put in nomination, Dr. Reid being proposed as president, and Dr. Robt. Willis as vice-president. A paper was read from the president, on a disease of the bronchial gland, in which the most decided symptoms of consumption were developed, but without any emaciation, which is so constant a feature in this disease.

ALARMING FIRE.—On Monday night, between nine and ten o'clock, an extensive fire broke out in the workshops of Mr. Robert Walker, carpenter and builder, Marylebone-passage, Wells-street, Oxford-street. The damage done in amount is very considerable, including a large quantity of the workmen's tools. It appeared to have originated from leaving a lighted candle burning on one of the benches after the workmen had left. Mr. Walker is insured in the Sun Fire Office.

NOOKS AND CORNERS OF OLD ENGLAND.

WILFORD CHURCH.

Wilford is a delightfully picturesque and secluded village on the banks of the river Trent, about a mile from the town of Nottingham; and though so short a distance from a populous manufacturing district, it yet retains all those rural characteristics which poets, and topographers delighted to describe centuries ago. Sir Juckes Clifton, Baronet, of Clifton Hall, is the lord of the manor; his ancestors have been seated at Clifton, two miles' distant from Wilford, ever since the reign of Henry the Third; but they held lands in this district long before that period. Sir Gervase Clifton was created a baronet in the ninth year of James the First. Wilford was anciently a Roman station, and some years since many Roman coins were discovered there, most of which were of the latter emperors. It was an eminent manor in the time of Edward the Confessor; and "did belong," says Thoreton, "to the famous Godes the Countess." When the great survey under William the Conqueror was made, his natural son, William Peveril, governor of Nottingham Castle, had possessions there; and the village in those days had a "priest and a church." The population is now about 600. The present rector (the Rev. Thomas Thorp) was instituted in 1819; and the annual value of the living, according to the report of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, is £574. The church, which is dedicated to St. Wilfrid, presents, to the north-east, an interesting and handsome appearance; but the southern side is disfigured by an unsightly porch, and several pieces of patchwork, which the hand of "modern improvement" has introduced. It has a low tower and clerestory, a rather spacious nave and aisle, and a good chancel, which, as the village chronicle says, was "beautified by the Rev. Mr. Carter, rector of this parish," who also founded and endowed a charity school, and left several bequests to the poor of the village. This benevolent clergyman died in December 1732. The church contains a fine old baptismal font; but the most ancient date that can be discovered within the walls of this sacred edifice is 1585, inscribed upon a flat stone in the north aisle, no further record on it being discernible. The churchyard is sheltered by a range of noble elm trees; and the silvery Trent flows close past this hallowed enclosure with a rushing stream.

When we visited this sequestered and sacred retreat, there was a pensive softness in the hour favourable to meditation. It was a fine autumnal evening, and no sound broke the solemn stillness of this sanctuary of the dead, save the gurgling of the waters as they rushed over their pebbly bed, and the cawing of the rooks from the "tall ancestral trees" which shadow the rectory adjoining the churchyard. Many a memorial of the frailty of life and the vanity of human expectations does this rustic cemetery afford. Here are headstones and sepulchres which tell

> Of beauty wither'd in her fairest bloom,
> The lovely in their loveliness—the proud
> In grandeur's pomp—the strong man in his strength.

VIEW OF WILFORD CHURCH.

Here "the rude forefathers of the hamlet sleep" by the sides of men who, having borne "the battle and the breeze" in their country's cause, have repaired hither to close their earthly pilgrimage in peace. Here, also, is a most touching record of domestic sorrow, in a sepulchral inscription to the memory of two brothers of the name of Gill, sons of a former rector of Wilford; one of whom was killed at the assault of Gohud, in the East Indies, on February 21st, 1806, at the age of 21 years; and the other, aged 34, died on his passage home from the same clime in October of the same year. While the various gravestones exhibit many a "holy text," not only to "teach the rustic moralist to die," but also to live, as becomes a Christian, who looks for a better and an abiding country. If, as poets say, at such a place, and such an hour,

> The dead, the distant, then are nearest,
> And joy is soft, and sorrow sweet;"

if, as our immortal Milton sings,

> Millions of spiritual creatures walk the earth,
> Both when we wake, and when we sleep, unseen;

no wonder that our thoughts should revert to one, who has long since exchanged the minstrelsy of this world for the seraphic harmonies of heaven; but the memory of whose genius is as much associated with this his favourite retreat, as the legend of the fair maid of Clifton with that lovely grove which forms the south-western boundary of the landscape as seen from Wilford churchyard. For here it was that the gifted Kirk White delighted to hold converse with his God; and here, when just recovered from a debilitating sickness—a warning prelude to his early death—he poured forth the following apostrophe:

> Here could I wish to sleep. This is the spot
> Which I have long mark'd out to lay my bones in:
> Tired out and wearied with the riotous world,
> Beneath this yew I would be sepulchred.
> It is a lovely spot! The sultry sun,
> From his meridian height, endeavours vainly
> To pierce the shadowy foliage, while the zephyr
> Comes wafting gently o'er the rippling Trent,
> And plays about my wan cheek. 'Tis a nook
> Most pleasant. Such a one perchance did Gray
> Frequent, as with a warmer muse he wanton'd.
> Come, I will sit me down and meditate.
> * * * * *
> Grant, heaven, that here my pilgrimage may close!
> Yet, if this be denied, where'er my bones
> May lie * * * * yet still > (For why should sober reason cast away
> A thought which soothes the soul?) yet still my spirit
> Shall wing its way to these my native regions,
> And hover o'er this spot.

As we were ruminating on the possibility that the spirit of the departed White might then be "hovering" over the solemn haunt, we were roused from our reflections by the appearance of a lady, who had some flowers in her hand, and who looked (or we fancied

so) as if she thought our presence an intrusion; we, therefore, retired to a remote corner of the churchyard, when she knelt beside one of the graves, and having remained there for a short time, walked pensively away. On resuming our ramble among the tombs, we observed that she had adorned with pale roses a neat grassy mound, beneath which, as the headstone informed us, sleeps all that is mortal of an infant cherub, whose spirit now rejoices in the "climes of bliss." The incident was romantic and touching; and, though some may scoff and some may sneer at such tributes to the memory of the departed, we could not do otherwise than respect the feeling which dictated such remembrances. There was an allegory in the transaction of nature's teaching, for, as "the leaves around us falling" seemed to speak of earthly sorrow and decay, the roses on the grave told of a glorious immortality; and we retired from the house of prayer, and the resting-place of the dead, again to take our share in the busy avocations of life, muttering to ourselves the beautiful lines of Mrs. Hemans:—

Bring flowers, pale flowers, o'er the bier to shed
A crown for the brow of the early dead
For this through its leaves hath the white rose burst,
For this in the woods was the violet nurst:
Though they smile in vain for what once was ours,
They are love's last gift—bring flowers, pale flowers."

Bring flowers to the shrine where we kneel in prayer,
They are Nature's offering—their place is there;
They speak of hope to the fainting heart,
With a voice of promise they come and part
They sleep in dust through the wintery hours:
They break forth in glory—bring flowers, bright flowers."

FLORICULTURE.

THE AMARYLLIS.

To carry out a plan which has been for some time in contemplation, a new series of botanical illustrations is this week commenced. The contempt which is said to be the certain consequence of familiarity was too liable to attach to our previous pictures of objects well known, no matter how intrinsically valuable they may be, or how highly prized, or what amount of art and ability may have been devoted to their delineation, pictorial as well as literary. The ensuing series will comprise plants in many instances new in most cases rare, and at all times such as are not popularly known. It is proposed to give a type of every family in the modern botanical nomenclature, so that our journal will present in this section of natural history a book of reference, as valuable in effect as the design is original and unique. The subject of our present sketch is a member of the varied and resplendent family of lilies and a species of the Amaryllis tribe, known to the floriculturist as Amarillus aulica platypetala. For the purposes of illustration we have judged it better to give a drawing of a solitary flower than of the five which usually form the fine crown of flowers surmounting the stalk. The foregoing figure is reduced about one-third from the natural size. The lily family appears to have attracted notice at a very early date. The word lily is supposed to be derived either from an eastern root, or from the Celtic Lil, from the latter of which clearly comes the Gallic Lili, signifying whiteness, and has been applied to plants of different kinds. The term has been variously extended and restricted, and has been employed by the ancients and moderns. Solomon uses lily in a collective sense, and also distinguishes among lines the lily of the valley; and the Saviour, when he directed his hearers to "consider the lilies of the field," seems to have used the term in the same comprehensive way, as may be shown from the context and from modern researches. Historical references, says Burnet, can alone fully develop the impressive beauty of this as well as of many other passages in ancient records. Thus it is well known that fuel is so scarce in many parts of the East that large trees are regarded with especial reverence, and the inhabitants are obliged by turns to use every kind of combustible matter, such as the withered stalks of herbs and flowers, the tendrils of the vine, and the small branches of rosemary and other shrubs to heat their baths and ovens. Allusion to this fact is at once recognised in the following from the New Testament:—"If God so clothe the grass of the field which to-day is, and to-morrow is cast into the oven." The words "grass of the field" included the lines of which the saviour had just been speaking. This will appear more evident from the observations of Sir J. E. Smith, who, when endeavouring to identify these lilies, says it is natural to presume the divine teacher, according to his usual custom, called the attention of his hearers to some object at hand; and, as the fields of the Levant are overrun with the Amaryllis lutea, whose golden lilaceous flowers afford in autumn one of the most brilliant and gorgeous sights in nature, the expression, "Solomon in all his glory is not arrayed like one of these," is peculiarly appropriate. So abundant are lilaceous plants in the East, that a province of Persia was named Susiana and its chief city Sushan, from these beautiful flowers growing there in excess. Of this gorgeous family there can be no doubt the Amarillis formed a distinguished member. Fany ranked the lily next in beauty to the rose: many deem the lily superior. Anacreon compares Venus to the lily, though not with his customary felicity, as it has ever been regarded as the emblem of purity and moral worth. The different species of amaryllis are poisonous. Hæmanthus toxicarius, formerly called Amarillus toxicaria, is the plant with which it is said the Hottentots poison their arrows. Weapons wetted with the juice of the bulb convey certain death by the slightest wound. The flesh of animals thus slain is eaten with impunity by the natives. Nerine sarniensis, the Guernsey lily, naturalized by the wreck of a vessel from the Cape, is said to be poisonous; Amaryllis ornata, to be astringent; Astroemeria salsilla, diaphoretic. In the West Indies and South America the last-named is cultivated for the sake of its root, which is eaten as the tubers of the potato are elsewhere. It is a curious fact that flowers of this class lose much of their fragrance when they become double, while flowers of the rosaceous class acquire more intense odour by the multiplication of their petals.

THE AMARYLLIS.

In speaking of the amaryllis as belonging to the lily family, we, of course, merely use the term in the comprehensive sense that time has sanctioned. In strict botanical phrase, the flower is a type of a family to which it gives the name, and of which the following are the essential characters:—Calyx and corolla superior, regular, coloured; Stamens 6, arising from the sepals and petals, sometimes cohering by their dilated bases into a kind of cup; sometimes an additional series of barren stamens is present, often forming a cup which surmounts the tube of the perianth; anthers bursting inwardly. Ovary 3-celled, the cells many-seeded, or sometimes 1 or 2-seeded; style 1; stigma 3-lobed. Fruit either a 3-celled valved capsule, with loculicidal dehiscence, or a 1 3 seeded berry. Generally bulbous, sometimes fibrous-rooted. Leaves ensiform. Flowers usually with spathaceous bracts.

The six stamens readily distinguish these from Iridaceæ, and the inferior ovary from Liliaceæ and Melanthaceæ.

Intelligence has been received of the illness of the Right Hon. John Nicholl, M.P., Judge-Advocate-General, in Switzerland.

Deck passengers are now taken from Dublin to Liverpool by the steamers for 1s. each!

It is stated on good commercial authority that the Marquis de Lavalette, the nobleman who recently married Madame Welles, the widow of the opulent American banker and merchant at Paris, is coming to England partly on an excursion of pleasure, but more particularly on a mission of some kind from M. Guizot, probably to conduct a negotiation on the right of search question just now so much before the public.

THE CORN EXCHANGE, MARK-LANE.

We this day present our "gentle public" with a spirited sketch of the Corn Exchange, which we think will be pronounced by those of our readers who have the opportunity of viewing the original to be a truthful and characteristic delineation of a familiar scene in that busy mart; while to those at a distance it will convey some idea of the manner in which they transact business at Mark-lane. We would draw attention to some of the magnates who figure above, but our space prevents our doing so. Leaving, then, for the present unnoticed the "fine young English gentleman," luxuriating in the spotless purity of his immaculate white cords and mahogany tops, to continue his inspection of samples,

"In a light and careless way,
As men who with their purpose play," we shall not, Cobbett-like, pause to have a fling at that hawk-eyed Quaker, such an one, mayhap, as called forth from the irate William the following. Speaking of the corn trade, he says:—"They (the Quakers) carry on the far greater part of this work—they seem, as to the products of the earth, what the Jews are as to gold and silver. How they profit, or rather the degree in which they profit, at the expense of those who own and those who till the land, may be guessed at if we look at their immense worth, and if we at the same time reflect that they never work. One would think that their religion bound them not to work. They make no thing; they cause nothing to come; they breed as well as other sects, but they make none of the raiment or houses, or cause none of the food to come; they are base usurers, who would grind money out of the bones of their own fathers." This, in our opinion, is much overdrawn and exaggerated; for we are rather disposed to take a more charitable view, and imagine, with Wordsworth, that their

"Fearless virtue bringeth boundless gain;"

or that some of their number are "Men who can hear the Decalogue and feel

No self-reproach."

The truth is, apart from their little ingenious devices for "working the averages," we think they are an exceedingly ill-used race. Even Mr. Dickens, whose universal benevolence for idiot boys, doting grandfathers, and very little children, has laid his sympathies excited in the following extraordinary manner by a proximity to the straight-haired:—"The collar of my coat appeared to stiffen, and the brim of my hat to expand, beneath its Quakerly influence. My hair shrunk into a sleek short crop, my hands folded themselves upon my breast of their own calm accord, and thoughts of taking lodgings in Mark-lane, over against the market-place, and of making a large fortune by speculations in corn, came over me involuntarily." Having left our "Friends" in such good hands, we shall now proceed to take a hasty glance in the history of those laws and ordinances which at different times have been considered necessary for the regulation of this important traffic.

In 1549 a proclamation was issued which prohibited corn-dealers from having more than ten quarters in their possession at one time; and it directed justices of the peace to look into the barns, and so much as to them seemed superfluous was to be sold at a reasonable price, persons being appointed to attend in every market to see that this was done. Two years afterwards the substance of the above proclamation was embodied in a statute, which subjected persons buying corn to sell again to heavy penalties. Farmers buying corn for seed were required to sell an equal quantity of their corn in store. When wheat was under 6s. 8d. the quarter, it might then be bought by dealers; but they were not to enhance the price or prevent the supply of the market. Corn "badgers," licensed by three justices of the peace, were permitted to buy in open fairs and markets for the supply of cities and towns. In 1562 there was another statute passed which affected them, and which seems to have been framed with the sanction of the ladies; they were to be householders, not less than thirty years of age, and either married or widowers; and the licence was to be only an annual one, to be granted by the magistrates in quarter sessions. The dealers were also to give securities not to be guilty of engrossing or forestalling, and not to buy out of open market, except under an express licence.

For upwards of two centuries the authorities of the City were accustomed constantly to provide a store of corn against seasons of scarcity, and when prices rose the City granaries were opened, for the purpose of keeping them moderate. This was doing nothing more than individuals would have done: still it was perhaps wise as well as benevolent in the City looking with a provident eye towards the means of mitigating the dearths which were so frequently occurring. Sir Stephen Brown, in 1438, appears to have been the first Mayor of London who established a public granary. Sir Simon Eyre, about this time, established another at Leadenhall. But we find, nearly a century afterwards (1521), a succeeding Mayor found the City granaries almost empty. "There were not," says Stow, "one hundred quarters of wheat in all the garners of the City, either within the liberties, or near adjoining, through which scarcity, when the carts of Stratford came laden with bread to the City, there was such press about them that one man was ready to destroy another in striving to be served for their money; but this scarcity lasted not long, for the Mayor in short time made such provision of wheat that the bakers both of London and Stratford were weary of taking it up." In 1546 two aldermen were appointed, weekly, in rotation, to purvey, and to see that the markets were well supplied. Soon after the commencement of the seventeeth century, the difficulty of keeping up the ancient practice of providing a store of corn appears greatly to have increased. In 1631, when the companies were ordered to buy wheat and rye from abroad, they refused; and in the following year the wardens of some of the companies who had neglected to store their granaries were committed. With the Tudors had departed many of those restrictions which, perhaps, had some use in their day, but the greater freedom of trade no longer rendered it necessary for the authorities to supersede the transactions of private dealers. At length the Great Fire destroyed the granaries, mills, and ovens, at the bridge, and in other parts of the City, and the custom of providing stores of corn was not again resumed.

The Corn Market on Cornhill, which, gives its name to one of the City wards and that of St. Michael-le-Quern, even the ancient Corn Markets of the City, Stow speaks of the one on Cornhill as having been time out of mind. The other was at the west end of Cheapside; and the parish is now united to St. Vedast in Foster-lane. The other ancient Corn Markets were those at Leadenhall, Newgate, Queenhithe, Grasschurch, and Southwark. At the beginning of the last century the metropolitan Corn Market was held at Bear-quay, in Thames-street; Queenhithe was the great market for flour and meal; and the White Horse Inn Meal Market, near Holborn-bridge, is doubtless the one alluded to by Strype as appointed to be held near the River Fleet.

The present system of factorage in the corn trade is stated to have existed only about a hundred and fifty years. The traditional report of its origin ascribes it to the custom of a number of Essex farmers, who frequented an inn at Whitechapel, leaving with the landlord or waiter samples of the corn and grain of which they had small parcels unsold, with a commission to sell for them, and thus they were not compelled to attend the next market. The predecessor of one of the oldest houses now in the trade, in beginning to sell by commission, had a stand on Tower-hill, and, in the course of a few years, the number who were profitably engaged in the same way had so much increased, that the old Corn Exchange in Mark-lane was projected, and opened in 1747. Eighty years after a second Corn Exchange was contemplated, and was opened in 1828. The new Corn Exchange, the subject of our illustration, is in the Grecian Doric style. It is favourably situated for so narrow a locality, being placed at the bend of the street, so that the stranger comes upon it unawares, and it presents several features of originality in design and other points of interest which our limits prevent us noticing. The interior is lighted by a lantern with vertical lights in the centre spaces within the columns, and the compartments on each side have skylights in their ceilings. The stands of the corn-factors, to the number of eighty and upwards, are along the sides of the building. On them are placed small bags and wooden bowls, with samples of different kinds of grain, and behind is a desk for the factor or his clerk, with something of the counting-house. Lightermen and granary-keepers have stands as well as corn-merchants, factors, and millers. The market-days are Monday, Wednesday, and Friday, the first being by far the busiest day of the three; and the hours of business being from ten till three. A bargain does not become valid until an hour after the commencement of business on next market-day. The commercial reader will, perhaps, be interested in knowing that wheat is paid for in bills at one month, and all other descriptions of corn and grain in bills at two months. The Kentish "hoymen" are privileged, by the custom of the market, to sell for ready money; they have stands free of expense. The Essex dealers also enjoy some privileges, owing to their having continued to supply the City at a time when it was ravaged by the plague.

The total importation of corn, grain, and seeds into London averages at the present time about three and a half million quarters, or about 28,000,000 bushels annually, besides about 50,000 tons of flour and meal, the weight altogether being 500,000 tons. What a vast amount and variety of industry is involved in the creation of this large quantity of agricultural produce, and in the preparation of it for consumption! What ploughing, and sowing, and reaping—what thrashing, winnowing, and measuring—before a single grain leaves the spot where it is produced, and how variously are these processes conducted in the different countries which supply London! Next to coal the trade in corn gives the most extensive employment to shipping in the port of London of any other commodity. In the months of July and August, 1841, there arrived in London 787 vessels from foreign parts laden with foreign corn, 306 being British and 481 foreign.

The week in which the duty falls to the lowest point is the harvest of the speculator, to which he has long looked anxiously forward. The arrival of ships from abroad is now an object of the utmost solicitude, as a few hours may make a difference of several thousand pounds to a large importer. The number of corn vessels which do arrive is so great, that warehouses, granaries, and the river itself in many places, is completely blocked up; but the large quantity suddenly brought into the market depresses prices, the duty mounts again, and a vessel which arrives on a Friday, instead of a Thursday, not only loses the advantage of the low duty and high prices, but the cargo may have to remain for months in the granary.

Though there is, it must be admitted, a good deal of chicanery carried on here, we know few places more likely to impress the visitor with a high opinion of our agricultural relations. Here, through all the changes that have occurred, are still to be met with, "plenty as blackberries," specimens in abundance of the English yeoman—that good-humoured, good-looking race of men to whom, in the olden time, our country owed so much of her prosperity, and who yet form the bone and sinew of the nation.

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK.

SUNDAY, 30th Oct.—20th Sunday after Trinity.
MONDAY, 31st. Allhallow Eve.
TUESDAY, 1st Nov.—All Saints.
WEDNESDAY, 2nd.—All Souls.
THURSDAY, 3rd. St. Winifrede.
FRIDAY, 4th.—St. Charles Boromeo.
SATURDAY, 5th.—

THE COLOSSEUM PRINT.

We have now to call the attention of our readers and subscribers to the promised prospectus of our Colosseum Print—a superb and original work of art, produced upon the grandest scale—which we pledged ourselves to present to all the readers of the

ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS

who should have punctually subscribed to the paper during the first six months of its existence. The great success which we have achieved now enables us to go to an extent of enterprise that we are sure will more than crown the highest expectations of the public.

THE COLOSSEUM PRINT

derived its title, in the first instance, from an intention of presenting a magnificent engraving of LONDON AT ONE VIEW—to reflect, as it were, a similar grand picture to that so long exhibited at the Colosseum. The better taste, however, of our artists and advisers, reminded us that we should thus exclude that wondrous leviathan of our metropolitan architecture,

ST. PAUL'S CATHEDRAL;

and to this important recollection was added a suggestion that a much finer field of what may not inaptly be called "Panoramic glory" was presentable from another lofty eminence of London, which it, however, required official authority to enable us to reach.

TWO SPLENDID VIEWS OF THE METROPOLIS

have been the result of the altered proposition, taken north and south, from the summit of the

DUKE OF YORK'S COLUMN,

by the generous and nobly-granted permission of General Maitland, for himself and his co-trustees, who thus confided to us an exclusive right that stimulated our proprietors to a degree of exertion which they hope will prove worthy of the signal mark of favour they have received. Their

COLOSSEUM PRINT,

which will really be, in its superb dimensions, what the term "Colossal" is in reference to size, will then present two

ORIGINAL ASPECTS OF LONDON.

The upper or South view will comprise all that magnificent sweep of picturesque objects which stretch from the Surrey shores of the Thames, as far as they are visible on the right, to beyond the Tower of London, with its adjacent forests of shipping, on the left. The splendid range of manufactories which skirt the river, grow upward from their far distance to the gazer's eye, until they are closed with, and screened by, the venerable Abbey of Westminster, at once, with its solemn religious grandeur, absorbing mind and sight. But that fine pause of contemplation over, and away travels the eye, using as it were a kind of memory to bring present the old familiar features of the "City of the World." Look at the beautiful range of bridges spanning that river, which, though its waters are but silver, has been designated, for their burthen, the "river of gold." Mark the long lines of streets, the grand public buildings, the spires of old and new churches pointing to the sky, the Monument, the ancient and fort-like Tower, and 'mid all and above all the eternal grandeur of St. Paul's! And these objects are so woven into the picture, that they are not parts of a confused mass, but prominent beauties of such a clear and well-defined architectural panorama as was never before embodied in the forms of art.

THE LOWER OR NORTH VIEW

turns the gazer upon a still more broad and open district of the metropolis. It stretches over the beautiful Parks; includes the Royal Palaces and mansions of our nobility; involves the finest streets in the world, Regent-street, Piccadilly, Portland-place, Whitehall, Trafalgar-square, and the superb gathering of aristocratic clubs; and, in a word, concentrates within its focus all the palatial magnificence of western London to contrast with the staid and solid greatness of its commercial aspect; endless wealth-accumulation on the one hand, and on the other an expenditure whose lavishness might startle kings.

Such are the two sections of the UNRIVALLED PICTURE which we are about to present in all good-will to our readers, and now the only other points connected with it which we wish to impress upon their attention are

ITS UNDOUBTED FIDELITY AND TRUTH.

It is, in plain terms, a Mirror of the Metropolis, and for its reflection we are indebted to the light of the sun.

M. Claudet was expressly commissioned by us to construct a Daguerreotype apparatus, whereby we have obtained a series of drawings that are as it were "impressions of the city itself," with all the niceties of perspective preserved, and an accuracy of detail never before equalled in panoramic art.

Such is the prospectus of

OUR COLOSSEUM PRINT,

which we shall (we hope before Christmas) have the honour and gratification of presenting to our SIX MONTHS' SUBSCRIBERS. And to extend still more liberally the means of its possession to the public, we are induced to advertise the following

NOTICE.

 The circulation of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS having risen by many thousands during the Queen's visit to Scotland, and the majority of the fresh readers having indicated a desire to possess the COLOSSEUM PRINT, the proprietors have come to the resolution of presenting a copy to all such of them as shall and to include the general public in this arrangement for the gratuitous distribution of that

SUBSCRIBE FOR SIX MONTHS, COMMENCING FROM No. 20;

UNRIVALLED WORK OF ART.

 All particulars of the Mode and TIME of publication will be forthwith announced.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

"Rodney," Dawlish.—Such things will appear on occasion. See the Nelson Statue in this number.
"Abergavenienus." Will our correspondent send us a drawing?
"J. Stillwell." Declined, with thanks.
To "H. S.," Norwich, we return our acknowledgments.
"W. B."—We will examine the communications, and report upon them in our next.
"Finley Fraser," Dalton.—The suggestion is under consideration. Part of it, it will be seen, is anticipated on our first page
"A. Z. F."—The grandchildren are second cousins. In the other case the degree of relationship is doubtful.
"P. R."—We will do so at the earliest opportunity.
"An Antiquarian" is thanked for his trouble. We shall keep his account and perhaps print it with suitable illustration.
"H. Q. T." is clearly entitled to the Colosseum Print.
"R. M. C."—We have given games, and may yet do so occasionally when space will permit. We shall be happy to receive the contributions.
"A Subscriber," Yarmouth.—Yes; an error of the press. There is an 0 wrong either in the price or number of the shares.
"H. S."—Thanks; but we must hardly trouble our correspondent for the future, as we have always the solution prepared.
"Bombastes Furioso." Send some heroics of your own.
"D. D. D."—The first question is too frivolous. To the second we have only to say that the lady is married; but we know not if her retirement from the stage be permanent or temporary.
"T. R. D.," Plymouth, will have the print without getting the paper through our office.
"Contrast" and "Sunday Exercises" have been received.
"A Subscriber from the first," Pimlico.—We will take notice of the company when in full plen.
"A Subscriber." Actors are not denied the right of burial in Catholic countries.
"Elgar," Ramsgate, is thanked for his good wishes. The business part of his note is referred to our publisher.
"L. P."—We are obliged at the general tone of the letter and its contents.
"B. Lewis." The nature of the proposed communication will not suit us.
"C. T."—We will take leisure to read his note, which really requires time to decipher.
"Another."—We may possibly find room for this poem in a future number.
"X. Y. Z."—Avoid all such societies as you would a pestilence. We will give no information about them.
"An Engraver," Brighton.—The note is referred to our printer.
"W. B. S."—We shall at the end of the year be glad to receive the list.
"C. P. Delaney."—We find we have not room for the dry detail of commercial statistics as a matter of regular communication.
"T. W. S." will be entitled to the engraving.

Part 5 of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, containing an attractive series of highly finished engravings, is this day ready, and now publishing Oct. 29th, 1842.

☞ We beg to announce to our advertising friends that Thursday is the last day for receiving Advertisements

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

LONDON, SATURDAY, OCTOBER 29, 1842.

It is much to be lamented that hardly a day passes without the public mind being vexed and annoyed with details of cruelties and persecutions practised against the poor by the officers of our public institutions, legal, charitable, and social. We last week referred, at considerable length, to the subject of the prison inquiry then being prosecuted at Northleach, which terminated on Wednesday last by the jury bringing in a verdict implicating the governor, surgeon, and turnkey of the gaol as accessories to the death of the foully used and unfortunate lad Beale; and since then we have had our feelings harrowed up by recitals of human suffering and torture endured in various other parts of the country, under circumstances which cannot fail to excite general indignation wherever they are known, and call loudly for some immediate legislative remedy. What renders this state of things the more appalling and extraordinary is, that these proceedings are not mere instances of individual tyranny arising from vindictiveness or any of the other bad passions to which "flesh is heir," but are for the most part enforced at the instigation of public bodies, who coolly and systematically set about the concoction of rules, by-laws, and restrictions, compared with which the code of Draco may be considered merciful and humane. We need hardly at this time of day premise that first and foremost in the van of these abused and mismanaged institutions stands out in bold relief the abhorred Poor-Law, which may shortly boast of more victims than any plague that has ever ravaged the land; and to the example of this accursed law we verily believe may be traced almost every instance of petty tyranny and brutal inhumanity on the part of magistrates, gaolers, policemen, and soi-disant "relieving" officers, that daily occur in the metropolis and throughout the country. We have been unwillingly drawn into this train of observation by reason of some occurrences in the metropolis during the past week, which, in our opinion, deserve the strongest reprobation of the public generally, and of the public press in particular. We have not space to enumerate the whole of these cases, several of which will be found in another department of our paper devoted to the relation of casualties and offences. It will be seen by a report of the proceedings at a coroner's inquest, held before Mr. Payne, on Saturday last, on the body of a poor man named Gorman, that it came out in evidence that a City police constable, finding the above-mentioned wretched individual lying on the stones in a state of insensibility, carried him to the station-house, where he locked him up (most unnecessary precaution) in that condition in a cold, damp, filthy cell, where he was left for several hours without the slightest solicitude being evinced for his fate by his captor, who thought proper to believe, in the absence of all evidence of the fact (for he admitted that the man did not smell of liquor), that he was drunk. Ultimately, however, it appeared that, at the suggestion of the inspector, the unfortunate man was carried to St. Bartholomew's Hospital, where he soon after died. The evidence of Mr. Shaw, the assistant apothecary to the hospital, invests the occurrence with something frightfully mysterious regarding an ominous bruise on the temple, which the policeman appeared unable to account for, and which rather puzzles one when it is compared with the verdict of "Died by the visitation of God" returned by the jury. Of course, we have not the slightest notion of impugning the result of the investigation; but our readers, we have no doubt, will agree with us that the visitation was a most unusual one.

Mr. E. Shaw, assistant-apothecary of the hospital, said that the deceased was admitted on Friday morning last, at half-past one o'clock, in a state of collapse. It was the opinion of the policeman who brought him that he was intoxicated; but witness could see no appearance of that, and could not help expressing his surprise and regret that he had been allowed to remain for so many hours in such a state. He did not look like a person in liquor. Witness immediately attended to him, and at six o'clock heard that he was dead. Witness had since examined him, and found a considerable bruise upon the right temple, about the size of a crown piece, which must have been caused by a blow or fall. Disease of the brain was the cause of death, and it might have been aggravated by the blow on the temple or the stimulus of drinking intoxicating liquors. The bruise had been received within a few hours. Deceased might have been at first mistaken by the police for a drunken man; but before he had remained for so many hours in an insensible state he should have been taken to a surgeon, who would at once have seen what was the matter with him.

Bridget Gorman said that she was deceased's daughter. Witness did not know how he got the bruise, but she did not see it when he left her. He was a very sober man, and witness had never seen him intoxicated.

We have neither space, temper, nor inclination to pursue this subject, at present, beyond the obvious impression which the above narration must make upon our readers.

We are extremely happy to perceive that the subject of the Health of Towns has at length succeeded in arresting the attention of the public generally; and we look forward with great anxiety, but without any apprehension, to the next session of Parliament for the passing of some enactment to remedy the grievous evils that arise from the shocking and disgraceful condition of the grave-yards in the large and populous towns of the kingdom, but particularly the grave-yards of London. We will not now venture to excite the disgust of our readers by detailing the horrors of the burial system as at present practised in the metropolis, and which have been very fully described in the evidence of familiar witnesses taken before a committee of the House of Commons.

It is now clearly established that pillage of the dead has been carried on to a most incredible extent. Coffin ornaments, brass nails, lead, dead-clothes—everything that could excite the cupidity of the thieving grave-digger—are proved to have been, in some burying vaults, systematically carried away by these midnight marauders; and even where the corpses were interred in the clay, it was no check to their propensities; for (to quote the language of one of the witnesses), "Most grounds in London, about the churches and chapels, are so full, that occasionally bodies are buried within 18 inches of the surface."

We beg to press this subject again and again on the attention of the public, and trust that no exertion will be spared to remedy this enormous evil.

METROPOLITAN NEWS.

MEETING OF PARLIAMENT.—There appears to be a very general opinion at the west end of the town that Parliament will assemble for the despatch of business early in January. Of course nothing definite can be known until after the next Privy Council, which will be held at Windsor Castle, on Wednesday, the 2nd of November.

THE LONG VACATION.—On Monday the long vacation ceased, and the offices of the several Courts resumed business.

SURREY SESSIONS.—The adjourned Michaelmas quarter sessions for the county of Surrey commenced on Monday before Mr. Puckle and a full bench of magistrates, at the Court-house, St. Mary, Newington. The number of prisoners for trial exceeded 70, but the cases were all trivial and unimportant, consisting principally of petty larcenies of no public interest.

A supplement to the London Gazette was published on Saturday morning, containing an official report of the investiture of his Majesty the King of Saxony with the insigns and habit of the most noble Order of the Garter, on the 8th inst., at Dresden, by the Right Honourable Thomas Earl of Wilton, under commission of her Majesty's royal sign manual.

MONUMENT TO THE SCOTCH REFORMERS.—The monumental column proposed to be erected to the memory of the Scotch political martyrs is to be placed in the Regent's Circus, Oxford-street. This site was chosen by a majority of the Marylebone vestry at their last weekly meeting.

We regret to have to announce the death of Sir John Cowan, Bart., alderman of Broad-street ward, which took place at his residence on Forrest-hill, Sydenham. The hon. baronet was the son of Mr. R. Cowan, by the daughter of Bailie Rintoul, of Perth, and was in his sixty-sixth year. He was Sheriff of London and Middlesex in 1831; was elected alderman in February of the same year, and chosen Lord Mayor of London in 1837.

The improvement of the communications between China and Bombay is one that should occupy the attention of the East India and China Association, and of the merchants trading with that part of the world. The last mail from China was 120 days, and that now expected to arrive cannot be much less; yet it has been done, through the employment of a steam-vessel, in 73 days; and an instance occurred in the beginning of the present year, in which, by employing a fast-sailing vessel, it was accomplished in 87 days, and such vessels are generally to be had, if steamers are not. It is to be hoped, seeing the general anxiety on the subject, that the Government or the East India Company will avail themselves of the mail of the 4th of November to send out instructions for a steady and improved mode of communication between India and China.

THE GREENWICH RAILWAY AND THE THAMES TUNNEL.—On Wednesday the new station on the Greenwich Railway communicating with the Thames Tunnel at the Spa-road was completed, and is to be opened for traffic to-morrow. By a clause in the company's act it is provided that the trains shall stop twice a-day for the conveyance of passengers to and from this place, but the traffic, it is conceived, will render it necessary that the trains should stop more frequently.

INSOLVENT DEBTORS' COURT.—Mr. Commissioner Bowen, of the Insolvent Debtors' Court, is dangerously indisposed at his residence in Portman-street, Portman-square, where he has been confined some days with a pulmonary complaint, which prevents him from going the Home circuit. It was found necessary to make an application to the Home Secretary, to obtain permission for a barrister to hold a court for the hearing of cases at Dover, Canterbury, and Maidstone. The required authority was obtained; on which Mr. Cooke, the barrister, left town for the purpose of holding a court on Tuesday at Dover, and at Canterbury on Wednesday.

PRESIDENCY OF ST. THOMAS'S HOSPITAL.—The office of president of St. Thomas's Hospital has become vacant by the death of Sir John Cowan, Bart. The election of the deceased alderman took place during his mayoralty, when one vote was recorded for him more than for Mr. Alderman Copeland.

FEMALE CHARTISTS.—A society of female Chartists has been lately formed in the metropolis, which holds its meetings at the National Charter Hall in the Old Bailey, and at which several young ladies have been in the habit of holding forth with various degrees of eclat, on the cardinal points of their political creed. A distinguished member of the body (Miss Mary Anne Walker) fell foul of our contemporary the Times during the course of one of her harangues, which has led to an interesting controversy between this patriotic maiden and that prince gallant of Printing-house-square. The latter complains that the young lady's accomplishments smack rather spicely of Billingsgate.

FIRE IN RATCLIFF-HIGHWAY.—On Saturday morning a fire broke out in Chancery-court, Ratcliff-highway, which consists of small tenements let out in single rooms to poor persons among the lower order of Irish, and which was discovered by one of the neighbours who was passing the window at the time, and saw the room enveloped in flame and smoke. An alarm being given, several persons forced an entrance into the house, when, with the assistance of the lodgers in the upper part of the house, they managed to quench the flames. On entering the room they discovered an infant lying on the floor with its clothes burnt to tinder, and the poor little sufferer writhing in agony from the horrible manner in which it had been burnt. The child was immediately conveyed to the hospital, where it died in less than two hours. The flames were fortunately extinguished before they had spread beyond the room in which they broke out.

EXTENSIVE ROBBERY.—Information was received at the different station-houses of the metropolitan and city police that an extensive robbery had been committed at the house of Mr. Edward Mordecai, No. 28, New Church-street, Portman-market, Marylebone. The property carried off consisted of a Bank of England note for £100, No. 57,266, dated Feb. 5, 1841; another note for £100, No. 6,942, dated Jan. 6, 1835; and a bank note for £20, No. 28,079, dated August 9, 1841; also £14 in gold and silver, and various articles of valuable jewellery. It was contained in a drawer of a wardrobe situated in Mr. Mordecai's bedroom, which had been forced open with a chisel.

The hurricane of Tuesday night, which succeeded a very showery day, has delayed the arrival of many vessels and steamers expected on Wednesday; among others, the Batavier steam-ship from Rotterdam, which, in the usual course would have made her appearance at St. Katharine's at ten o'clock in the morning, and is, no doubt, delayed by the bad weather. Several vessels and steamers which did arrive appeared to have suffered much by the storm.

The announcement of the failure of the respectable firm of Hunter and Coventry in the corn trade, produced a considerable sensation with renewed anxieties in that department of business, on Wednesday in the City. The amount of their liabilities does not exceed £100,000, and the debts owing them, and the stock on hand, taken at present prices, exceed £120,000; but the wheat market is at present so completely under the influence of panic, that it will scarcely sell in large quantities at any price, whilst at the same time the discount market is literally shut against all paper connected with corn transactions, notwithstanding the abundance of money.

THE FORGED CHECK TRICK.—The police have received information that a man about thirty years of age, five feet eight inches high, fair complexion, and dressed in a drab Chesterfield wrapper, has been defrauding tradesmen by means of forged checks, purporting to be drawn by Frederick Clifford on Messrs. Drummond, which checks, upon presentation at the bankers', proved to be forgeries.

FATAL ACCIDENT AT NICHOLSON'S WHARF.—On Wednesday afternoon, a dreadful and fatal accident occurred at Nicholson's Wharf, Lower Thames-street, to a fine lad named James Williams, 13 years of age, employed at the above wharf. It appears that he was at work in the third floor of the lofty range of warehouses, and whilst in the act of giving some directions from the loop-hole to the men below, he overbalanced himself and fell upon the pavement, from a height of between 50 and 60 feet. He died almost instantaneously.

SINGULAR OCCURRENCE AT HAMMERSMITH.—The papers for the past week have been almost filled with details of a very painful and shameful occurrence, which took place in the above neighbourhood some days since, by which, it appears that a gentleman's wife who was sojourning at an insane establishment under gentle restraint, eloped with the son of the medical proprietor, to whom she was married some weeks previously, at the parish Church of Rotherhithe. We have abstained from inserting the names of the individuals connected with the above singular occurrence, as we understand that the family of the lady intend to institute proceedings in the Ecclesiastical and other courts, against all the parties concerned in the affair, when the matter will be more fully brought under the notice of the public.

Information was on Sunday morning forwarded to the various metropolitan and city police stations that the body of a respectably-dressed female, about thirty-five years of age, had been taken out of the Grand Surrey Canal, between Windmill-lane and Blackfriars-bridge. A pawnbrokers' duplicate was found on the deceased, on which the name "Anny Thornton, Bromley," was written.

THE CUSTOM-HOUSE FRAUDS.—It is said that the Custom-house officials throughout the country are heartily glad that the Government has taken the inquiry into the frauds committed at the Custom-house out of the hands of the Board of Customs. It is alleged that the favouritism that would have been practised if the inquiry had been solely entrusted to the customs department, through the influence of superior officers, would have been attended with much injustice, because many innocent persons would have been sacrificed, and many guilty parties would have been screened.

AN INFURIATED OX.—On Tuesday morning great terror was excited by an ox-driven ox, which was making its way through King William-street, towards London-bridge. Crowds followed the animal, and as it reached the bridge it attacked a man, whom it tossed up, and so injured that he had to be carried to the hospital. It then continued its onward course in the direction of the Borough, where it was captured, after having severely injured a woman and a child.

THE NEW RIVER HEAD.—A number of labourers have been employed for some days past in cleansing the immense reservoir belonging to the New River Company, in Claremont-square, Pentonville. The sediment has been allowed to accumulate for eleven years, until at length the present measure became necessary. In some places there are eleven feet of mud.

THE ROBBERY OF DIAMONDS AT COVENT-GARDEN THEATRE.—It will be recollected that a short time since a report appeared in our paper of a robbery said to have been committed at Covent-garden Theatre of a box of diamonds, of the value of nine thousand pounds, from the person of a foreign diamond-merchant of the name of Wolff. The account given by Wolff was, that on the evening in question (the 5th instant) he went into the boxes at the theatre, accompanied by his two nephews, Solomon and Leonard Yorke. At that time he had in his trousers pocket a box of the description usually carried by diamond-merchants, containing most diamonds, of the value above stated, and that when he was about leaving the theatre he discovered that the box, with its contents, had been stolen from him. Shortly after the occurrence Wolff withdrew himself quietly to the Continent without any further investigation, but the publication of the affair in the newspapers caused many communications to be made to the officers, and it was soon ascertained that Wolff owed considerable sums of money to various parties both on the Continent and in England. From the conduct of the parties suspicion was soon entertained that all was not right, and Mr. ——, a gentleman residing in London, to whom Wolff is indebted about £1000, immediately started for Brussels, where he succeeded in finding him, and it is understood that he has since had Wolff arrested.

WOOD PAVEMENT.—The commissioners of sewers of the city of London on Tuesday last received a deputation of the residents of Cheapside, with a petition signed by upwards of 200 of the most influential firms, praying that the street might be paved with wood, to obviate the incessant noise, and which prayer the commissioners, with their usual aptness for remedying evils, granted, and replied further, that it should be done when the weather permitted.

On Wednesday morning, between seven and eight o'clock, a dreadful accident occurred at Deptford to a poor man named Condon, a labourer on the Greenwich Railway. It appears he was engaged with some others in what is termed the "shed;" and while in the act of "clearing" an engine previous to its running upon the line, another engine passed at the time, the "spring" of which caught the unfortunate man, and he was dreadfully jammed between the two engines. He was conveyed to Guy's Hospital as soon as possible, where he lies without hope of recovery.

We observe a hint thrown out by the Lisbon correspondent of a morning paper, in his letter received by the last mail, that it is suspected that the Portuguese Finance Minister is meditating another attempt to relieve his immediate embarrassment by another loan on England.

On Tuesday night, between six and seven o'clock, a dreadful omnibus accident occurred in Oxford-street to Mrs. Mary Attwood, a widow lady, aged 54 years, residing in Adam-street, Bryanston-square. It appears that the unfortunate lady, in crossing Oxford-street, slipped down, at the moment one of the Paddington omnibuses advanced, and the horses with the vehicle passed over her before the driver could pull up. She was removed to Middlesex Hospital in a deplorable condition from the extensive injuries sustained by the horses trampling on her chest and body.

POSTSCRIPT.

Friday Evening.

WINDSOR, Thursday.—Her Majesty and his Royal Highness Prince Albert rode out in the Park, in a pony phaeton, her Majesty driving. His Royal Highness Prince Albert, accompanied by his Royal Highness the Grand Duke of Mecklenburg Strelitz, hunted with the harriers in the Park this morning. The hounds started two hares, and killed royal after short runs. His Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge, attended by the Earl of Dunmore and Sir E. Bowater, went out shooting in the royal preserves at Virginia Water. Her Majesty and the Prince, accompanied by the Duke and Duchess of Cambridge, and the Princesses Augusta and Mary of Cambridge, and his Royal Highness the Grand Duke of Mecklenburg Strelitz, and attended by the whole of the Court, inspected the new mews. The royal party also inspected a portion of Mr. Wombwell's menagerie in the riding school, after which the royal party walked to St. George's Chapel, where they were received by the Rev. W. Canning, and viewed the new eastern window, of which her Majesty and the whole of the royal party expressed their highest approbation.

THE PRINCE OF WALES.—An important epoch has just arrived in the life of the heir-apparent. His Royal Highness has just been weaned, and we are happy to add, has borne the deprivation well.

Sir Robert Peel arrived in town on Thursday morning from a visit to her Majesty at Windsor Castle. The Lord Chancellor had an interview with the right hon. baronet, after his arrival, at his residence in Whitehall-gardens. Sir James Graham and other cabinet ministers also visited Sir Robert in the forenoon. Sir Robert Peel and Sir James Graham left town by the London and Birmingham Railway in the afternoon for the seat of the former, Drayton Manor, Staffordshire.

LORD MELBOURNE.—This morning, as well as the three last previous days, numerous inquiries have been made at the town residence of the noble viscount in South-street, Grosvenor-square. The accounts are of a very favourable nature: his lordship is fast recovering.

The Governor of the Bank of England and the Deputy-Governor had an interview with the Chancellor of the Exchequer yesterday, at his official residence in Downing-street.

The purchase-money of the Cowdray estate, which has been recently bought by the Earl of Egmont, was upwards of £300,000.

The Dublin Corporation, already nearly quite Liberal, has obtained, on the elections for this year, just closed, an addition to its majority on the popular side. Of the fifteen new members, only two are Tories.

It will give all admirers of true poetry gratification to hear that her Majesty has conferred a pension of £300 a year upon William Wordsworth. Long may he live to enjoy it!

RUMOURED ABDICATION OF THE KING OF THE FRENCH.—We are informed on respectable authority, says the Morning Herald, that the King of the French has discussed with persons in his confidence the propriety of abdicating the throne in favour of the Duke of Nemours.

COMBAT BETWEEN GAMEKEEPERS AND POACHERS.—We regret to have to record a most sanguinary combat which took place on Saturday evening last between the keepers of John Tollemache, Esq., of Tilston Lodge, M.P., and Edwin Corbett, Esq., of Burnhall, and a party of poachers, and which resulted in the defeat of the former, one of whom, named Richard Chesters, died in a few hours afterwards, from the injuries he received in the conflict.

DEATH OF MR. COMMISSIONER BOWEN.—Mr. Commissioner Bowen, of the Insolvent Debtors' Court, breathed his last on Thursday evening, at his residence, No. 19, Portman-street, Portman-square. He had been a commissioner of the court upwards of twenty years, as also a bencher of the Inner Temple, as well as a director of the Chelsea Waterworks. Mr. Commissioner Bowen was 74 years old.

IMPORTANT TO CLERGYMEN.—By an omission of the words, "or by any other patron," in the schedule to the Act 5 and 6 Victoria, c. 79, no duty whatever is now payable on presentations to benefices by any patron except her Majesty. This error will be rectified in the next session of Parliament.

THE LATE DREADFUL STORM.—The accounts received from the coast in the course of Wednesday and Thursday, relative to the effects of the dreadful storm which raged during Saturday and Sunday, are of a most distressing description. The loss of life and property has been immense, but it is feared many vessels foundered that never will be heard of, the unhappy crews perishing with them.

FATAL ACCIDENTS.—THREE LIVES LOST.—Between three and four on Wednesday afternoon last the inhabitants of West Collingwood were thrown into great consternation by a loud explosion, the shock of which was sensibly felt by many. It was quickly ascertained that the explosion had occurred at the residence of a man named Pinner, a manufacturer of fireworks, and the first object that presented itself to the persons who ran to the spot was the lifeless body of Pinner lying in the open space in front of his house, amidst a quantity of bricks. The body of an old man, an assistant to Pinner, was likewise found shockingly disfigured lying in the garden at the back of the premises. Jammed against the lower part of the wall of the first story, and near the top of the stairs, was the body of a lad, aged 14, with the features dreadfully disfigured, and the body blackened and mutilated. From the statement of an elderly woman, who was engaged by Pinner to superintend his domestic affairs, it appears that a large quantity of gunpowder had lately been placed in the upper room for the purpose of making fireworks for the 5th of November, but in what manner the explosion was caused remains a mystery.

CENTRAL CRIMINAL COURT.—Robert Fletcher, aged 19, described in the calendar as a chemist, was convicted of a robbery on James Stedman, and stealing a watch, value 25*l.*, and 4*s.* in silver, his goods and moneys. The Recorder addressed the prisoner, and said that it appeared he had been associated with the gang of Stringer, Fitzgerald, and the others, who had extorted money by threats of making abominable charges, and the letters found upon him, although not put in in evidence, appeared to be from person who had suffered the kind of extortion. One of them was from a person who had paid a sum of money to obtain the abandonment of a prosecution. The sentence of the court was that the prisoner be transported beyond the seas for the term of fifteen years.

FRIDAY.—Mr. Justice Erskine and Mr. Justice Maule presided to-day. During the morning the Old and New Courts were occupied with cases of uttering counterfeit coin. No less than fifteen persons stand charged with this offence since the termination of the last sessions. In the New Court, the Common Sergeant said, as this offence (uttering counterfeit coin) was greatly increasing the Court would in future, on all convictions, pass the utmost sentence of the law. The grand jury have returned two bills against Alice Low, on indictments charging her with stealing two gold boxes, one watch-hook and pendant, two miniatures, &c., the property of Lord Frankfort, in his dwelling-house. No time has at present been fixed for the trial. The trial of Jane Bowker, charged with the murder of her husband by administering poison, is appointed for to-morrow.

POLICE, GUILDHALL. FATAL ACCIDENT.—On Friday a drayman, in the employment of Messrs. Calvert, was placed at the bar before Sir Peter Laurie, charged with causing the death of a fine little girl, aged 10 years, named Emma Morris, on the previous afternoon, in New-street, Fetter-street.—A solicitor said he had witnesses to prove it was quite an accident, and that the prisoner was not in the least to blame.—Sir Peter Laurie: The draymen are the most careless set of men in the metropolis. I shall remand him to prison until the inquest is held.—The solicitor applied to admit the prisoner to bail in any amount, but Sir Peter refused the application.

At the meeting of the Middlesex magistrates yesterday, at Clerkenwell, it appeared from the report read that, upon the completion of the alterations now making in the Hanwell Lunatic Asylum, the Institution would command accommodation for 1000 patients. In the House of Correction, at present, there are 1025 prisoners; in the New Prison, 82.

FOREIGN.

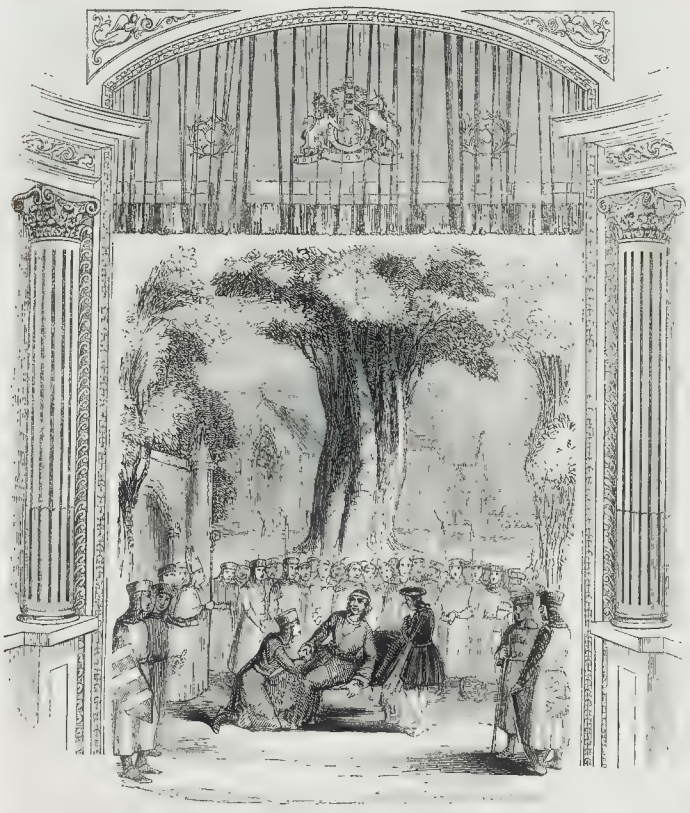
FRANCE.—In Paris the opposition to the ministerial project for the customs union with Belgium is assuming a formidable appearance. A meeting of Deputies was held on Tuesday last, and hostile resolutions passed against it; and a general meeting of all the delegates of national manufactures and trades is called for the 5th November, to adopt measures for a combined opposition.

These meetings gave great offence to M. Thiers's organ, the Courrier Francais, which is a free-trading and anti-protection journal.

The Belgian Government has resolved to retaliate against the United States for the exorbitant duties levied upon the British Queen; orders are issued to impose on American shipping entering the Scheldt the highest possible duties of tonnage and pilotage, placing them on the footing of the least favoured countries.

By the arrival of the packet-ship Rochester at Liverpool, on Thursday night, we have New York papers of the 3d instant, but as we had previously dates to the 1st, and Sunday intervening, there is no difference whatever in the commercial intelligence. The late changes made by Sir Charles Bagot in Canada, and the probable results, bid fair to become a leading topic of discussion with the American press, and is already throwing Mr. Webster's Boston speech into the shade. The rate of exchange at New York was nominal at 108.

By a private ship from Rio Janeiro we have papers to the 27th of August, being fourteen days later than the packet. They bring nothing new regarding politics. The price of the domestic 6 per cent. Stocks had risen to 71; but the exchange on London was heavy at 25 to 25½ pence. There were no later accounts from Buenos Ayres or Monte Video.



LAST SCENE IN THE PLAY OF KING JOHN.

Our readers will find, by a reference to our dramatic criticism, that the play of King John was produced at Drury Lane on Monday night, in a style of great splendour, and with most beautiful accessories of scenery and costume. We here present our readers with what we deem to be the most appropriate and effective grouping for scenic illustration—the last tableau of the tragedy, wherein Faulconbridge, performing his last faithful act of service to his royal master, comes only to see death draw his curtain over the tortured spirit of the King, and life ebb away amid the bitterest agonies of mortal pain. There is the couch of suffering, whereon the King but feebly sustains his fainting body, as he groans out his expiring greeting to the gallant creature at his feet.

> John. O cousin, thou art come to set mine eye:
> The tackle of my heart is crack'd and burn'd;
> And all the shrouds, wherewith my life should sail,
> Are turned to one thread, one little hair:
> My heart hath one poor string to stay it by,
> Which holds but till thy news be uttered:
> And then all this thou seest is but a clod,
> And module of confounded royalty.

Hubert, Essex, and Prince Henry are participators of the death-scene; and there is a bold grouping around, which places a splendid circle of caparisoned figures in contrast with the sweet and solemn distance—the beautiful orchard of the picturesque abbey of Swinted beyond. This is our point of illustration, but it is only one of the effective and spirited tableaux which are formed during the magnificent progress of the performance. To Mr. Macready is due the praise of bestowing more honour upon the muse of Shakspere than any other manager of our time. He wisely sees that the glorious pageantry which interweaves itself among the fine depictments and imaginings of the immortal bard give true and beautiful aid to the living stream of poetry that rolls so lavishly along: that scenes of historic grandeur or natural magnificence or loveliness aid all the realities of the poet, when they are brought palpably before the eye; and that although illustration can never supply the place of acting, or compensate for its want of excellence, yet it may be made greatly to aid what is excellent, and makes beautifully perfect the grand illusions of the play. This truth Mr. Macready has most abundantly proved, and in few instances with more spirit than in the production of Shakspere's King John. The hall of state in King John's palace; the scene before the gate of Angiers; the French king's tent; the battle-field; the room in Northampton Castle; the fine castle itself; the interior of the Templars' church; the scene before St. Edmund's Bury; the English camp; the battle-field near St. Edmund's; the gate of Swinstead Abbey; and the orchard of the abbey which we have described above, presented a series of finished pictures to the eye which the art of histrionic illustration has seldom seen surpassed, and never except by Macready's still more splendid achievements in dramas (such as The Tempest and Henry the Fifth) affording more gorgeous facilities for display. The costuming was beautiful in the extreme, and the armorial bearings finely elaborate and correct. As we are here giving Mr. Macready's portrait in another aspect of King John, we may say a few words on his performance of the character. It is then, in brief, the best which our modern stage is capable of producing. Macready always makes a good king; he assumes and wears the royal bearing and dignity with instinct and consummate art. In this respect, indeed, in the earlier portions of the play he slightly elevated his character beyond our conception of the poet's portrait. In the acting sense he portrayed human emotion most graphically in the scene with Hubert, in which he shadows out his dark purpose of crime in the contemplation of Arthur's death. This was a most triumphant exhibition, beautifully sustained in its contrast by the acting of Phelps. Macready's horrible passion and subdued suspended terror were effective in the extreme. His death scene too, was full of power, physical and mental; and when the curtain closed over the life of the King the audience were loud in their applauses of the actor. He was loudly called for from all quarters of the house, and in obedience to that summons—here he is.

MACREADY AS KING JOHN.

POPULAR PORTRAITS.—No. XIX.

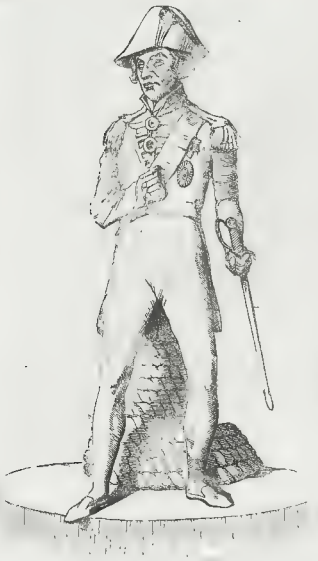
LORD ASHBURTON.

Here is a fine expressive portrait of our late Plenipotentiary to America, the merchant-nobleman, who, by a combination of the influences of that double character, achieved the settlement of one of the most important questions of commercial and territorial dispute that ever interposed between the harmony of two great nations. You see that he has a portly, manly bearing, a brow marked with determination and beaming with intelligence, a staid front of respectability, that looks the merchant, and yet graces the peer and the gentleman too. Our readers must not think from our using the word "merchant" that Lord Ashburton is still engaged in trade, for we believe that he has long since relinquished (as a natural consequence of his elevation to the peerage) his partnership in the great commercial firm of Baring Brothers and Company, of which he was for many years so wealthy, so influential, and so respected a member.

The personal history of Lord Ashburton may be summed up in a few sentences. He began his career as almost the inheritor of commercial distinction, and swelled the tide of his fortunes into almost boundless wealth, his firm being considered only second to the leviathan establishment of the Rothschilds themselves. He married the daughter of William Bingham, Esq., also a merchant of Philadelphia, and the nature of his transactions in commerce with America was of the utmost magnitude and extent. No man could better, therefore, have understood the value and importance of a firm commercial footing being established between the two countries; and in his ambassadorial mission to the United States he was, as it were, met half way by the prestige in his favour which everywhere prevailed. The success of his mission is honourable to England and America alike; the hospitality which followed him almost to the moment of his embarkation for this country indicated the frank, cordial, and happy spirit in which the result of his labours was received in the land of their operation; and the correspondence, which has since been published, between his lordship and Mr. Webster exhibits honour, wisdom, sagacity, and conciliation, four of the noblest at least, if not the most cunning, qualities which a diplomatist can display, and just such qualities as England required of her minister in the negotiations committed to his charge. The spirit of Talleyrand was not wanted to infuse its overreaching chicanery into the plain business-like question which the two nations had to discuss; for half a century there had been diplomacy enough wasted upon it, and it was now reserved for plain integrity, combined with sound practical judgment, to bring it to a settlement without any further tantalizing and lingering delay. The erasing of the American boundary dispute from the field of national contention will be ever held as the crowning event of credit of Lord Ashburton's political life.

PORTRAIT OF LORD ASHBURTON.

He has held, however, other prominent positions in public affairs. In opinions a Conservative, he has on several occasions held office with his party, and was at distinct periods Master of the Mint, and President of the Board of Trade. He sat in eight parliaments for the county of Essex, and was in 1835 raised to the peerage as Baron Ashburton, a revived title to which he had a sort of family claim. His father's sister married John Dunning, Esq., an eminent lawyer, who was appointed Solicitor-General in 1767, and created, in 1782, Baron Ashburton, which title became extinct on the death of the second baron, in 1823, and is now revived in his lordship's person. His lordship is brother of Sir Thomas Baring, Bart.; father of the Marchioness and godfather of the Marquis of Bath; brother of the lady of T. R. Kemp, Esq., late M.P.; uncle of F. T. Baring, Esq., M.P., H. B. Baring, Esq., M.P., and H. Labouchere, Esq., M.P. Heir apparent, the Hon. W. Bingham Baring, M.P.; married, 12th April, 1823, Lady Harriet Montague, eldest daughter of the late and sister of the present Earl of Sandwich.



NELSON'S STATUE.*

Behold a pillar of our nation's pride
Raised to the glory of her god-like great!
One who—a king in battle—ere he died,
Himself was proudest pillar of the state;
Who pluck'd out victory from the heart of war—
Sent her flood-voices shouting to the sky,
Or boomed them o'er majestic waves afar,
Till the grand ocean echoed "Victory"

Noble death-winner! in the heart of strife,
Closing, with heavenly fame, his earthly race,
The billow-warrior bade farewell to life,
In the last clasp of glory's fond embrace!
Old sword-companions stood around to weep
Over their hero, fainting into bliss,
While Victory drew her curtains round his sleep,
And bless'd his spirit with her parting kiss!

The sea wept blood!—but it was blood of those Who flooded out their life upon its wave;
Fine gallant spirits, but Old England's foes,
And therefore Nelson's sacrifice of brave
Unto the God of Battles! Both but proved
How nature-strong the love of country is:
They died while struggling for the land they loved,
While Nelson died in Victory—won for his!

How he did sweep the wild eternal seas,
And curl his meteor-flag upon the wind,
That rocked the cradles of his victories!
Sea-palaces, wherefrom his kingly mind
Did gaze upon the giant vast around
In all its grand sublimity of strife,
And, mid its tumult, mark the battle-ground
For England's prowess or for Nelson's life!

And still he ever conquer'd—while his name
Rang in the ear of nations with a sound
That echoed through the palaces of Fame
With lingering deep reverberance and rebound.
Even now the clarion-sounder of the world
Keeps her grand thunder for his memory still,
And holds his banner of renown unfurl'd,
Warm'd by a sun nor Time nor Death can chill,—

The sun of radiant glory, 'mid whose beams
Proud Honour rears his monument to-day
Whose hero-deeds might brighten all the streams
Of Genius, and inspire the poet's lay
With wild and kindling fervour. Here we gaze
But on the symbol of his mighty fame:
Could England perish 'mid the world's amaze,
HER monument might well be Nelson's name.

* The above statue is to surmount the pillar, now in progress of erection, to the memory of Nelson (and near y comp eted) in Trafalgar-square.

A FACT FOR COINCIDENCE HUNTERS.—On Sunday last a bottle was picked up by some boys on the sands of Dunnet, in which was a paper containing the following:—"May 13, 1849, on board the brig 'Superior.' This morning a male child was born; mother and infant are in a fair way. Passengers all in a healthy state. We have experienced some heavy weather. Our latitude at this time is 55, 48, N., longitude 24, W. On a voyage from Thurso to Pictou and Quebec. Donald Manson, commander." It is a very singular circumstance that the bottle should have traversed the ocean a distance of nearly 1500 miles, and have been cast ashore within two miles from the place whence the vessel had started upwards of five months previous. The bottle in its travels must have rounded the Hebrides, and also, perhaps, the north-west coast of Ireland, provided the currents ran in that direction. The safe arrival of the above emigrant vessel at her destination was reported some time since.

THE PAVILION AT BRIGHTON.

Her Majesty, having honoured the lochs and fells of the North with her royal presence, has it now in contemplation to revisit the town which George IV. assisted into importance and popularity by the erection of the Pavilion. As the presence of the Court carries with it the eyes of the nation, we lose no time in presenting to our readers a view of the Pavilion—the palace of the Queen—and also a sketch of the town of Brighton from the sea. The Pavilion, as our readers doubtless recollect, was a favourite architectural toy of George IV. He sought in it to realize one of these eastern palaces which a northern imagination clothes in all the gorgeous colours of romance. How far he succeeded we will not now stay to determine. The model was the palace of the Kremlin, at Moscow, itself a copy. Commenced in 1784, it occupied forty-three years to complete; and now, with subsequent additions and alterations, notwithstanding some anachronisms, forms one of the most magnificent structures in this kingdom. The interior is fitted with an eye to oriental magnificence; the withdrawing-room, the music-room, and the saloon, may be taken as instances. It is thickly stored with pictures—some in the highest walks of art, others such as might fitly be replaced by works more becoming the palace of a great monarch. The coup d'œil, however, is perhaps equal to that realized in any regal residence in Europe. A chapel is attached to the palace capable of accommodating one thousand persons. The stables are in what is called, perhaps not unfitly, an Arabian style, and have a dome of glass. The Queen has displayed by her visits to Brighton a growing partiality for the place; and as the presence of the monarch and the court, wherever it appears, seems to infuse life, spirit, and gaiety into the people—giving a stimulus to trade and a tone to society—it is to be hoped that her Majesty will meet with nothing during her intended stay which shall lessen the increasing penchant she evidently entertains for this watering-place.

The town of Brighton, of which we also give a sketch, is placed upon an old Roman road called Steyne-street. It is, nevertheless, of modern growth, having first come into notice as a bathing-place during the reign of George II. Since that time it has gone on rapidly increasing, and is now well known as one of the most fashionable watering-places in the kingdom. The railroad from London has added another channel of communication and importance; as, for the future, the high-road to the Continent promises to be from this place to the old French town of Havre, or to Dieppe, instead of, as heretofore, from Dover to Calais. The buildings in Kemp Town, and generally on the sea-side, as seen from the pier-head, are in the first style of domestic architecture, vieing with the best buildings in the metropolis. The Chain-pier is one of the characteristic features of the place, affording a promenade which, from time to time, has been trodden by the most illustrious visitors to the place. George IV., both as Prince and King, enjoyed the sea air from this triumph of modern art—his successor did so both before and after his accession; whilst her present Majesty, both as Princess and Queen, has often honoured the promenade with her presence. In summer evenings, when the band is stationed on the pier, which stretches its iron length above eleven hundred feet over the sea, the scene is enlivening in the extreme; crowds of well-dressed visitors thronging the promenade. Amongst them may often be discovered the wisest, noblest, and best of our land, mingling with the quiet citizen and passing visitor, all inhaling the fresh sea-breeze, and enjoying the pleasant influences which surround and enliven the scene.

The shore also affords some pleasant promenades; but, owing to the shallowness of the water, Brighton has no amount of commerce, and consequently the sea view is not so generally enlivened by shipping as in places where much trade is carried on. If Brighton, however, loses the picturesque groups of shipping, she escapes the dirt and noise which, of necessity, are present where the active avocations of commerce are pursued. The visitor who wishes to enjoy mineral waters will find every variety at the German Spa, near the Queen's Park; here may they be had in all their native nauseousness, although from the laboratory instead of the spring; or, should it be preferable, a walk to Wick-hill, a picturesque spot, will afford a chalybeate water fresh from mother earth.

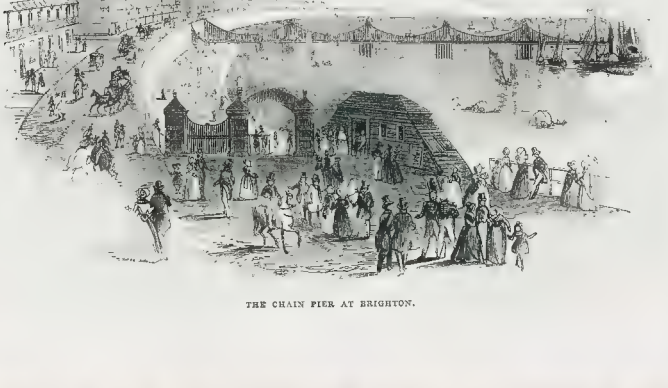
The hotels are first-rate and numerous; the shops as handsome as in any provincial town in England. Bathing can, of course, be enjoyed. The town-hall is a fine building; and the West Cliff, with its battery of 28-pounders, must be seen. The old parish church is that of St. Nicholas; but there is a modern structure (St. Peter's), in the florid Gothic style, which gives another feature to the aspect of the town. Places of worship abound, and dissenters of most denominations will find chapels devoted to their peculiar tenets.

Upon the occasion of her Majesty's first visit to Brighton, after her accession to the throne, she was welcomed with triumphal arches and other tokens of joy and affection. Such displays are not called for except upon extraordinary occasions; but we may again express a hope that the healthful influence of the sea breeze, and the conduct of the good folks of Brighton, will combine to induce the Queen to encourage and assist by her frequent presence the prosperity of this important watering-place.

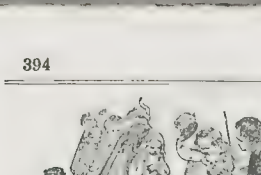
The Court will doubtless travel to Brighton by the railroad.

TRIAL OF LINGUISTS.—A public examination of the professors of the living languages in Paris has just been held at the Sorbonne, by order of the Minister of Public Instruction, with a view to the granting a collegiate brevet to those most distinguished by acquirements and capacity. German, Spanish, Italian, and English candidates were examined. The ordeal was severe, the test comprehending an oral explanation of portions of the works of English authors of the highest class; a discussion on the comparative merits of these writers between the candidates, one explaining certain abstruse or doubtful passages, another objecting and explaining in his turn. This argumentation was animated and interesting, and led to some remarkable displays of readiness and erudition, and also to a few mistakes productive of much amusement. The tough nature of the questions thus propounded may be judged of by one, which was "A parallel view of French and English syntax, their analogies and differences." This fell to the lot of a Mr. Dowling, one of the successful candidates, who displayed in its treatment singular aptitude, powers of elucidation, and knowledge of the subject. The successful candidates are MM. Watson, librarian of the city of Orleans, and professor at the Royal College; Churchill, professor at the College Henri IV.; B. Laroche, Davitt, Booth; Dowling, professor at the College Stanislaus; Dubarle, Drouet, Nicolar, Leramhert, Martin Wilkinson, Aubin, Canterel, Veyssier-Descombes, and Rosee-Belle-Isle. It has been remarked as extraordinary, that only two of the English professors belonging to the Paris colleges should have presented themselves for examination. Both these gentlemen honourably distinguished themselves.

DEPARTURE OF THE GREAT WESTERN.—This noble steam-ship left her moorings in the King's-road, Bristol, at twenty minutes before three o'clock, P.M., on Saturday last. Owing to the new American tariff her cargo was but light. She carries out 110 passengers, amongst whom are several distinguished members of the foreign diplomatic body. Through the active exertion of our news-agent, an express parcel of THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, containing a review of Boz's new work, "American Notes for General Circulation," was received just in time for the last mail-boat, and put on board the Great Western in the river.



THE CHAIN PIER AT BRIGHTON.



THE COURT AND HAUT TON.

WINDSOR, Sunday.—Yesterday morning her Majesty and Prince Albert took their usual walking exercise. In the afternoon her Majesty and the Prince again walked out for a short time on the terrace. The Prince of Wales and the Princess Royal were not taken their usual airings, in consequence of the unfavourable state of the weather. Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent, Lady C. Dundas, and Sir George and Lady Couper, joined the royal dinner party in the evening. This morning her Majesty, his Royal Highness Prince Albert, and the whole of the household, attended divine service in the private chapel of the Castle. The Hon. and Rev. Edward Southwell Keppel officiated. Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent attended divine service in the parish church this morning. The Hon. and Rev. E. S. Keppel joined the royal dinner party in the evening.

MONDAY.—Her Majesty and his Royal Highness Prince Albert took their usual walking exercise. His Royal Highness Prince Albert, attended by Colonel Arbuthnot and the Hon. C. A. Murray, enjoyed several hours' shooting in the royal preserves at Norfolk Farm. In the afternoon her Majesty and the Prince, attended by the Countess of Dunmore, walked out on the terrace. Sir R. Peel and Sir H. Wheatley arrived at the Castle on a visit to her Majesty. The following formed the royal dinner party in the evening:—Lord Byron, the Countess of Dunmore, Sir R. Peel, the Hon. Miss Stanley, the Hon. Mrs. Anson, Lady Lyttelton, General the Hon. Sir W. Lumley, Col. Arbuthnot, Sir H. Wheatley, the Hon. C. A. Murray, and Dr. Pretorius. Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent took her usual airing.

TUESDAY. Neither her Majesty nor his Royal Highness Prince Albert left the Castle to-day, in consequence of the wet and unsettled state of the weather. The following distinguished personages arrived at the Castle on a visit to her Majesty:—Their Royal Highnesses the Duke and Duchess of Cambridge and the Princesses Mary and Augusta of Cambridge, his Royal Highness the Grand Duke of Mecklenburg Strelitz, the Marquis of Exeter, and the Earl of Dunmore. The royal dinner party comprised, besides the above-mentioned personages, the Duchess of Kent, Lord Hawarden, the Countess of Dunmore, the Right Hon. Sir Robert Peel, Baron Knesebeck, Baroness Ahlefeldt, Lady C. Dundas, the Hon. Misses Stanley and Hamilton, the Hon. Mrs. Anson, Sir Robert Otway, Colonel Arbuthnot, Sir E. Bowater, the Hon. C. A. Murray, and Dr. Pretorius.

WEDNESDAY.—Her Majesty and his Royal Highness Prince Albert took their usual walking exercise. His Royal Highness Prince Albert, accompanied by his Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge, and attended by the Marquis of Exeter, Sir R. Peel, and the Hon. C. A. Murray, rode to Swinley, and enjoyed several hours' shooting in the royal preserves. Their Royal Highnesses the Prince of Wales and the Princess Royal were taken out in the royal pleasure-grounds. The royal dinner party was the same as on the previous day.

Sir Robert Peel arrived in town on Monday from his seat, Drayton Manor, Staffordshire. Some of the Cabinet Ministers visited the right hon. baronet after his arrival. Sir Robert left his residence in Whitehall gardens in the afternoon, on a visit to her Majesty at Windsor Castle.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer arrived in town on Monday from Ryde, Isle of Wight.

The Privy Council, appointed to be held by her Majesty, at one o'clock on Wednesday, the 26th inst., at Windsor Castle, has been postponed until Wednesday, the 2nd of November. Summonses, announcing the postponement of the Council, were issued on Tuesday afternoon to the Cabinet Ministers, and the Great Officers of State.

His Serene Highness the Hereditary Prince of Mecklenburg Strelitz honoured Covent Garden Theatre with his presence on Saturday evening. The Prince afterwards returned to the residence of the Duke of Cambridge at Kew.

HIS EXCELLENCY PRINCE ESTERHAZY.—Letters have been received at the Austrian Embassy, stating that his excellency had not experienced any fatigue from his journey to Calais, and that he would proceed direct to Vienna by easy stages. Mr. Bellingham, the Prince's medical attendant, has we hear, accompanied his excellency to the Continent. The Prince's establishment at Chandos House is broken up.

The Earl and Countess of Verulam invited a distinguished circle to meet the Bishop of London during the right rev. prelate's visitation in the neighbourhood of Gorhambury. The Earl and Countess of Clarendon, Lord and Lady F. Beauclerk, Lord Glamis, the Hon. G. Ryder, M.P., &c., were among the guests.

Lady Dover, with Viscount Clifden, and the younger branches of her family, have arrived at Roehampton from Chatsworth. Viscount Morpeth accompanied her ladyship to town.

Lord and Lady John Russell are expected to leave their cottage in Devonshire, in the course of the next week, for Belgrave-square.

Lord and Lady Stanley, and a select family circle, are at Knowsley Park on a visit to the Earl of Derby. The noble earl has recently received a great accession of rare plants to his conservatory, from Africa, brought to this country by Dr. Whitfield, the eminent naturalist, who has been to that distant country for the purpose of collecting specimens for his lordship's gardens and menagerie. A vast number of valuable animals have also been added to the noble earl's zoological collection.

The Dowager Lady Noel Byron, relict of the poet, has taken a villa near Esher, called Moore-place, where her ladyship resides in comparative retirement, with occasional visits to her daughter, the Countess of Lovelace.

Her Majesty the Queen Dowager, through Earl Howe, has declined a public address from the inhabitants of Poole, his lordship stating that her Majesty's health required tranquility and repose.

We are gratified to hear that that distinguished diplomatist, Baron Brunow, the Russian minister, is rapidly recovering from the severe illness which he contracted whilst on a visit to Sir Robert Peel at Drayton Manor.

The Vice-President of the Board of Trade, Mr. Gladstone, has quite recovered from the effects of his recent severe accident at Hawarden Castle, but he is still obliged to carry his left arm in a sling, having, as already stated, had the misfortune to suffer amputation of the fore finger of that hand.

The Queen is so satisfied with railway travelling, as experienced on the Great Western, that her Majesty intends to adopt the Brighton Railway as her route to the Pavilion.

On Tuesday last a deputation from the Serpentine Floating Cemetery Company (commonly called the Royal Humane Society) waited on Prince Albert at Windsor Castle with a present of a ladder painted to look like mahogany, and to be always in readiness when his Royal Highness goes to skate.

WALMER CASTLE. The Duke of Wellington continues in excellent health. The noble and gallant duke was out on Friday last with the Hanet harriers. It appears that he intends to prolong his stay at the Castle.

DEVONSHIRE HOUSE.—Alterations are being made upon the exterior of this noble mansion. The unsightly terrace in front is now demolished, and a handsome light portico is to be erected in its place. The courtyard from Piccadilly is being prepared previous to wooden pavement being put down instead of gravel.

DENE PARK, NORTHAMPTONSHIRE.—The Earl of Cardigan has been entertaining a party with the sports of the field. His lordship's regiment, the 11th Hussars, is to be stationed at York during the winter, under the command of Lieut.-Colonel Rotten, during the absence of the noble earl, who intends to hunt the Leicestershire country, and has added several valuable hunters from Lord Gardiner's stud.

Sir James Graham arrived in town on Tuesday from his seat at Netherby, Cumberland.

HOWICK HALL, NORTHUMBERLAND. The Duke of Sussex and the Duchess of Inverness were expected to arrive on Tuesday on a visit to Earl Grey, from Auckland Castle, the Palace of the Bishop of Durham. His Royal Highness, whose state of health continues favourable, intends to continue his tour of visits in the North until early in the new year, when he will return to Kensington, the wing of which Palace, occupied by the Duke, is undergoing repairs during his absence.

On dit that a Countess, the daughter of a Duke, has left her house under suspicious circumstances with a friend of the family.

On Wednesday evening letters were received from Brocket Hall, Herts, from which we learn that Viscount Melbourne had nearly recovered from his indisposition. On Monday his lordship was exceedingly unwell, but has since continued to improve, and we are happy to hear is now fast recovering. Viscount and Viscountess Palmerston and Lord and Lady Beauvale, are still staying at Brocket.

ENDSLEIGH HOUSE, NEAR TAVISTOCK.—Lord and Lady John Russell, who have been staying here since their return from the Earl of Minto's seat, in Roxburghshire, are expected to proceed by easy stages to town at the close of the ensuing week, visiting several distinguished political and private friends en route. The youthful Misses Lister, stepsons of the noble lord, leave on Saturday for his lordship's mansion in Belgrave-square, where her ladyship's accouchement is expected to take place next month.

CHURCH, UNIVERSITIES, &c.

The Hon. and Rev. George Damer Fornell, B.A., of Downing College, Cambridge, third son of the late Lord Congleton, has been instituted by the Lord Bishop of Salisbury to the rectory of the second portion of Basford with Whitton, Salop, on the nomination of the Hon. and Rev. George Rushout Bowles, M.A.

His Grace the Archbishop of York holds an ordination on Sunday, the 18th of December, at Bishopthorpe.

The Bishop of London intends to consecrate the new church of All Saints, Witham, to-morrow week.

The Bishop of Gloucester and Bristol returned to the episcopal palace at Gloucester on Thursday last, from Clifton. The Right Rev. Prelate confirmed upwards of 300 children at Clifton on Monday, and on the following day his lordship consecrated the new church at Jefferies-hill, Hanham.

THE ECCLESIASTICAL COMMISSION.—The Ecclesiastical Commissioners for England have issued a report, in which they state, that having considered how previous may best be made for the cure of souls out of the limited amount of money at present at their disposal, in conformity with the intent and meaning of the acts 3 and 4 Victoria, c. 113, and 4 and 5 Victoria, c. 39, have resolved to recommend to her Majesty in Council to make grants, either in augmentation of the incomes of, or towards providing fit houses of residence for, the incumbents of certain benefices and churches with cure of souls—that is to say, being either parish churches or churches or chapels with districts legally belonging or assigned thereto, in certain classes, subject to limitations now made, or hereafter to be made, the commissioners reserving to themselves a right to decline recommending a grant in any case in which, from special circumstances, they may be of opinion that it is not expedient.

The Bishop of Llandaff, attended by the Very Rev. Dr. Bailey, Archdeacon of the diocese, held his triennial visitation of the clergy of the cathedral church, Llandaff, when the Right Rev. Prelate delivered an eloquent and impressive charge to an exceedingly numerous congregation of the clergy of the diocese.

The Rev. R. H. Barham has been presented by the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's to the Rectory of St. Augustine and St Faith, London.

The Bishop of Exeter has announced that he will require from all candidates for holy orders, who have been educated at the University of Oxford, two certificates from the two new Professors of Sacred Literature, as soon as the new statute shall be in full activity. Similar demands will, of course, be made from candidates from the University of Cambridge.

OXFORD.—On Thursday the Rev. T. Shadforth, Fellow of University College, was nominated a master of the schools. The Regius Professor of Ecclesiastical History will begin a course of introductory lectures on Thursday, November 3, at two o'clock. The Regius Professor of Pastoral Theology will begin an introductory course of lectures on Wednesday, November 2, at seven o'clock. The Regius Professor of Hebrew proposes to continue his lectures on the Prophet Isaiah on Mondays, Tuesdays, Thursdays, and Saturdays, at nine o'clock, beginning on Saturday, the 29th inst. The Chinese Professor of Medicine proposes to commence his attendance and lectures at the Radcliffe Infirmary, on Tuesday, November 1. The Rev. G. D. Wheeler and the Rev. C. Nevinson have been admitted actua. fellows of Wadham College. Mr. T. J. Heron has been admitted an actual fellow of New College, as founder's kin. The Lord Bishop of Gloucester has presented the Rev. Dr. B. S. Clarke, of Worcester College, to the incumbency of St. Mathew's, Twigworth, Gloucestershire.

CAMBRIDGE.—At the last congregation the degree of M.A. was conferred on Mr. W. Atkinson, of Queen's College.

LECTURES. The Jacksonian Professor's course on mechanism, statics, and dynamics, will commence on Tuesday, November the 8th, at the room in the Botanic Gardens. Professor Walmesley's lectures on vocal music commenced on Monday last, on Wilhem's method, the course to consist of 20 lessons, to be given on Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays.

UNIVERSITY OF DURHAM.—The October term commenced on Saturday last. A large number of gentlemen matriculated. The Lord Bishop of Durham preached in the Cathedral on the assembling of the University.

PUBLIC MEETINGS.

ST. ANDREW'S, HOLBORN.—TITHES.—On Monday evening a meeting of the inhabitants of the above parish took place at the Mechanics' Institution, to take into consideration the conduct of the Rev. John Travers Robinson, M.A., rector of the said parish, so far as regards the proceedings he has instituted in the Court of Chancery for the recovery of his tithes. T. Wakley, Esq., M.P., took the chair.—The chairman addressed the meeting, and said he was not there in the character of a partisan; he was merely there to hear the case that was to be laid before the meeting, with the view of using it elsewhere if such a course became necessary. According to the case laid before him, it appeared that the reverend rector had applied to certain parishioners for the payment of tithes. They refused to pay, on conscientious grounds. The magistrates were applied to by the rector, according to the provisions of the 5th and 6th of William the Fourth, and they issued orders for the payment of the tithes in question. The orders, however, were not enforced; but the rector, being determined to have his tithes, proceeded against fourteen individuals in the Court of Chancery, filing a separate bill in each case. Now, the simple question for the meeting was this—was it proper for the rector, when he could have recovered his rights by the ordinary process to be enforced by the magistrates, to adopt harsh proceedings in the Court of Chancery? He, for one, thought not, and he believed that pleading the statute against the bills filed would be a good answer to them.—Mr. Purday (of Holborn), one of the parties against whom the bills in question had been filed, detailed the circumstances connected with his case, and moved a resolution declaratory of the disapprobation of the meeting at the conduct pursued by the rector. The resolution having been seconded, Mr. Griffiths, the churchwarden of the parish, opposed it, and said that there were only a few malcontents in the parish who objected to pay the tithes, the rector's right to which had already been established in a court of law. The resolution, was, however, carried with only seven or eight dissentients.—Mr. T. Wooler moved the next resolution, which was to the effect that the meeting approved the bills filed in Chancery, in their opposition to the course adopted by the rector. This resolution, having been seconded, and supported in an able address by Mr. Haynes, was likewise carried; as was also one calling on the inhabitants to enter into subscriptions for the defendants in their opposition. Thanks having been given to the chairman, the meeting separated, after giving three groans for the rector.

MR. T. DUNCOMBE. On Monday evening a public festival, or tea-drinking, took place at the Hall of the National Association, Holborn, in honour of Mr. T. Duncombe. About 250 Chartists, a great portion of whom were females, assembled on the occasion. Col. Thompson (the chairman), after one or two preliminary toasts were disposed of, proposed the health of Mr. T. Duncombe, which was most enthusiastically received by the company. The honourable gentleman returned thanks in his usual felicitous style; after which Mr. Hetherington, Mr. T. P. Thompson, Mr. Cleave, Mr. Parry, and Mr. Thomas, severally addressed the meeting, and two other toasts were given,—one recommending union, and the other expressing a hope for the liberation of all illegal incarcerations, for the freedom of the press, and for the displacing of despotic judges and arbitrary magistrates. A vote of thanks having been unanimously awarded to the chair, for which the gallant gentleman returned thanks, the meeting separated at half-past eleven o'clock.

PROGRESS OF SCIENCE.

At a recent meeting of the Entomological Society a singular monstrosity in the insect kingdom was brought under notice. This phenomenon was exhibited in a specimen of the moth, Bombyx castrensis, discovered by Mr. Ingall, in which one side of the individual had the masculine formation and the other side the feminine.—At the same meeting a new British moth was shown called Notodonta tritophus.—The photographic art has recently undergone another improvement; coloured daguerreotypes have been produced, though not by the agency of light. It is generally known that those who practise this art in London have made an advance to this discovery by imparting to the portraits taken by this process something approaching to a flesh-coloured tint; but it was reserved for an Italian artist named Lechi to give a different tint to the clothes to that given to the flesh; thus correcting the process previously used by which the whole portrait received the same hue.—A Mr. Lingard, who has been investigating the growth of fungi and the causes of dry rot in timber for twenty years, has within the last week obtained an extensive celebrity for his theory, through the medium of the Polytechnic Institution. Mr. Lingard's views are bold and original, though we scarcely think likely to make very many converts. He states that the fungi which make their appearance in matter undergoing decomposition are the result of the expansion of matter which has lost its cohesive attraction; that as water by increments of heat expands considerably, so portions of timber by the agency of heat and moisture expand, producing fungi which take the form more or less of the tree from whose timber they spring. In fact, that these fungi are homogeneous and identical with the matter whence they proceed, and are not the results of reproduction as peculiar to the other cryptogamia. The cryptogamia really present some curious anomalies, which go far to give a colour of truth to the theory of Mr. Lingard, as, for instance, a man in Bedfordshire, we hear, produces edible mushrooms from manure and oakleaves, without any admixture of spawn, mushroom water, or of any other direct agent.—A specimen of rock containing quicksilver has been forwarded from Aden, and reported on by the assay department of the Mint. The rock is a reddish-coloured vesicular slag, which would, if found as an ordinary trap, be looked upon as a variety of amygdaloid containing a considerable quantity of oxide of iron. The mercury is found in small globules adhering to the sides of the cavities, so minute in general as not to be visible to the naked eye. When shaken over any hard surface they fall out and coalesce. From the perfect fluidity and sphericity of the globule thus formed, the purity of the metal is established without analysis. This rock abounds at Aden, and possesses to and from India by this route may procure specimens at Steamer point, where it is particularly plentiful. Quicksilver is but rarely found in a pure metallic state, that of commerce being reduced from cinnabar, which is a compound of sulphur with the metal. Wherever it is found as a metal it is usually in trap veins traversing the coal formation.

ORIGINAL POETRY.*

TWILIGHT FALLS.

SERENADE BY J. AUGUSTINE WADE.

Twilight falls o'er mount and lea—
In thy bow'r, in thy bow'r,
Maiden! keep thy truth with me:
'Tis the hour—'tis the hour!
All is stilly round it, save
Vesper bird or whisp'ring wave;
Only one sweet star will guide thee,
And when here thy love will hide thee:
Haste! for more, with prying moon,
Will be on their nightwatch soon!
Twilight falls o'er mount and lea—
In thy bow'r, in thy bow'r,
Maiden! keep thy truth with me:
'Tis the hour—'tis the hour!

Lovers' meeting should be when Daylight dies—daylight dies;
And their parting when again
Morn doth rise—morn doth rise!
That fond bird, the nightingale,
Chooses night to tell her tale:
Fear not that the dews will harm, love!
Hearts like ours will keep us warm, love!
Till th' unwelcome dawn of day
Tear us ling'ring, sweet, away!
Twilight falls o'er mount and lea—
In thy bow'r, in thy bow'r,
Maiden! keep thy truth with me:
'Tis the hour—'tis the hour!

MUSIC.

SUBSCRIPTION CONCERTS, SEASON 1842.—On Wednesday evening last the first performance of this delightful series took place at the Hanover-square Rooms, and was attended, as it richly deserved, by a crowded and fashionable audience. It commenced with Beethoven's musical picture the Sinfonia Pastorale; and never was it more exquisitely portrayed, particularly in the first part, or Prospect, as the mighty poet-musician designated his opening movement. It is necessary to use the terms of three distinct arts in order to describe properly the various perfections which were happily combined in that triplex genius. To notice seriatim the many beauties that followed would far exceed our space; but we cannot refrain from distinguishing some of the more prominent features of this night's enjoyment. Miss Rainforth (in Weber's grand scena from Oberon) was delightful; Mr. Manvers, in "Jeptha's rash vow," all that could atone for the absence of Braham's tragic recitative; and Mrs. Alfred Shaw, particularly in Winter's exquisite duet, from Il Ratto di Proserpine, "Vaghi colli," with Miss Birch, fully proved that English vocalists, as well as their neighbours, can attain the highest excellence. Phillips, as usual, was "himself unrivalled," and sang charmingly, as, also, in conjunction with him, did Mr. J. Bennett. Miss Bassano is wonderfully improved, and yet may become the Grassinni of her time, if she will only a little further cultivate the natural pathos of her voice, and sing such things as "Paga fui." The choral department reflects the highest credit upon Mr. Harris, and Madame Dulcken and Mr. Willy, as solo performers, received the meed of approbation justly due to their great excellence on their respective instruments—pianoforte and violin. Mr. John Parry, that Momus of music, had a most deserved encore of his extemporaneous Italian trio, between the first and second parts. Altogether the performance and its reception fully proved that there were yet in England some musicians, and musically inclined people, so devoted to the enjoyment of the art as to endure the inflictions of a stove rather than forego its pleasures. We make this last observation in consequence of a most disagreeable absence of ventilation, which was universally complained of in the room.

To the young and robust this is a matter of minor importance, probably; but we observed with pain the inquietude and discomfort of many venerable personages, who, we fear, were deprived of a considerable share of the evening's musical treat, and were obliged to retire long before the conclusion of the performance. This simple allusion to a matter which inconvenienced all parties present may, we trust, induce the speedy and effectual remedy of a most unpleasant annoyance.

MUSICAL CHIT-CHAT.

FANNY ELSSLER AND FOREIGN ENTHUSIASM.—Fanny Elssler is delighting the good people of Berlin with her performance of the Bayadère. Accounts from Vienna speak in the highest raptures of her success in that city, where she gave two representations—one for the funds of the poor at the Imperial Theatre (Burgtheater), and the other at the Imperial Palace of Schoenbrunn, on the personal invitation of her Majesty the Empress, in honour of the arrival of their Imperial Highnesses the Duke and Duchess of Leuchtenberg from St. Petersburg, at which were present all the Imperial family, together with the grand dignitaries of the court and the leading nobility. As etiquette forbad all noisy marks of approbation in the imperial presence, the illustrious spectators, thus unable to express their admiration in the theatre, determined upon taking their revenge after they got into their carriages. They gave orders to their coachmen to draw up in line on both sides of the road leading from Schoenbrunn to Vienna, and, at the moment the great artiste passed in one of the royal carriages that brought her from the capital to the palace, salvos of approbation filled the air, mingled with cries of "Bravo," and "Vive Elsler," whilst the ladies waved their handkerchiefs. A great number of young men dashed forward, and set to work detaching the horses from the carriage, with a view to draw her in triumph; but the police stating that the laws forbid, under the severest penalties, any interruption to the progress of an imperial equipage, they retired, crying "Vive Elsler!" "Vive the glory (der stolz) of our theatre." The evening previous to her departure from Vienna, her Majesty the Empress wrote her an autograph letter, and accompanied with a diadem in topaz, adorned with a cameo antique. The Emperor sent a bouquet in diamonds of great value. The three principal theatres of our city having put a box at the disposition of Mdlle. Elsler during her stay in Vienna, she acknowledged the compliment by addressing to each one 600 florins (£60), to be appropriated to the relief of the wives and children of indigent artists.

* Contributed for the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, and copyright.

THE COUNT DE CANDIA.—This nobleman, who is signalizing himself on the lyrical stage under the name of Mario, has found an imitator in France. The Marquis of P——t is about to make his appearance at the Francais in tragedy. There is a great difference of opinion as to the true motives which have induced this young nobleman to take to the stage. He has a large fortune: it can only be from choice. But, it is said, this sudden resolution is owing to the rigour of a certain proud Desdemona, who is the object of attraction to the fierce Othello.

There has been a literary matinée at the house of Madame Recamier, at L'Abbaye aux Bois. Mdlle. Rachel recited to the chosen circle selections from Rodogandi, in which she will shortly perform, and the verses of M. Lamercier excited general admiration. No less a personage than M. Chateaubriand—who seems to have taken a new lease of life—undertook the answers to the young tragedian.

Lady Bisopp and Bochsa gave a concert on the 8th inst. at Manheim, on the Rhine. The former sang several dramatic scenes in costume, and the latter, who performed on the harp, announced himself as "harpist to the Queen of England, professor at the Royal Academy of Music, and director of the Italian Opera in London!!!"

In a letter from Mr. John Barnett, of Cheltenham, he says "I have given up all thoughts of again appearing before the London public as an operatic composer. Should I produce any more operas, it will, I hope, be in France or Germany." Is it not hard that an artist must exile himself before he can meet with due appreciation of his genius? We learn that Balfe's new opera, the libretto by Scribe, is in active rehearsal at the Opera Comique, Paris. Another instance of unmerited banishment.

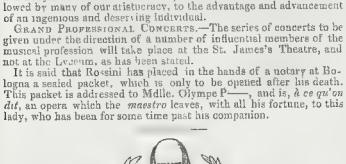
The Netherlands Musical Society has presented Mr. William Sterndale Bennett, the composer and pianist, with a diploma of the Order of Merit, as a tribute to his talent; and the directors of the Leipzig concerts sent him, by the celebrated Mendelssohn, a costly brooch. What a reproach to his native land!

NEW OPERAS. A new opera, by Benedict, will be brought out at Covent-Garden; also an opera by G. A. Macfarren, whose clever production, The Devil's Opera, which was performed at the Lyceum a few seasons back, will be brought out without delay as a second piece. A musical drama, by Mr. J. L. Hatton, will also be produced as a second piece at the same theatre; so that music will be the prominent feature. Report speaks in the highest possible terms of two MS. operas by a young composer named Lavenu, the libretti by J. Augustine Wade.

NEW INSTRUMENT.—A pianoforte upon a novel and elegant construction has recently been brought before the musical world, by Mr. W. Masson. The instrument, which he has named the Melophonon, is of great power and compass, and possesses a combination of excellences rarely to be found. These excellences, it would appear, are more or less ensured by some union of the principles of the harp, the symmetrical shape of which it bears a resemblance to, together with those of the pianoforte. The inventor has already received royal patronage and a royal commission: an example which will, doubtless, be followed by many of our aristocracy, to the advantage and advancement of an ingenious and deserving individual.

GRAND PROFESSIONAL CONCERTS.—The series of concerts to be given under the direction of a number of influential members of the musical profession will take place at the St. James's Theatre, and not at the Lyceum, as has been stated.

It is said that Rossini has placed in the hands of a notary at Bologna a sealed packet, which is only to be opened after his death. This packet is addressed to Mdlle. Olympe P——, and is, à ce qu'on dit, an opera which the maestro leaves, with all his fortune, to this lady, who has been for some time past his companion.



THE THEATRES.

DRURY LANE.

The play of King John, the revival of which has been a long time in preparation, was at length produced on last Monday evening. The mise en scène was most admirable throughout. The ensemble was magnificent, and reflects the highest credit upon the spirit, taste, and liberality of the lessee, who has spared neither pains nor expense in the production of this noble drama. King John is, perhaps, if we except Leontes, the best Shaksperian personification by Macready: it is full of vigour and close consideration of character throughout. The occasionally objectionable peculiarities of this great actor are less apparent in his depiction of King John than in any other character which we have witnessed performed by him. We might make some trifling exceptions, but the whole was a masterly performance. His best scenes were those with Hubert (Phelps), and indeed we may say, that the excellence was reciprocated, for a better Hubert could not be found to "play up to" the timidly seducing monarch. The first scene of Act 4, threatening, as it is, with tragedy, was beautifully, pathetically played by Mr. Phelps, particularly in the passage to young Arthur—

"I will not touch thine eyes
For all the treasure that thine uncle owes (owns)"

There is an innocent confidence on the part of little Arthur, which is beautifully disclosed by Shakspere, in making the young prince so frequently and familiarly address him by his name—

"Good morrow, Hubert!"

Again—

"I would to Heaven
I were your son, so you would love me, Hubert"

A little farther on in this delicious scene—

"Are you sick, Hubert? You look pale to-day."

The appealing iteration of the name of Hubert is the finest circumstance of pathos throughout all Shakspere! But, return we to the dramatis personæ as represented. Macready, we have already stated, at least in corresponding terms, is a magnificent King John; Phelps a most eloquent vindicator of a good man suborned to base purposes.

Anderson's Pavilion bridge was uneven, now and then good, but we cannot praise it throughout. Lady Constance was effectively performed by Miss Faucit, and the little Arthur with somewhat less drawling might have been probably more natural though not more spirited than he was. But we must not pretend to blame where there are too many things to praise. If Shakspere himself were to revisit us he could not but be pleased with the idolatry paid to his poetry at the present day, and applaud like a father, as he is, of the drama, the struggles of his legitimate sons in the cause of even new-framing his pictures of life!

THE ADELPHI.

A new piece, called The Miser's Daughter, was produced at this house on Monday evening, and met with such success that it was announced, nem. con., for repetition every night till further notice. Instead of being an adaptation of the French piece bearing a similar name, it consists of a dramatic reduction of Mr. Ainsworth's popular novel, and, in fact, as initial a transcript of that clever work as could be expected from the unavoidable necessity of mutilating it for the stage. Mr. Stirling, the author of the dramatic portion of the piece, was obliged to do double duty on the occasion, and enact the Miser, in the absence of Mr. Lyon who was seriously indisposed. The tableaux vivans did equal credit to the author and the artist; to him who imagined and him who embodied groups of powerful interest; and the individual personations throughout the piece were deserving of the highest commendation.

CITY OF LONDON.

Leman Rede's popular Frolics of the Fairies was produced here on Monday evening with the most complete success. Amongst the many things of the night deserving praiseworthy notice, we must particularize the performance of Miss E. Montague, in a new piece, called Nancy of Dover. Shakspere has immortalized its locality, and she "does walk in his ways." We are mindful of her Juliet and wish to see it again.

THE SURREY

On Monday night a piece entitled Lalelle Dumas; or, Love and War, was represented for the first time and was perfectly successful. It was succeeded by a nautical drama in four parts, called Poor Jack; or, the Wife of a Sailor, affording T. P. Cooke an excellent scope for the display of his talent. The nautical incidents of the drama are taken from a narrative founded on fact, entitled 'the Bride of Obeydah.' The legendary drama of Blanche Heriot; or, the Cheriley Curfew, concluded the entertainments.

SPORTING INTELLIGENCE.

NEWMARKET HOUGHTON MEETING.

RACE COURSE, Monday, Sept. 5.—The first race for decision this afternoon were six in number; and as the respective odds in many circumstances, but more than enough consideration of the wretched state of the ground and the weather. The "card" of the day [illegible] Newmarket gave the colours of the riders: a species of information hitherto unattainable in the kingdom as a matter of course. We shall probably have the numbers telegraphed some two or three years hence (the Jockey Club, we must say, are very slow in adopting improvements). Of the sport, to which the card proved a more convenient guide than the list, we subjoin such particulars as time and the discomforts of a race-course like Newmarket in stormy weather will permit—

Handicap Sweepstakes of 25 sovs each, for three yrs old, &c.; D M. 8 8 1s, three of whom paid 10 sovs each.

Mr. Boyce's ch by Hymn, dam by Percipance, 3 yrs, 8st 9lb (Pettit) .. 1

Lord R. Sibu's Camelion, 6 yrs, 8st 7lb (F. Butler) 0

Col. A. [illegible]'s Marquise, 2 yrs, 6st (Darling, jun.) 0

[illegible] betting. A dead heat

Mr Osbaldeston's Devil among the Tailors, 3 yrs, 8st (F. Butler), beat Lord Albemarle's Bufalo, 4 yrs, 8st 7lb, T.Y.C., 100, h ft. 6 to 5 on Bufalo.

Mon by a length.

Duke of Bedford's Mohu ds, 6 yrs, 8st 4lb (E. Edwards), beat Mr. Payne's Johnny, 5 yrs, 8st 7lb, D.M., 300, h ft. 6 to 5 on Johnny, who was defeated by two inches.

The Criterion Stakes of 30 sovs each, 20 ft, for two yrs old colts, 8st 7lb; fillies, 8st 5lb, &c. From the turn of the lands in. The second saves his stake. 24 subs.

Lord G. Heuinck's Gaper (Rogers) 1

Mr. Watt's ch by Waxley, d by Blacklock 2

Mr. J. [illegible]'s [illegible] 3

It is [illegible] 3 to 1 agst Cotherstone, 5 to 2 agst the Yaxley colt, 3 to 1 agst Canton, and 8 to 1 agst Gaper. Gaper jumped off with the lead, made all the running, and won easy by a length; a fine race for second, the Macrmmon fifty about two lengths behind, Cotherstone close up with the latter, and the others astern of.

The Cambridgeshire Stakes of 25 sovs each, 10 ft, and only 5 ft if declared, with £100 added by the inhabitants. Last mile and a distance of B.C. 88 subs; 34 dec. agst.

Lord Albemarle's Ralph, 4 yrs, 8st 7lb (Robinson) 1

Duke of Grafton's Florence, 4 yrs, 7st 11b 2

Lord Jersey's Lady Adela, 3 yrs, 7st 11b 3

Betting—4 to 1 agst Florence, 11 to 1 agst Ralph, 11 to 1 agst Melior, 13 to 1 agst Lady Adela, 18 to 1 agst Cabrera, 18 to 1 agst Garry Owen, 17 to 1 agst Rosie, 17 to 1 agst Knight of the Whistle, 17 to 1 agst Roscius, 20 to 1 agst Mr. Mostyn, and 20 to 1 agst Busk mare. With by a length

[illegible] Mr. Francis, aged, 8st 9lb (Chifney) 1

Mr. Gurney's Una, 4 yrs, 7st 8lb 2

[illegible] 3 to 1 agst St. Francis, and 4 to 1 agst Una. St. Francis won very easy by a length. Beelzemma a very bad thing, and the others tailed off.

Duke of Bedford's dcihn o' Gaunt, 4 yrs, 8st 7lb (Robinson), beat Lord Eglinton's Dr. Caius, 5 yrs, 8st 3lb; A.F., 300, h ft. Betting 3 to 1 on John o' Gaunt, who won by eight lengths.

Lord Eglinton's Pompey, 8st 7lb (Lye), beat Lord Orford's c. by Harmaid, 8st 2lb; T. Y. C., 100, h. ft.; 13 to 8 on Pompey. Won by a length easy.

Lord Orford's c by St. Patrick, out of Wild Duck (Nat), beat Captain Ives's c by Orion, out of Mopsy; 8st 7lb each; T. Y. C.; 100, h. ft; 3 to 1 on Lord Orford's colt. Won by six lengths.

Mr. Irby, a gentleman well known on the turf, died on Monday morning, at his residence [illegible]

Sir Geo. Sitwell has killed this season, up to the last inst. [illegible] stags and six hinds, besides some roe deer, in his forest at Graystock, Cumberland.

Between Mason [illegible] Monday afternoon John and Hobbledee, of Lambeth, and T. [illegible] Drum, of Vauxhall, rowed an oars-match from Westminster [illegible] for £30 a side. The men started at half-past three o'clock, [illegible] descending to Greenwich at the time, and went off evenly; Coombes and his partner appearing to have a slight lead before passing the barge-heads, but, having to go outside them, lost what advantage they had gained, and at the Horseferry the Dunbeeds were nearly a boat's length ahead, and maintained won the match by about 200 yards. It was a spirited and gamely contest.

CORONERS' INQUESTS.

An inquest was held at the Wellington public-house, East Greenwich, before Mr. C. J. Carttar and a jury of the principal inhabitants, to investigate the circumstances attending the death of Mr. Edmund Francis Green, late a West India proprietor and merchant, carrying on business in Leadenhall street. It had by some been rumoured that the deceased had taken poison, and by others that he had died of a broken heart, owing to misfortunes, he having lost a large fortune in mercantile pursuits, and become bankrupt. The deceased had only passed his last examination before Sir C. F. Williams a few hours before his decease.—Mr. J. Appleton, a surgeon of Greenwich, was called in to attend the deceased on Wednesday morning, at three o'clock. He found the deceased sitting on a chair at the bed side, partly undressed and gasping for breath, from a serious obstruction of the passages of the heart. He was greatly excited and could scarcely articulate. He asked if he was in danger, and witness evaded the question, thinking if it would increase the excitement. There was no pulse, and the action of the heart was very much impeded. Witness saw him into bed, and went for medicines, and on his return, about ten minutes after, he found him a corpse. He had since made a post mortem examination with Dr. Keeble, Mr. Mason, and his own brother. They found the pericardium adhering to the substance of the heart. There was an enlargement of the heart and the arteries were partly ossified.—A Juror asked, whether the deceased had died from what is termed a broken heart?—Mr. Appleton: I cannot exactly answer the question, but I have no doubt that the mental excitement of the previous day had a strong effect on the existing disease and accelerated his death.—The foreman said that the jury were, he was happy to say, unanimously of opinion on that point, and he had no doubt their verdict would be perfectly satisfactory to the public, and clear up the doubt which had arisen, in consequence of the reports which had prevailed in the neighbourhood that the deceased had poisoned himself.—A verdict "That the deceased died from natural causes" was then returned.—The coroner, on discharging the jury, said the deceased had insured his life in the Rock Life office for £1000.

A lengthened investigation was gone into before Mr. Baker, the coroner, at the Roya. Oak, Whitechapel-road, respecting the death of Alice Lowe, aged 24, a single woman, and late a pauper in Whitechapel workhouse.—Mr. Miller, the parish surgeon's assistant, said that the deceased had died from an effusion on the chest, which had been brought on by dropsy. She was delivered of a still-born child, and did not survive the event more than two minutes.—The foreman of the jury remarked, that he thought no blame was attributable to the medical gentleman; but there was one thing which he had noticed, as well as several of the jury, and that was the disgraceful state of the dead-house belonging to the workhouse. It was a mere shed, true, it had a roof, but it was composed of mere tiles just put slovenly on; a window, and with all the glass out; so that the rain, which they had noticed that morning came pelting on the various coffins and on the corpses—even the deceased was completely wet. He thought that, as the parish paid such large salaries to those persons who had to attend to the pauper poor when dying, they ought to take a little more care with their remains. The coroner thanked the jury for the observation, and observed that no doubt it would be attended to by the proper authorities.—After some discussion, the jury returned a verdict, "That the deceased died a natural death whilst in childbirth, and that not the least blame could be attached to the medical gentleman or the workhouse."

Mr. Payne, the City coroner, held an inquest at St. Bartholomew's Hospital, on the body of John Gorman, aged 45.—John Horton, City policeconstable, 532, stated that on Thursday evening a week, at five o'clock, he found the deceased sitting on the pavement in Lower Thames-street. He thought from his appearance that he was intoxicated, and desired him to move on. Deceased was either unable or unwilling to answer him, and, fearing that he could not walk, witness sent for a street-cab, and, he him strapped on it, and conveyed to the station-house in Tower-street. He was there at once placed in a cell, and witness left him, still insensible. He considered he did not smell of liquor. No straw is kept in the station-house for the prisoners to lie on. Deceased was laid on the boards. From there deceased was taken to Bartholomew Hospital.—Mr. L. Shaw, assistant apothecary of the hospital, said, that the deceased was admitted on Friday morning last week, at half past one o'clock, in a state of collapse. It was the opinion of the policeman who brought him that he was intoxicated; but witness could see no appearance of that, and could not help expressing his surprise and regret that he had been allowed to remain for so many hours in such a state. He did not look like a person in liquor. Witness immediately attended to him, and at once could hear that he was dead. Witness had since examined him, and found a considerable bruise upon the right temple, about the size of a crown piece, which must have been caused by a blow or fall. The brain exhibited appearances of long-standing disease. Disease of the brain was the cause of death, and it might have been accelerated by the blow on the temple or the stimulus of drinking intoxicating liquors. The bruise had been received within a few hours. Deceased might have been one of those taken by the police for a drunken man; but before he had remained for so many hours in an insensible state he should have been taken to a surgeon, who would at once have seen what was the matter with him.—The policeman did not know how he got the bruise.—Bridget Gorman said that she was deceased's daughter. He had not always enough to eat, but had not applied to the workhouse for relief. He left home for work in the morning. Witness did not know how he got the bruise, but she did not see it when he left her. He was a very sober man, and witness had never seen him intoxicated.—Mr. Lloyd, jun., lived in Henry-Scholar-street, Shadwell.—The jury summed up the evidence, and the jury returned a verdict of "Died by the visitation of God."

On Saturday afternoon an inquisition was taken before Mr. Wakley, M.P., at the Dunley Arms, Paddington green, on the body of a newly-born female child, which was found in a field at Bayswater. Mr. Ancell, surgeon, of 3, North-place, Gray's-inn-road, was sent for and examined the body. He said he had performed the usual test, and was confident the child had been born alive, but he could not tell if a bruise which he found on the right temple was the immediate cause of death. He thought it could not have been dead more than 12 or 14 hours. After some deliberation, the jury retired and a verdict of Wilful Murder again at some person or persons unknown.

DEATH OF A MURDERER IN THE PENITENTIARY.—Mr. Wakley, M.P., coroner, held an inquest on Saturday afternoon (missing the fifth or sixth within the last few weeks), in the General Penitentiary, Pentonville, on the body of Elizabeth Fry, a prisoner under sentence of transportation. The prisoner was 80 years old, and, owing to her advanced age, she was not sent out of the country. Verdict, Natural Death.

BERKSHIRE GRAND MASONIC FESTIVAL.

—On Wednesday last the ceremony of laying the foundation-stone of the episcopal chapel at the cemetery, Reading, was performed with great masonic pomp and splendour by the Right Worshipful John Ramsbottom, Esq., M.P., Provincial Grand Master for Berkshire, assisted by the grand officers and brethren of the county. Next week we shall present our readers with a series of beautiful engravings illustrative of this important and interesting event, sketched on the ground by our distinguished artist, H. Landells, Esq. A detailed account of the proceedings, together with an original essay on freemasonry, shall also appear.

DEATH OF GRACE DARLING.—This heroic woman expired at Bamburgh on Thursday, the 20th inst., in her twenty-fifth year.

RELIGION IN AUSTRALIA.—On Friday, Lord Stanley, in his official capacity as Secretary of State for the Colonies, gave audience, by appointment, at Knowsley-hall, to his Grace the Most Rev. Dr. Polding, Archbishop of Sydney, New South Wales, and the Very Rev. —— (the name we have not heard), one of the bishops of Canada. Both the archbishop and the right rev. prelate were attired in their full state robes, canonical of the Catholic church, and were most graciously received by the noble lord. The Archbishop of Sydney is to sail about the 1st of November, in that fine new ship the Templar, in Prince's-dock, and takes out with him more than twenty young priests for the Australian mission. The Canadian bishop will proceed by the next Halifax packet.

NARROW ESCAPE OF THE FRENCH PRINCES.—We find by the following letter in the Hermine of Nantes, that the Prince de Joinville and the Duc d'Aumale had a very narrow escape for their lives, while on their way to Brest, from an accident almost similar to that which befel their ill-fated brother, the Duke of Orleans. "At about a mile from Landevant, in descending a steep hill, the four horses of the carriage fell at the same time. One of them was killed on the spot, the carriage having passed over his head, and the vehicle would have been precipitated into a meadow ten or twelve feet below the road, if a large stone had not been in the way, and stopped it."

THE NEW CHAPEL ROYAL AT BUCKINGHAM PALACE.—The workmen on Wednesday commenced roofing the late conservatory, but in other respects the works proceed slowly. The new summer-house is rapidly approaching completion.

The steamer Lady de Saumarez, Captain Goodridge, which should have reached Southampton on Wednesday morning from Jersey, with mails and passengers, did not arrive, and intelligence reached Southampton in the course of the day, that she had struck on the Casket rocks the previous night, owing to the tempest, and lost her bulwarks, and was considered, in consequence, to put into the Isle of Portland.

Her Majesty the Queen Dowager has been graciously pleased to present to the Sanatorium £20, as an expression of her approbation of the objects of that benevolent and highly useful institution.

THE FALLS OF NIAGARA.

BOZ'S DESCRIPTION OF THE FALLS OF NIAGARA.

[From his American Notes.]

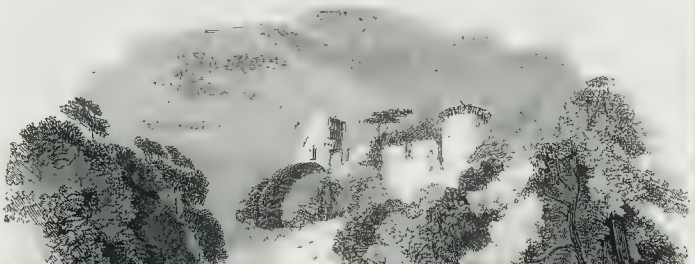
Between five and six in the morning we arrived at Buffalo, where we breakfasted, and being too near the Great Falls to wait patiently anywhere else, we set off by the train the same morning at nine. * * * Whenever the train halted I listened for the roar, and was constantly straining my eyes in the direction where I knew the falls must be from seeing the river rolling on towards them; every moment expecting to behold the spray. Within a few minutes of my stopping I saw two great white clouds rising up slowly and majestically from the depths of the earth. That was all. At length we alighted: and then, for the first time, I heard the mighty rush of water, and felt the ground tremble underneath my feet. The bank was very steep, and was slippery with rain and half-melted ice. I hardly know how I got down, but I was soon at the bottom, and climbing with two English officers who were crossing, and had joined me, over some broken rocks, deafened by the noise, half-blinded by the spray, and wet to the skin. We were at the foot of the American fall. I could see an immense torrent of water tearing headlong down from some great height, but had no idea of shape, or situation, or anything but vague immensity. When we were seated in the little ferryboat, and were crossing the swollen river immediately before both cataracts, I began to feel what it was; but I was in a manner stunned, and unable to comprehend the vastness of the scene. It was not until I came on Table Rock and looked—great heaven, on what a fall of bright green water!—that it came upon me in its full might and majesty. Then, when I felt how near to my Creator I was standing—the first effect, and the enduring one—instant and lasting—of the tremendous spectacle was peace—peace of mind—tranquillity—calm recollection of the dead—great thoughts of eternal rest and happiness: nothing of gloom or terror. Niagara was at once stamped upon my heart an image of beauty; to remain there changeless and indelible until its pulses cease to beat for ever. Oh how strife and trouble of our daily life receded from my view and lessened in the distance during the ten memorable days we passed on that enchanted ground! What voices spoke from out the thundering water; what faces faded from the earth looked out upon me from its gleaming depths; what heavenly promise glistened in those angels' tears, the drops of many hues that showered around and twined themselves about the gorgeous arches which the changing rainbows made! I never stirred in all that time from the Canadian side whither I had gone at first. I never crossed the river again; for I knew there were people on the other shore, and in such a place it is natural to shun strange company. To wander to and fro all day, and see the cataracts from all points of view; to stand upon the edge of the Great Horse Shoe Fall, marking the hurried water gathering strength as it approached the verge, yet seeming, too, to pause before it shot into the gulf below; to gaze upon the river's level up at the torrent, as it came streaming down; to climb the neighbouring heights, and watch it through the trees, and see the wreathing water to the rapids hurrying on to take its fearful plunge; to linger in the shadow of the solemn rocks three miles below; watching the river, as, stirred by no visible cause, it heaved and eddied, and awoke the echoes, being troubled yet far down beneath the surface by its giant leap; to have Niagara before me lighted by the sun and by the moon red in the day's decline, and grey as evening slowly fell upon it; to look upon it every day and awake up in the night and hear its ceaseless voice: this was enough!



VIEW OF BOTHWELL CASTLE.

We take advantage of a sort of hiatus in the world of incident, so far as subjects of news illustration are concerned, to occupy it with the view of Bothwell Castle, which is here presented to the reader. It is almost the last of a series of embellishments which crowded upon us during the progres of her Majesty's visit to Scotland, and is not inferior to many of our preceding engravings in interest and romance. We adopt the beautiful description given of it by Wordsworth in one of the notes to his poems.

The castle stands nobly, overlooking the Clyde. When we came up to it, I was hurt to see that flower-borders had taken place of the natural overgrowings of the ruin, the scattered stones and wild plants. It is a large and grand pile of red freestone, harmonizing perfectly with the rocks of the river, from which, no doubt, it has been hewn. When I was a little accustomed to the unnaturalness of a modern garden, I could not help admiring the excessive beauty and luxuriance of some of the plants, particularly the purple-flowered clematis, and a broad-leafed creeping plant without flowers, which scrambled up the castle wall, along with the ivy, and spread its vine-like branches so lavishly that it seemed to be in its natural situation, and one could not help thinking that, though not self-planted among the ruins of this country, it must somewhere have its native abode in such places. If Bothwell Castle had not been close to the Douglas mansion, we should have been disgusted with the possessor's miserable conception of adorning such a venerable ruin; but it is so very near to the house, that of necessity the pleasure-grounds must have extended beyond it, and perhaps the neatness of a shaven lawn, and the complete desolation natural to a ruin might have made an unpleasant contrast; and, besides being within the precincts of the pleasure-grounds, and so very near to the dwelling of a noble family, it has forfeited, in some degree, its independent majesty, and becomes a tributary to the mansion; its solitude being interrupted, it has no longer the command over the mind in sending it back into past times or excluding the ordinary feelings which we bear about us in daily life. We had then only to regret that the castle and the house were so near to each other; and it was impossible not to regret it; for the ruin presides in state over the river, far from city or town, as if it might have a peculiar privilege to preserve its memorials of past ages, and maintain its own character for centuries to come. We sat upon a bench, under the high trees, and had beautiful views of the different reaches of the river, above and below. On the opposite bank, which is finely wooded with elm and other trees, are the remains of a priory built upon a rock; and rock and ruin are so blended, that it is impossible to separate the one from the other. Nothing can be more beautiful than the little remnant of this holy place: elm trees (for we were near enough to distinguish them by their branches) grow out of the walls, and overshadow a small but very elegant window. It can scarcely be conceived what a grace the castle and priory impart to each other; and the river Clyde flows on, smooth and unruffled below, seeming to my thoughts more in harmony with the sober and stately images of former times, than if it had roared over a rocky channel, forcing its sound upon the ear. It blended gently with the warbling of the smaller birds, and the chattering of the larger ones, that had made their nests in the ruins. In this fortress the chief of the English nobility were confined after the battle of Bannockburn. If a man is to be a prisoner, he scarcely could have a more pleasant place to solace his captivity; but I thought that, for close confinement, I should prefer the banks of a lake, or the seaside. The greatest charm of a brook or river is in the liberty to pursue it through its windings; you can then take it in whatever mood you like: silent or noisy, sportive or quiet. The beauties of a brook or river must be sought, and the pleasure is in going in search of them; those of a lake or of the sea come to you of themselves. These rude warriors cared little, perhaps, about either; and yet, if one may judge from the writings of Chaucer, and from the old romances, more interesting passions were connected with natural objects in the days of chivalry than now; though going in search of scenery, as it is called, had not then been thought of. I had previously heard nothing of Bothwell Castle, at least nothing that I remembered; therefore, perhaps my pleasure was greater, compared with what I received elsewhere, than others might feel.

THE CHURCHES OF THE METROPOLIS.—No. XIII.

ST. PANCRAS' OLD CHURCH.

It seems but the other day this old suburban church was pleasantly surrounded by green fields and quiet hedgerows; but now the mammoth magnitude of this great city—the modern Babylon—has stretched itself in this direction, as in all others; and St. Pancras' fields, with their rows of goodly elms, and pleasant meandering footpaths leading to the then village church, exist only as a pleasant memory. Surrounded by houses, the old church seems out of place, and might be passed as little worthy attention. Still are there facts worth noting in its history, and that of the locality in which it stands—and associations which may serve to prompt more than a passing thought. The whole of this neighbourhood is linked by tradition with a deadly fight between the Britons and their invaders; when seventy thousand men were said to have been slain at "Battle-bridge." Modern fashion has attempted to get rid of the old Saxon name even which serves to keep this struggle in remembrance, by christening the locality in courtly guise, King's Cross—erecting, too, in the centre of the road an architectural hybrid, the use of which could never be discovered, unless built there for omnibuses to run against. All round Battle-bridge traces of entrenchments have been found, running up close to the old church; some of them called the Brill, occupied the pen of the learned and ingenious Stukely. During the civil wars, also, this spot again became the seat of armed entrenchments, and the Royalists and Parliamentarians occupied the ground which more than a thousand years earlier had been trodden by the armed legions of Rome, and the comparatively defenceless Britons.

Of the church itself, an old writer, Norden, who describes things as they were in London before the great fire, says, "Pancras church standeth all alone as utterly forsaken, old and wether-beaten, which, for the antiquity thereof, it is thought not to yeeld to Paules in London. About this church have bin many buildings, now decayed, leaving poor Pancras without companie or comfort, yet it is now and then visited with Kentishtowne and Highgate, which are members thereof; but they seldom come there, for they have chapels of ease within themselves; but when there is a corpse to be interred, they are forced to leave the same within this forsaken church or churchyard, where (no doubt) it resteth as secure against the day of resurrection as if it laie in stately Paules." Thus it seems that when the "stately Paules" stood in all the greatness of Gothic architecture where the Grecian St. Paul's of our time now stands, old Pancras church was then old and weather-beaten in its antiquity.

ST. PANCRAS OLD CHURCH.

It is a quaint old Gothic pile, built of stones and flints, and certainly as old as the thirteenth century. Now that it is coated with plaster, it has lost a good deal of the forsaken, wether-beaten, decaying look of which the old chronicler speaks; albeit more than five centuries have passed away since its foundations were laid. It is small, and consists of a nave and chancel, having, at the west end, a low tower, and "dome-like roof." In the old records of St. Paul's (Lib. L) is a visitation, which took place in 1251, wherein this church is described as having "a small tower, a good stone font, and a small marble stone, ornamented with copper, to bear the pax." Weever speaks of a "wondrous antient monument," by tradition, said to belong to the family of Gray, of Gray's Inn. The church and its now well-thronged graveyard have been long noted as the burial-place of such Roman Catholics as die in London. Almost every tomb bears a cross, and the initials of Requiescat in pace. May they rest in peace! It has been assigned as a reason for this, that in the south of France still stands another such old church, dedicated to the same saint, in which masses are said for the souls of all the dead interred at St. Pancras in England. Here also, it is said, hangs the last bell which tolled for mass in our country.

Like all our old churches, its walls still strive to rescue from oblivion the names of such as moulder in their neighbourhood. Old Pancras has its monuments. Some families connected with property in the neighbourhood of course find place:—A "London merchant," also, who witnessed the "Great Fire;" "Daniel Clarke, Esq., who had been cook to Queen Elizabeth;" Samuel Cooper, a miniature painter, who was intimate with the author of "Hudibras," and whose pencil has left us likenesses of the most celebrated statesmen, wits, and beauties of his stirring age. A portrait of Cromwell is his chief work. His manner approaches closely to that of Vandyke, and his pictures are in great esteem all over Europe, fetching great prices. Cooper was related to Pope, too; his wife was sister to Pope's mother.—The churchyard, likewise, has its monuments: Woodhead, a great champion of the Romish faith, and by some reputed the author of "The Whole Duty of Man;" Leoni, a Venetian, architect to the Elector Palatine, who died here just on a century ago; also a Count of the Holy Roman empire, de Haslang, Envoy from the Elector Palatine to the court of England. To the list the last few days has added another name, in that of Dr. Kenny. Of the worthies associated with the church, those of Paley and William Sherlock may be remembered. They were both prebends of Pancras. Close by is a chapel, and behind it a tomb erected by Sir John Soane, the donor of the Soane Museum, it is another object worthy the notice of the passer-by.

THE FASHIONS.

Paris, Rue de la Chaussée d'Antin, Oct. 24, 1842.

Mon cher Monsieur,—The near approach of winter has created a considerable activity in the ateliers of our principal modistes: every thing there speaks of preparation, and every thing gives ample promise of that winter luxury which harmonizes so well with splendid apartments, with splendid fêtes, and still more splendid women. Amongst our most beautiful novelties I have observed several mantles in violet and grenat velvet, completely bordered with ermine, and with a broad ermine collar fastened by silken cord, and trimmed, at the bottom of the ermine, with rich passementerie. Cashmere shawls are also becoming quite a rage with our fashionables, and are sported by all our belles, who recognise in a splendid shawl an object equally useful and luxurious. For evening parties, dahlia-coloured robes are decidedly in vogue, the more so as they possess the advantage of being equally useful in summer as promenade dresses. A robe odalisque, which, however, has nothing oriental in it but the name, of pure white muslin trimmed with lace, intermixed with embroidery, and folding round the person and forming a sort of tunic towards the bottom, is really a most beautiful dress for all nations, and for every season. Some very superb head-dresses have already made their appearance; amongst others we must cite the toque Marie Antoinette, of grenat or green velvet, which is really a most successful and beautiful article. It is worn slightly advanced towards the forehead, leaving the hair open behind. A superb white plume falls spirally from the side. A coiffure of velvet, plain or shaded, of different colours, is worn, and the accompanying ornaments are composed of a long stripe of lace, or of long cordon of black silk when the coiffeur is of black velvet, or of pearls of the colour of the stuff when that is of any other shade. These cordons have tassels, which fall very low upon the shoulders. We must also mention the chapeaux Montpensier, a charming coiffure of velvet, and, when worn with a veil, replaces very happily the riding-hats worn by our belles. For an evening home dress, or negligé toilette, the most recherché articles are the Bohemiennes, which present a sort of small point in velvet, terminated by tassels, and surrounded with sight ornaments of gold or silk. This description of head-dress, which is equally convenient and graceful, fulfils every requisite for a fireside coiffure. Capotes are much in fashion, and we have seen some in velvet, with an aigrette of feathers of the same tints. Those in satin recovered in citron or rose-coloured tulle, with feathers of the same colour, are really superb. But perhaps there is no mode more beautiful or more elegant than a little chapeau cardinale which I have observed, and which is really one of the most fortunate inventions of the season. It is one of those pretty, simple, and elegant affairs which every charming and graceful woman is so delighted to adopt. It is made of black velvet, or of black lace, having one rose-coloured plume on each side, and is really a most charming and tasty head-dress. I had almost forgotten to notice our winter flowers and ornaments. Perhaps the most beautiful things of the sort are bunches of grapes formed of a very light and semi-transparent substance, and painted separately in such a manner as to give them the shade and even the bloom of nature. These promise to become a most fashionable ornament, and when tastily applied are extremely elegant and recherché.

HENRIETTE DE B.

CHESS.

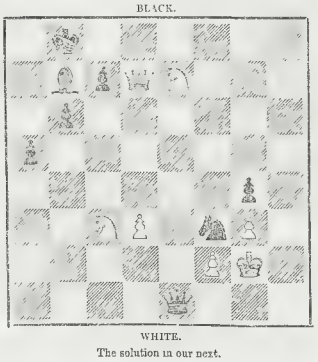
Solution to problem No. 9, in our last.

WHITE.	BLACK.
R to K B 8th ch.	Kt to Q B sq.
Q takes Q B ch.	K takes Q
Q R P one ch.	K to Q Kt sq.
Kt to Q B 6th ch.	K to Q R sq.
R takes Kt checkmates

PROBLEM, No. 10.

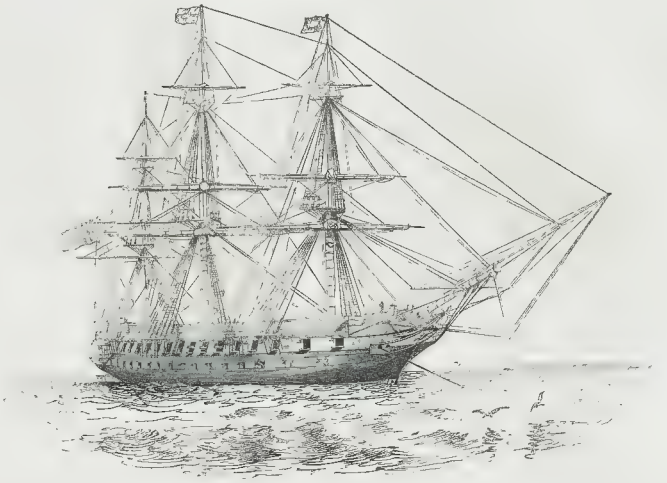
White to move and mate in eight moves.

BLACK.



WHITE.

The solution in our next.



THE QUEEN EAST INDIAMAN.

The above is a correct sketch of the Queen East Indiaman, lately launched from the Blackwall yard for the Calcutta trade, which we have considered worthy of presentation to our readers, inasmuch as the novel and ingenious improvements employed in her construction render her an object of considerable interest to every one connected with the mercantile marine. This beautiful vessel is 1350 tons burden, and is built on the principle of a frigate, being pierced for 50 guns, and measures 208 from the fore part of the stem to the after part of the taffrail, and 40 feet in extreme breadth. She sailed from the East India Dock on the 9th September, fitted with every accommodation, and carried out a great many passengers. In her passage through the Downs she was struck by a sudden squall, which carried away her fore and main topmast and flying jib-boom, and was obliged to put into Deal to refit, and finally sailed from Portsmouth on Sunday, the 18th of September. She is a sister ship to the Prince of Wales, which was launched from the same yard a fortnight previous, and is, in every respect, as near as possible of the same dimensions. It will be seen from the foregoing description that this vessel is built to suit either the public or private services, and it is expected by the owners, should the Chinese war continue, she may be "taken up" and commissioned by the Government.

THE LONDON DOCKS.

So much of England's real greatness is dependent upon her shipping that anything connected with it cannot fail to interest our readers. England, only a small seagirt island—and in size occupying but trivial space upon the earth's surface—holds yet an empire "upon which the sun never sets."

> Far as the breezes blow, the billows foam,
> Survey our empire, and behold our home.

No sea but the flag of England waves upon its waters—no harbour east, west, north, or south, in the burning tropics, or the frigid, north, but the "Heave a hoy!" of the British seaman is heard telling the story of English commerce and English enterprise.

Of this merchant navy a great portion sails from London, and the section of the metropolis connected with the shipping has characteristics peculiar to itself. From Wapping to Blackwall the stranger gazes not alone upon forests of masts, but meets with people and manners as distinct from those of the west as if he had travelled into another country. But the Docks are the great point of interest, and of one of these we present our readers with a sketch.

Passing eastward, the London Docks are the second we arrive at. They comprise an area of more than a hundred acres, and cost about four millions sterling. There is space for the accommodation of five hundred ships, and warehouses for nearly three hundred thousand tons of goods. There is a tobacco-warehouse which alone covers five acres of ground! It is rented by Government at fourteen thousand a-year. There is a one-acre dock appropriated solely to tobacco-laden ships. The vaults appropriated to another luxury, wines and spirits, are surprisingly extensive. One of the vaults has an area of seven acres. Sixty thousand pipes of wine can be stowed. The value contained in this department alone is almost incredible. The long passage piled on either side by valuable merchandise, the lofty warehouses, although not so high as those of St. Katharine's, the numerous vessels, and the enormous value of these products of many climes, forms a scene which is not excelled in interest or importance by any that claims attention in this great metropolis.

POPULATION OF PRUSSIA.—The Berlin Gazette publishes a statistical account of the population of Prussia, from which it appears that, in 1816, it amounted to 10,348,000 souls, and, in 1840, had increased to 14,928,500.

FRAUDS IN THE COFFEE TRADE.—A meeting of merchants, coffee-dealers, and others interested in the trade was held on Monday at the London Commercial Sale-rooms, for the purpose of taking into consideration the best measures to be adopted for effectually checking the wholesale losses incurred upon coffee delivered from the various docks short of the original weights, and which is attributed to the extensive system of pilfering for a long time carried on despite the utmost watchfulness. The home trade suffers by these frauds no less than the foreign trade; probably much more, as it is more considerable; but it was well observed by Mr. Schnelle, that "honest dealing with foreigners is of the first importance." Without such a mode of dealing there can be no confidence. The appointment of a committee to see what measures could be adopted to obtain redress for the grievance, and to prevent a recurrence of it, was the result of the meeting.

CHRIST'S HOSPITAL FESTIVAL.—The annual festival of the "Blues," or gentlemen educated at Christ's Hospital, took place on Monday at the London Tavern, Bishopsgate-street. The festival is usually held on the birthday of King Edward VI., the founder, but that day falling on Sunday, the next day was appointed for the celebration. Captain Shea, of the navy of the Hon. East India Company, presided, supported by Mr. Pidgeon, the treasurer, Mr. Humfrey, Dr. Rice, the head master of the school, Mr. Peacock, the secretary, Mr. Trollope, and others, the governors, &c. The musical arrangements were under the direction of Mr. T. Cooke, assisted by Messrs. Fitzwilliam, Hatton, and Hawkins. After the usual loyal toasts were disposed of, the healths of the governors and masters and clergy of the institution were given, and warmly responded to. Dr. Rice, in returning thanks, entered at some length into the benefits derived to Christ's Hospital from one of the scholarships of the Times being appropriated to the scholars of that royal institution. Mr. Humfrey, in returning thanks for the bar, also took an opportunity of testifying to the benefit conferred on Christ's Hospital by the appropriation of a Times scholarship to that foundation, and paid a tribute of respect to a gentleman formerly connected with the Times, but now no more, who had been educated at Christ's Hospital, and had always shown himself a stanch "blue." The health of the proprietors of the Times was proposed from the chair, and drunk with the honours; for which a gentleman connected with that journal returned thanks. Many other toasts were drunk in the course of the evening, and it was not until late that the company broke up.

THE CORN TRADE.—Letters received from Paris on Monday morning mention the suspension of payment of three houses at Marseilles connected with the corn trade, namely, Messrs. Arebias and Co., Messrs. A. Guinot and Co., and Messrs. Rey Brothers. Nor are these all. We fear that the roll of misfortune originating from that source is not yet complete. A loss of £1,200,000, which fell upon the corn market here and abroad by the recent speculations in Mark-lane, cannot be wound up in a hurry; and some time yet must elapse before all the ramifications and extent of the mischief can be ascertained.

LAW INTELLIGENCE.

COURT OF BANKRUPTCY.

(Before Commissioner Sir C. F. Williams.)

FIFTY YEARS AGO.—IN THE MATTER OF CALDWELL AND CO.

The bankrupts were merchants, carrying on very extensive business at Liverpool, and the "commission" occurred as far back as half a century since. Considerable assets had been realised, and a reserve fund still existed in the Court of Chancery. An application was made by Mr. Parker, the solicitor, for an order to receive an unclaimed (hitherto) dividend for £100 odd.—Sir C. F. Williams: Under what enactment does Mr. Parker ask for my assistance?—Mr. Parker: Under the act, Sir, of 5 and 6 William IV., ch. 29, sec. 6, which expressly states that the unclaimed dividends paid into the bank should be "subject to the order of the Lord Chancellor, the Court of Review, or a commissioner of this court." Sir C. F. Williams: You are quite correct; I perfectly remember the words of the act. You have stated enough to entitle you to the order (which was thereupon granted).

HODGSON, BOYNE, HODGSON, AND DOWSE'S BANKRUPTCY.

Monday was fixed for the last examination of Mr. J. Dover, the surviving partner of the above firm: they had carried on an extensive business as wholesale druggists, at Three Cranes-wharf, Upper Thames-street. From what has previously transpired it appears that the house has been in difficulties for several years, which led the bankrupt to take the step of withdrawing himself to the Continent, leaving the remaining partners to conduct another party to represent the interests of the firm, he remained till the present fiat was issued. Having now presented the balance-sheet of the estate, a very voluminous document, the case declared to be closed. Great praise was bestowed on Mr. Hutton, the accountant who prepared this statement, and the trade ass gnees have voted him 50l. for his exertions.

CENTRAL CRIMINAL COURT.

These sessions, being the twelfth and last during the present mayoralty, commenced on Monday morning before the Right Hon. the Lord Mayor, the Recorder, Aldermen Farncomb and J. Johnson, the new Sheriffs (Mr Alderman Hoopor and Mr. Jeremiah Pilcher), the Under-Sheriffs, and the usual civic authorities

The Recorder briefly alluded to the cases in the calendar, none of which required any special remark, and the grand jury were then dismissed to the performance of their duty. The foreman said he could not leave the court without expressing his regret that a number of cases should be laid before the jury on ex parte evidence, an affair to which the magistrates, who had investigated the charges in the first instance, were much more competent to decide, as they generally heard the defence of the prisoner as well as the charge against him. He was induced to make this observation, as he had previously served on grand juries, and had experienced the evil of which he complained. He thought the evil should be remedied. The grand jury then retired.

Martin Hussey, aged 39, a slater, was indicted for feloniously cutting and wounding W. George Gibbs, with intent to do him some grievous bodily harm. A second count charged him with an intent to prevent the lawful apprehension. Mr. Clarkson (with whom were Mr Doane and Mr. Hake) stated the case on behalf of the prosecution; and Mr. C. Jones defended. Mr. Thomas Mountain, clerk in the office of the Sheriff of Middlesex, produced a writ of capias at the suit of W. Marks, against the prisoner. Knew the prosecutor to be a sheriff's officer. The prosecutor stated that on a sheriff's officer, and on the 30th of September he was entrusted with a writ of execution against the prisoner, at the suit of a person named Marks, and he proceeded to his residence for the purpose of taking him into custody under that writ. He found the prisoner sitting with his wife, and told him that he had an execution against him, and showed him the writ, upon which the prisoner's wife said he should not take him, and witness replied that he would do so. The prisoner then said he should not take him, for he would not go with him. Witness replied that he was determined to take him, and the prisoner and his wife immediately rose from their seats, and the former struck his left eye. He seized the prisoner by the co lar, and his wife immediately attacked him, and seized him by the hair, the prisoner at the same time catching hold of a short poker, with which he struck witness a very severe blow on the head. They then all scuffled together, and while this was going on the prisoner dropped the poker, and witness dragged him into another room, his wife still interfering to prevent his apprehension. Witness called out "Murder!" and his assistant came up. Before this the prisoner had told his wife to bolt the door, and his assistant broke it open. With the assistance of his man, the prisoner was dragged down into the street, and when they were there the prisoner called out for a knife to do for him, and also threatened to bite his ear off. As they were dragging the prisoner down stairs, he told his daughter to bring him his hammer, and intimated that if she did so, that the prisoner did not make use of it. A police constable soon afterwards came up, and with his assistance the prisoner was taken to Whitecross-street prison. Mr. Jones cross-examined the witness at great length, and endeavoured to show that he had broken open the prisoner's door with a pitchfork, and that he had abused him, and threatened to drag him through the streets by the collar. He denied that he had used any unnecessary violence, and stated that after he had been ill-used by the prisoner he might have knelt upon him, in order to secure him, and prevent him from doing more mischief.—Several witnesses having been examined in support of the prosecution, Mr. Jones took an objection to the second count in the indictment, and contended that the statute was not intended to apply to an apprehension upon civil process. The Recorder said he was not the question had not arisen before, but, in his opinion, the statute applied equally to a civil as to a criminal apprehension.—Mr. Jones said he felt it his duty to take the objection to the count; and if his learned friend, after further consideration, should think there was anything in it, he would, no doubt, give the prisoner the benefit of it on a future occasion if it should become necessary.—The Recorder said he would take a note of the objection, if the learned counsel thought it proper or necessary to raise the point hereafter.—Mr. Jones then addressed the jury on behalf of the prisoner, and called witnesses, who deposed as follows: Robert Webbing, a labourer, stated that he was at Irongate-wharf on the afternoon of the 2d of September, and saw the prosecutor there, accompanied by his assistant. Saw Gibbs go into the stable and get a pitchfork, with which he pronounced street to the prisoner's house, and forced the door open. Saw him distinctly place the ends of the fork between the head and the door-post. Some time after the men went into the house he saw them and the prisoner coming tumbling down stairs together.—Mary Smith corroborated this witness; and several sheriff's officers were called, who deposed that they had arrested the prisoner frequently, and that he never made any resistance, but conducted himself peaceably and quietly. Other witnesses were called, who spoke favourably of the prisoner's character.—Mr. Clarkson having replied at considerable length, the Recorder, in summing up, referred very minutely to the various acts of Parliament relative to wounding, or inflicting any injury with intent to resist the lawful apprehension or detention of a party, and said it would, under the circumstances, be better for the jury to form their own consideration on the second count in the indictment, inasmuch as a doubt existed whether the act contemplated the rest of a person on a civil process. The jury retired, and, after an absence of about three quarters of an hour, returned with a verdict of an aggravated assault.—The Recorder told the prisoner that the jury had taken a very lenient view of his case; for, had they returned another verdict, it would have had the effect of removing him from this country for a very lengthened period. Under all the circumstances, the sentence was, that he be imprisoned and kept to hard labour in the House of Correction for one year.

The above trial occupied the court the whole day.

(Before the Recorder.)

TUESDAY, Oct. 30.—Morris Myers, Joseph Myers, George Daniels, Charles Evans, and Abraham Cohen, surrer dered to take their trial on an indictment charging them with conspiring to riotously break open the premises of Mr. John Adams, and with creating a disturbance and riot. It appeared that Adams, the prosecutor, was a flock manufacturer in Whitechapel, and the prisoners, being unable to succeed in the contest by any other means, had proceeded to break open the d ors of his factory in order to induce him to come out, so that he might fall into the hands of one of the party, who was a sheriff's officer. The case occupied the court for several hours. The jury returned a verdict of Guilty (of the common assault) against the two Myers, and acquitted the others. The Recorder, in passing sentence upon the prisoners, which consisted of one day's imprisonment each, observed that their conduct had been the cause of much disturbance, and might have led to much more serious consequences. The sentence of the court was, that they pay a fine of [illegible] to speak to the prosecutor, and to enter into their own recognizances in the sum of £100 each, to keep the peace for two years, and all other his majesty's subjects, and in particular towards the prosecutor.

Mr. Humphreys, a person of independent means, living at Wandsworth, surrendered to take his trial upon an indictment charging him with wilful and corrupt perjury. Mr. Thomas, who held Mr. Charnock's brief, conducted the prosecution. Mr. Clarkson appeared for the defendant, who was not placed at the bar, but sat behind his counsel during the trial. The prosecutor of the indictment was a person named John Darke Lyons, who carries on the business of a baker at Wandsworth, and the alleged perjury rose out of a charge of assault preferred by Mr. Smith against him at the Wandsworth Police Court, on which occasion it appeared he stated that the present prosecutor had dashed his summons for the assault in his face, and made use of abusive language, both towards him and Mr. Paynter, the magistrate Lyons now swore that no such proceeding ever took p ace, and upon this the charge of perjury was sought to be established. Several witnesses were examined, but the evidence was of so contradictory a nature, that the Recorder was obliged to put it to the learned counsel for the prosecution whether a charge of perjury could be sustained. The jury, on the suggestion of his lordship, returned a verdict of Not Guilty.

NEW COURT.

(Before the Common Sergeant.)

SHEEP STEALING.—Edward Brockett, a young rustic, was convicted of killing an ewe sheep, value 30s., with an intent to steal the carcase, the property of Sir Ralph Howard, Bart., of Great Stanmore, Middlesex, and was sentenced to be transported for the term of ten years.

THE HAMPTON COURT ROBBERY.—Henry Griver, aged 30, Martha, his wife, and Mary A. Goatley, 19, were indicted for burglariously breaking and entering the dwelling-house of our Sovereign Lady the Queen, and stealing thereon a quantity of silver plate (specified), of the value of £30 and upwards, the property of Caroline Hamilton Sheridan, on the 14th of October instant, and Anna Foster, a female of the same locality, with receiving the said property, well knowing it to have been stolen. All the prisoners having pleaded not guilty, Mr. Ballantine applied to have the examination of Mrs. Griver postponed, which, after some opposition, was ultimately disallowed by the court. Mr. T. G. Foster then stated the case for the prosecution, and detailed the facts which have lately appeared in the police reports of the examination of the prisoners—Martha Griver being in an advanced state of pregnancy, she, as well as the other females, were allowed chairs.—The Hon. Caroline H. Sheridan deposed, from the bench, that she had apartments in the palace at Hampton Court, which constituted her dwelling-house. The prisoner Goatley had been in her service. Witness had examined the twenty forks, the teapot, and other articles of plate, which are her property. A police sergeant produced a silver spoon which he found in the possession of the old woman (Foster). The prosecutrix declared this article to be part of the stolen property.—Mr. Haward, a pawnbroker, deposed that he received the plate now in court promptly from the prisoner Goatley, but the woman Griver pledged a teapot, when alone, for £6 5s.; at other times they came together.—Common Sergeant: Are you in the habit of taking such a quantity of valuable property in bulk from such persons?—Witness: She (Goatley) was not dressed as a lady, but as a young lady, and represented herself as the daughter of a respectable lady, who was in want of a temporary supply of money.—Mr. Ballantine: I object to the statement.—Mr. Price took an objection to the form of the indictment as to the allegation against Foster, but the court overruled it, at the same time admitting that there was only one count to the jury as to the guilty reception.—Henry Green proved that he saw Griver, his wife, and Goatley at Kingston, early on the morning of the robbery; the woman Griver had a bundle under her clothes.—Mrs. Green deposed that she thought that Griver and Goatley called on him on the morning in question. The former said she wanted a horse and chaise to convey her husband and sister to Vauxhall, as she had received a letter that her mother was dying. She thought Griver one.—The case for the prosecution having closed, Mr. Ballantine privately addressed the jury on behalf of the girl Goatley. Witnesses were called who gave Goatley a good character. The Common Sergeant summed up the evidence with great particularity, and gave it as his opinion that there was no doubt in his mind that the two younger women were at the palace aiding and assisting on the night in question, and the man was seen in the vicinity both on Friday evening and Saturday morning.—The jury, after consulting two minutes, returned a verdict of Acquittal as to Foster, and of Guilty against the other two prisoners.—The Common Sergeant then sentenced the prisoners to be transported beyond the seas for ten years. The trial lasted four hours. The learned Judge respited judgment upon Martha Griver, and said that he also expect to see her certificate of marriage. His lordship ordered that all the valuable property be delivered up to the prosecutrix. The court adjourned at five o'clock.

WEDNESDAY.—George Bell Carter, a young man of respectable exterior, was convicted of embezzling, and secreting and stealing the sum of £35, which he had received on account of S. S. Newington and Co., by whom he was employed as a clerk. Another indictment charged the prisoner with embezzling three other sums, the property of his employers.—The prisoner was sentenced to fourteen years' transportation, which was afterwards commuted to ten years.

Lewis Lazarus was indicted for stealing 24 yards of cloth, value £2 10s., the property of Alfred Billing. Mr. Clarkson, with whom was Mr. Balantine, defended the prisoner, and Mr. Doane conducted the prosecution. Our readers will remember that the particulars of this case appeared in our last number. Alfred Billing, the prosecutor, having been sworn and examined, was subjected to a severe cross-examination by Mr. Clarkson, who elicited from him that he had been himself in custody on a charge of forgery, and which convinced the jury that he was not a bit better than he ought to be, and they therefore brought in a verdict of "Acquittal."—Several witnesses were testimony to the good character borne by the police constable deposed that he had offered to compromise with the prosecutor for £3, and £10 to the policeman.

(Before Mr. Justice Maule and Mr. Justice Maule.)

THURSDAY.—BANK OF ENGLAND FO[illegible] Edward Banister, 39, dealer, and James Campbell, 29, harness-maker, were indicted for having in their possession 100 forged bank notes, value 40s each, well knowing the same to be forged.—The Attorney-General stated the case for the prosecution, and proceeded to explain to the jury, that in cases where such documents were found in the possession of a party charged the jury, and that person to show how he came by them, and whether they were innocent receiving or possessing the same or not.—The evidence called in support of the prosecution being considered insufficient, the jury acquitted both the prisoners.—There were other indictments against them, which were ordered to stand over.

POLICE.

MANSION-HOUSE.—THE BRITISH AMERICAN ASSOCIATION FOR EMIGRATION AND COLONIZATION.—Mr. Bourdillon attended the justice-room as solicitor to the British American Association for Emigration and Colonization, to which his lordship's attention had been called by an ex parte statement, the publication of which, it is said, had operated greatly to the prejudice of a company formed for the accomplishment of important advantages to the community.—The Lord Mayor said he had not seen the statement alluded to, but he was convinced it was not written by the reporter who regularly attended the justice-room, and who was aware of the impropriety of publishing complaints against parties in that way till the time should be given for refutation. Mr. Bourdillon said that a sweeping condemnation coming from the chief magistrate was calculated to do serious mischief, and he should show that the conduct of the association was strictly honourable and correct. When the case was previously before the Lord Mayor one complainant stated that he gave up a lucrative business in London in order to emigrate, and signed articles with the association to go to Prince Edward's Island and serve the association at five guineas per month. After he was on board seven days, another captain, who superseded the first, wanted him to sign articles at six shillings a month less, and signing a fresh agreement to that effect. Another complainant was the engineer of Bridge-street, North, and most warmly approved of and recommended its objects. He next referred to an account in a newspaper of the 3d of July, detailing what took place at a dinner given by the association to the Canadian Minister, at which a noble duke presided. That was another evidence of the stability of the association. The Lord Mayor did not consider that satisfactory evidence. There appeared to be a wish to ridicule and run down the whole affair, and he did not wonder that poor men should feel suspicious about it. His lordship condemned the delay which had taken place as to the starting of the vessel, and said that the same time of the year last year had a vessel to such a place. Mr. Bourdillon admitted the fact of the lateness of the year for the voyage, but said that 40,000 persons were already at their destination, and that by the 15th of April was the time famous people departure of his Highlanders, who are in great multitudes unable to obtain employment at home. The Lord Mayor really did not think the duke would wish his Highlanders to go out at such a period of the year.—Mr. Bourdillon: This association is, my lord, the child of the Duke of Argyll, who acts from the most benevolent motives, and is supported in his views by all the first men in Edinburgh and other parts of Scotland.—James Hammond, an engineer, who had engaged to go to Prince Edward's Island, stated that Mr. Haldon led him to believe that the association had everything to do with the engagement. He had been told that all the preparations had been made, not with money, but with bills, and he felt not inclined to go on that account, and for six weeks he was led to believe he would have an advance. There was a great deal of mystery about the transactions, which gave much dissatisfaction.—Childs, the constable to whom the complainant had made these representations in the first instance, handed in several names of persons who he said were desirous of complaining of violation of their contracts by Mr. Haldon or by the association; but the Lord Mayor advised Mr. Haldon to retire and make some arrangement with them; and his lordship stated that he would on Tuesday write to the Duke of Argyll upon a subject of such deep interest to the public.—The vessel is now, it is believed, ready to sail

GUILDHALL.—Mr. Alderman John Johnson, after disposing of a case where a man had picked up a bad half-crown in the street, and attempted to pass it, inquired what became of all the spurious coin which fell into the hands of the police.—Inspector Sparey said he did not know, but for the last three months the country constables on the beats were convinced that the police are by no means the proper depositaries of those spurious but contagious forfeits.—ED. I. L. N.

A most respectable and gentleman-like person, named Frederick Lloyd, was placed at the bar before Sir Peter Laurie, on the charge of horse-stealing.—It appeared from the evidence of the prosecutor, that he sent a horse to be sold at the fair at St. Alban's, and that the prisoner (or defendant), who was a chemist, carrying on a most respectable business in the City, had also two horses for sale at the same place. By some stupidity of the prosecutor's groom, his horse was stolen by the jockey swell mob, one of whom subsequently exchanged the stolen animal for one of Mr. Lloyd's horses; and the prosecutor, finding it in a stable where it was left, determined to take the first opportunity, to give him into custody. On last Saturday evening he met him in Bishopsgate-street, near his own residence, when he gave him in charge to a policeman, and, it being for felony, he was kept in custody for the hour the court sat this (Monday) morning.—Mr. Clarkson appeared for the defendant. A number of most respectable gentlemen also were present, who knew Mr. Lloyd, and seemed to take the liveliest interest in the result of the case.—After hearing the evidence of the prosecutor, Sir Peter Laurie asked the prisoner (who was standing at the felons' bar), that he had him to see him in such a position, and ordered him out of the custody of the police at once, as he should never have been placed in such a degrading place on a charge like that now brought against him now.—Mr. Lloyd then left the court, after thanking Sir Peter, and a murmur of applause ran through the assurance at the result of the investigation.

MANSLAUGHTER.—Thomas White, surgeon, of Aldersgate street, was convicted, before Mr. Hardwicke, of an aggravated assault on Thomas Davis, groom to Mr. Pettigrew, surgeon, Saville row, and fined £3 and costs. The affair grew out of a dispute as to

ADVERTISEMENTS.

ROYAL OLYMPIC THEATRE. 25th Night of Sir E. L. Bulwer's "Adventures of a Gentleman," 1st night of "My Valet and I," and 2nd of Mr. Lemon Rede's laughable burlesque called "Norval."
Mon Day, Oct. 31, and during the Week, THE ADVENTURES OF A GENTLEMAN. Principal characters by Messrs. Fitzjames, Halford, Searle, Green, Ross, and G. Wild; Misses Le Bat and L. Melville.
After which, 1st time, a farce called MY VALET AND I. Arnold Ardent, Esq., Mr. Fitzjames; Wisper (his Valet), Mr. G. Wild; Mr. Mountain, Mr. Brookes. Claret, Mr. Turnour; Corcoa Mountain, Mas Hamilton, Finesse, Miss Le Bat.
After which, the burlesque entitled NORVAL. Young Norval, Mr. G. Wild; Glenalvon, Mr. Searle; Lord Randolph, Mr. Turnour; Lady Randolph, Miss Le Bat.
To conclude with a petite drama, called THE PEASANT BRIDE, or the HEART OF A SOLDIER. Principal characters by Mr. Fitzames, Mr. Ross, and Miss Melville.
Boxes, 2s 6d; Second Price, 1s 6d; Pit, 1s; Gallery, 6d.

THE CHINESE COLLECTION, ST. GEORGE'S-PLACE, HYDE PARK-CORNER, is NOW OPEN, CONSISTING of objects exclusively Chinese, and forming the most extensive and most splendid display in the known world. The Grand Chinese Saloon, 223 feet in length by 50 feet in width, embracing upwards of Fifty Figures, as large as life, all fac similes, in groups in their native costumes, from the highest mandarin to the bund mendicant in his patched garment; also, many thousand specimens, both in nature history and miscellaneous curiosities, illustrating the appearance, manners, and customs of more than three hundred million Chinese, respecting whom the nations of Europe have had scarce any opportunity of judging, is now OPEN for PUBLIC INSPECTION, from Ten in the morning till Ten at night. Admission, 2s. 6d.; Children, 1s.

NEW AND IMPROVED EDITION OF MR. JOHN WADE'S

This day, in one large volume, price 30s. cloth,
BRITISH HISTORY, Chronologically Arranged, from the Invasion of the Romans to the Accession of Queen Victoria. Second Edition, with additions. By JOHN WADE, Vice-President of the Institut d'Afrique of Paris
"The volume may be designated a commonplace-book of British History."—Globe.
EFFINGHAM WILSON, 16, Bishopsgate Within.

JUST OUT, WITH FOUR ILLUSTRATIONS.
THE LONDON LIBRARY, Price 1s., containing seventy two pages of letter-press, handsomely printed and hot-pressed, with four beautiful engravings by T. Armstrong. The Weekly Numbers, Price 1d.
Published by WM. THOMAS, 19, Catherine-street, Strand; W. STRANGE, Paternoster-row; and sold by all booksellers and newsmen

MITCHELL'S ILLUSTRATED and AUTHENTIC GUIDES TO FANCY NEEDLEWORK AND EMBROIDERY, AND KNITTING, NETTING, AND CROCHET, continue to be sent by the Publisher to any address FREE, on the receipt of 18, or postage stamps of equal value in a pre-paid letter.
Published by C. MITCHELL, Red Lion court, Fleet-street.

SCOTTISH MUSIC.—Just published.
WILSON'S First Book of the SONGS of SCOTLAND. Dedicated, by permission, to her Most Gracious Majesty Queen Victoria (granted on the occasion of Mr. Wilson singing before her Majesty at Taymouth Castle). Each Book contains Twelve Songs, newly arranged for Voice and Pianoforte, with a Note to each Song, as sung and illustrated by Mr. Wilson in his Entertainments on Scottish Music.—Price, to Subscribers, 5s; Non-Subscribers, 10s. 6d. Separate Songs, 1s. each.
Subscribers' Names received at the Music Shops in London, Liverpool, Manchester, Birmingham, Edinburgh, and Glasgow.

THE BEST AND CHEAPEST MUSICAL WORK EVER PUBLISHED
THE PIANO (for November, and Supplement) contains the words of the Vocal Music, &c., with the words of the Popular Opera of "Semiramide," now performing at Covent Garden Theatre, comprising the Overture, Chorusses, &c., as sung by Miss Adelaide Kemble, Mrs. Shaw, and others, with great applause; being as much music as would cost in any other way 30s.; the whole for 2s., or, post-free, 2s. 6d.
Published by TYCOMBE, 10, Middle-row, Holborn, and all Booksellers in Town and Country.

CHURCH MUSIC
Under the sanction of his Royal Highness Prince Albert.
THE NATIONAL PSALMIST. By CHARLES DANVERS HACKETT. Will be ready on the 1st of December, in 1 vol. cloth boards, lettered, price 30s
CONTENTS.—Nearly 200 pages of music, consisting of Psalm Tunes, Chants, Responses, and Anthems; an Historical Essay on Psalmody (9 pages); a Complete System of Chanting; Preface to the Work; List of Subscribers, &c.
London: SIMPKIN, MARSHALL, and Co.
Subscribers' Names intended for insertion in the List must be sent to the Author previous to the 1st of November.
Rotherham, Oct. 20, 1842.

MARKING INK FOR EXPORTATION.
SHIPPERS are invited to inspect the Specimens and Prices of R. B. EDE'S IMMOVABLE MARKING INK, which is now sold in all parts of the civilized world. R. B. EDE, Wholesale and Export Agent, 88, Bishopsgate Within. MANUFACTORY, DORKING.

COMPOSITION FOR WRITING WITH STEEL PENS.
STEPHENS' WRITING FLUIDS comprise the most splendid and durable colours, and the most indelible compositions which art can produce; they contain the fullest proportions of colouring matter—and those to whom economy is more an object than powerful contrast with the paper, may dilute them with rain water, to the extent of colour they may require, and thus effect a real economy, without paying for the cost and incumbrance of large bottles. Also STEPHENS' SELECT STEEL PENS.
HENRY STEPHENS, 34, Stamford street, Blackfriars-road, London.

FIELD'S CHEAP STATIONERY WAREHOUSE, 65, Regent's Quadrant, corner of Air street. Postage Envelopes, 1s. per 100; Gem, Envelopes, 6d. per 100; Mourning Envelopes, 2s. per 100; good Letter Paper, 3d. per quire, 4s. 6d. per ream; Foolscap, 6d. per quire, 9s. per ream, Satin Note Paper, 2d. per quire, 3s. per ream; Ruled Bill Paper, 2d. per quire; Blotting Cases, 6d. each; Superior ditto, lock and key, 2s each; the best Sealing Wax, 10 sticks 1s., 3s. 6d. per pound; the celebrated Magnum Bonum Steel Pens, 6d. per dozen, 5s. per gross; Albums, from 1s. each; Portfolio Scrap Books, 4s. 6d. each; Pocket Books, 6d. each; Bibles, handsomely bound, 2s. each; Prayer Books to match, 1s. 6d. each; Testaments, 1s. each; Rosewood Ink Stands, 1s. each; Pencil Paper Knives, 1s. each; the newly invented Pencil Case, containing 12 distinct articles, only 3s. 6d. each; Patent Blotting Pads, 1s. each; Capital Music Cases, lock and key, 5s. each; Club house Cards, 1s. 6d. per pack, 6 packs 7s. 6d.; Cumberland Lead Pencils, 1s. per dozen, Inkall Waters, 1d. per 10b.
Please to copy the name and address.

IRONMONGERY.
JOHN COX DEAR'S extensive SHOW-ROOMS, contain Stoves from 4s. 6d. to 15 guineas. Kitchen ranges, 4 feet wide, with oven and boiler, 7l 10s. (these cannot be seen elsewhere). Fenders from 2s. 6d. to 6 guineas. Fire Irons, from 2s. per set. Tea urns, from 8s. 6d. to 3l 3s. Tea trays, 1s. 6d. to 3l 3s. (the best raised tops.) Showers, hot and cold, 8l 8s.; hip, 9l 9s.; sponging, 18s. Kitchen furnishing goods of every description. Britannia metal table spoons and forks, 11s. to 18s. per dozen.
Lists containing the price of every article sent free of cost. Iron bedsteads and stove engravings sent free.
Dear's Ironmongery, Cutlery, Plated Goods, Japanned Goods, Lamps, Baths, Turnery, Brushes, Fenders, Stoves, Kitchen Ranges, Fire Irons, Tea Trays, Tea Urns, Table Cutlery, Iron Bedsteads, Bedding, Bed Hangings, Blankets, Quilts, Sheets, Carpets, Oilcloths, Mats, Rugs, Hearthrugs, Fenders, Fire Irons, Kitchen Furniture, Culinary Utensils, Turnery, Brushes

HOW TO GET A LOBSTER CHEAP.—DOMESTIC DRAMA.—October 20, 1842.—Billingsgate Fishmonger: Don't meddle with my lobster, my good man, or you'll have that finger of yours bitten.—Stander-by: Pooh! he'll not bite.—Fishmonger: Don't trust to that.—Stander-by: I tell you he would not, if my dog's tail were between his nippers.—Fishmonger: Try it.—Stander-by: Here, Carlo, Carlo. (Lobster snaps.) Dog (in agony), Beaouw-w-w! Fishmonger: Hallo! where the devil is my lobster going? (The dog vanishes round the corner of the street, and the curtain falls.)

HOW TO COOK THE TARIFF BEEF AND PORK (NOT TO BE FOUND IN JUDE OR KITCHENER).—The best way to cook the recently imported beef and pork is to soak it in cold water from 12 to 24 hours, changing the water three or four times, and then to simmer it gently till done, taking care that the water does not boil. By these means it will eat very tender and juicy.

Lord Gillies has been seriously indisposed at Cheltenham, where he had gone for the benefit of his health. By the last accounts, however, he was considerably better.

ADVANTAGE OF BEFRIENDING A NEIGHBOUR.—In 1811 George Wilson, of Biddick, in the county of Durham, emigrated to North America, having previously borrowed 20s. from Thomas Robson, a neighbour, to assist him in effecting that object, under a promise to remember him if ever he had it in his power. Robson was then a bachelor; but he has lately been employed pumping water in Cassop pit. On Monday week he received a letter from the executors of Wilson, apprising him that he had recently died at Philadelphia, United States, and bequeathed him money and property to the value of about £7000! The party who has reaped this ample return for his generosity is now about 70 years of age; but, lucky woman! about half a year ago he married a female not more than 40.

The disease amongst horned cattle, as well as that amongst sheep, still continues to be excessively injurious, and the losses from it fall very severely on the farmers in all parts of the empire

The Durham Advertiser has some "further particulars" of the Middlesborough boiler explosion; from which it appears that, in all, between thirty and forty persons were injured, and three more persons have died since the accident. The scene must have been one of the most horrible on record: one man was seen roasting alive among the burning cinders of the furnace, and he died before he could be got out; a boy was running about with his arm burned off; and the spot was surrounded by the shrieking friends of the sufferers.

In 1823 the postmasters and coach-proprietors on the line of road from Dover to London presented a petition to the Houses of Parliament to prohibit the passage of steam-boats, their trade being injured thereby! In 1842 the railroads have now completely ruined the posting trade, and all the coaches will be off the road at Christmas, with the exception of the old Dover Union!

EXPERIMENTS AT WOOLWICH.—On Monday last Colonel R. J. Lacy, Colonel G. Turner, C.B., Major Strangways, Captain Palliser, Captain Grant, and a number of officers of the Royal Artillery, assembled in the marshes to witness experiments with a new description of brass gun, denominated a light nine-pounder. The saving in powder and metal by Captain Grant's invention will be very considerable. It was thought by many that the invention would be most likely to fail from too great recoil, but Captain Grant has so proportioned the metal, and with such correct judgment, that no fears are now entertained in that respect; and from the elegance of the model, lightness, and at the same time ample strength of the carriage, it is likely to be introduced into the service, and will be far easier of draught for the horses.

RAILWAYS.—The West London Railway shareholders have, it appears, so far arranged among themselves to support the undertaking, that the greater portion of the preferential shares are subscribed for, and therefore this undertaking, which has for a long while past remained in abeyance in consequence of the apathy of the late directors, will now be proceeded with to a completion.—The committee appointed to examine the position and future management of the North Midland Railway have reported that a large reduction may be made in the current expenses of the concern, and propose to make many alterations, which, if they can be carried into effect with perfect safety to its well-being, must necessarily increase the dividends of the shareholders—an end much to be desired.—Many complaints are received of the annoyance the Greenwich Railway passengers have to put up with, both from the increase of the fares, and the bad accommodation provided. The letters addressed assert, that, notwithstanding the charge for the second-class conveyance has been raised to 8d., the seats formerly allowed have been removed, and the public are consequently obliged to take the alternative of standing or pay the shilling fare for the first-class carriages. People are certainly not blind to the intention of those conducting this railway, which, of course, is to force all who wish better accommodation into the conveyance where a higher fare is charged; and, as they have the opportunity of nearly as quick a passage to London by the omnibuses, which save the walk to the terminus, and come into Gracechurch-street, and by the steamers, which land their customers at the Middlesex side of the Thames at a lower rate, they will not be slow in taking the advantages offered. The traffic of the railway shows a decline, and nothing else could be expected, when it is seen how sedulously the directors work for their own downfal.

THE MARKETS.

CORN-EXCHANGE.—Since our last report the arrivals of English wheat up to Mark-lane have been on a moderate scale but of very superior quality. Owing to the accounts from Liverpool being firmer, the demand for both English and foreign wheats has somewhat improved, and previous rates have been supported for the superior descriptions of both red and white, but those of the inferior descriptions have been somewhat easier. Barley has met a very slow inquiry at barely, but at nothing quotable beneath, late currencies. The same may be said as respects malt. From Ireland more than 30,000 quarters of oats have been received, which have had a depressing influence upon the inquiry for that article, but prices cannot be called lower. Beans, peas, and flour have been amending.

ARRIVALS.—English: wheat, 3270; barley, 2840; oats, 1580; and malt, 2380 quarters; flour, 3620 sacks.—Irish: wheat, 240; and oats, 32,320 quarters.—Foreign: wheat, 11,220 quarters.

English.—Wheat, Essex and Kent, red, 46s to 55s; ditto white, 54s to 61s; Norfolk and Suffolk, red, 49s to 56s; do. white, 51s to 58s; rye, 34s to 38s; grinding barley, 27s to 29s; malting do., 30s to 32s; Chevalier, 32s to 34s. Suffolk and Norfolk malt, 56s to 62s; Lincoln do., 56s to 58s; Kingston and Ware, 56s to 62s; Chevalier, 63s; Yorkshire and Lincolnshire feed oats, 23s to 26s; potato do., 25s to 26s; Scotch and Irish do., 23s to 25s; Dutch and Flanders, 22s to 24s; Essex and Kent, white, 19s to 20s; tick beans, new, 34s to 36s; old do., 34s to 38s; grey peas, 36s to 38s; maple, 35s to 36s; white, 30s to 35s; boilers, 32s to 37s, per quarter. Town made flour, 45s to 47s. Suffolk, 36s to 38s. Stockton and Yorkshire, 36s to 38s, per 280 lbs. Foreign.—Free wheat, 50s to 60s. In Bond Barley, 26s; oats, new, 15s to 17s; do feed, 14s to 16s. Beans, 20s to 22s. peas, 23s to 27s, per quarter. Flour, America, 22s to 24s; Baltic, 22s per barrel

The Seed Market.—For linseed and rapeseed we have had a steady inquiry, at full prices; but in all other kinds of seeds next to nothing has been doing, at late rates.

The following are the present rates:—Linseed, English, sowing, 48s to 57s; Baltic, crushing, 42s to 46s; Mediterranean and Odessa, 45s to 46s; hempseed, 35s to 46s; per quarter; coriander, 10s to 13s per cwt; brown mustard seed, 10s to 11s; white do., 10s to 10s 6d; tares, 5s 6d to 6s 0d per bushel; English rapeseed, new, 30l to 33l per last of ten quarters. Linseed cakes, English, 10l to 10l 10s; do. foreign, 7l to 7l 10s per 1000; rapeseed cakes, 3l 5s to 6l per ton

Tea.—We have no new feature to notice in this market. Prices are steady, with a moderate amount of business doing.

Sugar.—West India sugar has sold freely, at an advance of fully 6d per cwt.; but no improvement has taken place in the value of either Bengal or Mauritius. At auction 109 hhds. Barbadoes sold at 60s 6d to 68s 6d, while the total sales for the week of that description have been about 2800 hhds. and tierces. 4101 bags Bengal have sold at 58s to 67s per cwt. 952 bags Mauritius, 43s to 66s per cwt. 1000 bags Manilla, 44s to 46s 6d. There has been a steady business done in this article. Standard lumps have sold at 76s to 76s 6d for export there has been a fair demand, at 25s 6d to 25s 9d for fine crushed.

Coffee.—The public sales of this description of produce have been well attended by buyers, and most of the parcels offered by the importers have found buyers, at full prices. By private contract a fair business is doing.

Cocoa.—This article is a dull sale, yet we cannot call it cheaper

Cotton.—There is rather more inquiry for this article, at full prices.

Jute.—The public sales have been to-day. The catalogues contained 15,001 chests, about 14,000 of which were sold at full prices

Tallow.—The market is firm, with a steady business doing. P.Y.C. of fine quality is 48s 6d per cwt.

Provisions.—We have had large arrivals of Irish butter since our last, yet the demand is firm at full prices. Foreign butter is also in demand, at 104s to 108s for fine quality. In other kinds of provisions we can notice no alteration.

Oils.—This market is firm, and prices are well supported.

Bread.—The prices of wheaten bread are from 7½d to 8d; of household ditto, 6d to 7d for the 4lb loaf.

Wool.—The imports of wool this week have amounted to nearly 3400 bales. The demand is heavy, at late rates.

Hops.—The inquiry for hops, in consequence of the large supply on offer, is very heavy, and previous rates are with difficulty supported. Duty called £160,000.

Imperial Weekly Average.—Wheat, 50s 9d; barley, 28s 11d; Oats, 18s 1d; rye, 32s 7d; beans, 32s 2d; peas, 33s 10d.

Imperial Averages of Six Weeks which govern Duty.—Wheat, 52s 2d; Barley, 28s 4d; Oats, 18s 2d, Rye, 32s 10d; Beans, 32s 10d; Peas, 33s 5d per quarter.

Duty on Foreign Corn.—Wheat, 18s 0d; Barley, 0s 0d; Oats, 8s 0d; Rye, 10s 6d; Beans, 10s 6d; Peas, 9s 6d.

Smithfield.—Although our market has been well supplied with each description of stock, the general demand has ruled steady, at full rates of currency. Beef, from 3s 2d to 4s 4d; mutton, 3s 4d to 4s 6d; veal, 3s 8d to 4s 6d; and pork, 4s to 4s 10d per 8lbs., to sink the offal.

Newgate and Leadenhall.—We have had a large arrival of slaughtered meat this week, the sale for which has proved dull, at the following prices:—Beef, from 3s to 3s 8d; mutton, 3s 4d to 4s 2d; veal, 3s 6d to 4s 2d; and pork, 4s to 4s 10d per 8lbs., by the carcase.

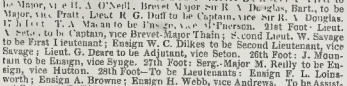
ROBERT HERBERT.

BRITISH FUNDS.—(CLOSING PRICES.)—FRIDAY.

Bank Stock, 166	India Stock pm
3 per Cent Red., 93¾	Ditto Bonds 50 pm
3 per Cent Cons. 93¾	Ditto Old Annuities,
3½ per Cent Red., 100¾	Ditto New Annuities, —
New 3½ per Cent. 101¾	Ex. Bills, 1000l., 2d., 60 pm
New 5 per Cents.	Ditto 500l., 60 pm
Long Annuities to expire Jan. 1860, 12 5-16	Ditto Small, 60 pm
Oct. 1859,	Bank Stock for Account,
Jan. 18 60, 12¼	India Stock for Account,
	Consols for Account, 93¾

SHARES.

Bristol and Exeter (—p), —	London and Blackwall (— p), 6¾
Edinburgh and Glasgow (55 p), 46¾	London and Birmingham (99 p), 181¾
Great Western Railway (65 p), 84¾	Ditto Thirds (2 p),
Ditto New Shares (50 p), 61¾	Ditto New Shares (20 p),
Ditto Fifth (4 p), 8¾	London and South Western (£41 6s. 10d. p), 60
London and Brighton (50 p), 36¾



THE LONDON GAZETTE.

TUESDAY, OCT 25.

WAR OFFICE, OCT 25.—4th Light Dragoons: Captain G. W. De Renzy to be Captain, vice Harrison, Lieut. F. D. Halkett to be Captain, vice De Renzy; Cornet W. K. Fraser to be Lieutenant, vice Halkett; H. D. Slade to be Cornet, vice Fraser. 1st or Grenadier Guards: Lieut. E. G. Wynyard to be Lieutenant and Captain, vice the Hon. M. E. Bertie; J. P. D'Courcy Ie to be Ensign and Lieutenant, vice Wynyard. 6th Foot: T. H. Somerville to be Ensign, vice Lounsworth. 8th Foot: Brevet C. W. Macadam to be Lieutenant-Colonel, vice T. G. Hall, Major C. Le Malet to be Lieutenant-Colonel, vice Macalam; Capt. T. Kenyon to be Major, vice Malet; Lieut. D. P. Lumley to be Captain, vice Kenyon; Ensign W. T. Granville to be Lieutenant, vice Lumley; J. J. Charlton to be Ensign, vice Granville. 9th Foot: Ensign W. W. Williams to be Lieutenant, vice Mitchell; Ensign H. Thomas to be Ensign, vice Williams; C. W. Hunt, from the Ensigncy, vice Burnett. 12th Foot: Brevet Lieut.-Col. F. Pratt to be Major, vice H. A. O'Neill; Brevet Major Sir R. A. Douglas, Bart., to be Major, vice Pratt. Lieut. R. G. Duff to be Captain, vice Sir R. A. Douglas. 17th Foot: T. A. Macan to be Ensign, vice M'Pherson. 21st Foot: Lieut. A. Seton to be Captain, vice Brevet-Major Thain; Second Lieut. W. Savage to be First Lieutenant; Ensign W. C. Dikes to be Second Lieutenant, vice Savage; Lieut. G. Deare to be Adjutant, vice Seton. 26th Foot: J. Macintain to be Ensign, vice Synge. 27th Foot: Serg.-Major M. Reilly to be Ensign, vice Hutton. 28th Foot: To be Lieutenants: Ensign F. L. Loinsworth; Ensign A. Browne; Ensign E. Webb, vice Andrews. To be Assistant Surgeon: B. Wm. Marlow. 29th Foot: Sergt. G. M. Nugent to be Ensign, vice Macadam. 31st Foot: Lieut. J. C. Stock to be Captain, vice Shaw. To be Lieutenants: Ensign H. G. Fitzgerald to be Lieutenant, vice Clough; Gentleman Cadet T. Wickham to be Ensign, vice FitzGerald; Quartermaster-Sergeant J. Jones to be Quartermaster, vice Oldershaw. 40th Foot: Ensign J. A. Macgowan to be Lieutenant, vice Ensign J. Cormick to be Lieutenant, vice Macgowan; Quartermaster-Sergeant T. W. Greene, vice Fulton; Lieut. H. Scott, vice White; J. Robinson, vice Swayne; J. Le Marchant Carey, vice Archur Cary. 89th Foot: Quartermaster T. R. Timbrell to be Paymaster, vice Fugion; Ensign R. Kirby to be Quartermaster, vice Trimbrell. 63rd Foot: Quartermaster-Sergeant E. Kirby to be Ensign, vice Crowther. 67th Foot: Ensign W. C. Pratt to be Lieutenant, vice Bury; Sergeant-Major J. M'Donough to be Ensign, vice Pratt. 71st Foot: Assist.-Surg. J. Johnston, M.D. to be Assistant-Surgeon, vice Cox. 74th Foot: Ensign T. Wallnutt to be Lieutenant, vice Ward; F. Fellowes to be Ensign, vice Wallnutt. 84th Foot: R. C. Stewart to be Ensign, vice Macbean.

Hospital Staff: Assist.-Surg. G. Carr to be Assistant-Surgeon to the Forces, vice Johnston.

Brevet: Capt. G. W. De Renzy to be Major in the army.

Unattached: Lieut. W. Warde to be Captain.

Memorandum: Second Capt. G. Birch has been allowed to retire from the army with the sale of his commission, he being about to proceed to settle in Canada. The commission of Lieut. J. W. Macgowan to be antedated from the 8th of April to the 4th of March, 1842, to place him in his proper position in that corps

INSOLVENT—J. B. LODGE, New Bond-street, bath proprietor.

BANKRUPTS—R. EVANS, J. FOSTER, S. Z. LANGTON, and T. FOSTER, Sarge-yard, Bucklesbury, East India merchants. J. ALLEN, Much Wymondley, Hertfordshire, cattle dealer. B. BLACKMAN, Cranbrook, Kent, grocer. J. WYATT, Plymouth, Devonshire, upholsterer. J. DAVISON, Marton, Yorkshire, farmer. T. ALLEN, Macclesfield, Cheshire, silkman. J. ALEXANDER and H. GIBBONS, Wolverhampton, Staffordshire, chemists. H. HEDGER and J. HEDGER, Coventry, watch manufacturers.

SCOTCH SEQUESTRATIONS.—R. PATERSON and Co., Glasgow, merchants. J. FAIRLIE, Edinburgh, cabinet maker. A. M'DONALD, Dundee, ironmonger. A. DUNLOP, Esq., Keppoch.

FRIDAY, OCT. 28.

INSOLVENTS.—J. BROWN and R. H. BARRATT, High-street-place, White Horse-lane, Stepney, machinists. G. RICHMOND, Cowley, Oxfordshire, corn-dealer.

BANKRUPTS.—S. WHITE, Lamb's Conduit-street, surgeon. T. CORNISH, Great Marlborough-street, wine-merchant. W. THORPE, Thorne, Yorkshire, scrivener. J. PEPPER, Wotton-and-Tredge, tailor and draper. J. GREAVES, Campsall, Yorkshire, factor. J. BUCKLEY, Higher Compton, coal-master. H. PULLFORD, Birmingham, draper. E. BUSSEY, Sheffield, broker. W. LYON, jun., Woodford, Essex, chemist. A. M. TERRY, New Broad-street, City, confectioner.

PRICE OF SUGAR.—The Average Price of Brown or Muscovado Sugar computed from the Returns made in the Week ending Oct. 18, 1842, is 35s. 0d. per cwt., exclusive of the duties of Customs paid or payable thereon on the importation thereof into Great Britain.

BIRTHS

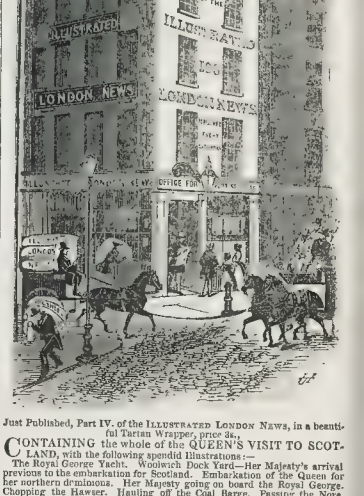
On Thursday, the 20th inst., the lady of William Law Ogilby, Esq., of Sussex-place, Regent's park, of a daughter.——On the 21st inst., at Culverthorpe, the Hon. Mrs. Handley, of a son.——On Saturday, the 22nd inst., in Hill-street, Berkeley-square, the Baroness de Cetto, of a son.——On the 24th inst., in Grafton-street, the Lady Wapole, of a daughter.——October 26th, at Wargrave, Berks, the lady of Wm. H. Cresswell, Esq., of a son and heir.

MARRIAGES.

On the 22nd inst., at the Parish Church of St. Marylebone, and at the Spanish-place Chapel, Stanislaus Gugowski, Esq., to Charlotte, fourth daughter of the late William Dawson, Esq., of St. Leonard's-hill, in Berkshire, and of No. 25, Manchester-square, London. Lord Dudley Coutts Stuart, Count V. Krasinski, &c., were present at the ceremony. On the 26th, at St. Mary's, Woolwich, George F. St. Barbe, Esq., of Lymington, Hants, to Henrietta Maria, youngest daughter of Colonel Cleaveland, Royal Horse Artillery.

DEATHS.

On Friday evening last, at Dundee, Lady Heathcote, wife of Sir Gilbert Heathcote, Bart. The death of Lady Heathcote, we are grieved to state, arose from the distressing circumstance of her clothes having caught fire; and before assistance could be procured suffocation took place.——On the 22nd inst., in Caroline-place, Mrs. Wilson, relict of General Wilson, of his shall Chelsea, in her 90th year.——On Saturday, the 22nd inst., at his house, Govan hill, Sir John Gibson Hurt, Alderman of the city of London, universally regretted.——On Saturday morning, the 22nd inst., Rosetta, the wife of B. Salomons, Esq., of Highbury-place, and Old Change, most deeply lamented by her family and friends.——Suddenly, on Monday last, in the neighbourhood of Birmingham, in the 60th year of his age, Charles Barker, Esq., Master of the Free Grammar School at Sutton-Coldfield, and one of her Majesty's Justices of the Peace for the county of Warwick.——At Cheltenham, on the 22nd inst., deeply regretted by his family and friends, in the 83rd year of his age, Major-General John Nicholas Smith, of 19, Upper Harley-street. In 1793 General Smith entered the service of the Hon. East India Company, in which he served with zeal, integrity, and distinction for a period of 56 years.——On the 16th inst., at his house in St. Giles's, Norwich, John Harvey, Esq., one of her Majesty's Justices of the Peace for the county of Norfolk, in the 69th year of his age.——At Haslar Hospital, Gosport, on the 18th inst., Lieut. F. Prangnall, R.N., aged 52, late of Alresford, Hants, and Kilworth, county of Cork.——On the 19th ult., at Theberton-house, near Saxmundham, Florence Arethusa, only child of T. M. Gibson, Esq., M.P., aged three years and seven months.——On the 25th inst., in his 26th year, the Rev. R. James, M.A., of Clare-hall, Cambridge, fourth son of the Rev. Dr. James, canon of Peterborough.——On the 25th inst., at his father's house, Molineaux-street, Bryanston square, Lieut J. R. Wellsted, Indian Navy, F.R.S., F.A.S., author of "Travels in Arabia," "Travels to the City of the Caliphs," &c., aged 31.



Just Published, Part IV. of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, in a beautiful Tartan Wrapper, price 3s.,

CONTAINING the whole of the QUEEN'S VISIT TO SCOTLAND, with the following splendid Illustrations:—

The Royal George Yacht. Woolwich Dock Yard.—Her Majesty's arrival previous to the embarkation for Scotland. Embarkation of the Queen for her northern dominions. Her Majesty going on board the Royal George. Chopping the Hawser. Hauling off the Coal Barge. Passing the Nore. Deer Stalking in the Highlands. The Throne Room, Holyrood Palace, and Ancient Regalia. View of Dalkeith, the seat of the Duke of Buccleuch. Portrait of a Highlander in Ancient Costume. Portrait of a Highland Bagpiper. View of Edinburgh. The Palace of Scone. Carron Water. View of Edinburgh, from the Calton Hill. Edinburgh Castle, from the Grass Market. View of Dunkeld. View of Perth, from Kinnoul Hill. View of Stirling Castle, from the Ladies' Rock. St. John's Church, Perth. Trafalgar Square. Nelson's Column. Grouse shooting in the Moors of Scotland. View of Loch Erne. Ruins on the Island of Devenish. St. Paul's, Covent Garden. The Fashions. The Queen in Edinburgh, passing the Royal Institution. The Doncaster St. Leger. The Doncaster Cup. Buck Shooting in the Highlands. Her Majesty leaving the Duchess of Atholl's. The Queen entering Perth. Entrance into Dunkeld. Taymouth Castle.—Broadsword Dance. Taymouth Castle.—Highland Reel. The Queen leaving Perth. Her Majesty on board. Group Newhaven Fishwomen. The Queen and the Prince viewing "Mons Meg." The Queen and Prince Albert leaving Drummond Castle. Map of the North Eastern Boundary between the British Possessions and the United States. Curraghmore. Portrait of the celebrated Mare, Beeswing. Portrait of Lord Palmerston. Portrait of her Majesty in Scotland.—Engravings of seven Triumphal Arches. The Queen and Prince Albert entering Taymouth Park. The Queen and the Prince leaving Taymouth, and passing Kenmore. Her Majesty and the Prince embarking on Loch Tay. View of Taymouth Castle, the seat of the Marquis of Breadalbane. Her Majesty at Loch Erne Head, changing horses. The Royal Barge. Steps erected for the Queen's landing at Auchmore. The Royal Party on Loch Tay. The Queen and Prince Albert landing at Auchmore. Auchmore House, Killin. View of Killin, from the Bridge. Gate at Drummond Castle.—The 42nd Highlanders marching out. Portrait of a Cabrai Church Boy. Somerset House—Stamp Office. All Souls' Church; Langham Place. Her Majesty and Prince Albert at Granton Pier, besides many other engravings.

May be had, if ordered, of all Booksellers and Newsmen.

Separate Tartan Wrappers may be had, price 6d. each.

Office, 198, Strand.

LONDON: Printed by ROBERT PALMER (at the Office of Palmer & Clayton), 10, Crane-court; and published by WILLIAM LITTLE, at 198, Strand, where all communications are requested to be addressed.—SATURDAY, October 29, 1842.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS

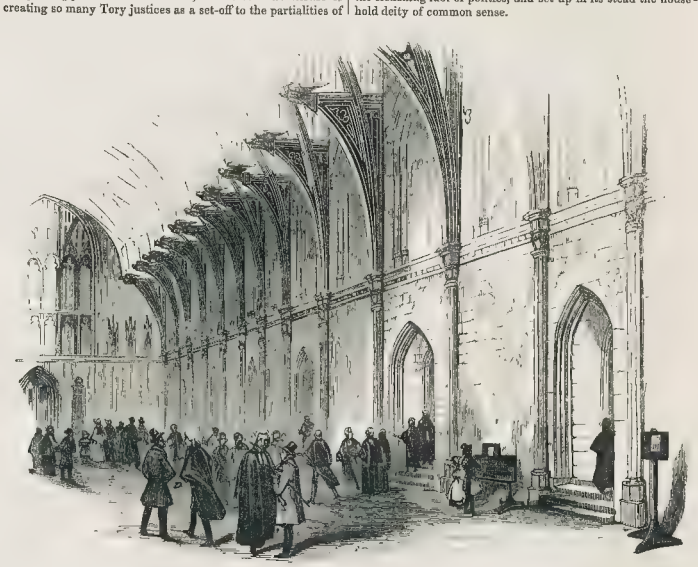
[No. 26. FOR THE WEEK ENDING SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 5, 1842. [SIXPENCE.

REPRINT.

THE MUNICIPAL ELECTIONS.

The officers of corporations are now being elected in all the provincial districts, and although the excitement of competition is not such as it was under the first operation of the new Corporation Bill, on account of the number of candidates being limited, yet there are circumstances, connected with the strife of party which these contests are engendering, that are of sufficient importance to elicit public remark. It is probable that in the individual integrity of members of the English mercantile community, has long consisted a large share of the greatness of the nation; for surely a character for uprightness, unswerving honesty, and fine social principles, are keystones to the arch of commerce, as commerce itself is the keystone to that of British prowess and wealth. The British merchant has long been deemed, in a personal sense, a representative of the virtue of probity in the commercial world, and his power in society is more attributable to that quality than even to the wealth of which it is so chief a cause. Our expressive word, "respectability," is, in fact, like that of "gentleman," one of the powerful influences of the destinies of the empire; and your commercial Englishman who retains its true attributes through a life of anxiety and speculation, is, in the most emphatic sense of the epithet, "the gentleman of trade." Now, it is this peculiar status in society which the general community have ever delighted to honour; and, as one of the means of placing it in a broad light of esteem and power, was intended the elevation to municipal importance—the raising of its possessors to civic dignities, such as are now coveted by so many at the elections which form the subject of these remarks. The man who had worked his way to wealth and honour, without reproach, was justly deemed worthy of the distinction which they might procure him, and likely to apply them, in a position of power, with more efficacy to the well-being, improvement, and protection of his fellow-citizens, than the public adventurer and speculator in the politics of the times. The whole meaning of corporate institutions was, to place such men in such positions, and so create a kind of social aristocracy, the influence of which would be beneficent, and not tyrannous, and tend to strengthen the foundations of integrity among the public at large. Now, our complaint is, that all the spirit of this intention is lost in the corruptions of party, and that the progressing elections are so many evidences of the demoralizing influence of conflicts in which care for principle is sacrificed to love of power.

We feel convinced that the whole condition of the people would be bettered if these municipal functionaries were elected with regard to their position personal, and not to their position political. We see in the public journals, London and provincial, paragraphical boasts of triumph whenever a corporation is weakened or strengthened by Tory or Whig. If a man whose position in a borough or city is fraught with wealth, the result of joint industry and character—if he be wise in the accumulation of money, and liberal in its distribution—if he be the friend of the poor, and the powerful equal of the rich—if he have the means of doing good to the town in which he resides, and of coupling prosperity to others with the power that is delegated to himself—if he be beyond the reach of calumny and above the inducements to corruption—he is still not elected for any of these congregated evidences of his fitness, but because he adds to them a particular set of opinions, which, be they Whig, Tory, or Radical, are the joy of the party to which he belongs. Is not this much to be regretted? What has citizenship to do with party in its purely social operation? Surely it is the duty of residents in all places to seek to improve and benefit the locality to which they are attached, and their elections should have reference either to the advance of civilization, the fostering of charities, or the progress of commerce and the arts of peace. It is not the man who will vote for Peel, Russell, O'Connell, or O'Connor, that should be "a city's pride;" but the founder of good and sound practical institutions—of churches, colleges, hospitals, libraries, halls of music and of arts, docks, monuments, public walks, and all the improving features of a nation's greatness—the studier of the "pleasures of the people," with the economy of the community, and a beautiful moderation of the laws—the man who would forward his kind in the race of improvement without reference to the complexion of their politics, and become one of the "elders of the people," with a fine moral sense of the dignity which it would be his province to uphold. These are the tests by which we would measure the eligibility of candidates at municipal elections, and, if they possessed these, and exercised them in a noble spirit, we would leave them to the enjoyment of what politics they pleased. The mean pitifulness of the principle of admitting party favours and jealousies into the current of social justice, is degrading in the extreme. It was, a short time past, quite humiliating to find that the entire magistracy of the country was considered to be so infected with these predilections, that the administration of justice was not considered safe to the existence of the governing power. The Prime Minister or Home Secretary found so many Whig justices in commission, that he had the excuse of creating so many Tory justices as a set-off to the partialities of his predecessor! How absurd is this! What a sarcasm upon morals, the purity of a judge, and even the character of a gentleman! And yet the spirit is confessed, and it cankers and pollutes the whole corporate jurisdiction of the empire. All the elections now in progress are subject to it, and the press teems with daily and weekly boasts of victories, that, if honour and conscience had fair weight with humanity, would form the chief elements of their disgrace and shame. Will the people never become philosophers for the truth? Will they never discard passion for reason, and elevate the character of their social institutions by a higher regard for the impartiality of their administration, and the character, respectability, influence, and virtue of those whom they elect to rule? Let them fell the sickening idol of politics, and set up in its stead the household deity of common sense.



THE COURTS AT WESTMINSTER—FIRST DAY OF TERM.

THE FIRST DAY OF TERM.

The SECOND OF NOVEMBER is the first day of Michaelmas Term. This morning the judges drink coffee with the Chancellor, and the senior members of the bar enjoy their toast, and revel in waking dreams of future woolsacks, in the same august presence. Then comes a rattling of carriages over the stones of George-street, Hanover-square; and the keeper of the Queen's conscience—the Lord High Chancellor of England—heads the state procession to Westminster Hall. Next follow the equipages of the several judges, of the counsel, and of other functionaries. Proceeding to Westminster, they open the various Courts of Law and Equity—the floodgates of litigation are cast down, and the old hall of Rufus shall, for many months, know no more peace. The keen subtlety, the legal acumen, the ready wit, the coarse banter, the unblushing effrontery, and powerful eloquence of the English bar are now again in full career. Wigs move here and there, red bags mingle with blue, attorneys, clerks, clients, criers, bailiffs, Jews, and witnesses, jostle hither and thither the idler whom chance or curiosity may lead into this legal maelstrom. He cannot, however, fail to note that the walls of the lobbies are now thickly covered with notices from candidates, ambitious of the honour and emoluments accruing from the legal position of "Gentleman, one, &c.," and he will thereby be reminded that the bitter pill of the law is a luxury, at least to those who live by its administration.

The SECOND OF NOVEMBER—day mighty for lawyers, melancholy for clients. For three months hath the law slumbered—a long vacation, as delightful to the embroiled debtor as is to the schoolboy the day dream of his Christmas holiday. But, like all vacations, the long vacation has an end; and now the talons of the law, shaking off three months' torpor, come forth again all bright and keen after their too brief repose. Now commence operations in divers dark offices, in many strange quarters of this great city, and threadbare clerks shuffle to and fro with certain small papers encircled with red tape, and endowed with mystic meaning, with too pre-eminent a potency. The legal workshops are now in full employ—the legal labourers busy as the fabled bees. Writs are rife—declarations are no longer doubtful—and executions issue thickly one after another. In Chancery-lane all is hurry and bustle. From "morn till foggy eve" there is a brisk interchange of hints and information amongst the polite and elegant adherents of the duly appointed officers of the worshipful the sheriffs of London and Middlesex. Rapidly do these industrious officials earn their guineas by the busy exercise of their legalised trade as "fishers of men." Ever and anon hackney-coaches are seen driving up to the secure abodes of these important functionaries, and gentlemen walk into them, escorted with a degree of careful solicitude which is highly interesting. The courts and alleys of the Temple, the squares and places of Gray's, and the gateways and buildings of Lincoln's Inn, which, for a space, re-echoed only the solitary footfall of a dingy laundress, are now almost cheerful in the busy hum of many voices, and the quick tread of hurrying men.

In the back streets between Westminster Hall and Temple Bar young men, and pale fag-ends and shabby-genteel dependents of the bar, dodge their tortuous way through the crowd, bearing large wooden wig-boxes, the recipients of the wisdom of the owners, and blue bags containing the toga of our times—the lawyer's gown. Great is the consumption of brief paper, and frequent are the jottings down of six and eightpence. Bills of costs swell as estates diminish, and Hope herself grows lean and sallow at the presence of the first day of Term.

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

FRANCE.—The Paris papers of Saturday, Sunday, and Monday, were engaged in a controversy as to the legality of the meetings of Deputies and delegates to oppose the projected treaty with Belgium. The Débats contends that such meetings are most dangerous, and opposed to the spirit of the charter and of the constitutional Government—that they are an invasion of the privileges of the Chambers and of their free action. The Courrier Français and the Globe side with the Débats, but the remaining journals warmly oppose the Ministerial doctrine. The National calls the objections to these meetings "miserable quibbling."

The Constitutionnel (M. Thiers' organ), in an article on slavery, gives the world to understand that, although it is the decided opponent of the right of search, it has no notion of exciting the public mind to a blind hatred of England as to push two civilised countries to a deplorable rupture, and at the same time it will not abandon the Christian and political thought of emancipating the slaves in the French colonies.

General Pajol has been dismissed from the command of the first military division of Paris. The event was communicated to the veteran general by a letter from Marshal Soult. It appears that he had attained the age for retirement, and military men, therefore, consider him wrong not to have accepted the honourable post of aide-de-camp to the King. Pajol is, however, a very headstrong man, and a bit of a Bonspartist besides.

Some amusement was caused in Paris on Monday by the solemn announcement in the Morning Herald, of Friday week, that there were rumours of the abdication of the King of the French in favour of the Duke of Nemours! The Courrier Français reminds us that the Count of Paris and the Duke de Chartres precede the Duke de Nemours in the order of succession.

Tuesday being All Saints' Day, the Paris Bourse and public offices were closed, and the mail-bags made up at the same early hour as on Sunday. The newspapers of that day contained nothing whatever of importance.

SPAIN.—Letters from Madrid to the eve of the 23rd ult. state that the rumours of a pretended conspiracy to establish the constitution of 1812 had entirely ceased, the secret societies which had taken the initiative in the project having fallen out as to the means of carrying it into execution. The great object, it is said, of the re-establishment of the constitution of 1812 was to prolong the period of the Queen's minority until she had obtained her 18th year.

One of the reports current at the Puerta del Sol is that the Archduke Frederick of Austria, now in England, is destined by diplomacy to be the husband of Queen Isabella.

The Postdata (Moderado organ) had been acquitted by nine against three, for a seditious libel, in calling the Regent's balcony of the Palace of Buena Vista the balcony of Pontius Pilate.

One of the Madrid papers mentions that the Rodil Cabinet would be replaced by one in which Senor Carnerero's name would figure as Minister for Foreign Affairs.

The Augsburg Gazette of the 27th ult. fully confirms, in its Constantinople letters of the 12th, the event it had before published on the authority of Belgrade correspondence, that the Ottoman Porte had sanctioned the election of the new sovereign for Servia, Prince Alexander Georgewitch. On the same authority we learn that Persia had accepted the mediation of the court of Vienna to arrange the differences which it had with the Ottoman Government.

LISBON Oct. 24.—Sir C. Napier came here by the Montrose steamer on Friday, and remains; he was saluted by the Portuguese forts on coming in.

Advices received from Corunna report the arrival there of the royal mail steam-ship Dee on the 19th ult., after a quick passage of 54 hours. The Dee sailed from Falmouth on Friday, the whole of her passengers (102 in number) being highly gratified at the prospect of making a rapid and agreeable trip across the Atlantic.

HANOVER, Oct. 22.—The indisposition of his Majesty the King of Hanover continues, with short intermissions, and the intended visit to the Duke of Brunswick, for a hunting party at Blankenburg, is given up, as well as the journey to Rattinskirchen. As these frequent returns of indisposition for some weeks past have prevented his Majesty from giving audience to any but those unable to receive a number of citizens who intend to offer their congratulations to his Majesty on the approaching marriage of the Crown Prince, and who, it is said, have in vain sought an audience for some weeks past. The King rides out every day and then in a closely-covered carriage, whereas he was used to ride on horseback every day, even in the most unfavourable weather.

TURKEY.—By letters received from Constantinople, viâ Vienna, dated the 12th ult., it appears that troops have been despatched to Syria to replace the Albanians, whose conduct has given so much cause of complaint.

The election of Prince Alexander in Servia is definitively confirmed at the Porte, and messengers have been despatched to invest him in his dignity

The Persian affair no longer gives uneasiness to the Porte.

UNITED STATES.—CANADA, &c.—The Royal Mail steam-ship Columbia, Captain Miller, arrived in the Mersey on Saturday night last shortly before midnight. She left Boston on the 16th and Halifax at about five o'clock on the evening of the 18th ult., and had consequently performed the passage from the latter port in the short space of eleven days and a few hours. The Britannia steamer, which left here on the 4th, arrived at Halifax on the 16th ult. By the Columbia we have received New York papers to the 16th, and journals from the two other ports to the days of her sailing.

The intelligence from the United States is almost destitute of interest. There had been great public rejoicing and festivities in New York on the occasion of the city being supplied with pure fresh water from the Croton river, by means of a stupendous aqueduct. The Secretary of the Treasury had not been able to dispose of the 12 millions loan; but he had authorised the Bank of Commerce to supply applicants with any sums, at par, even so low as 1000 dollars, in United States 6 per Cent. Stock having 20 years to run; either transferable only on the Register Books, or by certificates with interest coupons attached to them.

Another bank swindle has exploded, leaving nothing to divide amongst the poor dupes who were foolish enough to invest their money as shareholders, that of the Phœnix Bank, at Charleston, near Boston.

The death of Dr. Channing, an event which will be lamented in every civilised part of the globe, is announced as having occured at Bennington, Vermont, on the 2nd ult., and his remains would, it was expected, be interred at Boston on the 5th.

From Canada we learn that the Provincial Parliament was prorogued to the 18th November, by Sir C Bagot in person, who delivered a most complimentary speech on the occasion. The recently appointed Attorney-General for Canada West, Mr. Baldwin, had been defeated at the Hastings election; his opponent, Mr Mackey, having a majority of 41. Considerable violence attended the voting, several persons were severely injured, and the Herald attributes the return of the successful candidate to the intimidation used by his partisans. Mr. Attorney-General Lafontaine was elected by a majority of 210. The late changes in the Cabinet have been fiercely condemned by most of the Canadian journals. A duty of 3s. per quarter has been laid on American wheat entering Canada.

SANTA ANNA was vigorously pursuing warlike operations against TEXAS. A force of 1300 Mexicans had taken San Antonio at a time when the courts of justice were sitting, and jailer, jury, accused, and accusers, lawyers and the principal citizens, were made captives by the invaders. The Texans were altogether taken by surprise

From Yucatan we learn that the Government was still holding out, and that no movement against Campeachy or any other part of the country had been made by the Mexicans.

The advices from Havannah extend to the 22nd ult. The island of Cuba had been visited by a severe hurricane, which caused very considerable damage to the crops generally.

Intelligence has been received at Belize, Honduras, of the loss of her Majesty's steam-ship, Spitfire, on the 10th ult., on Half-moon Key Reef. All hands were saved, but the vessel became a total wreck.

COUNTRY NEWS.

BIRMINGHAM.—If what every one says be true, the past has been, perhaps, the worst week of trade which has been felt in this town. The complaints are almost general. There are few orders in the warehouses. The men are daily being less employed, money is consequently scarcer, and the shopkeepers can best tell their own tale. To add to the gloom, the winter has set in with snow, cutting winds, and pinching night frosts.

On Friday week the consecration of the Right Rev. Dr. Wilson, Catholic Bishop of Van Diemen's Land, took place in the Birmingham Cathedral, in presence of a most respectable assembly. Bishop Polding, of Sydney, was the celebrant, assisted by Bishops Wareing and Walsh, and a large body of the clergy. Bishop Wiseman preached on the occasion.

The election of members to serve on the Town Council took place at Birmingham on Tuesday, when nearly the whole of the seats were successfully contested by complete suffrage candidates. The old councillors who took the suffrage pledge were unopposed; but all who refused were rejected by the association, and when they went to poll completely defeated. It is deemed an important triumph by the Chartists, and may be taken as a proof of the daily increasing power of the association.

Great excitement was manifested amongst the manufacturers of Birmingham, on Wednesday, in consequence of a rumour (which has since been verified) of the failure of Messrs. Goddard and Hill, American merchants and factors. The firm carried on an extensive business, chiefly with the small hardware manufacturers in the adjoining towns, who will be the principal sufferers. The liabilities of the concern are stated at £60,000, and the embarrassments which have led to the present failure are attributed to the gradual decline of the trade with America for some years past, owing to the competition of the German manufacturers, and also to the operation of the new tariff, which prohibits a large proportion of our goods.

BLACKBURN.—On Saturday night a fire broke out in the extensive mill of Mr. Joseph Eccles, Darwin-street, Blackburn. Notwithstanding every exertion was used to check the flames, the whole building was burned to the ground. The books, &c., were with difficulty saved. The damage is estimated at from £30,000 to £40,000.

BRADFORD.—The Bradford Observer of last week contains a marvellous account of a series of mysterious attacks made on the life of a young lady named Rigg (the daughter of a clergyman of that town), which is only to be equalled by the metropolitan performances of the redoutable "spring-heeled Jack." At one time she is attacked in her own bed-room, by a villain who lies coupled beneath her bed, and who burglariously decamps with her silk dresses; at another time she is stabbed in the dark on her way to the cellar; and lastly, she is brutally assailed with some heavy instrument, which makes several severe impressions on her arms and shoulders. What makes the matter appear almost incredible is, that the fiend (most ghost-like) never shows himself to more than one person at the same time; for although several persons heard Miss Rigg's shrieks and saw her wounds, yet no one caught a glimpse of her assailant. Upon the last occasion alluded to the villain had the modesty, it is said, to—blacken his face.

CANTERBURY.—An alarming fire broke out in St. George's-street, Canterbury, on Sunday evening, about ten o'clock, at the boot and shoe mart known by the name of the Red Boot, occupied by a Mrs. Dawson. This building was entirely destroyed, together with the Kentish Observer counting-house, and the adjoining houses considerably injured. Shortly after twelve the fire was so far overpowered that no fear of its extending further prevailed. However, about three o'clock, the fire again broke out with renewed vigour, but, by the resolute activity of the firemen, was finally subdued, though not until further damage was sustained.

CHATHAM.—A rigid investigation has been going on for some time at the Chatham Dockyard, for the purpose of ascertaining how a sawyer of the name of Swaile, had come by two £100 notes, which it appears he has changed within a short time back. It is reported that Swaile received the bank notes from a convict whilst in the yard, and who was undergoing his sentence of transportation, and that, profiting by the circumstance of his intimate knowledge, he was to have £50 for his trouble. Swaile must have had the notes in his possession some time, as the convict suspected is one of three brothers who were concerned in an extensive robbery, and have gone with the last draught of convicts for the penal settlements, and Swaile ascertaining that fact, brought forth the notes for circulation, Swaile has disappeared. One of the £100 notes, it is stated, was paid into the Rochester Bank, and transmitted to London, where it was stopped, as one having been stolen.

CHELTENHAM.—Considerable excitement prevailed in Cheltenham on Monday last, in consequence of Dame Rebecca Ricketts, widow of the late Admiral Sir R. T. Ricketts, Thomas Wright, her medical adviser, George Buckman, and Edward Cousens, being brought up before the magistrates to answer the information and complaint of Augustus Newton, Esq., on a charge of "having forged the late admiral's will, with intent thereby to cheat, spoil, and defraud the next of kin of Sir R T. Ricketts, particularly Augustus Newton, and Letitia Prences Newton, his wife (heretofore Letitia Frances Ricketts), of their share of the personal estate, valued at £50,000, and to which they would have been entitled had Sir Robert died intestate. And that Dame Rebecca Ricketts and Joseph Cooper Stratford did also actually utter a probate of the will to Wm. Pitt, Esq., one of the managers of the County of Gloucester Bank, on the 21st day of September last, with intent to defraud the before-named parties of certain moneys in the said bank, the deceased, Sir R T. Ricketts, having been of unsound and imbecile mind for three months prior to his death." After some discussion in the case was indefinitely adjourned for a week, the accused parties putting in bail for their appearance.

HUDDERSFIELD.—Considerable excitement has prevailed in Huddersfield during the past week, in consequence of Mr. Jonathan R. Eastwood, a young man, one of the clerks in the employ of the Huddersfield Banking Company, having been in custody, suspected of embezzling certain money letters which have been addressed to the bank, and which are supposed to have passed through the Huddersfield Post-office, amounting to about £800. An examination of the accused took place before Mr. Battye, the magistrate, but as there was nothing positive to criminate him, he was discharged from custody.

ISLE OF WIGHT.—The solemn ceremony of consecrating a new burial ground took place last week at Ryde, in the Isle of Wight. Divine service was celebrated at St. Thomas's church in the afternoon, when an eloquent and impressive sermon was preached by the Lord Bishop of Winchester, which was followed by a collection of corresponding liberality, in aid of the funds for enclosing the ground.

LIVERPOOL.—We have much satisfaction in announcing that the claims on the various insurance offices are nearly all satisfactorily settled. The Liverpool Mercury says:—"The extent of these fires, the destruction of merchandise, and the enormous amount of loss sustained, exceed anything of the kind ever experienced in this or any other port."

LOUTH.—INCENDIARY FIRE.—We regret to have to record a revolting instance of the diabolical crime of incendiarism, committed on the farm of Mr. John Foster, a highly respectable and opulent farmer, residing at Great Carlton, a village about seven miles from Louth. The whole of the contents of the stack-yard of Mr. Foster's farm, including nineteen stacks, barns, &c., were rapidly reduced to ashes. The damage done is estimated at £1000 to £1500. Mr. Foster was insured in the Norwich Union, but only for £800.

NEWCASTLE.—Upon the 7th of October last three thirty soldiers of the 61st Regiment, who are prisoners in Newcastle gaol, having been convicted by court martial for various military offences, and sentenced to different periods of imprisonment, broke out into open mutiny, and refused to work, alleging that the food was so bad they were hungering. Several of the mag strates went to the gaol for the purpose of investigating the circumstances, the result of which will, no doubt, be satisfactory.

NORTHLEACH.—Sir James Graham has written to the foreman of the jury who sat on the body of Charles Beale, to say that the Government have instituted an inquiry into the manner in which the Northleach house of correction is conducted.

WORCESTER.—SINGULAR ACT OF SELF-MUTILATION.—A most extraordinary and determined act was committed in Worcester City Gaol on Wednesday afternoon, by a man named James Fincher, who had been apprehended as a deserter, and lodged in the prison to await the determination of his case. While so confined he contrived to possess himself of a piece of iron hoop, which he had notched so as to make it answer roughly the purposes of a saw, and with this rude instrument he succeeded in sawing off the thumb of his right hand, between the nail and the first joint, the separation of skin, flesh, and bone, being effected in the most complete manner. His object is easily accounted for, viz., the disabling himself for future service. Fincher deserted from the Grenadier Guards some twelve or thirteen years since, and was only apprehended, as we have been informed, a few days ago.

IRELAND.

INAUGURATION OF THE NEW LORD MAYOR.

DUBLIN, TUESDAY.—At two o'clock the Right Hon. Daniel O'Connell, M.P., Lord Mayor, Alderman George Roe, and all the aldermen and councillors of the corporation, proceeded in procession from the Mansion-house to the City Assembly, in William-street, where the new Lord Mayor was sworn into office. The Lord Mayor, having thanked all the members of the assembly for the kindness and support afforded to him during his year of office, concluded by proposing Alderman George Roe as Lord Mayor for the ensuing year. (Loud cheers.)

Alderman Kinahan seconded the motion, and stated that he believed there would not be a dissentient voice in the council. (Renewed cheering.)

Alderman Joseph Boyce regretted his being out of town when the requisition was presented to Alderman Roe, which prevented his attending and placing his name to it. (Hear, hear.)

The question was then put, and passed amidst tremendous cheering.

His lordship was then dressed in the emblems of office, and took his seat in the chair. Alderman O'Connell took his seat as one of the council.

The Lord Mayor, upon taking the chair, in an eloquent and affecting speech, thanked the assembly for the high honour they had conferred on him, in electing him to fill the office of Lord Mayor of the city of Dublin. (Loud cheers.) He concluded by hoping that at the termination of his year of office the corporation and his fellow-citizens would have no reason to regret having conferred such an undeserved honour on him. (Great cheers.)

Mr. M'Laughlin proposed a resolution of thanks to the late Lord Mayor, for his valuable services and upright conduct during the past year.

Mr. M'Cullagh seconded the motion, which was carried by acclamation.

Alderman O'Connell here entered the house; when, upon taking his seat, the Lord Mayor announced to him the resolution which had been passed by the assembly.

Alderman O Connell then rose, and, in his usual eloquent and impressive strain, thanked the members of the council, of both political parties, for the support afforded to him in the discharge of his official duties. He alluded to his not being created a baronet upon the birth of the Prince of Wales, and said, for his part, he considered the Government were highly justified in passing over the usual custom, as far as regarded him; but he would protest, and the corporation should in a body protest, against a similar slight being paid to any future Lord Mayor. (Tremendous cheering.)

The assembly then adjourned until Tuesday next.

CLONMEL.—Mr. Thomas Sadlier, for more than twenty years clerk of the peace for the county of Tipperary, expired on Saturday last, at an advanced age, at his residence in Clonmel. He was elder and only brother to the Rev. the Provost of Trinity College, and was a gentleman much respected through life.

The Cork Examiner states that letters have been received in that city from Rome, announcing the conversion to the Roman Catholic Church of Mr. W. Leycester, son of Mr. Joseph Leycester, who for a short time represented the city of Cork in Parliament, with Colonel Gerrard for his colleague.

DUBLIN, Oct. 31.—His Excellency the Lord Lieutenant and the Countess de Grey attended divine service at the Chapel Royal, Dublin Castle, yesterday. The sermon was preached by the Rev. Mr. Chann, chaplain to his excellency.—The Castle is at present undergoing various repairs, embellishments, and alterations, preparatory to the ensuing season. On Saturday his Excellency the Lord Lieutenant drove into town from the Viceregal Lodge, and inspected the progress of the repairs.—The collection of the "national debt" (as it is called) to Mr. O'Connell was duly enforced yesterday at all the Roman Catholic chapels, and the amount received, so far as it has been yet ascertained, considerably exceeds the gathering of last year. The return, though as yet imperfect, shows a total for Dublin and its vicinity of £2033.

It is said that the Hon. Mr. Prittie will appoint his son to the clerkship of the peace for the county of Tipperary; it is worth £1500 a year.

A "genteel English stranger," says a provincial journalist, visited and left Cork last week, after vainly attempting forgeries to the amount of £5000 upon the Cork Bank and Bank of Ireland in that city. He assumed the designation of "Henry Beiville," and represented himself as a man of capital about to invest largely in steam-mill operations.

It is stated that a vacancy will shortly be created in the representation of Ennis, and that Mr. Smith, the new Attorney-General, will be a candidate.

A convent on a large scale is about to be erected at Dalkey, Kingstown, with a chapel in the centre, estimated to cost twenty thousand pounds, for which the funds are supplied by a Miss O Brien, of Rathfarnham convent.

KILDARE.—The Rev. Mr. Kearney, the parish-priest of Clane, in the diocese of Kildare, who died last week, left by his will £8000 to the Right Rev. Dr. Healey, for the college of Carlow; £500 to the poor of the parish of Clane; £500 to the Society for the Propagation of the Faith; and £500 to a convent at Clane.

IRISH LAW APPOINTMENTS.—The name of Mr. Blackburne appears in the Gazette of Friday week as Master of the Rolls for Ireland; and we are enabled to state that the Queen's letter has arrived in Dublin, announcing to law offices vacant by the promotion of that gentleman. Mr. T. B. Smith is Attorney-General; Mr. Greene, Solicitor; and we believe there is no doubt that Mr. Brooke, of the Chancery bar, will be the new Sergeant in place of the latter.

WILD SPORTS OF THE WEST.—The following extraordinary scene took place at the Castlebar Petty Sessions, on Thursday week; the principals being the Right Hon. the Earl of Lucan, plaintiff, and Mr. Sir. Clod O'Malley, a magistrate of the county of Mayo, defendant. There were issued four summonses against the defendant, charging him with hunting without authority on the plaintiff's land. The charge having been read, Mr. O'Malley: This is a mean and malicious prosecution, and I entertain the most utter contempt for it and Lord Lucan, and everything emanating from him.—Lord Lucan (to the Bench): Will you suffer such language as this? I call on you to commit that miscreant to the dock.—Mr. O'Malley: Your conduct in this matter is of a piece with everything else that you do—it is cowardly, blackguard, and ruffianly. If it were not for where you are, I would be licking you with this stick until I would break every bone in your body.—Mr. Barron and Mr. Browne rose to interrupt Mr. O'Malley, who was proceeding to make further observations, whilst Mr. Davis called on them to commit him.—After some further discussion, not less remarkable for the indiscrimin te use of language and altogether unsuited for a court of justice, Mr O'Malley applied for a postponement of the case.—Mr. Barron: Well, Mr. Davis, what if we postpone the case?—Mr. Davis: I cannot consent to it, Sir. Mr. O'Malley, having pursued the course he did, deserves no courtesy from us.—Mr. O'Malley: I demand it as a right. I would accept no courtesy from Lord Lucan.—Lord Lucan: No courtesy is due to such a miscreant.—Mr. O'Malley: You cowardly poltroon, you know when you use that expression that, if you were not under the protection of four magistrates, I would lay this stick across your back. (Much excitement pervaded the whole court.) I shall say no more. Least said is soonest mended.—The case was ultimately adjourned, Mr. O'Malley having been held to keep the peace.

GLASGOW.—An alarming and most destructive fire occurred here on Saturday morning last, in the bonded stores occupied by Mr. Oliver, Wright, when an immense quantity of valuable commodities, consisting of cotton, grain, wines, spirits, teas, sugars, &c., all of which that was stored in the upper flats, was entirely destroyed. The loss of goods alone is calculated at upwards of £5000. Such was the intensity of the heat at one period of the fire that it blistered the surrounding houses. We regret to state, in connexion with the above, that a boy lost his life in one of the adjoining streets, being run over by a horse and water-butt.

FINE ARTS.

THE BRUNEL MEDAL.—A very beautiful medal has been forwarded to us, cast in honour of Sir Isambard Maco Brunel, and in celebration of the completion of the Thames Tunnel, of which magnificent work he was the successful projector and engineer. The medal is impressed on one side with the striking and intellectual features of the architect himself, while on the other is a representation of the stupendous work of art, by which he will be remembered in the history of his native land. The medal is cast in bronze—and we presume in silver also—and is the creditable production of Mr. J. Taylor, the medallist, of Birmingham.

A very effective print has just made its appearance, engraved by the celebrated Gerard, from a picture by Madame Soyer—"The Young Jew Lemon-sellers." The painting is undoubtedly a study from the life. The mirthful expression of the figures, and the truthfulness of character which is developed in the whole subject, combined with extraordinary vigour of execution for a female hand, give us an idea of one of the beautiful works of the Flemish masters, seen through a strong microscope, where all the minuteness of finish seems to be but a display of powerful energy.

THE CORONATION PICTURE.—Mr. Henry Graves, accompanied by H. T. Ryall, Esq., Historical Engraver to the Queen, had the honour of an audience of her Majesty and his Royal Highness Prince Albert, on Wednesday last, to submit a finished proof of the engraving of the picture of her Majesty's Coronation, painted by Sir G. Hayter, of which her Majesty and his Royal Highness were pleased to express their approval.

THE THEATRES

COVENT GARDEN.

On Monday last was produced at this house a petite comedie entitled The Turf, by Mark Lemon, with the most complete and deserved success. Before we enter on the merits of the piece itself we would inquire ("not too curiously," although he is sufficiently able to undergo any analysis) into the dramatic powers of this young, but already most prolific, author. Firstly, it seems to us that the world to him is like one of those illuminated manuscripts that, from their gorgeous golden initials down to their meanest inky characters, include all the grades of life between the monarch and the slave. Secondly, undazzled by the one and unoffended by the other, he considers the various intermediate and confusing passages, collates with precision, and selects with judgment. The consequence is that his transcript is in the spirit and not the letter, and (to depart from our figure to fly eagerly to another) his picture of life, his drama, more faithfully represents what it purposes than the productions of those who merely peep into title-pages of manuscripts or men, or who think that "index reading," a study which "turns no student pale," can ever atone for the abscence of that "chewing, swallowing, and digesting," as Lord Veralum says, which are so essential to the proper knowledge of humanity as well as books. Mark Lemon has studied closely his fellow man, and has head and heart enough to depict him, guided as he may be by the occasionally more powerful influence of the one or the other. Thus much for this author in general; but one word personally ere we take our leave. We would counsel him not to write too fast—not to write too much—for the habit is destructive to lasting fame. Now for The Turf—and a most pleasant excursion it proved. Epsom Downs on the Derby day were never more delightful. The plot of this piece may not probably please those who seek for the intricacies of Spanish incident; but, as the vehicle of much pleasant wit and clever development of peculiar character and situation, it was a most agreeable thread to hang the progress of the piece upon. The acting was most excellent throughout: Harley was not "always Harley;" and Mr. Wiggan's assumed French Count was in the highest degree admirable The house warmly received the announcement of the piece for repetition.

On Tuesday an adaptation of Cimarosa's charming opera of Il Matrimonio Segreto was produced, under the name of The Secret Marriage, and, struggling as it was throughout against many difficulties, finally proved successful. One party found fault with the poor resemblance it bore to its great prototype. The Clandestine Marriage, a comedy entailed upon our stage; another complained of the inferiority of the cast at this theatre as compared to that of her Majesty's; and a third, more dangerous than the other two, with ears accustomed to modern orchestral noise, were for a time disappointed by finding only grace where they had expected strength, repose in lieu of agitation, and the purest melody in the world (both vocal and instrumental) instead of the melo-dramatic and generally misapplied discordant crudities of the present school of music The overture, which was delightfully performed, fell still-born, owing to the absence of trumpet, drum, and that universal clangor tubarum which a modern composer thinks is not only right but indispensable to wind up with in overture, solo, and every other morceau, down to the finale of every musical composition, now-a-days. As to the performance, it is not more gallant than just to say that the ladies took the lead at starting and kept it to the end. Miss Kemble, in a Watteau costume of questionable taste, was nevertheless charming and sang with great taste and skill, with the exception of one passage, in the celebrated trio 'Le faccio un inchino,' in which there was a misplaced desterity exhibited. By the way, a word to this talented vocalist and to many others also—a shake upon a note should be the quick alternation between it and the one above it (semi or whole tone). Fortuna non Miss Rainforth looked, acted, and sang, charmingly, and Mrs. Alfred Shaw did more than any other lady could possibly do to make us forget poor Mal bran. Her enunciation is the purest and most distinct we have ever heard. In her solo in the first act she was most deservedly encored. Harrison has gained much additional reputation by his performance of Paolino. The air of 'Ere the early ray,' though somewhat too long (not his fault), he sang most beautifully. To criticise Giubilei in Geronimo or Leffler in the Count, with Laplache and Tamberlick in our mind's eye, would not be fair. It is only just, however, to say, that, under the circumstances of disadvantage which they must have felt themselves, they got through their parts most creditably. They were encored in the celebrated duet 'Le fiato in corpo.' The absence of chorus was sufficiently atoned for by the many beautiful concerted pieces, but we omitted to giving the scene-shifters such a holiday. The first apartment remained set to the last, in statu quo, reminding us of Crispin's "parlour, kitchen, and all." The house was crowded, and all the dramatis personæ, in numbers, were called upon to appear after the fall of the curtain. No doubt the opera will win upon public favour.

MUSIC.

CHORAL AND INSTRUMENTAL CONCERTS.—The first of the series of concerts under the above title, took place at St James's Theatre, on Wednesday evening, and, although the house was not crowded to excess it exhibited an unusual assemblage of those who are either musicians or musically inclined; and the consequence was that merit had its meed of approbation, and applause was bestowed without favouritism. It is evident we are returning to the Elizabethan age for music—the age of Purcell, Locke, Byrde, and a hundred other worthies, whose lately-forgotten works were as familiar to all, as to make Galileo (the father of the astronomer) pronounce the English to be the most musical nation in the world. We see series of concerts, on different scales, but all good, announced in town and country—Kennington subscription concerts—Peckham subscription concerts This looks well for the native art, and shows that we at length begin to see that (as Johnson says of the importation of words) it is not right to neutralize useless foreigners to the injury of ourselves. To this native art the performances last Wednesday were most highly creditable. The first part consisted of Rossini's Stabat Mater, a composition universally announced and received as the dying song of the swan of Pesaro, although it was written twenty years ago. It was (particularly on the part of the orchestra) beautifully performed throughout. The second part was a most delightful melange of ancient and modern music, and stirred up the applauding energies of the audience to a higher degree of enthusiasm than the first. This, again, was pleasant to perceive; for old Bennett's madrigal, "My mistress is as fine as fair," was unanimously encored. Phillips was never more happy than in our naturalized Handel's "Haste thee." Miss Birch rivalled in pliancy and purity of tone the Flauto that accompanied her; and Miss Dolby was most delightful in "Oh Araby." The septett by Lucas obtained most deserved applause. Altogether the whole performance was so thoroughly excellent as to leave a regret, at its conclusion, that it was over.

DRAMATIC AND MUSICAL CHIT-CHAT.

A RejOINDER.—The lessee of Drury-lane having printed in very large type the name of a youth as Mr. Webster, the Haymarket affiche retains, in equally distinguished letters, the name of Mr. Macready, a tailor, who performs in Alma Mater in the character of a Bull-dog

ITALIAN OPERA.—Mesdames Grisi and Viardot Garcia are engaged for next year. It is expected that the difference which existed last season between Mario and the lessee will be accommodated, so that we may look forward to the appearance of that distinguished tenor also.

Dohler, the celebrated pianist, with Signor and Madame Ronconi, has been giving concerts at Brussels with great success. The latter artistes, with Thalberg, arrived in town on Saturday last. On the following Monday they commenced a provincial tour (in conjunction with Mrs. A. Toulmin and Mr John Parry) by a concert in the Townhall at, Brighton, aided by the talent of a fair artiste resident there, Madame Bellville Oury. who, in a duet with Thalberg for two pianofortes, exhibited the very first-rate ability.

Rubini and Liszt have determined upon a professional tour together through Holland, Germany, and Russia. What an union of the first vocal and instrumental powers in the world!

Mr Mitchell is in Paris making engagements for his next season at St. James's Theatre, which he will open with a French company on the 15th of January next. Amongst those said to be already engaged are Mesdames Rachel and Albert and Frederick Lemaitre, Mesdemoiselles Plessy, and the fascinating Dejazet.

De Beriot, who, on the death of Baillot had accepted that veteran's situation in the Conservatory at Paris has for some reason or other resigned his appointment and returned to his native country, Belgium.

Signor Lanza's first introductory lecture (previously announced for last Monday) will take place next Monday at the Music Hall, Storestreet. It will consist, as the experienced maestro states, of an entirely new system of singing in classes, now so much in the rage.

We learn from Brighton that M. Jullien has been delighting the good folks there with his spirited promenade concerts in that fashionable place of resort. Of his own individual performances the Brighton Herald thus declares the curious versatility:—"On the violin, piccolo, clavicor, and bagpipe (minus the bag!) he was equally at home."

CHURCH, UNIVERSITIES, &c.

The new Bishop of Meath, Dr. Edward Stopford, is grandson to that Dr. James Stopford, of whom such honourable mention is made, as a man of worth, learning, and wit, in the letters which circulated amongst Pulteney, Swift, Gay the poet, and Lord Bolingbroke. On the downfal of the Walpole administration he was made Lord Bishop of Cloyne, about the year 1later Earl of Bath, having previously married his own first cousin, the Hon. Anne Stopford, daughter of Lord Courtown's sister This is the third bishopric conferred on this family during its last three generations, successively held by the Bishop of Cloyne as above, the Hon. Thomas Stopford, late Bishop of Cork, and the present Bishop of Meath. The bishop's father held the valuable living of Glanworth, in the county of Cork.

THE Bishop of The Falkland.—Letters have been received at Colchester from the Rev. Dr. Selwyn, the Bishop of New Zealand, announcing the fact that the bishop had arrived safe, and in good health, at the place of his destination, after an excellent voyage.

The following appointments have taken place.—The Rev. Richard Barber, M.A., of St. John's College, to the perpetual curacy of Heage, in the county of Derby. The Rev Joseph Wix, M.A., of St. Peter's College, to be domestic chaplain of Lord Braybrooke.

UNIVERSITY OF DURHAM. At a convocation holden at the commencement of the present term, the Rev Charles Thomas Whatley, M.A., and the Rev. Edward Masse, M.A., made the requisite declarations on being admitted to office of Proctors for the ensuing year.

The following gentlemen were presented and admitted ad eundem:—

Masters of Arts. Rev. John Samuel Green, Christ's College, Cambridge Rev. Robert Chevis, Trinity College, Dublin; Rev. William Samon Ward, Magdalen College, Cambridge

Bachelors of Arts.—William Henry Stokes, Wadham College, Oxford; Leopold Dyke Acland, Christ Church, Oxford; William Rogers, Balliol College, Oxford; James Thomas H. Evans, St. John Hall, Oxford.

The Warden and Senate have given notice that they will proceed to the election of two Fellows, on Tuesday, Nov. 8.

OXFORD, Oct. 29.—Yesterday the following gentlemen were elected Scholars of Corpus Christi College:—Mr. Hughes, of Trinity College; Mr. Prince, of Brasenose College.

The Lord Bishop of London has nominated the Rev. T. Henderson, of Christ Church, to an unendowed canonry in the Cathedral of St. Paul's.

The Lord Bishop of Gloucester and Bristol has presented the Rev. C. Holder, of Trinity College, to the perpetual curacy of Hanham, Gloucestershire.

The Venerable W. H. Hale, of Oriel College, Archdeacon of Middlesex and Canon of St. Paul's, has been presented to the archdeanery of London.

The Rev. J B. Morris, Fellow of Exeter College, has had awarded to him the prize of £200 for the best essay in refutation of Hinduism. This prize was offered by an unknown benefactor, through the Bishop of Calcutta.

The University seal has been affixed to a letter of thanks to Messrs. Rundell and Bridge, for their gift to the University Galleries of a bronze cast of the shield of Achilles, by Lamme.

CAMBRIDGE, Oct. 29.—The following gentlemen have been elected Fellows of Caius Society:—On the Ancient Foundation, Frederick William Hill Jerrard, M.A.; on the Francland Foundation, John Tonner Walker, M.A.; on the Wordsley Foundation, John Rustat Crowfoot, M.A., on the Wendy's Foundation, Alfred Tolver Paget, M.A

At a meeting of the Perse Trustees, the Master and four Seniors, Richard Baggallay was elected a Perse Fellow of the same society

St. Peter's College.—Frederick Fuller, B.A., has been elected a Foundation Fellow of this society.

Christ's College.—The following gentlemen have been elected Scholars of this society:—Edward Rogers Pitman, William Chandler Izard, John Thomas Lavard, Arthur Davenport, William Talbot, and Francis Lambert Bradshaw.

St. John's College.—The Rev. Charles Easther, B.A., has been appointed head master of the Grammar School of Kirby Ravensworth, Yorkshire

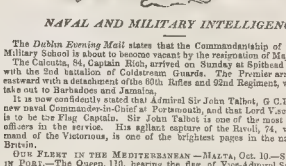
Trinity College.—A monument has been erected by public subscription to the memory of the late Rev. John Heyrick Macauley, head master of Ripon school, a gentleman of great classical learning, and possessing all the good qualities of a benevolent disposition The monument consists of a massive white marble slab, with base and mouldings of the same, containing an eloquent inscription from the pen of the Rev. Henry Thompson, of Wrington, formerly scholar of St. John's, in this University.

The Rev. Carton Howard has been presented to the rectory of Feary Bentley, by the Very Rev. the Dean of Lincoln.

PUBLIC MEETINGS.

BRITISH AMERICAN ASSOCIATION.—On Monday a meeting of the council of this association was held at their offices (and those of the London County Insurance Company), in Bridge-street, Blackfriars. The Marquis of Downshire was announced as the chairman. At 12 o'clock the noble marquis arrived, and, on his entering the room, a person, apparently an official, asked the names of those who attended for the daily press. On obtaining them, he stated that the meeting was not a public one. They observed, that he had only to intimate that it was a private meeting, and they would retire. He replied, "Oh, no, but we did not send for you." They repeated, "You have only to say that the meeting is private and we shall retire." The official: "I do not say so, but it is only matter of account, and not at all interesting." The reporters for the morning papers said, "then are we to go or stay?" A person, who, we were informed, was the secretary, advanced, and nervously exclaimed, "We have our own reporter, and cannot allow any other." The reporters then retired, and addressed a note to the noble chairman, request ing to know, if by the order of council they were refused admittance. In a few minutes a person of the name of Andrews (who, we understand, conducts the assurance part of the concern), sent for the reporters, and said, "The Marquis of Downshire having been informed that there were three reporters from the daily press in the room, be put it to the vote whether you should be admitted, and the meeting decided in the negative, but that slips should be sent to all the papers." The reporters observed, "Then you mean only to have an ex parte report?" Andrews replied "Oh, no, you shall have every word from our short-hand writer" They inquired how soon the slips would be delivered. Andrews replied, "As soon as possible in the course of the week." We can only say that the noble chairman was most grossly imposed upon by a premeditated falsehood. There was no reporter present who represented the daily press except those who were excluded. The British American Association and the London County Insurance Company appear to be a joint concern

WESLEYAN MISSIONARY SOCIETY.—On Monday evening a meeting was held at the Wesleyan Chapel, Jewin-street, Aldersgate-street, for the purpose of forming a branch association in connexion with the above society for the district. The meeting was well attended, and on the platform were the Rev. Thomas Dove, missionary from Sierra Leone, with a native African traveller; and the Rev. Peter Jacobs, accompanied by a Chippewa Indian missionary, attired in the costume of his tribe. B. Hall, Esq., having taken the chair, the secretary read a statement of the objects of the central society, and a report of its proceedings during the past year, from which it appeared that the Bible had already been rendered into twenty-two languages. The income of the society during the past year had amounted to £101,000. The resolutions by which the branch society was formed having been passed, and the meeting addressed by several gentlemen, the assemblage dispersed



NAVAL AND MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

The Dublin Evening Mail states that the Commandership of the Hibernian Military School is about to become vacant by the resignation of Major Rowan.

The Calcutta, 84, Captain Rich, arrived on Sunday at Spithead from Quebec, with the 2nd battalion of Coldstream Guards. The Premier arrived from the eastward with a detachment of the 60th Rifles and 92nd Regiment, which she will take out to Barbadoes and Jamaica.

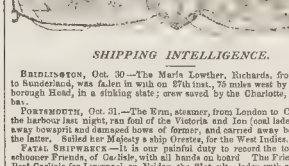
It is now confidently stated that Admiral Sir John Talbot, G.C.B., is to be the new Naval Commander-in-Chief at Portsmouth, and that Lord Yarmouth Ingestre is to be the Flag Captain. Sir John Talbot is one of the most distinguished officers in the service. His gallant capture of the Rawli, 74, when in command of the Victorious, is one of the brightest pages in the naval annals of British.

OUR FLEET IN THE MEDITERRANEAN.—MALTA, Oct. 10.—SHIPS OF WAR IN PORT.—The Queen, 110, bearing the flag of Vice-Admiral Sir E. W. C. R. Owen, Commander-in-Chief of the Mediterranean; Howe, 120, bearing the flag of Rear-Admiral Sir F. Maude, second in command; Ceylon, receiving ship, bearing the flag of Rear-Admiral Sir S. Louis, Superintendent of Malta Dockyard; Impregnable, 104; Rodney, 92; Monarch, 84; Vanguard, 50; Cambridge, 78, Indus 78; Belvidera, 38; Inconstant 36, Snake, 16; Cyclops, steam frigate, Hecate and Devastation, war steamers, Prometheus steamer, and Locust, steam tender. From the mornings which the ships have taken up, no further move must is looked for until the spring, excepting of steamers, one of which leaves on Wednesday for Tunis and Tripoli, another for Candia, another for Bengazy and another for Beyrout.

WOOLWICH, Tuesday.—The Prince Regent, transport ship, arrived yesterday morning opposite the Royal Arsenal, from Quebec, having on board Major Oliver and Captain Cornelius's companies of the Royal Artillery and the last company of Royal Sappers and Miners, consisting of about 80 non-commissioned officers and men, under the command of Lieutenant Roberts, Royal Engineers Major Oliver's and Captain Cornelius's companies went abroad in April, 1839, and consequently have been upwards of thirteen years on a foreign station. On the morning of the 22nd October, the Prince Regent, in beating to for Dover, during a heavy gale of wind, was driven on the Goodwin Sands, and, had it not been for the light which burst in with the rise of the morning, the vessel with its crowded company must most probably have perished. Two vacancies have occurred in the corps by the deaths of Captain Wood and Captain Gillespie. Captain Walsh is named for one of the vacancies. This will promote Lieutenant the Hon. R. C. Handcock, and consequently give an appointment in the battalion. Second Captain Dupuis, Royal Horse Artillery, has arrived here from Canada, via New York, and he will shortly proceed to Limerick to join his troop.

The 27th Regiment, which so distinguished itself under the command of the brave officer, Captain Smith, in the recent affair with the Boers at the Cape of Good Hope, has been ordered to embark for the East Indies.

RETURNS OF TROOPS FROM MANCHESTER.—On Wednesday evening a subdivision of the Royal Horse Artillery, with two guns and an ammunition waggon, arrived at Euston square terminus, and proceeded by way of the Gray's-inn road Holborn, Farringdon-street, over Blackfriars bridge, on their return to Woolwich. Another subdivision arrived on Friday from the same place, and for the same destination.



SHIPPING INTELLIGENCE.

BRIDLINGTON, Oct. 30.—The Maria Lowther, Richards, from Portsmouth to Sunderland, was taken in with on 27th inst., 75 miles west by north of Flamborough Head, in a sinking state; crew saved by the Charlotte, stood in the bay.

PORTSMOUTH, Oct. 31.—The Erin, steamer, from London to Cork, in leaving the harbour last night, ran foul of the Victoria and Inn (coal laden), and carried away bowsprit and damaged bows of former, and carried away bowsprit, &c., of the latter. Sailed for Malta 4 ship Greeks, for the West Indies.

FATAL SHIPWRECK.—It is our painful duty to record the total loss of the schooner Friends, of Carlisle, with all hands on board The Friends sailed from Ramsey, Isle of Man, for Liverpool on Friday, the 21st ult., laden with alabaster, with a crew of four hands There was a stiff breeze blowing at the time from N.N.E To wards midnight the wind veered round to the westward, blowing a complete hurricane, and in endeavouring to return up the Mersey Birch, the ill-fated vessel struck upon Robin Rigg, and in a short time became a total wreck. The master of the vessel, Captain Baxter, was highly esteemed among a wide circle of friends and acquaintances on both sides of the Border, and the sympathy expressed on the loss of so good a man is well worthy the occasion. A portion of the bulwarks and the foremast have been washed ashore at Allonby, but no trace of the hull of the vessel has as yet been observable

The Oriental steamer, bound to Malta and Egypt, and the Tay, West India steamer, both left Southampton on Tuesday for their respective destinations, each carrying out a full complement of passengers. The berths in the Tay have been full for some time past, and many persons who have been disappointed in procuring a passage in her, have already secured berths in the Clyde, the packet of the 19th instant.

ROBBERY AT BATTERSEA.—Last week a daring robbery was committed at the residence of Mr. Ashness, an independent gentleman living at Battersea-rise, which it is supposed was planned and executed by a dishonest servant. The robbery consisted of two tin boxes containing wills, deeds, money, and jewellery, the latter not to a very large amount, but the documents affect property worth many thousands. After the discovery, the box containing the latter was found in a ditch in the garden, and the other, minus the money and jewellery, was found on the top of the house. No footmarks were found on the soil outside the house. The whole of the servants were strictly examined, but nothing was elicited to fix the offence upon any one of them.

BRILLIANT ROBBERY.—On Wednesday a placard was issued intimating that there had been stolen, on Monday last, from the auction-rooms of Messrs Debenham and Storr, King-street Covent-Garden, the following diamond articles:—33 bri hants, weighing 6 1-16 carats, a suite of brilliants, and several other articles of jewellery. Fifty pounds reward is offered to any person giving such information as may lead to the recovery of the property, and a further reward of £25 on conviction of the parties committing the felony.

FIRE AT WANDSWORTH.—On Sunday night a fire broke out in the chemical works of Messrs. Beaufoy, of South Lambeth, which was not extinguished till half-past eleven. Messrs. Beaufoy are not insured. No account of the origin of the fire could be procured

GUY FAWKES' DAY.

Well, we have opened upon November, encountered the remarkable fifth, and are about to observe the guise in which the month has made its appearance before us. Maddle. Guy Stephan herself, in the palmiest moment of her operatic career, could hardly have danced more merrily into a subject. First, then, we may treat of the weather, which indeed is bright for the time of year. November used to be the "palpable obscure" of winter, in which, although "nothing might be stolen, every thing was mist;" but this time it has come without its curtain, and if a man sits opposite to his wife at dinner he has more than a faint chance of being able to see her. He might also distinguish his fingers if he held them close to his nose. We have as yet had no fog that we could cut with a carving-knife, and a spoon, unless a living one, would hardly stand up in the haze! Rain or shine, however, glow or look gloomy, the calendar keeps up its routine of events and associations, and from them we cannot get away.

Who, for instance, could escape from
TERM, the lawyer's grand relief?
Now he pulls his dingy tape from
Deed and paper, bag and brief.
Now he goes where old St. Stephen
Revels in the legal sport,
Chance's game of "odd or even;"
Played, like fives, in open court!

THE GUY LEGAL.

Lo! his wig, that tops a Tory;
Lo! his gown no Jew would buy;
Is not that a garb of glory?
Is not he a legal Guy?
Yes—the Duke of Guise could never
Show more learning in the laws;
If the chap should live for ever,
'Twill not be without a cause!

It is astonishing how the word Guy will creep into even the most ornamental episode of November versification. The fellow will be the hero of the month; nobody else can or may compete with him; not even Alderman Humphrey himself, who, on the 9th instant, will have the distinguished honour of finding a Mayor's nest. If you say to him, "Guy, don't intrude upon us just now," he answers you with a declaration that he is like Gui-do! If you say, "There, there, shut your mouth—there is dinner for you—take up your knife and be still; he replies, "Knife! nonsense! you mean Fawkes!" The boys' ditty still rings in your ear, and makes you sensible of the difference between Guys and *dis*guise, which is something like that between counter and *dis*counter.

Remember, remember,
The fifth of November—
The gunpowder treason and plot;
We know no reason
Why gunpowder treason
Should ever be forgot.

We love this song as the poet loved his cats and his horses—on account of their connection with the Mews. Guy, however, rules the roast, and, like photographic portraiture, we must reflect upon him. Apropos of photography, who was it—Lord Brougham, we believe—who, on obtaining a rough likeness, said he felt like a lion that had been Bearded in his den? But again of Guy, or rather of the fifth of November, which introduces that Protean gentleman in his different forms and changes—such, par exemple, as the "Guy Political," the "Guy Literary," the "Guy Theatrical," the "Guy Musical," the "Guy Artistical," and so on to the end of Guys and of Time.

THE GUY POLITICAL

is a mere creature of effigy; he is a Muntz or a Sibthorp; but there is nothing dangerous about him now, even although he may occasionally blow up a ministry or an opposition. The real original boy is gone, and Cruikshank has done him brown, or muzzy-tint, in Ainsworth. Besides, there is no danger for our modern Parliament. Let the exigencies of the country require it ever so desperately, they will not meet in November, they have an objection to the month on the score of history, and will not endanger their persons and reputation, lest some spark of patriotism should send them to heaven—vid bricks and mortar—by the explosion of their building in the air. The consequence is, that in No-vember there is No member. Every man is afraid of meeting his match.

Russell and Peel
Compunction feel,
Stanley and Graham
Have fears that stay'em.

While O'Connell, Sheil, and all the rest of the fraternity who have country seats, are at other game than legislation; although we do not deny that Dan's heart is rent at the distress of his country, which is not the only instance of distress for rent upon record.

Now for a tune. "Hollo, boys! Hollo, boys!" Here is your

GUY MUSICAL.

Yes! here is your musical Guy,
Crotchet in head and quaver in eye;
His money quite short, and his hair very long,
Much less accustomed to dinner than song.
He may have the clearest of musical throats,
But the bankers, shame on them, will not change his notes!

Your musical Guy is a man of renown;
The growth of his hair is known all over town;
It hangs very long, and it grows very thick;
His head is a fiddle, and he is a stick.
He grins like an ape as he plays for his guinea,
And is (when you've cut off the Pag, Sir) a ninny!

He carries about him what make people jeer,
A horn on his head and a drum in his ear!
You say, "O! boy, be still," if he plays on your path,
And then he pours on you his viols of wrath;
If he's married, his wife wears her flounces in flutes,
And he has all the organs of musical brutes.

He's fond of good Bishop whenever he drinks;
A Lee shore at sea's full of danger, he thinks;
And, if to the catching of fish he was set,
He'd go to it fairly, and therefore Bar-net—
Although in that calling he'd not be afraid,
But up to his shoulders in water would Wade!

If too much conceit in his head he e'er took,
We are not quite sure that he'd crow over Rooke.
Though soft in his manners, he's not like a calf;
And has too much good natur'
(Peut etre)
(Balfe).
Then as for his courage, if name it I must,
Why, I think that he'd give you a Parry for thrust!

Well, of course we could go on in this style for ever, and, if we did not get a good dressing, it would not be the fault of Cooke. But your Guy Musical must not displace your

GUY LITERARY.

He is a fellow that assumes ten thousand shapes. Now he is Lord Palmerston, dressed as Cupid, and floating in a butter-boat of oily diplomacy. Now he is Melbourne writing a Magdalenic ode, or a story of Story's Gate. Anon he is Sir Robert Peel, with income-tax inexpressibles, and tariff-cocked hat; or Mr. Chadwick, as a parish beadle, reporting for the Poor Law Commissioners; or Sir James Graham, as a weathercock on the chimney of an union workhouse—if indeed they ever have chimneys at all, and the sight of a place where warmth might be—so allowed to paupers. Or, perhaps, he is Sir Edward Bulwer, reading his lady's novels, and preferring his own; or D'Israeli the younger, ringed and bedizened as one of his father's curiosities of literature; or Boz, standing on an American jest-book, and apostrophising a spittoon. Or he comes as Rogers the poet, enjoying the pleasures of memory in a police-office; or as Wordsworth, gauging a tub of whisky, as he once was wont in the excise; or as Southey as Wat Tyler, with all the fire of revolution flashing upon his laureate brow. Or we have him as Moore, personifying the "Rose of Summer," blowing with all its might; or like the last boy in the banquet-hall, when the gas was out, and the spread cleared away, and nobody left but the poet and the empty bottles:—

The lights are fled,
The garlands dead,
And all but he departed.

Poor buffer! Or Mrs. Trollope might be a Guy as a factory-boy; or Mrs. Hall as Father Mathew; or Lady Morgan as Miss Martineau, and vice versâ. Let us leave the art and mystery of literary guyhood, however, to a certain comic contemporary, who will duly punch his characters into shape, and then make them speak from their show-box, interpreting dread oracles as thus—"What class of Spanish warriors is like lime juice?—A Cid!" We turn to who goes to the theatre in an omnibus, and frets his hour upon the stage. By the way, the omnibus-box at her Majesty's Theatre is as close to the stage as one vehicle of that sort can be to another; and upon this collisional influence we may retail the remark of a theatrical, who, though not a Guy, does cut some figure in the world. He had got out of a cab a few nights past, to go into a dresser's, to achieve one of the purposes of his craft, previous to his going to a dinner party at some distance, and finding that its somewhat desperate jarvey was driving to an unpleasant nicety by all the vehicles on the way—(Swift advertised for a coachman who could go nearest to a precipice without driving over, but took the man who declared he would never drive near one at all)—remarked to his companion that his cab had stood so long at the barber's shop that it thought itself entitled to shave everything it met. Revenons à nos moutons. The Guy Theatrical appears principally in pantomime and melodrama, although comedy sometimes affects him, and tragedy refuses to cast him off:—

THE GUY THEATRICAL.

A tragic Guy's an ass in fits,
Who tears a passion all to bits;
And, with his eye-whites quite turned under,
Rants pathos—like conceited thunder!

A very, very comic Guy
's a man who is so fine a calf
That he'll make any audience cry,
Just as the author bids them laugh;
Then, as again he twists his eye,
You laugh when he would have you cry.

A melo-drama Guy is one
Who takes a rushlight for the sun,
Blue fire for lightning; and the smell
Of brimstone for sulpuric hell!
Or, when trap doors
Are cut in floors,
And deep the cavern yawns below,
Points with a species of triumphant woe—
Which is no go—
And plunging down—in spite of Whig or Tory—
Believes he's Marcus Curtius gone to glory.

The pantomimic Guy is he
Who looks the hero of a spree:
Sits on a pumpkin; would rejoice
To use his belly for a voice;
And would be squeezed to death for fun;
To go and weep when all was done.'

Last of all we come to the

GUY ARTISTICAL,

whom we need not describe; as it is necessary that we should for the due promotion of embellishment, keep a flock of the genus upon our establishment; and, therefore, those who wish to see the creature accurately defined may come to the office of the

ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

A VALUABLE FOREIGN GRASS.—A grass has been discovered in the Falkland Islands well calculated to fatten stock which luxuriates on peaty land; and the possessors of such may raise food at a cheap rate for millions of cattle, by which they may still compete with the foreign breeders, and drive them from our markets. I, therefore, beg to submit the paragraph to their notice; it is copied from a letter which was sent to a gentleman in Guernsey, by a friend of his in connexion with Captain Ross's antarctic expedition:—"The splendid tussack grass is the gold and glory of these islands. It will, I hope, yet make the fortune of Orkney and Irish landowners of peat bogs. Every animal here feeds upon it with avidity, and fattens in a short time. It may be planted and cut like the guinea grass of the West Indies. The blades are about six feet long, and from 200 to 300 shoots spring from one plant. I have proved, by several experiments, that one man can cut 100 bundles in a day, and that a horse will greedily devour five of these in the same time. Indeed, so fond of it are both horses and cows, that they will eat the dry tussack thatch from the roofs of the houses in preference to good grass. About four inches of the root eats like mountain cabbage. It loves a rank wet peat bog, with the sea spray over it. Indeed, when the sea beats with greatest violence, and the spray is carried furthest, then the tussack grass thrives best on the soil it loves. All the smaller islands here, though some of them are as large as Guernsey, are covered with tussack, which is nutritious all the year."

SCENE FROM THE NEW COMEDY OF "THE TURF."

Here is a grouping from the new offspring of Mr. Mark Lemon's muse, which is in our theatrical department noticed with due respect. The scene is spirit-stirring enough, and of a consistency with the title of the comedy. It is, moreover, recognizable apart from its theatrical character, which is an evidence that it has been put upon the stage with due regard to fidelity and truth. "There is not in the wide world" such a display of human nature, in its various complexities, varieties, and oppositions, as in that scene, to which all fly for pleasure, and from which so few return without some pain—Epsom Downs. Look at our group above depicted. Could life itself excite more intense interest or anxiety? No! the prowess of a horse is all the world to a mam at the Derby, and is of such a taking character, that even dull and unhabituated citizens, whose "rus," like Culpepper's, has always been "in urbe," are caught by the epidemic furor, and think it is

"the noblest sight to see,
That strife 'twixt Arab' progeny."

To the scene, such as our artist has described it from the stage, we add a portrait of Bartley, who fills a prominent situation in the comedy. He is the suddenly-enriched tradesman devoting himself to the excitement of the turf; and the mere sketch will indicate the character of his new position. The few words we have to say of him here, however, will bear reference rather to his general acting than to his new role.

This most worthy gentleman and clever actor (though often out of his line, deplacé as the French have it) is one of those few props to the histrionic portion of the drama which leave it yet as a matter of consideration whether it be on the decline or not. In his time he has played many parts, and some with a tragic energy that has rarely been surpassed. But we must have "the mould of form," now-a-days, in the place of the mens divinior, for he who looks a part best is supposed to be the best representative of it. Bartley's obesity has for some years prevented his representation of many characters which his conception would have realized, and thus we have lost more at the shrine of false taste than we have gained at that of truth. Diminutive Garrick and immense Pritchard as the rival Romeo and Juliet to the handsomest pair in the world (Barry and his wife) made the author of "The Rosciad" exclaim:—

"Before such acting all distinctions fly, Pritchard a genteel, and Garrick's six foot high."

Mr. Bartley's performance in the character above represented is full of rich comic humour. Our sketch certainly makes him look rather younger than he really is, but we find no fault with our artist on that score, for we wish Mr. B. to be an *ever*green.

PORTRAIT OF BARTLEY.

POULTERERS AND FISHMONGERS' BENEVOLENT ASSOCIATION.—A benefit was taken at the Haymarket Theatre on Monday evening last, in aid of the funds of this most excellent institution, and we are happy to state that the charitable appeal was responded to in the most gratifying manner. Mr. Webster, the lessee, deserves the warmest thanks of the community at large for the readiness with which at all times he devotes his elegant establishment to the promotion of benevolent objects.

MISS MARTINEAU AND THE CHARTISTS.—On Tuesday evening last a meeting was held at the Rotunda, Blackfriars-road, for the purpose of testifying the public admiration for the magnanimity displayed by Miss Martineau in refusing the pension of £150 a year offered her by the late Whig Administration. Several female Chartists took prominent parts in the proceedings, which ended in the adoption of spirited resolutions expressive of the object for which the meeting was convened

THE COLOSSEUM PRINT.

We have now to call the attention of our readers and subscribers to the promised prospectus of our Colosseum Print—a superb and original work of art, produced upon the grandest scale—which we pledged ourselves to present to all the readers of the

ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS

who should have punctually subscribed to the paper during the first six months of its existence. The great success which we have achieved now enables us to go to an extent of enterprise that we are sure will more than crown the highest expectations of the public.

THE COLOSSEUM PRINT

derives its title, in the first instance, from an intention of presenting a magnificent engraving of

LONDON AT ONE VIEW;

to reflect, as it were, a similar grand picture to that so long exhibited at the Colosseum. The better taste, however, of our artists and advisers, reminded us that we should thus exclude that wondrous leviathan of our metropolitan architecture,

ST. PAUL'S CATHEDRAL;

and to this important recollection was added a suggestion that a much finer field of what may not inaptly be called "Panoramic glory" was presentable from another lofty eminence of London, which it, however, required official authority to enable us to reach.

TWO SPLENDID VIEWS OF THE METROPOLIS

have been the result of the altered proposition, taken north and south, from the summit of the

DUKE OF YORK'S COLUMN,

by the generous and nobly-granted permission of General Maitland, for himself and his co-trustees, who thus confided to us an exclusive right that stimulated our proprietors to a degree of exertion which they hope will prove worthy of the signal mark of favour they have received. Their

COLOSSEUM PRINT,

which will really be, in its superb dimensions, what the term "Colossal" is in reference to size, will then present two

ORIGINAL ASPECTS OF LONDON.

The upper or South view will comprise all that magnificent sweep of picturesque objects which stretch from the Surrey shores of the Thames, as far as they are visible on the right, to beyond the Tower of London, with its adjacent forests of shipping, on the left. The splendid range of manufactories which skirt the river, grow upward from their far distance to the gazer's eye, until they are closed with, and screened by, the venerable Abbey of Westminster, at once, with its solemn religious grandeur, absorbing mind and sight. But that fine pause of contemplation over, and away travels the eye, using as were a kind of memory to bring present the old familiar features of the "City of the World." Look at the beautiful range of bridges spanning that river, which, though its waters are but silver, has been designated, for their burthen, the "river of gold." Mark the long lines of streets, the grand public buildings, the spires of old and new churches pointing to the sky, the Monument, the ancient and fortlike Tower, and 'mid all, and above all, the eternal grandeur of St. Paul's! And these objects are so woven into the picture, that they re not parts of a confused mass, but prominent beauties of such a ear and well-defined architectural panorama as was never before mbodied in the forms of art.

THE LOWER OR NORTH VIEW

tarns the gazer upon a still more broad and open district of the metropolis. It stretches over the beautiful Parks; includes the Royal Palaces and mansions of our nobility; involves the finest streets in the world—Regent-street, Piccadilly, Portland-place, Whitehall, Trafalgar-square, and the superb gathering of aristocratic clubs; and, in a word, concentrates within its focus all the palatial magnificence of western London to contrast with the staid and solid greatness of its commercial aspect; endless wealth-accumulation on the one hand, and on the other an expenditure whose lavishness might startle kings.

Such are the two sections of the UNRIVALLED PICTURE which we are about to present in all good-will to our readers, and now the only other points connected with it which we wish to impress upon their attention are

ITS UNDOUBTED FIDELITY AND TRUTH.

It is, in plain terms, a Mirror of the Metropolis, and for its reflection we are indebted to the light of the sun.

M. Claudet was expressly commissioned by us to construct a Daguerreotype apparatus, whereby we have obtained a series of drawings that are as it were "impressions of the city itself," with all the niceties of perspective preserved, and an accuracy of detail never before equalled in panoramic art.

Such is the prospectus of

OUR COLOSSEUM PRINT,

which we shall have the honour and gratification of presenting to our

SIX MONTHS' SUBSCRIBERS.

And to extend still more liberally the means of its possession to the public, we are induced to advertise the following

NOTICE.

THE COLOSSEUM PRINT will be ready on New Year's Eve, when all persons will be entitled to receive it who have subscribed for six months from the commencement of the paper, or for six months previous to the publication of the Print, or who pay a six months' subscription in advance from the time of the issue of the plate. This is the definite and distinct answer to all correspondents who have addressed us on the subject, and is a general guide to the public at large. The Engraving is upon so grand and magnificent a scale, that it cannot be finished, and a sufficient number printed, before the time appointed for publication. Our subscribers have already so increased, that the time requisite for printing becomes most important, and any delay that has arisen is attributable only to the necessity for such careful and deliberate arrangement as will make disappointment next to impossible.

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK.

SUNDAY, Nov. 6.—24th Sunday after Trinity.
MONDAY, 7.—Marquis Hastings died.
TUESDAY, 8.—Mons taken by Dumouriez, 1792.
WEDNESDAY, 9.—Prince of Wales born, 1841.
THURSDAY, 10.—Luther born, 1483.
FRIDAY, 11.—St. Martin.
SATURDAY, 12.—Cambridge term divides at midnight.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

"Anthony."—The suggestion is adapted to a journal purely literary.
"S. S. S."—Our fair correspondent makes too large a claim upon our space.
"B. V. P."—You are entitled
"V. G.," Bristol, will have the print.
"J. W.," Cambridge.—Thanks. We will send.
"J. S."—Any communications that are accepted will appear in due course. Those which are rejected, except in cases of importance, we cannot undertake to return.
"A Constant Reader."—The letter has been referred to our printer.
"I. O. T."—The furniture can only be claimed by the landlord or King's tax-gatherer.
"I. L. H."—Will.
"M. R. G."—Yes: as he is a six months' subscriber.
"John Parry."—You will have it.
"W.," Wolverhampton.—You are entitled.
The suggestions of "Clericus" are not without their weight.
"X. Y. Z."—A newspaper is not the medium through which to woo a wife. We decline the advertisements, and we reject daily many others of a still less objectionable character. We will not receive in any form one line that can offend the most delicate sense of propriety.
"Henry." Norwich, shall have the print and we hope may fulfil his intention of becoming a life-subscriber. In that case, may he never die.
"A Weeny Clothhopper" should call upon a West-end tailor.
"A Constant Reader."—Certainly not.
Postage stamps are not currency, and are anything but sterling. If the stamp-office would cash them, it would be another thing.
"X. Y. Z.," Llangefni.—Yes; if the order be forwarded to our publisher forthwith.
"W. B. P."—Agents should charge twopence for the wrapper.
"P. P. P." shall have his communication examined with a view to its adoptation (if accepted) to our next week's number, which will be largely embellished with illustrations of Lord Mayor's Day.
"Peter Pipkin."—The offer is declined, with thanks
The drawings of Dunnow and descriptive matter are received, and will appear in an early number.

 In our next Number we shall present a superb series of illustrations of the ancient civic festival of Lord Mayor's Day, which will entirely occupy the two opening pages of our journal.

Part 2 and No. 9 will be reprinted and ready on Tuesday next.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

LONDON, SATURDAY NOVEMBER 5, 1842.

We know how exceedingly difficult, if not altogether impossible, it is to attain perfection in any particular trade, profession, or calling, in private life, much less in administering the affairs of the public institutions of the State, especially those which affect our political economy, and necessarily involve the comfort, interests, and convenience of the community at large. Still, however, there is a certain degree of excellence expected from those who look for and claim the public support, and when the public comes forward in a spirit of princely liberality and erects splendid and noble edifices for the accommodation of a countless staff of servants and officials, whose allowance of a countless staff of the State enables them to maintain a style of affluence hardly surpassed by the nobility of the realm, the least that might be expected in return would be common courtesy, and common attention to the public business which they had undertaken to perform, and, last of all, though not least of all, common honesty. To a foreigner, however, who is in the habit of perusing the London daily papers, it must necessarily appear as if every branch of the public service was conducted by the most heartless and unscrupulous thieves; for hardly a day passes without presenting some such startling announcement as "Post-Office Robbery," "Custom-House Fraud," "Fraud on the Exchequer," or "Public Defalcation;" and not to foreigners alone is this apparent, for there is hardly a village or hamlet in the kingdom wherein some old and decrepit denizen has not had reason bitterly to deplore the blind and mistaken confidence with which his or her son or daughter has entrusted to the Post-Office the transmission of the hard-earned pittance intended to relieve the wants and assuage the sufferings of utterly destitute—yes, as has been proved in many instances—absolutely starving parents. The fellow who goes boldly on the highway with a pistol in his hand, and sternly demands the money or trinkets of the passers-by, is actually a hero and a gentleman compared with the sneaking scoundrel who spends his days in pilfering in a public office, and his nights in debauchery at a west-end saloon, and we can hardly feel surprised at a "Jack Sheppard" finding admirers amongst the rising generation of the lower orders, so long as they have a pilfering Post-Office official to contrast him with. Verily, we believe if there be a crime that calls more loudly to Heaven for vengeance than another, it is this which so cruelly stops the current of affection, and estranges members of the same family and friends and benefactors perhaps for ever. It is not enough to tell us, in answer to this complaint, that the authorities have done their utmost to check this crying evil, and that the vengeance of the law has invariably pursued to destruction the guilty parties, when detected—there must be something radically wrong in the entire system—it wants purgation, and first of all, inquiry; for surely the subject is as well entitled to the attention of the Legislature as that other infamous, but still less guilty, swindle, which is to be brought before Parliament at an early stage of the session—the Custom-house fraud. We call upon our brethren of the press to lend their co-operation in laying bare to the bone this festering sore in the body politic; and we do so as well for the duty which they owe themselves in protecting their property, as the duty which they owe the public. Nothing appears to be too hot or too heavy for the rapacity of the Post-office—from the cheapest stamped publication to the largest possible remittance; and, for ourselves, we feel bound to state that we speak of this establishment not upon hearsay evidence merely, for at the moment we write our table is literally heaped with letters from all parts of the country, including Ireland, complaining in the most bitter terms of the non-receipt of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS. We are very far indeed from wishing to impugn the conduct of the Postmaster-General, or of his secretary, Col. Maberly, for we are aware that, as far as the fulmination of warnings, notices, and manifestoes go, DEN could do more to put the public on their guard against the dangers which beset their property when entrusted to the Post-office; but this very fact only proves how indisputable is the condition of this Augean stable which we are so anxious to see cleansed. We cannot better, perhaps, enforce the necessity of reform in this department than by making room for the following ingenious device, adopted by a person in a country town, which, although somewhat ludicrous, is forcibly descriptive of the appreciation in which the Post-office is held throughout the country. The paragraph is taken from a respectable provincial journal:—"A person who was in the habit of sending small amounts in letters to a poor correspondent through the post, had one stolen, and being unwilling to give his correspondent, who was bed-ridden, the trouble to attend to Post-office orders, he bought a number of buttons, such as are bought by tailors to be covered with cloth. These buttons were the precise size of a half-sovereign. When he wished to send a remittance he placed a half-sovereign on a button, and covered it with a thin piece of cloth in the manner a tailor would do it, which scarcely occupied the labour of a minute. The button was then fastened in a letter, and the eye of the former was made to protrude through the latter, so as to make it appear as if a pattern-button was merely sent through the post. This ingenious device evidently deceived the Post-office gentry, and secured several half-sovereigns from the appropriating claws of postmasters and their assistants. Every button came safe to hand."

In our paper of last week there appeared a report of some extraordinary proceedings which took place at the Mansion-house before the Lord Mayor, with regard to the operations of a certain public body styling itself "The British Emigration and Colonisation Association," which appeared to be conducted with so suspicious a degree of mystery that it at length attracted the attention of "the curious in these matters." The gullibility of John Bull has often been the theme of well-meant and good-natured satire, but in the instance under consideration it would appear that the tempting bait was thrown out for the purpose of luring a class of persons hitherto considered unseduceable by the crafty "ring-droppers" and "bubble-blowers" of the metropolis; we mean the cautious, calculating, and double-sighted North Britons. The scheme was adopted for the purpose of encouraging the emigration of the surplus population of the Western Highlands of Scotland to the other end of the world—Prince Edward's Island—where, as it would appear by the prospectus, which contained the names of some of the first noblemen of Scotland as presidents and vice-presidents, every species of comfort and entertainment that could warm the imagination of the naked and the hungry, and "tempt their feet to roam," was liberally provided for them by these disinterested benefactors. It turned out, however (owing, as it appears, to the want of funds), that the poor emigrants, on their arrival in London for the purpose of proceeding by the ship Barbadoes to their place of destination, found that the vessel was laid under a sort of embargo at the instance of a number of tradesmen who complained of not having been paid for the stores supplied for the voyage. This, however, was rather a lucky circumstance than otherwise for the poor people, as it appeared that the present was not a proper time of the year to send ships to Prince Edward's Island with any reasonable hope of their reaching their destination, or of the crews they carry out being able to tolerate all at once the intense cold of the climate, which would be at its highest point about the time that the vessels starting now would, if ever they did, arrive at the colony.

The Lord Mayor, finding the condition of affairs, immediately wrote to the Duke of Argyll, whose name appeared as President of the Association in the prospectus, acquainting him of the circumstances of the case, and received the following by return of post:—

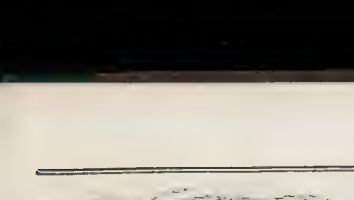
"TO THE LORD MAYOR.

"My Lord,—I am very much obliged to your lordship for your communication of the 25th instant. I certainly took a deep interest in the British American Emigration Society, having upon my estates in the Western Highlands and Islands too large a population for the space inhabited by them, and wishing, of course, that many of them should have the opportunity, if they wished it, of emigrating to North America, in such a manner as would be most advantageous for themselves, and I consented to be named president of the society; but, from several of their proceedings lately, I am now desirous of withdrawing my name from the roll of subscribers or shareholders, as they are called; and I have desired my agent, Mr. Nettleship, of 4, Trafalgar-square, to inquire into the late proceedings before your lordship, and to acquaint you with the result. I do not consider myself responsible for any of the pecuniary transactions of the parties in London who assume the management of the company's affairs at present. I subscribed in June last £500, upon the implied and understood condition that no steps involving any expenditure of money was to be undertaken on the part of the company till the sum of £50,000 was duly certified to have been subscribed or placed to the company's credit by some means or other; and I was quite surprised to observe the question brought before your lordship lately, as to wages, &c., to be paid to some operatives and emigrants upon the company's account. Referring your lordship to my agent, Mr. Thomas Nettleship, 4, Trafalgar-square, for any further information relative to my connexion with the company, I remain your lordship's obedient servant,

ARGYLL.

"Inverary Castle, October 27."

The Lord Mayor communicated this letter to the parties interested, at the Mansion-house, on Wednesday last, and complained that he had been violently attacked in a paper evidently connected with the association, for the part he had taken in the matter, although his interference was the most natural and reasonable that could have occurred. A number of poor men had called upon him, as chief magistrate, and complained of ill-treatment, and he certainly considered himself bound not to shut his ears against their complaints, as they were running a very awful hazard by emigrating, under all the circumstances which had come to his knowledge. The parties then retired. For our own parts we are disposed to give his lordship the highest praise for his prompt interference in the matter.



THE COURT AND HAUT TON.

WINDSOR, Sunday.—The Queen and Prince Albert, with the royal suite and part of the household, attended divine service in the private chapel within the Castle. The hon. and Rev. E. S. Keppel officiated. Her Majesty and Prince Albert walked for some time in the Home Park, and in the aftern oon, attended by the royal suite, walked in the new grounds of the Home Park. The Duchess of Kent attended divine service at the parish church.

MONDAY.—Her Majesty and his Royal Highness Prince Albert took their early walk in the royal pleasure grounds. The Prince of Wales and the Princess Royal were driven out to the new inclosure in a small carriage. His Royal Highness Prince Albert, attended by General Bowater and Colonel Arbuthnot, drove to Cumberland Lodge, and had some excellent shooting in the covers near Bishopsgate. In the afternoon the Queen rode out in the Park in a pony phaeton driven by his Royal Highness Prince Albert. Earl Spencer and Sir Henry Wheatley arrived at the Castle in the afternoon on a visit to her Majesty

TUESDAY.—Her Majesty and his Royal Highness Prince Albert took walking exercise both in the morning and afternoon. The Prince of Wales and the Princess Royal were taken their accustomed airings. Lord Charles Wellesley has succeeded Colonel Arbuthnot as the Equerry in Waiting to her Majesty; Colonel Wylde has also succeeded Sir E. Bowater as the Equerry in Waiting to his Royal Highness Prince Albert. The following were included in the royal dinner party:—Viscount Hawarden, Countess of Dunmore, Earl Spencer, Lord Charles Wellesley, the Hon. Miss Devereux, Lady C. Cooke, Lady Lyttelton, the Hon. Mrs. Anson, Major-General and Lady F. Wemyss, Sir R. Otway, Colonel Wylde, the Hon. C. A. Murray, the Hon. and Very Rev. the Dean of Windsor, and Dr. Pretorius.

WEDNESDAY.—Her Majesty and his Royal Highness Prince Albert took walking exercise in the morning and afternoon. Their Royal Highnesses the Prince of Wales and the Princess Royal have been taken their usual airings This afternoon, at three o'clock, her Majesty held a Privy Council. It was attended by his Grace the Duke of Wellington, the Right Hon. Sir R. Peel, the Lord Steward, the Master of the Horse, the Lord Chancellor, the Earl of Aberdeen, the Duke of Buccleuch, Sir James Graham, Lord Stanley Sir E. Knatchbull, and Mr. Goulburn, as Chancellor of the Exchequer. Parliament was ordered to be further prorogued from Thursday, the 10th instant, until the 13th of December Her Majesty's consent was given to the marriage of Her Royal Highness the Princess Augusta of Cambridge with his Royal Highness the Hereditary Grand Duke of Mecklenburgh Strelitz. An order was issued respecting the Bankruptcy Courts. Mr. Greville attended as the clerk of the Council. Her Majesty was attended by Lord Haward en, the Countess of Dunmore, Sir R. Otway, Lord C Wellesley, and Colonel Wylde. The whole of the Ministers took their departure immediately after the conclusion of the Council. The Earl and Countess Bruce arrived at the Castle on a visit to her Majesty. The royal dinner party included her Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent Lord Hawarden, the Countess of Dunmore, Earl Spencer, Earl and Countess Bruce, Lady Lyttelton, Lady C. Cooke, Hon. Miss Devereux, Hon. Mrs. Anson, Lord C Wellesley, Lady C Dundas, Sir R. Otway, Sir G. Couper, Colonel Wylde, the Hon. C. A. Murray, and Dr. Pretorius.

On the 10th instant, the Court will leave Windsor for Walmer Castle, the seat of his Grace the Duke of Wellington. After remaining there several days, her Majesty and his Royal Highness Prince Albert will proceed to Brighton. The Queen will give time the Court will remain at Brighton is not yet decided upon; but it is expected that the royal visit wi l not exceed three weeks The Prince of Wales and the Princess Royal will accompany her Majesty and the Prince to Brighton.

Lord Brougham left Brougham Hall last week for London after a visit of about twelve weeks, the longest stay he has made there during the last twenty years.

Viscount and Viscountess Palmerston arrived on Carlton House-terrace early in the week from Brocket Hall, the seat of Viscount Melbourne, who, we are happy to hear, has quite recovered. It is highly creditable to her Majesty's feelings that she has been unremitting in her inquiries after the noble viscount's health during his illness.

Lord Cardigan has arrived in Chapel-street, overland from Marseilles, where the noble lord landed from his extended tour in Egypt and the Turkish dominions. His lordship, we understand, has brought with him from the East an Egyptian youth, as an attendant, one of the subjects of the Pacha of Egypt.

His Excellency Baron Brunow is recovered from his recent illness. His excellency took a carriage airing for the first time on Wednesday se'nnight, and has since gradually improved in health.

The Prince George of Cambridge, we hear, intends to hunt at Melton Mowbray this season.

Mr Bellamy arrived on Monday with despatches at Chandos House, bringing favourable intelligence of Prince Albert. His Serene Highness's convalescence had retained the fatigues of the journey, and he was left by his medical attendant much improved in hea th at Frankfort

A Cabinet Council was held at three o'clock on Tuesday afternoon at the Foreign Office. It was attended by Sir Robert Peel, the Duke of Wellington, the Lord Chancellor, Lord Wharncliffe, the Earl of Aberdeen, Lord Stanley, Sir James Graham, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, the Earl of Haddington, Lord Fitzgerald, the Earl of Ripon, Sir Henry Hardinge, and Sir Edward Knatchbull. The Council sat two hours and a half.

Baron Aymé, French Secretary of Legation, with despatches from his Government, arrived in town on Tuesday on his way to Hamburg

In reference to a scandalous report affecting the tranquility of more than one noble house, which was prevalent in the higher circles during the past week, the Morning Post of Wednesday has the following:—"Certain mysterious paragraphs have been circulated for some days in the public journals, which, as long as they were confined to the obscure portion of the press, we deemed unworthy of notice; but as they have been copied into a respectable evening contemporary, and have also found their way into some of the Sunday prints from which more caution and reticency might have been expected, we consider it our duty, involving, as they do, the character and happiness of a noble family, to give them the most unqualified contradiction, and we regret that any of our more respectable brethren should have lent themselves to the circulation of so foul a calumny."

His Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge arrived in town on Wednesday from Newmarket. His Royal Highness visited the Duchess of Gloucester, at Gloucester House, and in the afternoon went to Kew.

THE RUSSIAN EMBASSY.—Intelligence was received at Ashburnham House on Wednesday, of the death of Prince Gallitzin, who died at Paris on Thursday last. The Prince was well known in the highest circles of Paris and this country

The Right Hon. Lord Plunket (late Lord Chancellor of Ireland), with his family and numerous suite, arrived at the Brunswick Hotel, Jermyn-street, on Saturday last from the continent, en route for Dublin.

METROPOLITAN NEWS.

THE LORD CHANCELLOR.—His lordship sat in the Court of Chancery on Thursday morning for the first time since the long vacation, and we are happy to announce that the noble and learned lord has nearly regained his usually good state of health. It is now stated that there is no foundation whatever for the reports which have appeared in the newspapers relating to his lordship's intention of resigning the Great Seal.

THE LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEJEUNER.—Wednesday being the first day of Michaelmas term, the Lord Chancellor gave his customary breakfast to the Judges and leading members of the bar, at his lordship's private residence, in Great George-street, Hanover-square. Previous to the entertainment of the Judges, the noble and learned lord received the Lord Mayor elect, who was introduced to his lordship by the Right Hon. Charles E. Law, Recorder of the city of London, when the Lord Chancellor expressed her Majesty's approbation of the choice made by the citizens of London for their chief magistrate for the ensuing mayoralty. The Common Sergeant and many of the civic authorities accompanied the city deputation. The Lord Chancellor did not accompany the Judges in procession, to open the courts of law at Westminster, the noble and learned lord leaving town immediately after the breakfast, for Windsor Castle, to attend the Privy Council.

GRESHAM COLLEGE.—On Wednesday the courses of lectures commenced by an introductory discourse at the City of London School, Cheapside, by the Rev. Mr. Pullen, on astronomy. There was a much more numerous audience than usual.

ST. SAVIOUR'S, SOUTHWARK.—Wednesday being the anniversary of the birthday of Mrs. Newcomen, the founder of the charity bearing her name, the bells of St. Saviour's Church rang a very merry peal during the day, and in the morning a sermon was preached before the wardens and a number of the inhabitants, by the Rev. Mr. Benson, on which occasion the children of the Newcomen charity attended as well as those of the parochial and national schools. The charity was founded by Mrs. Newcomen for clothing and educating of 50 boys and 50 girls, and also for the clothing of 20 aged women of the parish of St. Saviour. After the service the wardens dined together at the Bridge-house Hotel.

ENLARGEMENT OF SMITHFIELD MARKET.—We observe with regret that the London Corporation, instead of taking measures for the removal of this giant nuisance, have it in contemplation to enlarge its sphere of action, to the infinite misery and annoyance of such of the inhabitants as take no delight in filthy confusion and fatal accidents. Has this subject been referred, we wonder, to the Metropolitan Improvements Committee?

It is confidently asserted that Mr. David Pollock, the Queen's counsel, and brother of the Attorney General, will be appointed a commissioner of the Insolvent Debtors' Court, in the room of the late Mr. Commissioner Bowen. The salary is £1500 a year. Mr. Pollock formerly possessed a considerable practice in the Insolvent Debtors' Court.

The installation or reading-in of the newly-elected Dean of Westminster (Dr Turton), will take place on Tuesday next, in Westminster Abbey, with the usual ceremony. The public, we believe, will be admitted by tickets. (We shall give an engraving of this interesting ceremony in our next.)

NEW BATCH OF SERGEANTS.—It was rumoured in Westminster Hall on Thursday morning, that in consequence of the appointment of several learned sergeants as commissioners under the New Bankrupt Bill, Mr. Sergeant Merewether having been appointed Town Clerk of the City of London, and the death of Mr Sergeant Spankie, that shortly a number of learned counsel will be elevated to the d gnity of Sergeants at Law.

We understand that the statement which has gone the round of the papers as to a pension having been conferred upon the poet Wordsworth, is not strictly accurate. The yearly sum which Mr. Wordsworth will receive is rather an allowance, given to him upon resigning the office of distributor of stamps.

LONDON MARITIME INSTITUTION.—The fifty-first annual dinner of this excellent institution took place last night, at the City of London Tavern, when an admirable dinner was served to a large body of the friends and supporters of the charity. The chair was taken by Sir G Cockburn, who was supported by many gentlemen connected with the naval and mercantile service of the country. The usual loyal and patriotic toasts were proposed, together with many of a complimentary nature, and the hilarity of the evening was maintained until a late hour. The subscriptions of the evening amounted to about £400, among which was an annual subscription from the Trinity Board of £105.

ROYAL COLLEGE OF SURGEONS.—In consequence of the new regulations of the College of Surgeons in London, preventing medical men in practice, not at present members of the college, from passing an examination and obtaining its diploma, on account of the protracted studies that would be required, some arrangements are about to be made by the council, to enable those gentlemen to qualify themselves under the regulations in force at the time they commenced their studies. They will thus avoid two years' additional pupilage. The new plan will not be in force for a longer period than the 1st of January next. The recent regulations of the Poor-Law Commissioners render it imperative on union surgeons to possess the college diploma.

EXPORTATION OF THE PRECIOUS METALS TO INDIA AND THE CONTINENT.—The exportation of gold and silver to India, China, Hamburg and France, during the last three months, has been greater than at any former period. During August and September the amount exceeded one million and a quarter sterling, principally for the payment of the troops engaged in the war now carrying on in Affghanistan under General Pollock, and in China, under Sir H. Pottinger. To meet this great demand of specie, the employés at the Royal Mint are daily at work in striking the new coinage, which, on an average, is upwards of £300 000 per week. There are six steam presses in constant motion, so as to supply the Bank of England with the specie in exchange for silver bars and gold ingots which they send to be struck into the currency of the realm.

DEATH OF THE CHIEF RABBI OF THE JEWS.—On Monday, about twelve o'clock, Solomon Herschell, Chief Rabbi of the Polish and German Jews in England, expired at his residence in Burytreet, St. Mary Axe, after a long and severe illness. He had not been able to attend the synago ue since he met with an accident about two years ago, on which occasion his thigh was dislocated. The accident was caused by the conductor of an omnibus telling the driver to "go on," while the deceased was still on the steps of the vehicle. He was eighty-two years of age, and has officiated as Chief Rabbi upwards of forty two years, and was universally respected. The funeral took place on Wednesday last, when the procession of the deceased Rabbi were deposited in the Jews' burial ground, North-street, Mile-end-road The private carriages of the Lord Mayor, Baron Rothschild, and Sir Moses Montefiore, attended the mournful cavalcade.

DEATH OF MR. SERGEANT SPANKIE.—We regret to announce the death of Mr. Sergeant Spankie, who expired at an early hour on Wednesday morning, at his town residence, in Russell-square.

SHOCKING ACCIDENT.—Screen Highness eventually deplorable accident was communicated to Mr. James Goodwin, superintendent of the London Docks, in the Commercial-road, when he was literally impaled on the shaft of a cart which had been run away with by a restive horse. On examination it was found that he had his collar-bone and four or five ribs on his left side broken, and the lung punctured by the shaft.

ALARMING ACCIDENT TO LADY STOPFORD.—On Monday afternoon, an alarming accident occured to Lady Stopford, wife of Admiral Sir Robert Stopford, K.C.B., &c., and to the Hon. Miss Stopford, whilst taking an airing in an open carriage, over Blackheath, when the horses shied, and sprang over a large mound by the side of the road. The ladies were thrown out with much violence, but without sustaining any very serious injury.

FATAL ACCIDENT.—Tuesday night, a few minutes before twelve, John Dunkley, took on board the steam-packet City of Limerick, lying off the Alderman's-stairs, Lower East Smithfield, while proceeding on board the steamer, and having just effected a landing on the accommodation ladder, fell into the river, and was carried away by the strong flood tide at the time, and was drowned. He was partially intoxicated. The body has not been found.

OMNIBUS ACCIDENT.—As a respectable-looking man was crossing Threadneedle-street, on Wednesday morning, there was stolen from the Fleet-street towards Soor-lane, at ten o'clock in the night, he was knocked down by an omnibus, which caught his arm under one of its wheels. At the moment, Mr. Davidson, of the Middle Temple, ran to his assistance, and rescuring him from his perilous situation, had him removed to the surgeon's at the corner of Shoe-lane, where every possible attention was paid to the sufferer.

DEATH OF ALLAN CUNN-NGHAM.—It is with regret we have to announce the death of Allan Cunningham, a name so long connected with the studio of Chantrey and the literature of his country. The sad event took place on the night of the 29th, from paralysis and apoplexy. He had long been declining, but not to an extent to create any great alarm among those both near and dear to him. His last work, the life of Sir David Wilkie (now to become a posthumous publication), he had completed, we are glad to learn, but two days before his death. He died unconscious and free from pain. Mr. Cunningham was, we believe, in the fifty-sixty year of his age.

EXTRAORDINARY ROBBERY AT THE TREASURY, WHITEHALL.—Information was on Wednesday received at the different metropolitan police-stations, that, between six o'clock the previous evening and eleven o'clock that morning, there was stolen from the Treasury, Whitehall, the property of the Lords of the Treasury, a feather bed, marked "V.R.," also two pillows, a bolster, four blankets, a pair of sheets, a printed counterpane (all similarly marked), a hearthrug, and some pieces of carpet. It is not known how the robbery was effected. [It is shrewdly suspected that the above robbery was committed by certain leading members of the Reform Club, who intend substituting a bed of "down" against the next session of Parliament for the comfort and convenience of the Prime Minister.]

ROBBERY IN AN OMNIBUS.—On Tuesday afternoon, between four and five o'clock, an extensive robbery was effected in one of Pickford's omnibuses, on the road from the Bank of England to Paddington, on the person of Mr. Robert Lusterman, a stock-broker, residing in Star-street, Edgware-road. Some dexterous thief eased him of his pocket-book, containing one £100 Bank notes, Nos. 3842 and 3843, of the same date, and a £50 Bank note, No. 1646, which he had received for stock for a person, which he intended to pay over the same evening.

ATTEMPTED SUICIDE.—A young woman named Elizabeth Clerk, servant to Mrs. Bubbit, of No. 50, Jermyn-street, St. James's, was caught in committing suicide in the water in Hyde Park on Sunday evening last. Her reason for making this foolish and desperate attempt was that the master chimney-sweeper to the King of Hanover, to whom she was betrothed, had proved faithless to her, and had sailed for that country a few days ago, after marrying another woman.

The Cassel Gazette of the 23rd ult., announces that the King of Hanover proposes to make a journey to Eng and about the 15th of the ensuing month, TROUBLES OF AN EDITOR.—An editor cannot step without treading on somebody's toes. If he expresses his opinion fearlessly and frankly, he is presumptuous. If he state fact without comment, he dares not avow his sentiments. If he conscientiously refuse to advocate the claims of an individual to office, he is accused of personal hostility. A jackanapes who measures off words into verse as a clerk does tape by the yard, hands him in a parcel of stuff that jingles like a parcel of rusty nails and a gimblet; and if the editor be not fool enough to print the nonsense—"stop my paper; I won't patronise a man that's no better judge of poetry." One grumbles because the advertisements engross too much room; another complains that the paper is too large, he can't find time to read it all. One wants the types so small, that a microscope would be indispensable in every family. Another threatens to discontinue the paper unless the letters are half an inch long. One old lady actually offered to give an additional price for a paper that should be printed with such types as are used for handbills. In fact every subscriber has a plan of his own for conducting a journal; and the labour of Sysyphus was recreation when compared with that of an editor who undertakes to please all.—American Paper.

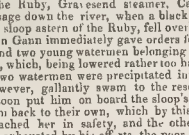
THE WEATHER.—The metropolis on Tuesday evening last was enveloped in a dense fog, which rendered travelling somewhat difficult, if not dangerous; and a number of vessels in the docks and at the wharfs, ready for sea, were prevented taking their departure for their respective destinations. The river and other steamers proceeded at less than quarter speed.

A few days since the Ruby, Gravesend steamer, Captain Gann, was on her passage down the river, when a black man, a sailor belonging to a sloop astern of the Ruby, fell overboard off Woolwich. Captain Gann immediately gave orders for his vessel to be stop ed, and two young watermen belonging to his crew got into the boat, which, being lowered rather too hastily, heeled over, and the two watermen were precipitated into the river. They both, however, gallantly swam to the rescue of the black sailor, and soon put him on board the sloop's boat, and proceeded to swim back to their own, which by this time had righted. One reached her in safety, and the other had nearly done so, when, exhausted by his efforts, the poor fellow sunk, and never rose again, to the unspeakable regret of the crew and passenge s on board the Ruby. The deceased was a single man, the chief support of an aged mother.



Friday Evening.

WINDSOR, Thursday.—The Queen and Prince Albert enjoyed their accustomed walk in the Home Park. Afterwards his Royal Highness, attended by General Wemyss and Colonel Wylde, hunted with the Prince's harriers in the Great Park. The party had an excellent run, and killed at Frogmore. Earl Spencer took his departure from the Castle. Lord and Lady Stanley are expected this day (Saturday) on a visit. The Rev. Lord W. Russell had the honour of joining the royal dinner circle.

The Queen, General and Mr. Bond, the newly-appointed magistrate of Queen-square police office (in the room of the late Mr. Gregorie), transacted business at the Home-office this morning.

On inquiry at the Royal Mail Steam Packet Company's office this morning, we found that not the slightest credit is attached to the rumour brought by the British Queen that the Solway steamship had been lost on one of the Keys, in the Gulf of Mexico, as the report is believed to refer either to the loss of the Medina, part of whose ship's crew, it appears, are coming home in the Medway; or, what is more likely, it may apply to the recent loss of the Spitfire, Admiralty steamer, which was wrecked on one of the Keys, off the coast of Honduras.

"The Chapel Royal affair" of August last, when an invalided young clergyman was mobbed through the streets of Brighton, is immediately to come on in the Court of Common Pleas.

Thursday se'nnight was this morning fixed by the Lord Chancellor for hearing the case of Suisse in reference to the late Marquis of Hertford's will.

The Plymouth Journal of yesterday announces the unexpected failure of one of the oldest and most respectable mercantile firms in that town.

A new police-court has been erected in Arbour-square, Stepney, which, with the buildings attached, has cost upwards of £15,000.

ENGLAND v. WALES.—Wednesday being the first day of term the Lord Chancellor held a levee, which was attended by all the judges and a considerable number of the members of the bar. At two o'clock he appeared in court, when, in the usual form, he intimated to T. B. C. Smith, Esq., and Richard Wilson Greene, Esq., that they had been respectively appointed Attorney and Solicitor-General, and they took their seats accordingly. His lordship next called to the inner bar Serjeant Shell, Theobald M'Kenna, M. Longfield, and Francis M'Donagh, Esqrs.

The patent appointing Mr. Keatinge third sergeant was engrossed, but had not been enrolled in time to allow that gentleman to be installed in office.

Mr. Blackburne took his seat for the first time as Master of the Rolls, and Mr. J. D. Jackson as one of the Justices of the Court of Common Pleas.

DESTRUCTIVE FIRES.—This morning (Friday) two alarming fires took place in the metropolis—one at the house of Mr. Parker, a tobacco manufacturer in Cheapside, and the other on the premises of Messrs. Colyer and Co., Leman-street, Whitechapel. Both, however, were fortunately extinguished without any overwhelming damage being incurred.

FIRE AT BEARWOOD.—Yesterday the beautiful mansion of Bearwood, the residence of John Walter, Esq., was threatened with total destruction by the bursting out of an awful conflagration in one of the wings, but owing to the timely exertions of the neighbours and the building where the fire broke out; the loss sustained, however, was very considerable.

COURT OF QUEEN'S BENCH, FRIDAY.—GREVILLE v. CHAPMAN.—LIBEL.—This was an action brought by Mr. Greville, one of the clerks of the Privy Council, against the defendant, the publisher of the Sunday Times newspaper, for a libel, when the jury returned a verdict for the plaintiff. Damages, £250.—The Solicitor-General moved for a rule to show cause why that verdict should not be set aside and a new trial granted. The learned counsel, in support of his rule, contended that, as the publication related to a gambling transaction, the plaintiff had no locus standi in court. There were other reasons also why the case should undergo another inquiry.—The court granted a rule to show cause.

FOREIGN

There was a general commotion excited in the Faubourg St. Germain, Paris, on Tuesday, by an unfortunate event, which will not, however, it is to be hoped, terminate so fatally as was at first apprehended. The Duke de Grammont, on getting down from his horse, was attacked by a fit of apoplexy. Timely assistance saved him at the moment, and he appears to be quite out of danger.

According to the Tintoretto a shock of earthquake was felt at Algiers on the 24th. As this is the only article of news from Africa it may be presumed that the war has presented no new events.

VIEW OF THE FOUR COURTS, DUBLIN.

THE FOUR COURTS, DUBLIN.

Nothing is more apt to attract the observation of a stranger on visiting the Irish metropolis than the magnitude and architectural grandeur of its public edifices. Thus the Bank of Ireland, the Custom-house, the Post-office, and the subject of our present sketch are not only far superior to the corresponding buildings in the English metropolis, but, from the absence of the busy crowd which give life and interest to the scene, seem strangely disproportioned to the amount of business to be transacted. This is certainly less observable in the Four Courts than in any of the other public offices to which we have alluded, for, though the frequenter of Westminster Hall will miss the important gravity which there almost every face seems to wear, the eager rapidity of the movements of the multitude whom he meets bustling in and out, yet is there no lack of visitors in the Hall of the Four Courts, for Paddy is a litigious animal, and, sooner than give in, is always ready, at the instigation of a disinterested attorney, to "take steps" which in time he discovers to be more expensive than those of the dancing master. Multifarious are the uses for which these Courts serve: to the shrewd citizen they present the advantage of a Stock-Exchange; to the quidnunc they offer the latest intelligence, from the first whisper of a political rumour to the last speech of O'Connell at the Corn-Exchange. Is a gentleman to be horsewhipped, here, of course, invariably occurs the flagellation; while in these subterranean premises are to be found the accommodation of an excellent coffee-house for those who would refresh their inward man.

Up till 1798 the Four Courts were held in the neighbourhood of Christchurch, in which eventful year they were first opened for the transaction of public business. Here Emmett, though doomed to an ignominious death, with "mailed heart and dauntless brow," hurled, in his infatuation, a bold defiance at Lord Norbury, in a strain of eloquent invective rarely surpassed. But, though it would take up too much time and space even to glance at the history of the Four Courts, we must make room for an incident of which we were ourselves eye-witness. We recollect, as if it were but yesterday, seeing the mild, benignant, and classic Lord Avonmore on the bench, and John Fitzgibbon, afterwards Lord Clare, Attorney-General—the one about to pass sentence, the other to move the judgment of the court, on the criminal, the Rev. Mr. Jackson, charged with encouraging the French descent under Hoche. All eyes were placed upon the man who, it might be said, had mainly organized the plan for the landing of the French. He stood pale and nervous at the back of the dock. The Attorney-General had concluded his short motion, and Lord Avonmore, having assumed the black cap, had commenced passing the sentence of the law upon the traitor, when Jackson became violently agitated, and sunk insensible upon the floor. Thrice he was raised up, and at length it was discovered that he had taken poison. It was ordered he should be removed for a few minutes until he revived, but such revival was never to take place. Once he turned, as the officers were attempting to remove him, with a ghastly smile, as much as to say, "We have deceived the senate," and expired in their arms. The Four Courts are very advantageously placed on the banks of the Liffey, and are equally admirable for th[e] commodiousness and elegance of their interior accommodatio[n] —qualities which are rarely found united in our modern classical elevations.

TEXAS AGAIN INVADED.—CAPTURE OF SAN ANTONIO.

(From the New Orleans Bulletin, Sept. 27.)

By the politeness of Captain Boylan, of the steam-packet Merchant, we have full files of Galveston, Houston, Matagorda, and Austin papers to the latest dates. The news from Texas is of a startling and important character, if we may place full credence in the following extract from the Galveston (extra) Times of the 20th. That paper says:—"We stop the extra to give the following information, but this moment received from a gentleman who has just arrived, and met the express the other side of Oyster Creek. San Antonio was completely surprised on the 11th instant, by 1300 Mexicans under General Wall. Fifty-three of the principal citizens taken."

TEXAN JUDGES AND JURY, AND MEXICAN SOLDIERY.

When San Antonio was taken, the circuit court was in session, and the judge and the officers of the court were made prisoners—lawyers, clients, and all. It seems strange that the vigilant Texans should have allowed themselves to be "come over" so handsomely. A few months ago they took the alarm, and prepared for defence. But the immediate danger having soon passed away, the militia were discharged, and affairs were suffered to go on as if in the midst of a profound peace. Never since the declaration of independence was Texas more unprepared for a vigorous contest than at this moment. Her army is disbanded; her ships of war lie idle at New Orleans for want of funds, when their presence is urgently needed on the coast of Texas and Yucatan; her credit is utterly prostrate, and money she has none. Still, she has brave hearts and strong hands, and, when the crisis comes, we trust she will be found equal to it.

WALMER CASTLE.

As Lord Warden of the Cinque Ports, the Duke of Wellington occupies this structure, which stands upon the sea-shore, about a mile from the town of Deal, in Kent. It has been a fortress since the days of Henry the Eighth, and the official residence of successive Lords Warden. The sea almost washes the walls of the Castle, which is, nevertheless, a very pleasant abode, and calculated to afford her Majesty every comfort and accommodation which a passing visitant may require. The sea-view is one of the finest round the island, the Castle windows looking over The Downs, where two or three hundred ships may frequently be seen—some windbound, others awaiting final orders. At Walmer the cliffs commence which extend on to Dover, where Shakspere describes them in his celebrated lines in King Lear. The neighbourhood is pleasant, the healthful sea-breeze lending a charm to the inland scenery. A short drive takes the visitor to Dover, with its old Norman castle; a structure as fine and imposing in appearance as the much-vaunted Ehrenbreitstein—the Broadstone-of-Honour of the Rhine. On the other side of Walmer stands Sandwich, once a port, but now two or three miles inland—a town deserted by the sea and looking by-gone, dull, and desolate in its decay.

The Duke of Wellington usually spends a portion of the autumn at Walmer, and this rising watering-place cannot fail to be benefitted by the compliment paid by the Queen, at once to his Grace and to the quiet sea-shore village of Walmer.

DEATH OF DR. CHANNING.

Dr. Channing was born at Newport, Rhode Island. His grandfather was William Ellery, one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence. His father was an eminent merchant of Newport, of the firm of Gibbs and Channing. His grandfather retained the powers of his mind to extreme old age, being accustomed to read one or more chapters every morning in his Greek Testament—a practice which he continued until he was upwards of ninety years of age. He once remarked, that, if old men would exercise their minds more, they would retain their intellectual faculties as long as they did their physical powers. Dr. Channing inherited the vigorous intellect of this revered relative.

Of the doctor's father we are not particularly informed, but Dr. Channing himself, though for many years an invalid, was, in early life, quite vigorous. Though small in stature, and possessing a light frame, he had muscular strength, and in college was considered an athletic young man. He was also one of the leading spirits in his class. During a part of his collegiate course his friends expected that he would, on taking his degree, pursue the study of medicine; but his attention was turned to the ministry by the Hollis Professor of Divinity in Harvard College, where Dr. Channing graduated. At the commencement, when he took the degree of A.B., he had a distinguished part, and was then looked upon by competent judges as one of the most promising young men of the day. Soon after he went to Virginia, where he resided some time, we believe, as a teacher. Here he was supposed, by exposure or neglect of his health, to have undermined his constitution. He never fully recovered the robust state of health which he had previously enjoyed.

In 1803 Mr Channing was ordained over the congregation in Federal-street, Boston. The lines between the Orthodox and Unitarian denominations were not, at that day, so distinctly drawn as they are at the present time. In fact, the term Unitarian was not in general use. Mr. Channing was considered a serious-minded young preacher, of irreproachable morals, with a cultivated mind, refined taste, unique eloquence, and leaning to evangelical views in theology. The Rev. Dr. Mason, of this city, and other stanch divines of orthodox sentiments in different parts of the country, used to preach in Mr. Channing's pulpit. Circumstances occasioned a more marked division of theological men not many years after, and Mr. Channing's preaching and theological writings assumed a more decided character. His celebrated sermon at Baltimore at the ordination of the Rev. Jared Sparks (the historian) made this division more complete. Mr. Channing's congregation increased—his people erected a more spacious edifice on the site of the old church—and a colleague, the Rev. Mr. Gannett, was associated with him in the charge of the congregation.

PORTRAIT OF DR. CHANNING.

Dr. Channing's published sermons during the war of 1812 brought him into general notice throughout the country. Subsequently his review of the writings of Milton, the character of Napoleon Buonaparte, and other able performances established his reputation among the eminent scholars and belles lettres writers of the country and the world. The taunt of the Edinburgh Review, at an early period, that Dr. Channing "touched lofty keys, but with no very great force," was not echoed by the numerous readers and admirers of his writings. Dr. Channing's publications on the subject of American slavery have attracted no little attention throughout this country and Europe. He belonged to no anti-slavery society; he even doubted the wisdom of these associations; but he was an uncompromising enemy to slavery, and thought, spoke, and wrote accordingly. One of the latest, if not the last, public performances of Dr. Channing was on the 1st of August, the anniversary of emancipation in the British West Indies, when he delivered a discourse in Berkshire county, Massachussets. A report of it was published, and attracted the admiration even of those who do not espouse the cause on behalf of which Dr. Channing directed so much labour and sympathy.

Dr. Channing was a man of great independence of mind. He was never swayed by popular applause to do an act which his principles condemned. He paid no respect to men on account of their wealth or office. He honoured moral worth wherever he found it. His sermons on the paternal character of God, on the loveliness of the example of Jesus Christ, on the evidences of Christianity, and on political and moral integrity, are admirable. He spoke out in intelligible terms on conjugal infidelity and licentiousness. In the pulpit his gravity and solemnity exceeded that of most preachers, and many who boast of more correct theological principles might have taken useful lessons from him, not only in the pulpit, but in all his social circles. In all circumstances his feelings were under great self-command. On one occasion, at a dinner party, where a distinguished orthodox clergyman overstepped the boundaries of propriety, Dr. Channing remarked to to the person near him, "A strange man that." On another occasion, when the audience was greatly affected by the eloquence of a distinguished preacher, a professional brother, whose feelings were easily excited, expressed astonishment that Dr. Channing appeared to be so little moved. "My tears," said Dr. Channing, "are not so near my eyes as yours are."

Dr. Channing had great contempt for ephemeral popularity, for office-hunting, for the airs often assumed by upstart aristocrats, for the tricks and compliances of politicians. What was worthy of esteem and veneration in men, whether they were rich or poor, white or coloured, he reverenced, and could look down upon arrogance, folly, and the unprincipled, with pity and virtuous indignation. His elocution, as has been intimated, was peculiar; his eloquence unlike that of any other man. His preaching and his writings were corroborated by a life of high moral character.

Dr. Channing was the poor man's friend and advocate. He prized the principles of his Government, but was chiefly anxious that the people should be righteous rather than prosperous. He loved the cause of peace, and by his tongue and pen did all he could to avert the calamities of war. In fine, however much men might dislike his theological opinions, no one who knew him could fail to prize his purity of character, his inflexible integrity, his lofty purposes, his literary taste, his eloquence, and his able discussions. His death is a great loss, not only to his family, but to the city where he resided, to the country which gave him birth, to the cause of letters and freedom throughout the world.

Dr. Channing died at Burlington, Vermont, on the 2nd of October, in his sixty-second year.

FORMATION OF A NEW CEMETERY.—GRAND MASONIC FESTIVAL AT READING.

On Wednesday, the 26th ult., the foundation-stone of the Episcopal Chapel, in connexion with the new Cemetery now about being formed in the neighbourhood of Reading, was laid, in the presence of thousands of spectators, with grand Masonic honours. The circumstances under which this rather novel, but certainly very interesting, ceremony took place being somewhat of a peculiar character, it may be as well to state how they originated. It appears that the burial-grounds of the parish churches of Reading are, and have been for many years past, crowded with the remains of those who have died in the town, and it was shown by evidence, given before Parliament, that this crowding of the churchyards either had, or was calculated to have, a most injurious effect upon the health of the inhabitants of the borough. The result of the investigation instituted upon this subject was an application to Parliament for a Bill for the formation of a cemetery in the immediate neighbourhood of the town. The evidence in support of the Bill having been of an overwhelming nature, the Bill was passed, and a company was rapidly constituted to carry out the provisions of the Act. A piece of ground, about a mile from

PORTRAIT OF THE GRAND MASTER.

Reading, on the London road, close to the Marquis of Granby Inn, was immediately taken for the purposes of the cemetery, and certainly it would be impossible to have selected a site more suited for the objects for which the company was formed. As the cemetery was for the reception of the remains of persons of all denominations, it was determined that there should be two chapels built on the grounds, one connected with the Established Church, and the other appropriated to the use of Dissenters.

Having stated the circumstances connected with the establishment of this cemetery company, and the extent to which they have gone in carrying out their object, we now proceed to state how it was that the first stone of the Episcopal Chapel of the cemetery was laid with Masonic honours. Amongst the gentlemen who have taken a most active part in carrying out the company in question is Mr. Richards, jun., of this place. This gentleman stands high in connexion with the Masonic body of Reading, by whom he is much respected, and, indeed, by all who know him in the county of Berks. Owing to this circumstance it was proposed, as a compliment to Mr. Richards, and with a view of giving éclat to the occasion, that the first stone of the chapel in question should be laid according to the rules and forms of "the mystic art." The idea was eagerly caught up, not only by the Masons in Reading, but by some of the most distinguished brethren of the "ancient craft" in the metropolis, who expressed their desire to take a part in the proposed ceremony. Accordingly, at twelve o'clock, a large number of the members of the Masonic body assembled in the Town-hall, and held a lodge, the Mayor having granted the use of the hall for that purpose. The lodge was presided over by John Ramsbottom, Esq., M.P., Provincial Grand Master for Berkshire. It was not the Masons only that took an interest in the matter, for the inhabitants of Reading generally seemed to participate in the enthusiasm which was displayed by that body on the occasion, and accordingly, at an early hour the several streets through which the Masonic procession was expected to pass were thronged with well-dressed persons, while the windows of the several houses along the line were crowded with ladies, who seemed anxious to witness the pleasing pageant. The members of the Philanthropic Institution of Reading, which is supported by the Duchess of Kent and the Duke of Sussex, also exhibited their feelings on the occasion, for they assembled in large numbers, with their splendid banner, and accompanied by a band of music, in the Market-place, ready to take their part in the proceedings of the day. Batty's equestrian troop also took a part in the procession. Four little ponies attached to a small carriage appeared in front, while eight horses, harnessed to a van, in which were several musicians, followed. Many of the troop also appeared on horseback. About half-past one o'clock the procession moved from the Town-hall. Batty's troop leading the way, followed by the members of the Philanthropic Institution, and then came the Masonic brethren, dressed in full costume, and carrying with them the several emblems of the craft. The following was the order of the procession in reference to that body:—

GRAND MASONIC FESTIVAL AT READING.

Two Tylers with drawn Swords.
Music.
Brethren, not Members of any Lodge, Two and Two,
The Lodges according to there Numbers; Juniors going first.
Members of Grand Stewards' Lodge.
Officers of Grand Stewards' Lodge.
A Cornucopia, with Corn, borne by the Master of a Lodge.
Two Ewers, with Wine and Oil, borne by Masters of Lodges.
Prov. Grand Pursuivant.
Prov. Grand Organist.
Prov. Grand Director of Ceremonies.
Prov. Grand Superintendent of Works, with the Plate bearing the Inscription.
Past Prov. Grand Sword Bearers.
Past Prov. Grand Deacons.
Prov. Grand Secretary, with Book of Constitutions on a Cushion.
Past Prov. Grand Registrars.
Prov. Grand Registrar.
Prov. Grand Treasurer, bearing a Phial containing the Coin to be deposited in the Stone Past Prov. Grand Wardens.
Past Deputy Grand Masters.
Past Prov. Grand Masters.
Visiting Provincial Grand Officers.
Members of the Grand Lodge and Visitors of distinction.
The Corinthian Light, borne by the Master of a Lodge.
The Column of Prov. J. G. W., borne by the Master of a Lodge.
The Prov. J. G. W., with the Plumb Rule.
Prov. G. Steward. Banner of the Prov. Grand Lodge. Prov. G. Steward.
The Doric Light, borne by the Master of a Lodge.
The Column of Prov. S. G. W., borne by the Master of a Lodge.
The Prov. S. G. W., with the Level. The Prov. J. G. Deacon.
Prov. Grand Steward. The oldest Member of the Lodge of Union, Reading, bearing the Sacred Law on a Cushion. Prov. Grand Steward.
The Prov. Grand Chaplain.
Deputy Prov. Grand Master, with the square.
The Ionic light borne by the Master of a Lodge.
A past Prov. Grand Master, or other Brother of eminence, bearing the mallet.
Prov. Grand Steward. Standard of the Prov. Grand Master. Prov. Grand Steward.
Prov. Grand Sword-bearer.
The Right Worshipful Prov. Grand Master.
The S G. Deacon.
Prov. Grand Tyler.

The procession, which had a most imposing appearance, not only from the order and regularity with which it was conducted, but from the circumstance of the fineness of the day having enabled large masses of the people to join it, passed along the Market-place, up London-street, and along the London-road, to the grounds of the New Cemetery, an entrance to which was formed by means of laurel branches, the Union Jack and the British standard floating in the breeze above the arch which had thus been formed. The site of the Episcopal Chapel was enclosed by a wooden railing, a platform being erected to the eastward of the foundation-stone, for the use of the Provincial Grand Master and the Masonic Brethren. There was also another platform erected for the accommodation of ladies. This latter place was crowded long before the arrival of the procession, and indeed every part in the vicinity of the spot where the intended ceremony was to take place was completely crammed by persons anxious to witness the proceedings. The procession having halted at the entrance of the Cemetery, the brethren opened right and left, and allowed the Provincial Grand Master to pass up the centre, preceded by his Standard and Sword-bearer. The Provincial Grand Officers and Brethren then followed in succession from the rear. The Provincial Grand Master, having arrived at the site of the Episcopal

LAYING THE FOUNDATION STONE

Chapel, took his station on the platform eastward of the stone preceded by his Standard and Sword-bearer, and supported by the Provincial Grand and Grand Officers. The remainder of the procession formed round the foundations of the chapel, leaving the space within the foundations entirely free for the ceremony.

The Rev. J. W. Hayes, P.G.C., then read the service, prepared for the occasion, in a very impressive manner, the brethren and company being all uncovered.

The Provincial Grand Master was then requested by the Chairman of the Directors of the Cemetery Company to lay the stone in the usual manner.

The Provincial Grand Master was presented with a silver trowel for the purpose. He descended from the platform, and took his station close to the stone; the upper stone which was suspended over that usually designated the "first" stone, was then raised, and a brass plate, on which was engraved the following inscription, was laid in a cavity cut in the latter:—

"This foundation-stone of the Episcopal Chapel of the Reading Cemetery, was laid by John Ramsbottom, Esq., M.P., F.R.S., the Right Worshipful Provincial Grand Master for Berkshire, on Wednesday the 26th day of October, in the year of our Lord 1842.—Mr. William Brown, Architect; Messrs. Biggs and Son, Builders."

The Provincial Grand Master then requested the P.G. Treasurer to deposit some coins of the realm on the plate, which was accordingly done.

The cement was then presented to the P.G.M. by an entered apprentice, and the P.G.M. laid the same on the lower stone, solemn music playing during this proceeding.

The upper stone was then let down slowly, making three regular stops. The P.G.M. approached the stone, and proved it to be properly adjusted by the plumb-rule presented by the P.J.G. Warden.

The level and plumb-rules having been applied to the stone by the Provincial Grand Master, he next gave the stone three knocks, saying "May the Great Architect of the Universe enable us successfully to carry on and finish the work of which we have now laid the foundation stone. May he, in his mercy and goodness enable this building to be reared to his honour and glory and to the praise of his most holy name, through Jesus Christ our Lord. And may the great Creator he a guardian and protector to this town and neighbourhood, and long preserve it from peril and decay."

The Provincial Grand Master then gave the several implements for the architect's use. He also approved of the plan of the work shown to him, which he handed to the builders for their guidance. He then poured corn, wine, and oil on the stone, and expressed a hope that the spirits of those whose ashes might rest in that cemetery would be received among the blessed. He then thanked the brethren and the company for their attendance there that day, and trusted that, through the skill of the architect, the edifice which was now about to be raised would be at once an ornament to the town of Reading, and an acceptable offering to the Great Ruler of all.

The ceremony concluded by the Provincial Grand Chaplain pronouncing the following benediction:—"The peace of God which passeth all understanding, keep your hearts and minds to the knowledge and love of God and of his Son Jesus Christ our Lord; and the blessing of God Almighty, the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost, be amongst you, and remain with you always. Amen." The procession then left the grounds and returned to the Townhall, followed by the crowd who had assembled on the occasion who were evidently much gratified at the entire proceedings.

We cannot conclude this part of our notice without observing that much of the order, regularity, and precision which accompanied the proceedings were attributable to the arrangements made by Dr. Mullinder, under whose auspices the whole affair was conducted.

In the evening a very admirable dinner was served up at the George Hotel to celebrate the occasion which had called together so many of the Masonic body, at which between seventy and eighty "brothers of the mystic tie" sat down. J. Ramsbottom, Esq., M.P. and P.G.M., presided. Amongst the brethren present we noticed Dr. Woodhouse, Deputy Prov. Grand Master; Wood Readett, Esq., P.S.G.W.; John Richards, Junior, F.S.A. and P.J.G.W.; the Rev. J. W. Hayes, P.G.C.; J. J. Blandy, P.G.R.; John Simonds, Jun., P.G.T.; Robt. Gibson, E-q., P.G.S.; John Hulme, Esq., P.G. superintendent of the work; K. G. Shute, Esq., P.G.S.B.; Edward Sherwood, P.G.S.; Charles Scarborough, S.G.S.; Brothers, Hope, Shaw, Dr. Mullinder, &c.

The cloth having been drawn, the Chairman gave the usual loyal toasts, which were responded to with true masonic feeling.

The Chairman then gave "his Royal Highness the Duke of Sussex, the Grand Master of Freemasons." The toast was drunk enthusiastically.

Dr. Woodhouse then proposed the health of the chairman, which was drunk with masonic honours, after which

The Chairman rose and acknowledged the compliment. He accepted the trowel which had just been presented to him with affection and kindness, and he would keep it in his family to the latest moment, as a testimonial of the respect and regard which that company had been pleased to manifest towards him that day. (Hear, hear.) On that occasion, of course, his mouth was shut in reference to masonic matters. He must, however, take that opportunity of expressing his regret that masonry was not as well supported in Berkshire as it was in the other counties of England. He was, however, happy to say, that in Reading the spirit of masonry was still alive, and he trusted that the cloud which hung over it in the county would quickly disappear, and that it would shine out with even more than its wonted effulgence immediately. (Applause.) He begged again to thank them for the manner in which they had drunk his health, and he could assure them he would be ever ready to lend his best assistance, either masonic or otherwise, to the town of Reading. (Cheers.)

The health of the chairman, deputy-chairman, and directors of the Reading Cemetery Company was then proposed, and drunk with three times three.

The Chairman said he would now propose the health of a gentleman present to whom the town of Reading was much indebted for his exertions in establishing the new cemetery. (Hear.) Those who knew Mr. Richards, jun., knew that he was a man highly respected by his townsmen, and beloved by the members of the craft of which he was such an ornament. (Applause.) He begged to give the "health of Mr. Richards, jun." Drunk with applause.—Mr. Richards returned thanks.

"The Mayor and Corporation of the town of Reading" was drunk. Mr. Farrow having returned thanks, the Chairman then proposed the navy and army, which was responded to by brother Capt. Coxwell.

The Chairman next gave the healths of the brethren visitors, to which brothers Acklam, Hope, and Dr. Mullinder responded.

"The Bar." T. B. Saunders, Esq., standing counsel to the Cemetery Company, returned thanks in a very neat and humorous speech.

"The health of brother Dr. Sheridan, the editor of the Morning Advertiser, and many thanks for his kindness in sending a gentleman to report the proceedings specially," was then proposed by the Chairman, and drunk by the company.

Several other toasts were drunk, and the company separated, highly pleased with the proceedings of the evening, the pleasure of which was agreeably heightened by several of the gentlemen present singing some capital songs.

Of all the systems ever invented, short of Divine Revelation, and to which in no way does it run counter, that of Freemasonry must claim the pre-eminence. Like the genial rays of the golden sun, it spreads its beneficent effects throughout the habitable globe, penetrates the darkest glades, and gilds the topmost heights, carrying brotherly love, peace, and charity in its course; and effects that which no other system ever attempted, viz., a union of heart and hand. It despises the paltry distinctions of clime and colour, and knows not the difference between prince and peasant, yet without interference with the courtesies of civilised life, or destroying those variations of station requisite to the well-being of society. Like the glorious orb of day, it not only enlightens the minds of all the favoured members of its circle, but imparts a genial warmth and brotherly affection to the breast, and a ready willingness to the hands, ever to succour, support, and assist all who enjoy its mystic influences. Long has the world sought to discover

Why kings should put aprons on,
And make themselves one with a free and accepted mason.

When we know that Masonry is not confined by sectarian principle, or bounded by geographical limits, that the east, west, north, and south bear testimony to the existence and practical usefulness of the brotherhood, whose leading star and distinguishing badge is that

Fairest and dearest of the train that was
On man's most dignified and happiest state,
Whether we name thee Charity or Love,
Chief grace below, and all in all above, can it be wondered that man's keenest ingenuity should have been employed to discover the mystic tie, that "tesseræ hospitalis," which serves as a cementing bond, one great harmonious whole of prince and peasant, king, noble, citizen, and artizan? This much has been discovered, that the coin current among the craft is at least genuine: the impress of the Great Architect is understood by all nations alike. It is our intention, from time to time, as far as the subject, necessarily circumscribed as its written truths must be, to present our numerous readers with a series of articles, illustrative, not only of the history, but the great practical results of Freemasonry; and our brethren, both on the Continent and the provinces, may depend that no pains or expense shall be spared to render our information and illustrations worthy of the craft. The cause of Freemasonry must ever be attended by "the bright attributes of light, charity, and morality, to which it has a righteous and just claim, because they have been its distinguishing characteristics from the infancy of time." The history of Masonry is not the recital of deeds of blood, of cities sacked and levelled with the dust; hers is not a black catalogue of power oppressing right; but a bright emblazonment on the shield of truth, of widows' hearts rejoiced, orphans rescued from penury and want, fostered with paternal care, and men of all nations, climes, and tongues hailed and received as brothers.

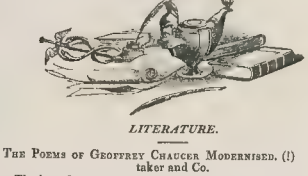
To our non-masonic friends we would say, as you can only judge of Masonry by externals (and some of you were personal witnesses of the pleasing and gratifying sight of laying the foundation-stone at Reading, a series of engravings of which imposing procession, ceremony, and banquet will be found in this number of our paper), if you believe that Masonry is but a system of vain parade—a mere profession of charity and brotherly love without their possession—visit that proud monument of taste erected and maintained by the craft, the Royal Freemasons' Girls' School, and if any doubts existed before, such a visit will at once dispel them, and we much question but you will be led to exclaim, "Masonry is indeed something more than a name." No widow's heart there ever entered the doors of that institution to seek admission for her fatherless child to be chilled by cold contempt or frozen by repulse, for, whether a royal prince occupied the chairman's post or not, she, poor, a stranger perhaps from some far distant land, received the hand (of friendship and a sister's welcome. We have referred to the girls school as an evidence that Masonry is in perfect accordance with the leading professions of the craft, because to any of our readers in London and the neighbourhood such a treat and evidence is within their reach—a proof that Masonry is calculated to render each member of the mystic tye a good neighbour, a good citizen, a good husband, a genuine philanthropist, and true patriot,—for

"Can he be strenuous in his country's cause
Who slights her charities, for whose dear sake
That country, if at all, must be beloved?"



LITERATURE.

THE POEMS OF GEOFFREY CHAUCER MODERNISED. (!) Whittaker and Co.

The introduction to this volume informs us of "an extraordinary act to which there is no parallel in the history of the literature of nations," namely, "that though he is one of the great poets for all time, his works are comparatively unknown to the world." How old Geoffrey could be at one and the same time a poet for "all time," and yet that his works should be comparatively unknown, is rather difficult to understand; and there is also something startling in the affirmative hypothesis that "had Chaucer's poems been written in Greek or Hebrew they would have been a thousand times better known!" This certainly smacks of rather an odd mode of realising the intention of the present editors, who pretend to give "a faithful version of the great poet, bereft of his obsolete dialect"!! Obsolete, forsooth! It is remarkable that anybody has been found hardy enough to puddle the "well of English" which had been undefiled for nearly four centuries; even the daring spirit of Byron recoiled from a re-scripture of the book of Job; and, with all humble deference to the sacred writing, we cannot but set it down as a nearly approaching desecration to meddle (beyond glossarial exposition) with the writings of the father of English poetry.

We condemn our youth to the study of Latin, Greek, and Hebrew, merely to arrive at (if they even do that) a smattering verbal acquaintance (rarely familiarity) with the writings of dead-language poets and historians, whose works, apart from the respect they command or rather demand from their antiquity, and yet we are not diligent enough to instil into them a taste for the purest Hippocrene that ever flowed, without having it previously strained or "modernised" to suit their corrupted palate! Amongst the many gifted authors who have brought their talent to bear upon this work (the object of which we denounce in limine) it is surprising to see that of Leigh Hunt, one who has shown himself so thoroughly imbued with the spirit of "olden poesy," that it was with somewhat of surprise we perceived his name amongst those who have undertaken to introduce to the moderns the greatest poet of antiquity "bereft of his obsolete dialect!"

One of the chief charms in Chaucer's writing is the curiosa felicitas of his expressions; the magic eloquence with which "he clothed his thoughts in melody" (to use the words descriptive of Terpander's setting verses of Homer to music, Μελη ποιησαντα) and any modernising must be fatal to their poetical conception in the first instance, and euphony in the next. This last consideration naturally leads to a consideration of that portion of the book which treats of Chaucer's metre or rhythms; but the opinionist, whose ear is deaf to the music of Elision, is better answered by an apt quotation of his own finding than by anything which we could not say half so well.

"Every true poet has a song in his mind, the notes of which, little as they precede his thoughts—so little as to seem simultaneous with them—do precede, suggest, and inspire many of these—modify and beautify them. That poet who has none of this dumb music going on within him will neither produce any by his versification, nor prove an imaginative or impassioned writer: he will want the harmoniser which attunes heart, and mind, and soul—the mainspring that sets them in movement together. Rhythm, thus, as an enraptured of the poet, immediately exalts him as a creator, and augments all his powers. A good system of rhythm becomes, therefore, momentous both for its own sake to the reader, and because it is the poet's latent inspirer."—Introduction to Beaumont and Fletcher.

Be it understood that all the foregoing opinions, severe as they may appear to some, are the consequence of a thorough devotion to "that renowned poet who compiled with warlike numbers and heroic sound.

DAN CHAUCER (well of English undefiled)
On Fame's eternal bead-roll worthy to be filed."

THE MAGAZINES.

Magazine-day is always welcome, but trebly so when November brings its tough fogs and long evenings, to render in-doors and a-cosy the fine pleasantest of all things in this northern hive of ours. Ranged in all the shades of blue and red, and buff and grey, the well-known wrappers have a character which gives a forenastc of what will be found within. From the serviceable brown of Blackwood, betokening its serious, powerful, and consistent support of our old institutions, to the lighter colour and calibre of Bentley or Ainsworth—redolent of the graces of our lighter literature—each has characteristics equally well known and welcome.

In order of seniority first comes Blackwood, opening with a paper upon a Jewish traveller "Benjamin, of Tudela," an old rabbi, whose literary has recently been translated by a learned German, Asher of Berlin. "After the lapse of centuries, when the bones of the pilgrim have long since mouldered away in the sepulchre of his fathers, an adventurous scholar drags the manuscript from its quiet nook in some antique library;" and hence the long since much-abused travels of the Rabbi Benjamin, "called, from the place of his birth, Tudela," and hence, also, a pleasant, readable magazine-paper. Leaving the wanderings of the Spanish Jew, we have "A Passage from the Life of a Man-tre-d'Armes." It gives a picture of the present family of Russia, which is worth preserving. The writer is a French fencing-master, who in 1824 goes to St. Petersburg, to establish himself there as a teacher—if possible in the Emperor's service He is fortunate enough to obtain a letter to an aide-de-camp of Constantine.

INTRODUCTION TO ROYALTY IN RUSSIA.

"If his Imperial Highness, added the Count, "will write a line in your favour at the end of the petition, you will have an excellent chance of obtaining what you desire. Present yourself boldly, flatter his military pride, and try to gain his good word by the frank and soldierly deportment which has done more for you, with myself and others, than any letter of recommendation."

The morning after receiving this advice I hired a droschki and set out for Sveia, taking with me a letter to General Rodna, side-de-camp of the Czarewitsch, and a petition to the Emperor, which had been drawn up in due form. After driving a couple of hours along a good road, bordered on the left by country mansions and parks, and on the right by plains extending to the Gulf of Finland, I reached the cantonment of St. Sergeia, the saint most venerated in Russia after St. Alexander Nieuski. Ten minutes afterwards I arrived at the castle, and, after some parley with the sentry, obtained admittance. Some officers, who were lounging about, informed me that the General was engaged with the Czarewitsch. One of them, however, took in my letter, and desired me to wait in a saloon which looked out on a magnificent garden. The same officer speedily returned, and introduced me into the apartments of the Emperor's brother. In one of these I discovered a man standing with his back to a large fire, and distinguished by the most uncouth and forbidding countenance I ever beheld Between a pair of prominent cheek-bones that would have graced a Calmuc Tartar appeared what in France we term a nose écrasé, with a pair of upturned nostrils, the combined effect of which gave the owner a strong resemblance to a large monkey; nor am I sure whether, in such a comparison, the disadvantage would not have been on the side of the animal. The eyes of the Grand Duke (for he it was), were remarkable for their restlessness. They were small, deep-set, and of a colour which it would be difficult to define. His complexion was a deep unvarying red. The frogs and loops which fastened his dark-green frock across his breast nearly disappeared beneath a profusion of crosses, decorations, and ribbons of every colour of the rainbow. He was tapping his boot with his riding whip, and the undried splashes of mud on his pantaloons indicated that he had but recently returned from a ride or a review. At a table near him was seated General Rodna, pen in hand, and apparently writing under his master's dictation. Not expecting a prompt an introduction, I stopped short on entering the room. The door was scarcely closed when the Czarewitsch, projecting his head without moving his body, and fixing me with his piercing eyes, abruptly inquired—

"What countryman?"
"French, your Highness.
"Age?'
"Six-and-twenty.'
"Name?'
"G——.'
"You want to be fencing-master to a regiment?'
"May it please your Highness, such is the object of my ambition."
"Are you a first-rate swordsman?"
"I have fenced in public since my arrival in St. Petersburg, and your Highness can easily ascertain the opinion of those who were present."
"I heard of you, but you had only second-rate fencers to contend with."
"Which gave them a just claim upon my forbearance, your Highness."
"Forbearance! he repeated, with flashing eyes and a somewhat scornful curve of the lips: "but it less considerate, what then?"
"I should have buttoned them ten times for every twice they touched me, your Highness."
"Ha! and could you do that with me?"
"That might depend on how your Imperial Highness might wish to be treated. If as a pupil, it is probable your Highness would touch me ten times, and be touched twice. But if your Highness wished to be treated like any other person, the ten hits would probably be achieved by me, and the two by your Highness."
"Lubenski!" cried the Czarewitsch, rubbing his hands; "Lubenski! bring the foils. We shall see, Sir Braggart!
"Is it possible your Highness would condescend——"
"My Highness orders you to touch me ten times, if you can. Do you want to back out already? Now take this foil and mask. Guard!"
"It is your Highness's absolute command?"
"Yes you! a thousand times yes!"
"I am ready."
"Ten times!" repeated the Czarewitsch as he attacked me; "ten times, mind you! less won't do. Ha, ha!"
Notwithstanding all the encouragement I kept on the defensive, contenting myself with parrying his thrusts without running them.
"Now then," cried he, somewhat angrily. "what are you about? You are not doing your best. Why don't you thrust?"
"Your Highness, the respect——"
"Curse your respect, sir: thrust! thrust!"
Observing, through his mask, that his cheeks were flushed and his eyes blood shot, I took advantage of the permission granted with such evident sincerity, and touched him three times running.
"Bravo!" cried he. "My turn now. Ha! a hit! a hit!"
He had touched me. I then touched him four times in rapid succession, and was touched once.
"Hurrah!" cried he, quite delighted, and stamping with his foot. "Rodna, did you see that? Twice to his seven."
"Twice to ten, your Highness!" replied I, pressing him hard. "Eight—nine—ten! Now we are quits"
"Good! good!" cried the Czarewitsch approvingly: "very good! but that's not all. The small-sword—not enough—no use to the cavalry—want the sabre. Now could you defend yourself, on foot, against a mounted lancer? Parry a lance-thrust? Eh?"
"I think I could, your highness.
"Think so! Not sure—eh!"
"Pardon me, your Highness, I have no doubt of it."
"Lubenski! Lubenski!" again shouted the Czarewitsch.
The officer appeared.
"A lance and a horse! a horse! a lance! Sacre! Quick! quick!
"But your highness"—I interposed.
"Ha! vous avez peur?"
"I am not afraid; but, with your Highness, I should experience equal reluctance to be the victor or the vanquished."
"All nonsense and flattery! First trial was capital. Now for the second!"
At this moment the officer appeared before the windows, leading a horse, and bearing a lance in his hand.

"Now, then!" exclaimed Constantine, as he darted out of the room, and made me a sign to follow him.

"Give him a good sabre, Lubenski; and now, Sir Fencing-Master, mind yourself, or you'll be spitted like one of the toads in my summer-house. The last lived three days, Rodna, with a nail through his belly."

So saying, Constantine sprung upon his horse, which was of the true Tartar breed, with a tail that swept the ground, and a mane like a hurricane. With a markable skill, he put the animal through the most difficult evolutions, at the same time executing sundry parries and thrusts with his lance.

"All ready?" cried the Czarewitsch, coming up to me.

"Ready, your Highness." I replied; and he, setting spurs to his horse, galloped off to the further end of the avenue.

"Surely all this is a joke?" said I to General Rodna.

"By no means!" was the reply. You will either lose your life or gain your appointment. Defend yourself as if you were on a battle field."

I now saw that matters were taking a more serious turn than I had altogether bargained for. Had I considered myself at liberty to return blow for blow, I could have taken my chance without uneasiness; but feeling myself bound to control, as well as to use, a keen-edged sabre, while exposed to the sharpened lance of a reckless antagonist, the chances of this imperial diversion were rather against me. It was too late, however, to draw back. I summoned in all the coolness and address I possessed, and prepared to face the Czarewitsch, who had already reached the end of the avenue, and turned his horse about. In spite of what General Rodna had told me, I had not relinquished all hope that Constantine was only jesting; but when I saw him bring his lance to the guard, and push his steed into a gallop, I became convinced that I had to defend my life. The horse advanced at full speed, and the Czarewitsch was crouched down upon his neck, in such a manner that he was nearly concealed by the abundant mane. I could only see the top of his head appearing between his charger's ears. When he reached me, he made a point at my breast; but I parried his thrust, and, bounding on one side, horse and rider, carried away by their own impetuosity, passed by without doing me any injury. When he saw that he had missed his aim, the Czarewitsch pulled his horse up short with admirable dexterity.

"Very good! very good!" said he; "try again." And without giving me time for objection or remark, he took space for his career, and, after again making me if I was ready, returned to the charge with still more fury than the first time; but as before, I kept my eyes fixed on his, and not one of his motions escaped me. At the decisive moment I parried en quarte, and, by a spring to the right made his second attack as harmless as the preceding one.

At this second failure the Czarewitsch uttered a howl of disappointment. He had entered into the spirit of our sliling-match as ardently as if it had been a real combat, and had moreover made up his mind that it should terminate in his favour. I saw that it but when I saw him retracing his ground for a third assault, I determined that it should be the last. Again he approached me with whirlwind speed; again I made a feint, and, by a rapid movement, disarmed him. Then, quick as thought, I seized the bridle of the horse, and by a violent effort threw him on his haunches, at the same time placing the point of my sabre on the breast of the rider. General Rodna uttered a cry of alarm; he thought I was going to kill the Grand Duke. Constantine, doubtless, had the same impression, for the colour left his cheeks for an instant. Stepping a pace backward, and bowing to the Czarewitsch, I said, "Your highness has now seen what I am able to teach to Russian soldiers, and is able to judge whether I am worthy to become their professor."

"Yes, by my soul you are! Never saw a braver fellow; and a regiment you shall have, if I can get it you. Lead Paik to the stable, Lubenski," added he, throwing himself off his horse. "Now, Follow me, Sir Frenchman."

Then leading the war to his apartments, he took up a pen, and wrote to the foot of my petition—"I humbly recommend the petitioner to your Imperial Majesty, believing him in every way worthy of the favour he solicits."

"Take this paper," said he, "and give it into the Emperor's own hands. Put you in prison, perhaps; but no feu; if he who risks nothing can gain nothing. Farewell: and if ever you visit Warsaw, come and see me."

I bowed and took my leave, delighted with my success, and no little elated at having passed so well through the ordeal imposed upon me by this eccentric and formidable personage.

He succeeds in obtaining what he seeks, being appointed fencing-master to the Imperial Corps of Engineers, with the rank of captain. Leaving the "Maitre-d'Armes," we have a paper on the life and character of that talented nobleman, Marquis Wellesley, the last honours to whom we so recently illustrated. The sketches of sunny Italy are continued, as are some translations of the thought-thronged poems and ballads of Schiller. We make space for a short one, in which the German poet-philosopher versifies some sentences from Confucius.

TIME.

Threefold the stride of Time, from first to last!
Loitering slow, the Future creepeth—
Arrow-swift, the Present sweepeth—
And motionless for ever stands the Past.

Never can Impatience hasten,
When the slow step seeks delay,
Chains, nor Doubt, nor Fear can fasten
To the step that flies away.

Nor one spell Repentance knows,
To stir the Still One from Repose.

If thou would'st, wise and happy, see
Life's solemn journey close for thee,
The Loiterer's counsel thou with heed,
Though resister feels must stage the dead;
Not for thy friend the Fleet One know,
Nor make the Motionless thy foe!

After Blackwood comes the New Monthly, heralded by Tom Hood, who commences his present number with "News from China," a highly original correspondence. Laman Blanchard continues his introductions of "People whom everybody has seen," whilst Mrs. Trollope still keeps the "Barnabys in America." Yet this is a heavy number, scarcely agreeing with the second title, "The Humorist;" not, perhaps, so much from want of talent in the writers, as from their being always the same. Toujours perdrix must tire, though the birds be Hoods, and Trollopes, and Blanchards. The very paper has a yellow tinge, as of indigestion, from want of change.

Next we have Fraser, without Maginn, but with a slaughtering article, changing Mr. Dickens's American Notes into sterling English humour. The "Peep of Day" is dull enough; and the "Old Gentleman in the Kent Road" has more fat than fun about him. The Life of Sir Murray Maxwell affords material for an interesting article, and the Ashburton Treaty is handled in Fraser's usual style—which, making proper allowance for political bias, is still powerful.

Bentley opens with "Mr. Ledbury's Adventures," in which we have some glimpses of life in Paris which fashionable tourists are quite innocent of. An etching introduces us to an evening party at a student's lodging. The male figures are all French, even to caricature, but the parasites are no grisettes at all; they are as thoroughly English as if the scene were laid in Little Britain, or London Wall, instead of the Quartier Latin. The papers day by day chronicle the doings at our police-offices—let us see how they manage these things in France. Mr. Ledbury, who is perfectly innocent of la langue Francaise, finds himself in

A FRENCH POLICE STATION.

All the excitement of the champagne and vin ordinaire which sparkled from Mr. Ledbury's eyes the night before—all his rapid defiance and valorous demeanour had passed away. A head ache, which appeared likely to split his brain into two, had succeeded to his gay imaginings of the previous evening. His eyelids smarted with inflammation and the want of legitimate rest; and, moreover, he had broken one of the pebbles of his spectacles. His mouth was dry and parched; his hands red and swollen, and looking about the mats as if he had been exercising millions of new walnuts; whilst his mind revolted at everything he thought of or perceived about him. Two or three companions of his imprisonment, of the lowest class of society, and of whose presence he had hitherto been entirely unconscious, were disposed about the cell. One was still snoring heavily with the stertor of intoxication; another was smacking his lips with thirst, or the lack of the usual morning dram; a third awoke, but scarcely returned to his intellects, was gazing listlessly at the window, which quivered in his disturbed vision, or indulging in occasional unmeaning wailings, half imbecile half indignant. Mr. Ledbury's mild temperament was ill calculated to bear up against the first terrible consciousness of his position as he awoke. The whole reality by which he was surrounded faded away in the squalling visions of the police, the mines of Siberia, impalement, underground cells in the Bastile, laden with heavy chains, the guillotine, and other continental modes of punishment, which rapidly crowded upon his imagination. Suppose, by the mild misconstruction of the law, he should only be imprisoned for two or three years in a fortress! Gracious powers! how would his family, who lived at Islington, bear the shock when they came to hear of it!—what desolation would brood on the hearth, or rather the Chunk stove, of his office! What would Miss Mitchell, Miss Hamilton, and all his young lady friends of bygone evening parties think of him, when they were informed of his disgrace? —and how would the Saturday-night organ, that always played "As I view these scenes so charming 'out of tune, contrive to do without the hebdomadal penny which purchased its retreat to an inaudible distance? These were fearful feelings to redact upon, and he tried as he thought about them, or rather gave a very good imitation of having a very bad cold in his head. He smiled the very flies, that flew in and out of the bars just as they pleased, without asking permission of anybody. An hour or two passed miserably away until about nine o clock, when the bolts were withdrawn, and he was summoned to the front office of the guard-house, and confronted with the chief officer of the force to be interrogated; his extreme state of convivriality on the preceding evening having quite precluded the possibility of getting anything like a correct answer from him.

"Monsieur," gruffly demanded the guard, in a voice made ten times more terrible by its transmission through a pair of formidable mustachios, "dites-moi votre nom, s'il vous plait?"

"Not guilty," replied Ledbury, who had some faint idea that a species of judicial inquiry was going on.

The supposed cognomination was immediately written down, as near as they could catch it.

"Oh est votre passeport?"

"Je non pas," answered Ledbury, slightly comprehending the question, and endeavouring to answer it in French.

A very suspicious look from the guard followed this declaration. The truth was, that our hero, having been so short a time in Paris, had not yet got his provisionary passport exchanged for his travelling one; but he could not explain. The officer, not understanding him, gave orders that his pockets should be investigated. One of the Corps forthwith began to search Mr. Ledbury—a process which was exceedingly interesting to the others. The first article they turned out upon the bench was his pocket-handkerchief, covered all over with a representation of the flags of different nations, and a large union-jack in the middle. This was evidently considered a most important discovery, and immediately entered in the police-sheet as a code of private signals. The standard of Algiers strengthened this belief, and the whole of the garde pointed it out immediately with great exultation; for, ever since the French won the battle of Constantine, they have formed a singular idea that there never was another victory in the world, and have framed all their toys, bonbons, sports, and public shows, accordingly, wherein "les sacrés Bedouins" are always represented as getting ten to one the worst of it. Then from the other pocket was produced a most suspicious list of the General Steam Navigation Company—evidently in correspondence with the pocket-handkerchief; together with his keys, his little French dictionary, some crumbs of biscuit, and some nuts, which he had pocketed from the dinner-table, having heard such proceedings were customary in France, and proper to be done. His waistcoat gave up all of the cosmétique that he had not eaten at Boulogne: a half-crown pencil-case, which he had been lucky enough to win for eight shillings at a Rensgate library last year; a few francs; an old pass-check of Covent Garden Theatre, with the word "Comus" on it—another proof of some secretly-organised society; and two or three jujubes melted into one conglomerate. As soon as the search was completed the guard got under arms, and Mr. Ledbury prepared to accompany them to the prefect of police—comparatively, much in the same state of mind as a condemned criminal who takes his last look at the sappers and stowpass of the Newgate kitchen on his dreary journey to pass through the hatch of the debtors door, and ascend the fatal scaffold to "dancer une danse

Qu'il n'y a pas de plancher."

Here we have a sketch of a class which has no parallel in London:—

STUDENTS IN PARIS.

They witnessed the crowd of odd beings who were loitering after lecture in the open space between the Café Dupuytren and the Ecole de Médecine when our friends turned out to make some purchases. Some wore their hair flowing down their backs almost as long as a woman's; others had it cropped quite close, and covered by a flat cap of bright scarlet, without a poke. These cultivated their mustachios until they grew like penthouses over their lips; those allowed their locks to retain their chins in unshaven luxuriance. The majority wore fossers of a dingy grey, brought down very low over the insteps, and coats with half-inch collars, similar in style to the costume of the seedy foreigners who loiter about the Quartier du Lester-square at this time of the year. Some wore dark blouses; others paletots—a species of light shooting-jacket; and a few had frock-coats. Nearly all carried pipes in their mouths, which they doggedly kept there; removing them only to address some bright-eyed little grisette who chanced to pass.

Albert Smith's clever paper is followed by one, "Placing a Nawab on the Musnud," by H. R. Addison; an Eastern ceremony the recital of which is as dull and disappointing to the reader as the refusal of his superiors to allow the acceptance of some sinawis appears to have been to the writer. Twice again in this same number does Mr. Addison's name appear. The last paper, "Malay Vengeance," exhibits a fearful trait in the character of that people—still one paper a month is quite sufficient from one pen. Alfred Crowquill sketches, by word and pencil, "The Philosophy of Fighting," in which the illustrations are as much above par as the etching of Paddy Carroll, the piper, is below it.

In the present number of Ainsworth's Magazine the editor completes his "Miser's Daughter," a story already too well known to require comment. Cruikshank, as usual, has etched two illustrations in his usual style, but, as far as the delineation of character is concerned, with less than his usual excellence. Uncle Sam has a word or two with Boz upon America. But space forbids further comment or extract.

Our Mess still progresses, with Jack Hinton, the Guardsman, as dashing and clever as Harry Lorrequer can make him. The present number affords, in addition to some stirring scenes of à la militaire, a laughter-provoking episode, "The Four in Hand," to which Phiz has done ample justice.

The Sportsman gives this month a portrait of Blue Bonnet, the winner of the last St. Leger, "a fine lengthy, powerful, racing-looking animal" as our readers could wish to see. She was scarcely heard of in betting lists, nor was it known she was in the town, to any beyond those in the stable, until the day she ran, and won for her owner, the Earl of Eglinton, and his friends, £12,000. This was her maiden performance. There are some pleasant sporting papers also in this number, which will find favour in many a quiet nook of old England where field sports still hold their own.

The Farmer's Magazine contains a portrait of Earl Spencer, from a picture by Sir George Hater, as the engraver has very negligently written. As our readers doubtless all know, the earl is the president of the Smithfield Club, an "eminent breeder" of cattle, of course, and a very sincere and zealous patron of agricultural improvement. His farm at Althorp, in Northamptonshire, is as completely a gem in its way as the library contained in his mansion is in another.

The Belle Assemblée is something better than the common run of fashion-books, but still has opportunity for improvement in its literature.

*ORIGINAL POETRY.

BACCHANALIAN SONG.

BY J. AUGUSTINE WADE

I.

This is a moment for pleasure and joy,
Send round the wine with a chorus!
This is a moment when thought would destroy
The few happy minutes before us!
The man who could think at a banquet like this,
Or gravely consider "To-morrow,"
Should have all his dreams of enchantment and bliss
Awaken'd to care and to sorrow!
So drink! drink! laugh and be gay,
Life from its gloom let us sever;
We know that we're here and are happy to-day—
Then To-Day be our motto for ever!

II.

Where is the pilgrim who would not recline,
Through a long journey that's dreary,
Under the cool of a shadowy vine,
Thoughtless awhile that he's weary?
We, just like him, are but travellers too,
Small is the difference 'tween us;
He takes the leaf, but we take the dew,
Of the fruit, from our sorrow to screen us.
So drink! drink! laugh and be gay,
Life from its gloom let us sever;
We know that we're here and are happy to-day—
Then To-Day be our motto for ever!

FIRE IN JERMYN-STREET, ST. JAMES'S.—On Tuesday evening last a fire broke out on the premises of Mrs. Clark, No. 122, Jermyn-street, Piccadilly, one door from Regent-street, which threatened the most serious consequences; but the large engine from the County Fire-office was immediately drawn to the spot, and was shortly followed by the St. James's parish engine, and several of the brigade engines, when, by great exertions, the flames were got under.

* Contributed for the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, and copyright.

YOUTH'S PARADISE.

Oh! Paradise, in vain didst thou depart;
Thine image still is stamped on every heart!
Though mourning man in vain may seek to trace
The site of that which sone his dwelling-place,
Though the four glittering rivers now divide
No realms of beauty with their rolling tide,
Each several life still opens with the view
Of that unblighted world where Adam drew
The breath of being: in each human mind,
However cramp'd and fetter'd, and confined,
The innate power of beauty folded lies,
And, like a bud beneath the summer skies,
Blooms out in youth through many a radiant day,
Though in life's winter frost it dies away.

HON. MRS. NORTON.

The best way to teach a husband to be amiable, is for a wife to be so herself.—Woman's World.

AFTER-DINNER GRATITUDE.

It is well not to trust one's gratitude after dinner. I have heard many a host libelled by his guests with his Burgundy yet reeking on their rascally lips.—LORD BACON.

RICH AND POOR.

The man of high descent may love the halls and lands of his inheritance as a part of himself, as trophies of his birth and power; his associations with them are associations of pride, and wealth, and triumph; the poor man's attachment to the tenement he holds, which strangers have held before, and may to-morrow occupy again, has a worthier root, struck deep in a purer soil. His household gods are of flesh and blood, with no alloy of silver, gold, or precious stones; he has no property but in the affections of his own heart; and when they endear bare floors and walls, in despite of rags and toil, and scanty meals, that man has his love of home from God, and his rude hut becomes a solemn palace.—DICKENS.

REVERENCE OF MAHOMETANS FOR THE KORAN.

They dare not so much as touch it, without being first washed or purified; and lest they should, inadvertently, they write on the cover, "Let none touch it but they who are clean." They swear by it; consult it on all important occasions; carry it with them to war; write sentences from it on their banners; adorn it with gold and precious stones; and they always read it with the greatest reverence and humility.

EASY STEPS.

Bribery is an easy step to a seat in Parliament. Flattery is an easy step to a lady's affections. A suit in Chancery is an easy step to ruin; so is, also, accepting a bill for a friend. Horse-dealing is an easy step to the Bankruptcy Court; so is extravagance. Keeping hounds is an easy step to the dogs; so is gambling of any kind; and three bottles of port are an easy step to a very uneasy step, before any man's door.

HOW TO WRITE CLEARLY AND FORCIBLY.

A man fully possessed of his subject, and confident of his cause, may always write with vigour and effect, if he can get over the temptation of writing finely, and really confine himself to the strong and clear exposition of matter of fact he has to bring forward.—LORD JEFFREY.

THE SOVEREIGN OF JAPAN.

Every thing about him must be incessantly new; no article of his dress is ever worn twice; the plates and dishes off which he eats, the cups or bowls out of which he drinks, must be new at every meal, as also the culinary utensils in which that meal is prepared. But none are allowed to retain these articles; they have been hallowed by the sovereign's use, and must be destroyed immediately, for they would be considered profaned by any other human touch. Even to feed upon the broken victuals which are brought from his table, would call down the vengeance of Heaven upon the offender. To prevent all risk of the kind, every thing which has been used by this mighty sovereign is instantly torn, broken, or burnt. The consequence of this very inconvenient honour, the heavy expense of renewing daily, almost hourly, whatever appertains to the "son of Heaven," is alleviated by supplying his wardrobe, table, kitchen, &c., with articles of the very cheapest, commonest, and therefore coarsest description.

HONEY-MOON.

Though this word is in common use, its derivation is little known, as nothing respecting it is found in the dictionaries or encyclopedias. Its origin is from a custom of the Tuetons, an ancient people of Germany, who drank mead or metheglin, a beverage made with honey, for thirty days after the wedding.

GRATITUDE.

As the branches of a tree return their sap to the root from whence it arose; as a river poureth its streams to the sea whence its springs are supplied; so a grateful man delighteth in returning a benefit received. He acknowledgeth his obligations with cheerfulness; he looketh on his benefactor with love and esteem.

THE LAST DAY.

To every thing beneath the sun there comes a last day, and of all futurity this is the only portion of time that can in all cases be infallibly predicted. Let the sanguine then take warning, and the disheartened take courage; for to every joy and every sorrow, to every hope and every fear, there will come a last day.—JAMES MONTGOMERY.

"For they who credit crime are they who feel
Their own hearts weak to unresisted sin;
Men'ry, not judgment, prompts the thoughts which steal
O'er minds like these, an easy faith to win;
And tales of broken truth are still believed
Most readily by those who have themselves deceived.

Among the variety of ills which surround an unmarried woman, there is none more vexatious than the unwelcome attentions of a married male dashleu, and cannot listen to as a suitor. She is compelled to treat him with civility, and however chilling her conduct may be, however great the distance she may wish to preserve, if she is suitable and courteous, a determined wooer will find hope in every smile, in every benevolent or kind expression, and will persist in his attentions, although they are perfectly disagreeable, nay, almost hateful to her.—A. L. B.

APHORISMS AND REFLECTIONS.

How beautiful is Nature! From the sun in his noon-tide glory, to the humble plantlet of the glowworm! What painter could faithfully depict the rainbow colouring of a convalescent black eye? As comfort to the afflicted spirit, so is the hat-brush to the ruffled gossamer. Perseverance and industry will ultimately obtain life's leg of mutton, be the pole on which it is elevated never so greasy; and the carefully-soaped tail of the pig of prosperity seldom eludes the grasp of well-directed assiduity.—Punch.

AMERICAN WOMEN.

A custom prevails among the females of America, so highly beneficial in its influence, and strikingly agreeable, as to be worthy of universal imitation. It is that while they are performing any kind of work, whether in the manufactory, the shop, or in the office of domestic industry, they are generally seated with the greatest care. On many such occasions, I have observed with admiration, a union of neatness with simplicity in their dress, approaching to the perfection of good taste.—GEORGE FLOWER.

ANGER.

There are some persons so much inclined to anger, that they appear unable to exist without being occasionally excited to it. Seneca speaks of Cellius, a celebrated orator of his time, who was so choleric a man, that no person could pass an hour with him without his quarrelling with them. He had an acquaintance to dine with him one day, who, desirous, at any rate, of obtaining his favour, assented to everything he said; this did not suit Cellius; wearied out by peace and quietness, he at last exclaimed, "Do, for Heaven's sake, contradict me in something, that we may not agree in this pleasurable manner on every subject." The shrewd Montaigne says (I suppose not truly) that those who have to manage testy women well know what a rage they get into, if their anger is met with mildness, silence, and indifference.

COMMON SENSE.

Fine sense and exalted sense are not half so valuable as common sense. There are forty men of wit for one man of sense; and he that will carry nothing but gold about him will be every day at a loss for want of readier change.

A PERILOUS NURSERY GROUND.

The children of the sloping Isle of Rattrag, when they first begin to toddle about, are tethered to a stake to prevent them from rolling into the sea!—Wilson's Voyage Round Scotland.

FLOWERS.

Pluck not a flower:
Or if you do, pluck gently;
For they are Nature's eyes,
Through which she looks to Heaven!
Flowers are the sadness that tell
Love of the great Creator to mankind!
The fainting traveller, on the desert wild,
Saw one modest flowerets, and he felt
That He who made that blossom and sustained it,
Was guarding him.
It was enough; he rose and went his way,
With hope renewed, and gratitude, and praise.

MAR

THE TEMPLE CHURCH—VIEW FROM THE ALTAR.

THE TEMPLE CHURCH.

As public journalists, it has seldom been our pleasing duty to record an event of greater interest to all lovers of antiquity than that afforded by the magnificent repair and restoration of the TEMPLE CHURCH, about to be re-opened after an interval of two years, during which the resources of architecture and painting have contributed to render its general appearance and effect altogether unparalleled in modern days. The historical associations connected with this ancient structure invest it with a peculiar charm, and a brief allusion to that once celebrated order, the Knights Templars, through whose pious devotion the present edifice was erected nearly seven centuries ago, may not be an unfitting introduction to a detail of its present state.

The circumstances which led to the institution of the Knights Templars were the alleged discovery of the holy sepulchre, by the Empress Helena, mother of Constantine, and the subsequent erection of a magnificent church over the venerated monument. This led to a tide of pilgrimage towards Jerusalem, which went on increasing during the four successive centuries. At the conquest of the Holy City by the Turcomans, in 1065, the pilgrims were fearfully oppressed. A tax was exacted for admission to the sacred sepulchre, and many, unable to pay it, were compelled to return to their distant homes without having attained the object of their journey. This state of things aroused the sympathy of the Christian world, and, according to the historian, "a nerve was touched of exquisite feeling, and the sensation vibrated to the heart of Europe."

It was at this juncture that nine noble knights formed themselves into a sacred brotherhood, with the appellation of "Poor Fellow-soldiers of Jesus Christ," for the purpose of defending the crowds of helpless pilgrims which still pressed onwards towards Jerusalem. There was in their character a romantic union of the attributes of the monk and the soldier, and the services they rendered to the Christian cause were of a most important nature. Their rise was rapid, and so was the growth of their ambition. Presently they enlarged their object, from the defence of the poor pilgrims to that of the kingdom of Jerusalem itself, and eminent men from various countries joined their society, and threw their whole possessions into the common stock. Hugh de Payens was made "Master," and, having first succeeded in obtaining the sanction of the Pope, spread everywhere throughout Europe the knowledge of the actual purposes of the new order, and sought assistance. He set out from Jerusalem with four brethren: he returned to it, after visiting England, with three hundred, all chosen from the noblest families of Europe. Before leaving England, Hugh de Payens placed a knight at the head of the society in this country, whose duty it was to manage the estates and affairs of the order, and transmit the revenue to Jerusalem. Numerous Templar establishments now sprang up in Great Britain. The site of the first metropolitan house was in Holborn, where Southampton-buildings stands; and, as the brotherhood increased in number and wealth, they purchased the site of the present Temple, and began to erect their magnificent church and other buildings.

During the holy fervour of the Crusades the Kings of England and the haughty legates of the Pope were wont to mix with the armed bands of the Templars, in this their chief ecclesiastical edifice in Britain. The solemn ceremonies attendant upon the admission of a novice to the holy vows of the brotherhood, conducted with closed doors, during the first watch of the night—the severe religious exercises performed by the stern military friars—the vigils that were kept up at night in the church—and the reputed terrors of the penitential cell—all contributed to throw an air of mystery and romance around the sacred building, and to create in the minds of the vulgar a feeling of superstitious terror, giving rise to those horrible tales of impiety, and crime of magic and sorcery, which led to the unjust and infamous execution at the stake of the Grand Master and many hundred knights, and to the annihilation of their proud and powerful order. In the beginning of the fourteenth century the knights were publicly accused as enemies and deriders of Christianity. The charge was preferred by Philip the Fair, a man distinguished for his avarice and the unscrupulous means he used for its gratification. The Templars were known to be wealthy, and popular opinion estimated their annual revenue at six millions sterling. The necessary information having been obtained from a condemned criminal, said by some writers to have been an apostate Templar, all the brethren dispersed throughout Europe were seized and imprisoned without any warning or apprehension of approaching danger, and the order was extirpated by a decree of the Council of Vienne. Some of the knights under the infliction of torture confessed their guilt. William de la Moore, the English Grand Master, was among the few whom no terror could induce to retract their first avowal of innocence.

Philip found a ready coadjutor in Edward the First, and, after the infliction of the most horrible cruelties on the brethren resident in England, a public recantation was made by many members of the order before the south door of St. Paul's Cathedral. The Pope, who had taken an active part in the inquisitorial proceedings above alluded to, issued a decree vesting the property of the Templars in the Knights of St. John of Jerusalem, a rival order of great wealth and power. Edward resisted this appropriation, and continued to distribute the lands amongst his friends and favourites. In 1313 he granted the Temple at London, with the church and buildings thereon, to Aymor de Valence, Earl of Pembroke, and in the following year placed several merchants from whom he had borrowed money in possession of many of the manors of the Templars. The Hospitallers, or Knights of St. John, were ultimately compelled to purchase the confiscated estates in the reign of Edward the Third, and soon after leased the church and its appurtenances for a rent of £10 per annum to a society of students of the common laws of England, who formed themselves, in the reign of Richard II., into two bodies—known as those of the Inner and Middle Temple. In the reign of Henry VIII. the order of St. John was dissolved, and the Temple again became the property of the Crown; but the students of the law still held it on a lease, "defending one Christian from another, as the old Templars did Christians from Pagans." James I. granted the whole of the buildings to Sir Julius Cæsar, the Benchers, and others of the Temple, and their assigns for ever, "for the reception, lodging, and education of the professors and students of the laws of this realm," at a rent of £10 yearly from each society.

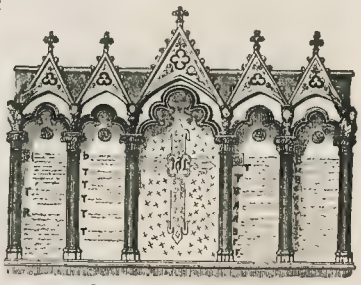
The church narrowly escaped the flames in 1666, and was beautified in 1682. The south-west part was newly built with stone in 1695. In 1706 the church was whitewashed, gilt, and painted, and the pillars of the round tower wainscoted. The figures of the Crusaders reposing side by side on the pavement were "cleaned and painted" at the same time; and subsequent repairs took place in 1736 and 1811. In 1827 a restoration of the circular portion was made under the direction of Sir Robert Smirke; but it was reserved for the Benchers of the present day to carry out that magnificent work which it is our purpose briefly to detail.

The earlier portion of the church, technically known as the "Round," was consecrated by Heraclius, in 1185. It was dedicated to the Virgin Mary; and Matthew Paris speaks of it as "an edifice worthy to be seen." The oblong portion was consecrated in 1240. The plan of the church, as our readers will understand, consists of a circular nave opening into a square chancel. The nave is entered by a semi-circular arched doorway, deeply recessed and ornamented on either side with columns bearing foliated capitals, from whence spring a series of arched mouldings richly carved and decorated. The amount of labour bestowed on the restoration of this entrance has been enormous, and the beauty of its details must be seen to be appreciated. Passing this elegant doorway we enter

THE CIRCULAR NAVE.—The six clusters of old Purbeck marble columns, which formerly supported the whole superstructure, have been removed and new columns of the same material substituted. The ceiling of the centre part (a truncated dome of comparatively modern erection) has been taken down, and a new oak vaulted and grained ceiling substituted, painted by Mr. Willement, strictly in accordance with the style of the period. The whole of the walls, arches, and aisle vaults have been reworked, and new polished marble shafts substituted for the old columns. The sculptural figures of the Knights Templars have been restored in the most perfect manner, and will again occupy their former positions.

THE TRIFORIUM OF THE NAVE has been converted into a depository for nearly all the monuments which formerly disfigured the walls of the church. This gallery, common in all cathedral edifices, now forms a handsome promenade of 12 feet wide and 15 high round the circle, the mural tablets of most of the eminent lawyers of the last two centuries being carefully arranged on either side. They are much better seen than formerly, and form an interesting collection of monumental sculpture.

THE SQUARE CHANCEL.—This part of the church, hitherto filled with pews, which concealed the bases of the marble columns (themselves hidden by a thick coating of plaster and paint, through the over-anxious desire to efface all emblems of the Popish faith on the part of the Protestant lawyers shortly after the Reformation), and encumbered to a height of eight feet from the ground with oak wainscoting, shutting out the view of the elegant marble piscina on the south side of the building, has been entirely cleared of these unsightly additions. The huge pulpit and organ-screen are also removed, and a new and elegant gallery for the reception of that instrument has been erected on the north side, occupying one bay, with a vestry beneath. The walls of the latter small apartment are studded with monuments, among which the most conspicuous are those of Lord Eldon, Lord Stowell, and Oliver Goldsmith. The north and south aisles are each divided into five compartments; the eastern division will be occupied by the benchers' ladies, and that adjoining by the benchers themselves, every seat having distinct and elaborately carved elbows. The two next are occupied by the barristers, and the remaining division by the barristers' ladies. The members of the Inner Temple will occupy the south, and those of the Middle Temple the northern side of the church. The whole of the centre is fitted up with sittings for the students, in the cathedral style of arrangement. The most prominent object on entering the chancel from the western porch is the triple-lancet window over the altar. This beautiful specimen of stained glass, executed by Mr. Willement, F.S.A., is intended to represent the principal events in the life of our Saviour. In the first division are the annunciation, the nativity, the angels appearing to the shepherds, the wise men before Herod, their progress towards Bethlehem, and their adoration of the infant Jesus. The centre division contains the flight into Egypt, the presentation in the temple, Christ before the doctors, the baptism, the marriage at Cana, the calling of St. Peter, the transfiguration, the entry into Jerusalem, the last supper, Christ before Pilate, bearing the cross, the crucifixion, Joseph begging the body of Jesus, the soldiers guarding the sepulchre, and, in the extreme upper point, the resurrection. The third division contains representations of those events which took place after the crucifixion. The interstices of each of the divisions are filled up with a mosaic of the richest coloured glass, and enclosed within broad and elaborately-ornamented borders. On each side of this window are three other openings, containing subjects in stained glass illustrative of the history of the Knights Templars,—viz., the Temple at Jerusalem, and the city of Bethlehem, the armorial bearings of the founders and benefactors of the order, and equestrian figures of those masters who commanded in England during the erection of this edifice. The style, details, and costume of every part, evidence the most careful antiquarian study, and the arrangement of the various tints presents the most perfect harmony. On the south side of the church, facing the organ, is another painted window, totally different in character. In this the principal ornaments are five whole-length figures of angels, playing on various musical instruments. The remainder of the window is filled by delicately drawn ornaments on a reticulated ground, relieved by rosettes and bands of coloured glass. In the clerestory of the round church there is at present only one window of stained glass, representing our Saviour enthroned between the evangelists. The prevailing colours used for the decoration of the walls and roof of the chancel are blue and red.



THE ALTAR, TEMPLE CHURCH.

The ceiling is divided into compartments, alternately ornamented with the armorial bearings of the two inns; the lamb and staff for the Middle Temple, and the flying horse for the Inner Temple. Figures of several of the early kings of England are emblazoned on the western wall, and the shield of the holy cross worn by the Knights Templars is frequently introduced. The altar is entirely new, from the design of Mr. Smirke. The creed and commandments are painted black, on a gold ground, with illuminated initials, producing a remarkable richness of effect. The whole of the designs for the stall-ends and elbows, consisting of grotesque heads and foliage of the most elaborate description, have been furnished by Mr. Cottingham of the Waterloo-road.

The desk now erected is merely temporary, it being considered prudent to ascertain the most eligible position by actual experiment, previously to the definite adoption of a site for the handsome carved oak pulpit which is in preparation. It is not intended to erect a reading-desk—the creed and lessons will be read as in collegiate establishments. The organ, one of the few superb instruments built by Schmidt more than a century since, has been entirely reconstructed by Bishop, who has greatly extended its power by the addition of fifteen large pedal pipes, and corrected a few defects in the original. The floor is paved with glazed encaustic tiles, copied exactly from ancient examples. This is not expected to be completed by the day appointed for the reopening of the church for public service, owing to the entire stoppage of the works at the Potteries, in Staffordshire, during the late disturbances.

The bell, which was formerly in the roof of the circular nave (although that was not its original place), has been removed, and hung in a new stone belfry turret erected over the Newell staircase on the north side.

The churchyard is being paved and otherwise improved, and it has been determined by the benchers to allow no more interments therein. It will be recollected that the musical service of the Temple Church was formerly a great attraction. The benchers have now decided on introducing a choir, and the service will be performed in the cathedral style. The interest excited by the opening announced for (to-morrow) Sunday, the 6th of November, is very great. The church is daily visited by a number of the nobility and gentry. The Bishop of London went over it last week, and expressed his unqualified admiration and approval of the effect produced by the style of decoration adopted.

The Rev. Mr. Benson (the present Master of the Temple) arrived from Italy a few days since for the express purpose of taking part in the opening service.

FLORICULTURE.

THE SHOWY LILY.

(Lilium Speciosum.)

This very splendid and comparatively rare flower was brought to England by Dr. Siebold. Its native country is Japan, where it grows wild, and it is called by the inhabitants Tamatanero. It is not only handsome on account of its deep clear rose-coloured flowers, which seem all rugged with rubies and garnets, and sparkling with crystal points, but has a very delightful fragrance. Kempfer said, when speaking of its excellence, that "it is magnificent in beauty;" or, to use the words of a poet of repute, we may assert that it is

THE SHOWY LILY.

"A fair, imperial flower;
Which seems designed for Flora's hand
The Sceptre of her power."

We have above spoken of its rose-coloured flowers; but although these are certainly the most beautiful, yet the colours may be various. White flowers are very rare, but the yellow-rose colour and purple are sufficiently common. The plant will flourish well in England if carefully kept from the severity of winter, either in a cold pit or greenhouse. During the summer it may be transplanted into the open garden, if a good warm situation be selected. It flowers in July and August, and requires the same soil and the same general treatment as the camellia, to an article on which in a foregoing number we refer. In some floricultural works we have noticed that a mixture of sandy heath soil and rich sandy loam has been recommended for the Lilium speciosum. This mixture certainly does agree with it extremely well; the sole objection being that under this mode of treatment they are likely to attain a greater height than is consistent with beauty. The flower stem should never be allowed to rise higher than from three to five feet. In propagating it is necessary to detach some of the outer scales of bulbs, and plant them separately towards early spring in small pots of light compost.

These remarks comprise the whole of the directions necessary for the cultivation of this most magnificent flower. To those of our readers who may not have been fortunate to see it, or to inhale its rich perfume, the illustration which accompanies our article will, we fear, beautiful though it be, fail to portray its splendour.

NOOKS AND CORNERS OF OLD ENGLAND.

BATTLE ABBEY.

Imposing must have been the sight,
Ere desolation found thee.—Bernard Barton.

There are scattered, throughout the country, the remains of several edifices, to whose history such peculiar interest attaches, that they would seem to have been left by Time, on his vast pilgrimage to Eternity, as memorials to revive the recollection of eventful periods in the annals of nations, and, "this is of them." For who can look upon the ancient gateway of Battle Abbey (which we here present to our readers) without realising to his "mind's eye" the memorable battle of Hastings; and pondering on the consequences of that important conflict, which, on October 14, 1066, transferred the sceptre of England from the unfortunate Harold to the ambitious invader, William Duke of Normandy? Battle, a small market town in the rape of Hastings, in the county of Sussex, was anciently called Epiton, and was the scene of the celebrated encounter to which we have just referred. In commemoration of his momentous victory, the Conqueror erected a spacious and magnificent monastery, dedicated to St. Martin, and called De Bello, or Battel, on the very spot where Harold, pierced with many arrows, breathed his last; the high altar, according to the most authentic reports, being reared on the place where the body of the vanquished monarch was discovered, its founder thus seeming to realize the notion, which an able dramatist puts into the mouth of one of his heroines—

The prayers
Of the devout are precious—fraught with store
Of grace, they bring forgiveness from the skies;
And on the soil, by gory slaughter stained,
Shall rise the purifying fane.

For the support of this abbey, William made a royal grant of land "for a league around." He also endowed it with many and great privileges, among which was that of the sanctuary, thus described in the words of the Charter—"if any robber, or murderer, or other criminal, take refuge in this church, he shall not be molested, but suffered to escape; the abbot of the church shall have power, wherever he happens to come, to save a thief or a robber from execution, if he passes by at the time." We need scarcely add that the "right of sanctuary" in capital crime has long since been abolished. Henry the First also granted a charter for holding, at Battle, a "market free of toll on the Lord's day;" but Anthony Viscount Montacute, who, as an old chronicle saith, "built a fine house" there, obtained, most properly, an Act of Parliament to change the day.

BATTLE ABBEY.

Soon after the foundation of the abbey, a town sprang up in its immediate vicinity; or, to quote the words of the historian of that house, "as the monastery increased, 115 houses were built round about it, which formed the town of Battel." In this town, says Camden, is a place called by a French name, from the blood shed there, Sangue Lac, which, from the nature of the soil, looks red after a shower; whence William of Newburg fancifully writes—"The place where was the greatest slaughter of the English fighting for their country, after a little shower, sweats, as if it were fresh blood, as if to testify openly, and by demonstration of fact, that the voice of so much Christian blood yet cries out of the earth to the Lord."

The modern town of Battle, the population of which is about 3000, consists of one street, seated in a valley, running from north-west to south-east; it has a charity-school, and a handsome church dedicated to St. Mary. The grandeur and greatness of the ancient abbey, founded by the Norman conqueror, are fully attested by the vast extent of its ruins; the gate-house, which yet remains entire, is now used as a court for the sessions of the magistrates, and for other public business. On one part of the site of the old monastery stands the mansion of Sir Godfrey Webster, who is descended from an ancient family that was seated at Lockington, Yorkshire, in the reign of Richard II., and who, as lord of the hundred of Battle, succeeds to many of the dues formerly paid to its mitred abbots, who sat as lords in Parliament.

Near the town of Battle is Beacon, or Standard-hill, where the flag of the invading conqueror was first planted. And we may readily conceive with what burning feelings of vexation and despair the friends of Saxon independence gazed on that triumphant banner; whilst a contrast between the present condition of England and the days of her feudal vassalage ought to excite in us a thankful spirit, that we are no longer the subjects of a system that was utterly subversive of liberty, and unfavourable to the best interests of society.

THE FASHIONS.

Paris, Rue de la Chaussé d'Antin, Nov. 1., 1842.

Mon cher Monsieur,—Winter has at last arrived, and so suddenly has it come upon us, that it has found us almost unprepared. Nothing, therefore, is now thought of but to make provision for the exigencies of the forthcoming season. These, so far as dress is concerned, may be summed up in the words, "Furs, shawls, and velvet," which are now the articles in most general request. Of the first of these, the ermine is the most fashionable, and it is presented to us under all the guises of capuchins, manteaus, &c. The most noble and interesting of our princesses has just caused to be made a mantille in black cashmere, with large pelerines, and with sleeves lined throughout with ermine. The manteau of the Duchess de N. has, moreover, a wide embroidery, en soutache, below the band of ermine, and which is continued round the bottom of the manteau. The sable is also most extensively employed for hemming on pelisses, which are either of rose-coloured and white satin, or of green and other velvets, and which are principally meant for use in coming from balls, &c. Black velvets are becoming particularly fashionable. They are used for manteaus, pelisses, bornous, &c., &c.: some of these, which are embroidered, and the embroidery intermixed with passementerie, are extremely becoming.

The bornous is still as much used as ever; only it now goes under the name of a camail, that is to say, the winter camail is made so long that it may readily take the other denomination. Some of these which I have seen used by ladies, in returning from balls and evening parties, are really elegant; let me mention in particular one in white cashmere, having round it a most lovely pattern, embroidered in gold thread, with the lining gros-coloured satin picked out with white.

A description of embroidery for pocket-handkerchiefs, collars peignoirs, is quite the mode here; it is called Arragonaise, and it is a very pretty and suitable article, very much sought after on account of the elegance of its pattern and its lace.

A redingote has just been imported by one of our élégantés, of rough mohair, with a large turn-back of satin upon the front of the petticoat and round the pelerine. This description of facing embroidered with applique spots gives a relief to the dress which is very beautiful.

We have lately seen some pelisses of black velvet ornamented with embroidery with rose-coloured or blue satin, chequered with black squares. In the middle of the black squares a little back tuft is placed which forms the piqure. These pelisses have open sleeves of a middling size, bordered below, and which button at pleasure. A plain pelerine edged with a heavy fringe to make it fall will complete the costume.

Almost all our fashionables will, this winter, have their arms embroidered upon their pocket-handkerchiefs, and these are, moreover, trimmed with lace.

Promenade hats are made of a middling size, and are worn ornamented with feathers dyed of the same colours as the ribbons which trim them. On the other hand, visiting hats are of royal velvet, of sapphire blue, verdignase, mineral grey, straw, or lemon colours, and are ornamented with marabouts. Velvet ribbons of lively and vivid colours are used for the passe of the hats.

The fashionable lady who would now be dressed comme il faut must wear her bonnet rather more forward on the head than has lately been the fashion, and must no longer sport large bows on any of her coiffures. In fine, I must tell you that the fashions for this winter will be more simple than ever.—Such is the decree of our most fashionable circles. HENRIETTE DE B——.

INVENTION OF THE STEAM ENGINE.—A Madrid letter states that there have been discovered in the archives of Salamina, documents showing that experiments on the application of steam to navigation were made at Barcelona as long ago as 1543, by a naval officer named Blasco de Garray. These experiments were made in the presence of Charles V., who, although the idea was not adopted by the Government, made the inventor a present of a considerable sum of money.

THE DUKE OF BEAUFORT'S STUD.—The Duke of Beaufort having determined to reduce his extensive hunting and racing establishment after the Newmarket meeting, a large draft of his grace's horses were brought up from the paddocks at Badminton, and sold by auction on Monday at Tattersall's. There was scarcely any competition, and the horses generally were knocked down at low prices; the highest sum realised by one animal was his grace's valuable hunter Masquerade, which fetched 125 guineas.

QUEEN ELIZABETH.—For a tablet or picture of smaller volume, in my judgment the most excellent is that of Queen Elizabeth—a princess that, if Plutarch were now alive to write lives by parallels, would trouble him, I think, to find for her a parallel among women. This lady was endued with learning in her sex singular, and rare even among masculine princes; whether we speak of learning, of language, or of science modern or ancient, divinity, or humanity; and unto the very last year of her life she accustomed to appoint set hours for reading, scarcely any young student in a University more daily or more duly. As for her government, I assure myself I shall not exceed if I do affirm that this part of the island never had forty-five years of better times; and yet not through the calmness of the season, but through the wisdom of her regimen. For if there be considered on the one side the truth of the religion established; the constant peace and serenity; the good administration of justice; the temperate use of the prerogative, not slackened nor much strained; the flourishing state of learning, sortable to so excellent a patroness; the convenient estate of wealth and means, both of crown and subject; the habit of obedience and the moderation of discontent: and there be considered on the other side the difference of religion, the troubles of neighbour countries, the ambition of Spain, and opposition of Rome; and then that she was solitary and of herself: these things, I say, considered, as I could not have chosen an instance so recent and so proper, so I suppose I could not have chosen one more remarkable and eminent, to the purpose now in hand, which is concerning the conjunction of learning in the prince with felicity in the people.—Lord Bacon.

THE MOCKING BIRD.—This bird seats himself on some tree, where the greatest variety of all sorts of birds dwell, and makes it his business to mock and disappoint them; hence his common name of mocking bird. Having seated himself in a proper place, he listens in profound silence to the songs of the several sorts of birds around him. In the vernal season he makes the love-call of a female of some near neighbour, with heart-stirring melody, until the males come in flocks, to carass their beloved mate; when lo! no such lovely bird is there; they find instead of the lovely fair one, a homely brown thrush. Having succeeded in imposing on one species, he proceeds to play off similar tricks upon trave lers, and continues to play until he is satisfied with his own mischief, and his neighbour's disappointments. When the other birds have young ones, he watches their nests, until the parents have left them in quest of food, when, seating himself near the domiciles, he imitates the scream of the hawk, or some other bird of prey. If the parents heed the scream, and come home, very well; but if not heeded by them, he proceeds to imitate the voice of the young ones in the utmost agony and distress; he utters their shrill cry and dying groan, when the affrighted and afflicted parents come flying with the utmost haste and trepidation to relieve their suffering dying young ones; but, behold, no one is near them, except the innocent, the plain, the honest and candid Mr. Thrush (the mocking bird), who retires as if laughing in his sleeve at the trick which he has played off upon the parents.—In the evening, after the birds have reared their young ones, and when all join to raise their several hymns of praise, the thrush seats himself in the woodland orchestra, and begins by singing in succession the notes and songs of all the birds around him, beating all of them, in using their own notes and singing their own songs. Having thus, as he supposes, carried off the prize in this musical contest, he prepares for his finale, by taking his seat on the topmost end of the highest bough of the loftiest tree, standing in the highest ground in all the grove, and there he commences to sing his own clear notes, and his own most delightful songs. At times, his wings are expanded, his neck is extended, every feather of his whole body quivers with his exertion of limb, and his soul is exerted to its utmost power to produce the most perfect melody that was ever heard in the woods of Ohio. He continues his own delightful music until after all the other birds are silent and still, so that his own song is the only one then heard in the grove, far and wide, all around him, for a long time.—Buckingham's America.

MY OLD COMPANIONS.

My heart has yearned, like other hearts,
With all the fervour Youth imparts;
And all the warmth that Feeling lends,
Has freely cherished "troops of friends."
A change has passed o'er them and me,
We are not as we used to be;
My heart, like many another heart,
Sees old companions all depart.

I mark the names of more than one,
But read them on the cold white stone;
And steps that followed where mine led,
Now on the far-off desert tread;
The world has warped some souls away
That once were honest as the day;
Some dead—some wandering—some untrue—
Oh! old companions, faithful still.

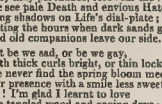
But there are green trees on the hill,
And blue flags sweeping o'er the rill;
And there are daises peeping out,
And dog-roses blossoms round sto-t.
There are my friends "long, long ago,"
The first bright friends I sought to know
And yet ye come—rove where I will,
My old companions, faithful still.

And there are sunbeams, rich and fair,
As cheering as they ever were;
And there are fresh winds playing nigh,
As freely as in time gone by;
The birds are singing as of yore,
The waves yet ripple to the shore;
Howe'er I feel, where'er I range,
These old companions never change.

I'm glad I learnt to love the things
That fortune neither rends nor brings;
I'm glad my spirit learnt to prize
The smiling face of sunny skies;
'Twas well I clasped with doting hand
The balmy wild flowers of the land;
For still ye live in friendship sure,
My old companions bright and pure.

Though strong may be the ties we make,
The strongest mortal tie may break;
Though round the lips that love us now
They may perchance, forswear the vow.
We see pale Death and envious Hate,
Fling shadows on Life's dial-plate;
Noting the hours as swords that glide,
And old companions leave our side.

But be we sad, or be we gay,
With thick curls bright, or thin locks grey,
We never find the spring bloom meet
Our presence with a smile less sweet.
Oh! I'm glad I learnt to love
The tangled wood and cooing dove;
For these will be, in good or ill,
My old companions, changeless still.



LAW INTELLIGENCE.

COURT OF CHANCERY.—WEDNESDAY.

The Lord Chancellor did not sit in his court, his lordship being obliged to attend the Privy Council held at Windsor.

VICE-CHANCELLOR'S COURT.—WEDNESDAY).

(Before the Vice-Chancellor of England.)

His honour resumed his sittings at Westminster with the usual formalities, after the long vacation.

BISHOP v. WAKEFIELD.

Mr. Metcalfe obtained an order of commitment for breach of an injunction, unless cause shown within a week. The injunction was granted some time ago, restraining the defendants, their workmen, and agents, from making a canal near Nottingham, over the plaintiff's lands.

No other case of the slightest public importance occured.

ROLLS COURT.—WEDNESDAY.

This being the first day of Michaelmas term, the Master of the Rolls (Lord Langdale) took his seat upon the bench shortly before two o'clock.

SPARKS v. THE DEVON AND CORNWALL BANKING COMPANY.

This cause, which had been part heard on the previous day, was resumed on Thursday, after some unopposed motions and petitions had been disposed of. The application was on behalf of Mr. Henry Sparks, late of the banking company of Sparks and Co., of Exeter, for an injunction to restrain the defendant, Mr. Deny, who is registrar and public officer of the Devon and Cornwall Banking Company, from issuing execution on a verdict obtained against the plaintiff in the Court of Queen's Bench, for upwards of £2000; also to restrain the said officer from proceeding in a suit to recover another sum of £18,841, mentioned in the pleadings. Lord Langdale, after hearing the arguments on both sides, recapitulated the facts, and concluded by granting the injunction as prayed.

The other courts of law were occupied during the day with motions for new trials, which were of no public interest.

COURT OF QUEEN'S BENCH.—WEDNESDAY.

The Judges who took their seats in the full court for this term were Lord Denman, Mr. Justice Williams, Mr. Justice Coleridge, and Mr. Justice Wightman.

THE QUEEN v. THE MAYOR AND BURGESSES OF STAMFORD.

Mr. Waddington moved for a rule to show cause why a mandamus should not issue to command the defendants to assess the compensation due to Mr. Torkington, for his loss of the office of clerk of the peace of the borough of Stamford, of which he had been deprived by the operation of the provisions of the Municipal Corporations Act. The affidavits on which the motion was founded set forth that Mr. Torkington had been appointed in 1806 the deputy to the gentleman who executed the offices of town-clerk and clerk of the peace of the borough, and had performed the duties of such offices from that year to the year 1829 at which time he succeeded as principal. On the passing of the Municipal Corporations Act he was re-appointed to the office of town-clerk; but in consequence of the provisions of one of the sections of the act, which prevented the two offices being filled by one person, he had lost his situation as clerk of the peace. He had applied to the corporation for compensation, but this had been refused; he had then appealed to the Lords of the Treasury, who had refused his application on the ground that, according to the recent decision of this court, they had no jurisdiction to declare the right of any person to compensation, but could merely settle the amount after his right had been admitted by the corporation, or had been declared by this court. Under these circumstances, he now applied to the court, and asked it to declare his right to compensation, which he humbly conceived was fully established by the Bridgwater case, where the circumstances were as nearly similar as possible to the present. If his right was declared, he could then apply to the Lords of the Treasury to settle the amount of the compensation.—The court granted the rule.

BAIL COURT.—WEDNESDAY.

(Before Mr. Justice Patteson.)

This being the first day of term his lordship did not take his seat until after one o'clock. He sat for a short time, and disposed of a few motions relative to points of practice, none of which were of any public interest.

COURT OF COMMON PLEAS.—WEDNESDAY.

(Sittings in Banco.)

Lord Chief Justice Tindal, Mr. Justice Coltman, Mr. Justice Erskine, and Mr. Justice Maule took their seats on the bench shortly after one o'clock. Their lordships sat until two o'clock, when the court was adjourned.

COURT OF EXCHEQUER.—WEDNESDAY.

The barons took their seats on the bench this day at an earlier hour than is usual on the first day of term, in consequence of the departure of the Lord Chancellor for Windsor. The court was occupied during the greater part of its sitting in hearing applications for new trials in cases tried on the circuits.

ARCHES COURT.—WEDNESDAY.

(Before Sir H. J. Fust.)

This being the first day of term, the session was opened with the usual formalities.

CLOWES v. JONES, FALSELY CALLED CLOWES.

This suit was brought by Mr. Clowes for a nullity of marriage, on the ground of alleged fraud as to the maiden name of his wife. It appears that the wife was the kept mistress of Mr Clowes for some time before the marriage took place; that her real name was Harriet Jones; that she subsequently changed her name more than once; that, in order to induce Mr. Clowes to marry her, she represented to him that she was a natural daughter of Admiral Terry, was niece to Lady Somerset, and was connected in blood with other high families. The libel now offered on behalf of the husband pleaded that as Miss Jones, falsely called Clowes, had given her right name as Emeline Harriet Jeraldine Terry, the marriage was illegal; and he prayed the court to admit the libel, which in effect would be tantamount to a declaration that the marriage was null and void. The age of the lady at the time the marriage was solemnized was 16, and that of the husband 21.—Dr. Addams, with whom was Dr. Jenner, appeared for the wife; and her Majesty's Advocate and Dr. Harding for the husband.—Sir H. J. Fust said, the present question was as to the admissibility of a libel in a suit of nullity of marriage. The parties were married in the month of February, 1841, and by license, at St Mark's, Kennington. The husband was, at the time the license was applied for, a bachelor, and he took the usual oath that there was no lawful impediment to the marriage. The license was granted, and the marriage was solemnized. The man intended to marry the person he did marry. There might be a fraud as to the name, but not as to the person. There was no consanguinity, or other legal cause to render the fact of marriage illegal. The court could not, upon any of the principles heretofore acknowledged, hold this to be a void marriage. But it was said that Mr. Clowes would not have married if he had known that the female was not connected with the high families she had named. A license had been obtained by the husband himself—the license being a dispensation from the necessity of having the banns called, and a marriage celebrated as the present had been ought not to be set aside. By the New Marriage Act, both parties must be cognisant of the fraud. The court was, therefore, of opicion that there were no circumstances in this case so materially to distinguish it from that of "Cope and Burt," and that the facts could not render the marriage null and void. The court, therefore, saw no use in admitting the libel, as, if all the statements in it were proved, it could not declare the marriage null and void. The libel, therefore, must be rejected.

[The above decision, we opine, will apply to the case of Mr. Woolley, generally known as the Bristol hoax cake.]

CENTRAL CRIMINAL COURT.

NEW COURT.

(Before the Common Sergeant.)

MONDAY.—John Wilkes Gower, a genteel and respectable appearance, was indicted for unlawfully and feloniously marrying one Elizabeth Bridge, his wife by a previous marriage being then alive.—The prosecutrix, a young woman of prepossessing appearance, briefly stated to the court the history of her courtship and of her marriage with the prisoner. The prisoner had always represented himself as a single man; but upon inquiry it turned out that he had a wife living. The certificates of both marriages were produced, and a witness was examined that the prisoner's first wife is now alive.—The Common Sergeant having summed up the evidence briefly, the jury returned a verdict of Guilty.—It was then proved that the prisoner had been convicted at an assizes upon a young female, and had been imprisoned in the Penitentiary.—The Common Sergeant, after pointing out to the prisoner the cruel nature of his offence, sentenced him to be transported for seven years.

Amelia King, aged 17, and Agnes, her sister, 18, were indicted upon two charges of stealing wearing apparel from Mary Moss and Elizabeth Greenway; and Mary King, aged 42, was charged with feloniously receiving the said property from her children, well knowing it to have been stolen.—The prisoners were all convicted, and the Common Sergeant told the elder prisoner that he feared that she had instigated her daughters to commit the robbery. But that been proved she would have been transported. The sentence upon Agnes was, that she be imprisoned in the House of Correction at Brixton for three months, and that Amelia, and Mary her mother, be kept to hard labour in the same gaol for one year.

(Before Mr. Commissioner Bullock, Alderman J. Johnson, &c.)

James Gosbell, Edmund Smith, and Frederick Shackleford, were indicted, together with Robert W. Beaumont, Robert Beaumont, Charles Sydney Smith, and John Lewis Batcelor (not in custody), for conspiring to obtain goods of various warehousemen in the City, with intent to cheat and defraud them thereof. After a long trial, the prisoners were all found Guilty. Shackleford was sentenced to twelvemonths imprisonment. Judgment on the others was respited.

OLD COURT.

(Before Mr. Justice Erskine.)

Monday morning the court was crowded to excess at an early hour, doubtless for the purpose of hearing the disgusting details of the case of the woman Alice Lowe, who stood indicted for stealing, at the parish of Paddington, two miniatures, three gold snuff-boxes, a gold toothpick, a smelling-bottle, and a variety of other articles, the property of Lodge Reymond, Viscount Frankfort, Baron Montmorency.—Mr Clarkson and Mr. Bodkin conducted the prosecution. Mr. Adolphus appeared for the defence.—Lord Frankfort was the principal witness for the prosecution, and detailed, with the most shameless effrontery, a history of iniquitous and abandoned depravity, in which the unfortunate prisoner at the bar, and her "noble" prosecutor, were the principal actors. In accordance with our pledge to the public, we decline defiling our columns with the particulars of this profligate case—the more especially as a few months ago we had occasion to bring, by his conduct, disgrace upon the peerage. We cannot better conclude our notice of this affair than by quoting the following from the Morning Post, which completely expresses our sentiments on the subject.—"With the result of the trial of Alice Lowe nobody, we apprehend, can be dissatisfied; nor in any honourable or manly mind can there lurk the slightest sympathy with the noble prosecutor in this revolting case. Yet we confess that the expression of a degree of sympathy manifested towards the defendant is to us a subject of regret. It really seems to be forgotten that the vices of Lord Frankfort, however disgusting or outrageous, cannot in the slightest manner serve as that defendant's excuse for the vices of the defendant into virtues, and of entitling her to the applause of the world. When we read of decent-looking people struggling to shake hands with the acquitted woman, and exclaiming, "God bless you, my girl!" we recognise, with much pain, an exhibition of French, and a repudiation of English, sentiment and manners."

(Before Mr. Justice Maule.)

TUESDAY.—Edward Bannister and John Campbell, the prisoners who were tried and acquitted the previous week of having in their possession one hundred £500 forged bank-notes, knowing them to be forged, were again placed at the bar this morning on a second indictment, charging them with having a forged copperplate in their possession.—The prisoners pleaded Guilty to this indictment. They were sentenced to pay a fine of 1*s*, and be discharged.

MANSLAUGHTER.—SPEEDY JUSTICE.—John Heskett was indicted for having caused the death of Thomas Waiding, on Tuesday last. It appeared from the evidence that the prisoner and deceased resided at Camberwell; that on Tuesday last (this day week) they had a violent quarrel, which ended in a pugilistic contest, in the course of which deceased received such severe injury, from blows inflicted by the prisoner, that he never spoke afterwards—and in a short time he died. It did not appear which of the parties proposed to fight, or which of them gave the first blow. A surgeon deposed that the cause of death was from violent injuries on the head and body.—The jury returned a verdict of Guilty.—The Court sentenced the prisoner to four months' imprisonment.

A special session of the above court was held on Wednesday, pursuant to the provisions of the Central Criminal Court Act, for the purpose of fixing the days for holding the sessions for the ensuing year. Shortly after eleven o'clock a number of learned judges entered the court, when they at once proceeded to assign the periods for holding the sessions.

MANSION-HOUSE.—John Sly, who had for a considerable time been a waiter at the North and South American Coffee-house, was brought before Mr Alderman Wilson, charged with having plundered his employer, Mr. Markwell, the present owner of that establishment. It appeared that Mr. Howard.—Mr Howard stated that a good deal of poultry was stolen.—The prisoner cried bitterly, and threw himself on the mercy of Mr. Howard and the alderman. He had never done such a thing before, and was surprised that he had given way to the impulse of the instant. He fell upon his knees and entreated forgiveness.—Mr. Howard recommended him to mercy. He had read the letters found in his possession, which were from different persons, couched in terms of respect, and promising to help him to some employment, if any opportunity offered.—Mr. Alderman Gibbs remanded the prisoner, that inquiry might be made into his character.

GUILDHALL.—A man of respectable appearance, named James Smith, was charged with stealing a pheasant from the shop of Mr. Howard, a poulterer, in Leadenhall-market.—A lad, Edwin English, stated that he was in the room at about noon, and saw the prisoner take the pheasant from the board, and put it under his coat. He walked leisurely away, but the pheasant dropped, and he picked it up. He was then stopped by Mr. Howard.—Mr Howard stated that a good deal of poultry was stolen.—The prisoner cried bitterly, and threw himself on the mercy of Mr. Howard and the alderman. He had never done such a thing before, and was surprised that he had given way to the impulse of the instant. He fell upon his knees and entreated forgiveness.—Mr. Howard recommended him to mercy. He had read the letters found in his possession, which were from different persons, couched in terms of respect, and promising to help him to some employment, if any opportunity offered.—Mr. Alderman Gibbs remanded the prisoner, that inquiry might be made into his character.

MARLBOROUGH-STREET.—A singular case, the first of the kind which has been brought before a police-magistrate, was heard by Mr. Hardwick.—Captain Archibald Douglas, of the 80th Madras Infantry, was placed at the bar on a charge of being a deserter from that regiment.—Mr. Clarkson attended for the prosecution (the Hon. East India Company).—The Governor's despatches were handed in and authenticated by Mr. Mill.. from which it appeared that the defendant had obtained leave of absence until the 23rd of March next for the purpose of going to the Neilgherry Hills, but instead of doing so he came to England, passing by the name of Jackson.—Mr. Chambers (who appeared for the accused) said, as soon might the magistrate commit a person who had leave to go to Manchester, and who by chance went to Birmingham, as commit his client for desertion. It might happen that an officer had leave to go to the Cape of Good Hope for the benefit of his health, but rather chose to remain at sea or go to Madeira.—was such officer, if he returned in time, to be arraigned as a deserter, and after being sent to prison, submitted to the tender mercies of the East India Company or the Secretary at War? He should dissent from this, and press for a remand, and the production of all the documents.—Mr. Clarkson observed, that, if the defendant was committed, his learned friend could apply for a writ of habeas corpus.—Mr. Chambers: Yes. and before I can get that he may be on his passage to India.—It was ultimately agreed that the defendant (bail being refused) should be remanded until Friday.—Inspector Hughes, of the A division, then proved pro forma, that he took the prisoner into custody on Saturday afternoon at 203, Piccadilly, and that he then acknowledged his name was Captain Archibald Douglas.

THE PLEASURES OF MEMORY.—Mary Ann Jameson, Mary Ann Smith, Ann Giles, Caroline Johnson, and Mary Holcombe, five elderly women, were brought before Mr. Hardwick, charged with having begged from, and otherwise importuned for money, Mr. Samuel Rogers, of St. James's-place, an elderly gentleman well known in the poetical world.—Horsford, one of the Mendicity Society's constables, said he watched the proceedings of the defendants for nearly an hour. He saw them surround the old gentleman and solicit h'm for money. Mr. Rogers tried to avoid them, but they followed him to a club-house in Waterloo-place, waiting until he again made his appearance. When Mr. Rogers came out they renewed their importunities, and as it was quite evident their object was to extort money, either through the fear or compassion of the old gentleman, he got the assistance of another constable and succeeded in taking all five into custody.—A police constable corroborated Horsford's statement, and added that one of the defendants was so violent that the old gentleman, to get rid of her, was obliged to inflict "a poke on her stomach with his umbrella."—Mr. Hardwick asked Jameson what she meant by the conduct imputed to her?—Jameson said she had been intimately acquainted with Mr. Rogers for forty years. Mr. Rogers, in consideration, had settled upon her an annuity of 10*s*. a week for life. It was, therefore, very unlikely she should have acted in the way described by the constable.—Mary Ann Smith gave the magistrate to understand that when but a mere child Mr. Rogers became intimate with her. Mr. Rogers had frequently given her money, and if the magistrate caused him to attend he would not deny it.—The other three women made various excuses, none of them, however, claimed any acquaintance with Mr. Rogers.—Mr. Hardwick said that the practices of these women had grown to such a height that he was determined to put a stop to them. He should, on this occasion, send all five to the House of Correction for one month, with this caution, that if brought before him again he should make the term of imprisonment three months with hard labour.

QUEEN-SQUARE.—ATTEMPTED MURDER BY A CHELSEA PENSIONER.—Robert Wilkinson, an indoor-pensioner of Chelsea Hospital, was brought to this court in custody of police-constable Webster Jones, 50 B, charged with feloniously assaulting Sarah Williamson, his wife, by striking her on the head with a poker, whereby he had placed her life in imminent danger. The magistrate, Mr Burrell, was made acquainted with the nature of the charge, and having ascertained from the house-surgeon of St. George's Hospital, where the prisoner's wife lay, that she was not likely to survive beyond a couple of hours, he required to that institution being examined by the chief clerk, for the purpose of taking her depositions. On his return to the police-office, he remanded the prisoner for a week.

UNION-HALL.—Thomas Sturgeon, a man in a deplorable state of destitution, was charged with breaking a gas-lamp, for the purpose of being committed to gaol.—A policeman said that the defendant called at the station-house, and wanted admission, saying that he was exhausted for want of food, and wandering about the streets. He was informed that his request could not be complied with, for if it was, the station-house would not be sufficiently capacious to hold persons charged with offences. He was then advised to go to the workhouse, but he said that they would not give him a bit of bread and cheese, and a night's lodging on the straw, unless he consented to work for four hours breaking stones, and that he would gladly consent to do the work if he was able; but that, owing to disease brought on by starvation, he was unable to do so, and therefore was turned away from the gate. The defendant then left the station-house, and finding that he met with a refusal there, broke a lamp in the sight of the policeman, who accordingly took him into custody.—After this pitiful tale the defendant was committed for four days to gaol, and then to be passed; for which he expressed his gratitude.

James Mullett, the son of a respectable auctioneer, was charged with the following robberies:—It appeared that the prisoner had absconded from his father's residence, taking with him some property; and having kept away as soon as he expended what he had, he engaged a lodging, in which other young men were, and got up in the night and earned off their clothes. He subsequently went to other lodginghouses, and committed similar depredations, until he was at length taken into custody, when several of the articles he had possessed himself of in the way described were found upon him. In the course of the examination it appeared that the prisoner had for a considerable length of time contracted dishonest habits, although his parents, who are highly respectable, had done everything in their power to cure his propensity for theft. He had also suffered former imprisonment in the House of Correction, where he had undergone the strict discipline of the seal, without its tending to improve his habits.—The magistrate said that it was quite useless to inflict summary punishment on such a hardened offender, and therefore committed him for trial.

SINGULAR OCCURRENCE AT HOUNSLOW.—For some days past considerable excitement has existed throughout the neighbourhood of Hounslow, in consequence of the circulation of a report that, at the recent assemblage of the 8th Hussars (now quartered at Hounslow Barracks) for manœuvring on the review-ground on Hounslow-heath, one of the privates of the regiment had fired ball cartridge instead of blank cartridge, and that several persons had, in consequence, while pursuing their daily occupations in the fields &c., most miraculously escaped being shot. Upon enquiry, the rumour turns out to be perfectly correct. One man was arrested on suspicion, but afterwards liberated for want of sufficient proof to criminate him. It is said that during the firing one of the sergeant-majors was heard to say, "There goes a shot," and by some persons it is considered that the shots were intended for one of the officers, but upon what grounds such a suspicion is entertained have not transpired.

An adjourned meeting of the letter-press printers was held on Wednesday, in Bell-yard, Temple-bar, which was attended by upwards of 150 of the unemployed compositors of London and Westminster, in order to take into consideration the present depressed state of the trade, when a resolution was passed to the effect, that the unexampled distress which prevails among the unemployed letter-press printers of the metropolis, through laxity of business, compelled the promoters of a subscription for their relief to call the trade together, in order to effect the objects which they have in view, and to use their utmost exertions to promote their interests generally.

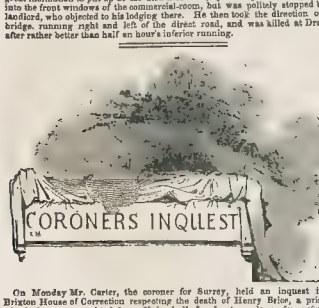
It would appear that the disturbances amongst operatives are not confined to this country, for the Journal de Rouen, of the 30th ult., states, that the operatives were employed at the manufactories of Ducourt, near Bernay, assembled on the 28th ult. in considerable numbers, and demanded of the sub-prefect an increase of wages. Finally it is stated that their remonstrances became so violent, that the prefect was obliged to order the gendarmerie to charge the people, in which operation several were wounded.

CURRAN'S FIRST PATRON.—"Allow me, gentlemen," said Curran one evening to a large party, "to give you a sentiment." When a boy, I was one morning playing at marbles in the village of Ball Alley, with a light heart and lighter pocket. The gibe and the jest went gaily round, when suddenly among us appeared a stranger of remarkable and very genteel aspect; his intrusion was not the least restraint upon our merry little assemblage. He was a benevolent creature, and the days of infancy (after all, the happiest we shall ever see) perhaps rose upon his memory. Heaven bless him! I see his fine form, at a distance of half a century, just as he stood before me in the little Ball Alley in the day of my childhood. His name was Boyse; he was the Rector of Newmarket. To me he took a particular fancy. I was winning, and full of waggery—thinking everything that was eccentric, and by no means a miser of my eccentricities, every one was welcome to share of them, and I had plenty to spare, after having freighted the company. Some sweetmeats easily bribed me to go home with him. I learned from Boyse my alphabet and my grammar, and the rudiments of my classics. He taught me all he could, and he then sent me to school at Middleton. In short, he made me a man. I recollect it was about thirty-five years afterwards, when I had risen to some eminence at the bar, and had a seat in Parliament, on my return one day from the court, I found at my old gentleman seated alone in my drawing-room, his feet familiarly placed on each side of the Italian marble chimney-piece, and his whole air bespeaking the consciousness of one quite at home. I turned round—it was my friend of Ball Alley. I rushed instinctively into his arms and burst into tears; words cannot describe the scene which followed. "You are right, sir, you are right. The chimney-piece is yours—the pictures are yours—the house is yours——you gave me all I have—my friend—my benefactor!" He dined with me; and in the evening I caught the tear glistening in his fine blue eye when he saw poor little Jack, the creature of his bounty, rising in the House of Commons to a Right Honourable. Poor Boyse! he is gone; and no suitor had a longer deposit of practical benevolence in the court above. This is his wine—let us drink to his memory.—Curran's Life.

SPORTING INTELLIGENCE.

PEDESTRIANISM.—A first-rate pedestrian match, which drew together upwards of a thousand spectators, took place the other day in the Wandsworth road. It was a six mile race for £10 a side, between Samuel East and John Pitch, two men who, although termed novices, have before required some celebrity. At a quarter past three the start took place. East took the lead in going off, and maintained it in the most gallant style, never giving his opponent a shadow of chance, and winning without being in the slightest degree distressed, by nearly half a mile. He accomplished the distance in fifty-five minutes and a few seconds, and exhibited in his style of walking considerable freedom and excellence.

HER MAJESTY'S BUCKHOUNDS.—The first public meet of her Majesty's stag-hounds this season took place on Tuesday at Salthill, when the Earl of Rosslyn, the noble master of the hunt, and a numerous field, assembled at half-past eleven o'clock. The deer was uncarted in a field adjoining Langley-lane, crossed the rail-road bridge, and made for Slough; passed through the village, and astonished two persons by leaping over their heads; showed a great inclination to put up at the Red Lion Inn, by making an attempt to leap into the front windows of the commercial-room, but was politely stopped by the landlord, who objected to his lodging there. He then took the direction of Uxbridge, running right and left of the direct road, and was killed at Drayton, after rather better than half an hour's inferior running.



On Monday Mr. Carter, the coroner for Surrey, held an inquest in the Brixton House of Correction respecting the death of Henry Brior, a prisoner, who had been committed from Union-hall for fourteen days, for refractory conduct in the Newington Workhouse. It appeared the deceased was one of those who would not work after breakfast, but preferred, as soon as that meal was over, taking a walk to some other place for the same purpose. By lying about in the open air and damp he had greatly impaired his health and constitution, and was ill when admitted; and, although every attention was paid to him, he got worse, and expired. Such was the brief history of the wretched man as given in evidence, and the jury returned a verdict of "Natural death."

EXHUMATION OF HUMAN BONES.—The men engaged in digging up that part of Oxford-street formerly known as Oxford-road, threw up, a few days ago, two skulls, and other bones belonging to the human species; but they were in such a decayed state that Mr. Coroner Higgs, after consulting with the authorities, declined holding an inquest upon them, as it would be impossible to say how the persons to whom they belonged came by their death. The general supposition is, that where they were found formed a portion of one of the old metropolitan burial-places. The bones were ordered to be deposited in the parish churchyard.

FATAL FALL FROM A SCAFFOLD.—On Wednesday afternoon an inquest was held before Mr. Baker, at the Caledonian Tavern, Stoke Newington, on view of the body of Henry Williams, 19 years of age. Mr. William Greenfield, plasterer, stated that on Saturday afternoon the deceased was at work at some new houses in Wellington-street, Stoke Newington, and had ascended a scaffold-pole, for the purpose of untying one of the cords, when he suddenly missed his hold, and fell to the ground. The deceased expired almost immediately. Verdict —"Accidental death."

MYSTERIOUS CASE.—On Wednesday night an inquest was taken before Mr. Higgs, on the body of Thomas Kember, aged 48 years, who was found floating in the river at the bottom of Strand lane. He appeared to have been in the water about four or five hours. Joseph Burrowdale, 14, Fludyer-street, Westminster, said that the deceased had been in the habit of visiting him every day for the last two months. The last time he saw him alive was on Tuesday night, about twelve o'clock, when he left witness at Whitehall, saying, at the time, that he would get home and set to bed, as he had to be up early in the morning.—By the Coroner: He was rather fresh at the time.—Verdict, "Found drowned; but by what means there was no evidence to show."

THE CHAUNT OF DEATH.

"I am not of earth, but spirit born,
Yet the wide world owns my sway;
Its pomp and its might I laugh to scorn,
For all must t my will obey.
I visit the halls of dazzling light,
Enter the loftiest domes,
And all is anguish and all is night,
Where the King of Terror comes.

"I reign o'er the waves of the mighty deep—
I ride on the stormy wind—
On every shore where breakers sweep,
My ruthless track you find.
I soar on the wings of the pestilence—
Am heard in the tempest crash—
And when earth is veiled in gloom intense,
I sail in the lightning's flash.

"Yet oft in loveliest guise I dwell,—
On the light of the clear blue eye,
On the blooming cheek set I my spell,—
They wither—decay and die.
And often I lurk in the night-winds sigh,
And steal in the youthful breast,—
And gently, calmly, and silently,
Doth that spirit sink to rest.

"And I smile as I mark the youthful brow
Bent over the midnight page,
And list the fond enthusiast's vow
At the shrine of Bard and Sage,
When I have doomed him to sure decay,
And know, while his boys are green,
That his toil-worn frame shall pass away
From earth, and 'no more be seen.'

I care not for pomp or glittering crown,
Serf and Lord are alike to me—
For the mightiest king must bow him down
To a mightier king than he.
I speak! and the loftiest head must bend,
From creation's earliest dawn
I have reigned, and my reign shall only end
With the last of Woman born.

"All things of earth—of air—of sky—
Must yield them unto me,
And the vast and glittering worlds on high
Shall my parting conquest be;
For the Heavens shall melt and pass away
Ere the work of death be done,
And the Sun himself shall see decay
Ere my earthly race be run.

"The universe with my fame hath rung
Since my banner I unfurled,
And my parting requiem shall be sung
'Mid the ruins of a world.
Lord over all with life and breath!
The same triumphant crime
That sounds the dirge of the monarch, Death,
Must sound the knell of Time."

THE GOOD LIFE—LONG LIFE.

It is not growing like a tree
In bulk doth make man better be—
Or standing long an oak three hundred years
To fall a log at last, dry, bald, and sere;
A lily of a day
Is fairer far in May.
Although it fall and die that night,
It was the plant and flower of light.
In small proportions we just beauties see,
And in short measures life may perfect be.

BEN JONSON.

SALT AS MANURE

Amongst the many manures strongly recommended to farmers, few are more highly lauded than common salt; which, it is stated, supplies to crops all that they require, being at the same time the cheapest, most effectual, and most universal of all known manures. As to the practical evidence, on which such assertions are based, I will say nothing; well authenticated facts are always valuable, and we may form our own conclusions from them; the advocates of salt as a manure, are, however, not satisfied with stating simple facts respecting its use, but theorise as to the probable manner in which it may act, and endeavour to prove by those theories, its excellence as a manure. Two chemical reasons are advanced to prove the value of common salt as a fertiliser. It is stated that salt fixes ammonia; and secondly, that when decomposed by ammonia, alkali is set free, which greatly increases the fertility of the soil.

There can be no doubt that in some situations, on particular soils, and applied to particular crops, salt in moderate quantity is an excellent manure—abundant evidence of this is given in the writings of those who have studied the effects of manures; but at the same time there are many cases in which its application has done no good, and indeed sometimes produced evil effects. In many cases, no doubt these effects were the result of too large an application of salt, whilst in others the nature of the soil was such as to render the salt of no value.

When very strong solutions of common salt and carbonate of ammonia are mixed at low temperatures, they slowly and imperfectly decompose each other, and a quantity of bi-carbonate of soda and muriate of ammonia are formed, whilst a portion of ammonia is set free. The bi-carbonate of soda being almost insoluble in the solution of muriate of ammonia, may be separated and obtained pure, whilst the muriate of ammonia may be obtained by evaporating the solution and separating it from undecomposed common salt, and free ammonia. If, in place of separating the two substances, a quantity of water is added, the bi-carbonate of soda dissolves, and the two salts re-decompose each other, common salt and carbonate of ammonia being formed. In the same way, if solution of carbonate or bi-carbonate of soda be mixed with solution of muriate of ammonia, they mutually decompose each other, and form carbonate of ammonia and common salt.

It is perfectly true that very strong solutions of bi-carbonate of ammonia and common salt decompose each other, and that common carbonate of ammonia decomposes solution of salt, when carbonate acid is passed through it; but it is equally true that this only holds good when the solutions are concentrated; if dilute, no such change takes place. When salt is employed as manure it is exposed to the action of a very dilute solution of carbonate of ammonia, for dew and rain-water contain a minute quantity of that salt; under these circumstances it is not to be expected that the salt will be decomposed; and it is not reasonable to compare what takes place in strong solutions in close vessels, with what takes place in the open air with abundance of water. We can only compare the action of rain-water on salt, to the action of very dilute solution of salt, and carbonate of ammonia, and such solutions do not decompose each other. Although chemical facts are certainly against the decomposition of salt by carbonate of ammonia, or the fixation of ammonia by common salt, yet this in no way diminishes the value of salt applied as manure.

The English, French, and Austrian ambassadors have protested against the decision of the Porte in the Turkish question.

SAFE ARRIVAL OF THE BRITISH QUEEN, BELGIAN PACKET.—It is with heartfelt pleasure we announce to our readers the safe arrival of the above steamer at Cowes, at three o'clock on Thursday morning. The most dreadful apprehensions for her safety prevailed in the City since Monday last, as she was then more than ten days beyond her usual time, and no one knew how to account for the delay, except by attributing it to some such fatal disaster as that which must have befallen the President. The British Queen left New York on the 7th ult. for Southampton and Antwerp, with the royal mail steamer Columbia, from Boston and Halifax, which arrived at Liverpool on Saturday, sailed as much as nine days later in the month, viz., on the 16th ult., from Boston, nothing was heard of her until the present announcement. She had on board as passengers, Messrs. L. Goldschmidt, Merian, and Richards, of New York; Messrs. Woodhouse, Stevens, David H. Mount, and Stroebel, of Philadelphia; Messrs. Thomas Morgan, James Crassons, and William Crossley, of England; H. Keenan, of Pittsburg, Pennsylvania; and Mr. G. Ettinger, of Germany. The following is the express from Cowes. "Cowes, Nov. 3.—The British Queen arrived here at three o'clock this morning. Owing to the state of the weather, the captain put into Fayal, and remained there five days. She brought five bags of letters and six passengers. The West India steamer Medway arrived at Fayal as the British Queen left that place, and is expected at Southampton this evening. The mails and English passengers will reach Southampton at ten o'clock this morning, and London at two in the afternoon. One of the British Queen's passengers refused to come home in her from Fayal, through fear, and took his passage in the West India steamer.

SNUFFERS.—The luxury of snuffers is a more modern invention than many persons suppose. Miss Strickland in enumerating the presents made to "Mary, first Queen regnant of England," mentions "the Duke of Norfolk a pair of silver snuffers," and thereon she mentions the following curious note —The use of snuffers at this era (1500), is a proof that England has surpassed other nations in luxury, although there was great need of improvement in manners and customs. In the northern countries the use of snuffers was not comprehended for centuries afterwards. King Gustavus Adolphus replied to one of his officers, who declared "that he never knew what fear was," "then you never snuffed a candle," meaning with his fingers. The delicate way of trimming the Duke of Holstein's candles forms a laughable passage in Baumer's Collections; and even in the beginning of the present century a Swedish officer, dining at an English gentleman's table, seized the snuffers, and after curiously examining them, snuffed the candles with his fingers, and carefully gathering up the snuff, shut it in the snuffers, commending the cleanliness of the English in providing such a receptacle.

MISERIES.—Haggling with a surly hackney coachman for sixpence, and after he has driven off about a quarter of an hour, recollecting that you have left a new umbrella in his coach.—Drying a long letter by the fire; holding it negligently in one hand behind you, whilst you are conversing with a friend in the room, turning round and perceiving it to be in flames.—In sharply turning a corner, coming in contact with a chimney-sweep, or, who impresses your white waistcoat and light-coloured breeches with very visible memorials of the rencontre.—Passing a narrow passage fresh painted.—Forced, by politeness, to quit a comfortable party, to attend a cross old maid to her lodgings, at a distance of two miles.—Wishing to wake early to be in time for a morning coach; waking, and upon looking at your watch, discovering that you had not wound it up.—Dreaming that you have wings and waking with a fit of the gout.—Endeavouring to make violent love under the table, and pressing the wrong foot.—Going with a party of pleasure on the water; while in the act of handing a lady into the boat, your foot slips, and tumble in up to your neck, dragging the affrighted fair one after you.

MISCELLANEOUS.

When I behold the evil and pestiferously-affected minds of Englishmen, I ponder and weigh the fruits of such corrupt minds—contempt, hatred, grudge, and malice against their king, magistrates, laws, orders, and politics—doubtless I cannot think but these men, as much as in them, conspire and work the destruction of this realm. For it can be no otherwise, but that as contempt of godly laws, and sedition among the people and subjects, of what degree soever they are, have wrought the destruction of other realms; so it must and can do no otherwise unto this realm. But what realm or kingdom soever will avoid these evils, let him promote the word of God to be truly and diligently preached and taught unto the subjects and members thereof. The want of it is the chief cause of sedition and trouble, as Solomon saith—"Where prophecy is wanting, the people are dissipated." Wherefore I cannot but wonder at the opinion and doctrine of such as say, a sermon once in a week, in a month, or a quarter a year, is sufficient for the people. Truly it is injuriously and evil spoken against the glory of God and salvation of the people.—Bishop Hooper.

A COFFEE-HOUSE AT DAMASCUS.—In this ancient city the coffee-houses claim particular notice. They are built on the bosom of a river, and supported by piles. The platform is raised only a few inches above the level of the stream. The roof is supported by slender rows of pillars, and it is quite open on every side; innumerable small seats cover the floor, and you take one of these and place it in the position you like best; the river, the surrounding banks of which are covered with wood, rushes rapidly by close to your feet. Near the coffee-houses are one or two cataracts several feet high, with few trees growing out of the river beside them; and the perpetual sound of their fall, and the coolness they spread around, are requisite luxuries in the sultry heat of the day. At night when the lamps, suspended from the slender pillars, are lighted, and Turks of different ranks, in all the varieties of their rich costume, cover the platform, just above the surface of the river (on which, and on its foaming waterfalls the moonlight rests, and the sound of music is heard), the Arabian Nights' enchantments seem realised.

POLITENESS.—This consists in an agreeable personal demeanour, and is founded upon the great rule of morality—do to another as you would have another do to you. We are apt to restrict this to the greater transactions of life. What I now propose is an observance of it in little things—in the everyday intercourse between man and man. I do not mean the arbitrary forms and ceremonies of mere fashionable life, but I mean an habitual regard for the feelings of others, and those looks and actions which spring from such a feeling. We have no more right wantonly to wound the sensibility of another, than wantonly inflict wounds upon his body. We have no more right to steal away another's peace of mind, than to steal his visible and tangible property. In a moral point of view, as I said before, the one act is as wrong as the other. We have laws to protect money, lands, and merchandise; politeness is a code of delicate morals which would throw protection around the nicer and subtler feelings of the heart. Establish these in the minds of children; render them familiar by habit, easy by repetition. Teach a child to regard the feeling of his brothers, sisters, and playmates. If you see him attempt, by look, word, or deed, to inflict pain upon the sensitive bosom of his little playmates, interpose a decisive check. If you see him indifferent, careless, wanton in respect to the feelings of his companions, let him understand that it is an offence against parental authority. Teach him to mould all his feelings and manners so as to please and gratify those around him. Self-love, as before remarked, is the master passion, and selfishness unchecked is like to rule the heart, and obtrude its harsh features; through every look, and tone, and gesture. If we would be virtuous, we must repress selfishness. If we would be loved, we must learn to check its display. Politeness is a training which renders this easy. It teaches us, when tempted by selfishness to snatch at some proffered pleasure, to defer our own wishes to the claims of others. It not only hides, but it crushes those petty desires, whims and caprices, which, if indulged, deform the character, and, if diffused, would deprive society of its brightest charm. I would say then, teach politeness to children; teach it as a principle of duty, encourage its practice, that it may become a matter of habit. After sleep, let the family circle meet in the morning with kind salutation; let part to rest, let their last words be a fondly "Good night." Meeting or parting, let the different members of the household be accustomed to show a delicate regard to the wishes, tastes, and feelings of one another. Such a course is a powerful influence upon the heart itself, the source of all emotions. It will give charms to the countenance, which no other beauty can bestow: a sweetness to the voice, which is better than music; and a graciousness to the manner, which is the best letter of recommendation. Thus, while peace is promoted in the family, the children will be trained in those manners which are called a good address, and which will do more to ensure their success in life than any wealth you can bestow.—Practical Education.

THE DUCK.—In China, where these birds are kept in vast numbers, housed at nights in boats on the river, thousands are hatched by artificial means; the eggs are placed in tiers or boxes filled with sand, and subjected to the necessary degree of heat upon a floor of bricks. The ducklings are fed a mess of rice, fish, garbish or crabs, put in small pieces and mixed with rice. In about a fortnight they are able to shift for themselves, when they are placed under the guidance of an old step-mother, who leads them at stated times to feed, and from the boat in which they are kept, and which is moved about by the owner to places likely to afford a plentiful supply of food. It is curious to see how well a flock of three or four hundred ducks are trained to obey their master, for some thousands belonging to different boats will feed at large upon the same spot, and, on a signal given, follow their leader to their respective boats without a stranger being found amongst them.

Napoleon was as fairly beaten at Waterloo as Hannibal was at Zama. When Sir Walter Scott was at Paris, in 1815, he was permitted to ask, and he did ask the following questions, at his Grace's table, relating to Waterloo; and I repeat them as Sir Walter detailed them to me, at my own:—"Suppose, your Grace, Blucher had not come up?" The Duke replied, "I could have kept my ground till next morning." "Suppose Grouchy had come first?" "Blucher would have been close behind him." "But, let us suppose your Grace had been conquered?" "I could have taken my position in the forest of Soignies, and defied all till the Allies joined." "Was there any part of the day your Grace despaired?" "Never!" was the reply. This is the reply of the first in command. In 1833 the writer of this letter dined at Lord Palmerston's; on his right sat Lord Hill. As his lordship lived near the author he offered to set him down. When alone in the carriage with Lord Hill, remembering what Sir Walter had affirmed of the Duke's confidence, he said, "Was there any part of the day at Waterloo, my Lord, you ever despaired as to the result?" "Desponded!" replied Lord Hill, "Never! There never was the least panic; we had gained rather than lost ground, by the evening; no, there was not a moment I had the least doubt of the result." Thus, here are given from authentic sources, the opinions of the first and second in command; and even in the French army this ought to be something.

FRESH AIR AN EXPENSIVE LUXURY.—In Dr. Reid's recently published work on ventilation, he adduces some very curious facts, to prove the effects and disadvantages of the free circulation of fresh air. Some of the disadvantages are, indeed, of a questionable character, since he asserts that improved ventilation sharpens the appetite, and makes a man much more hungry than he is in a vitiated atmosphere. Nay, he goes so far as to state that many of the popular discontents and "strikes" of workmen for higher wages may be attributed to the increase of their appetites by additional fresh air. This, indeed, formed little inducement in these times for improving the ventilation of the dwellings of the poor, who will not thank the government for making them more hungry, unless also prepared to satisfy their craving appetites. Air seems to be, by Dr. Reid's account, a very expensive luxury, for it produces thirst as well as hunger, and enables a man to drink four times his usual quantity of wine without knowing it. In proof of this the Doctor mentions a trick, or, as he calls it, "an experiment that he performed on a conclave of fifty philosophers at Edinburgh. He got them to assemble in a room fitted with his ventilating apparatus, and, after dinner, he plied them so bountiful with fresh air, which was sometimes perfumed with orange flowers, and sometimes with lavender, that the philosophers drank four times more wine than their host had provided for them, and it became necessary to send conveyances to and fro to supply the extra demand. The doctor says that this excess was not followed by any headache, nor were the men of science aware they had drank more than usual until the tavern keeper presented his bill!"

UN-BEAR-ABLE CONDUCT OF THE POLICE.

At the Kensington Police Court on Monday, just at the conclusion of business, a great bustle was heard in the passage, and in a moment the interior of the court was crowded to excess. It was soon ascertained that the hubbub was occasioned by the appearance of two Italians who had been exhibiting with a bear in the public streets. On the prisoners, whose names were stated to be Antonio Cafferata and Louis Guerrero, being brought into court, great alarm was manifested by the female part of the audience, at the sudden appearance amongst them of "Master Bruin," a brown bear of an enormously large size, who, however, was instantly ordered to be removed from the court.—Police constable Champion, T 82, deposed that about three o'clock that afternoon, while on duty at Hammersmith, his attention was called to the Mall by the water-side, where he found the prisoners exposing the bear for show. The place was crowded with people, and many persons, particularly ladies, were afraid to leave their houses from the formidable appearance of the bear while dancing.—Mr. Paynter said his horse had been frightened by the same bear at Wandsworth that morning, and he had a narrow escape of being thrown. The defendants could not be permitted to annoy the public in that manner.—Antonio, in broken English, said he had two children lying ill of a fever at Hounslow, and had only exhibited the bear to raise money to pay the doctor's bill.—Mr. Paynter said he would discharge the defendants that time, but if the bear was found again in the public streets he should give orders to the police to destroy it. Such exhibitions were a very serious public annoyance, horses not being used to see such animals in the streets. The defendants were then discharged.

FOOL-HARDINESS.—On Sunday evening, shortly before the arrival at Slough of the eight o'clock up-train from Maidenhead, a lad about 16 or 17 years of age, who had ridden from Maidenhead, having by some means managed to get into a second-class carriage without a ticket, clambered over the door of the carriage; and, after standing for a few seconds on the step, threw himself into the middle of the road. The train at this time, the speed having been slackened for the purpose of stopping at the Slough station, was proceeding at the rate of at least 20 miles an hour. The lad for the moment appeared somewhat stunned from the force with which he was impelled, but he almost immediately recovered himself, and climbing up the high embankment, started off across the fields towards Chalvey, and got clear away.

According to a Nuremberg paper, the war against Circassia is to be converted into a blockade.

MAIL-CART SNOWED UP.—In order to prove that winter in the north has come in like a "roaring lion," we need only mention that on Wednesday morning week the mail-cart which runs between the towns of Alston and Penrith, in Cumberland, by reason of the tempestuousness of the wind, and the great depth of snow, was completely drifted upon a bleak part of the road on Cross Fell.

STERLING PROBITY.—Last week the creditors of a firm (Mr. T. Nash) that failed in Chesham nearly thirty years since, paying 3s. 4d. in the pound, were summoned together by Messrs. T. W. and J. Nash, sons of the above, when each one received the remaining 16s. 8d. We hear that upwards of £1000 was paid away that day. One creditor received upwards of £300.

CANAL BETWEEN THE ATLANTIC AND PACIFIC OCEANS.—It has been decreed by the Congress of New Grenada that all the privileges which have heretofore been given to the French and English, in opening a canal through Panama, be forfeited and withdrawn, and the project of connecting the Atlantic with the Pacific be thrown open to the competition of the world.

A great reduction in the number of electors will take place on the registries for this year, owing to two causes:—First, in the old boroughs, numbers have been compelled to receive parochial relief; and secondly, in both old and new boroughs a great reduction in the value of property has taken place, so that many houses, once of the value of £10, are now reduced below that sum.

PARIS.—The Commerce states that "the superficies of Paris contained within the present wall is 34,398,800 square yards. When the enceinte continue at present in progress of construction is completed, the superficies will be 267,558,000 square yards, nearly as great as the superficies of the city of London." The population of Paris, according to the census taken in 1841, amounted to 912,330 inhabitants. To which being added the troops of the garrison and strangers, would increase the population to 1,035,000.

SUDDEN DEATH THROUGH JOY.—On Sunday last an awful instance of sudden death occurred at Dieppe to Mrs. Whichelo, wife of Mr. Whichelo, an English gentleman residing at Dieppe. It appears that Mr. Whichelo, who was formerly an inhabitant of Brighton, in consequence of his becoming straitened in his circumstances, took up his residence at Dieppe for the sake of economy. A short time since a brother of Mr. Whichelo died, leaving him an ample fortune. The news took such an effect on the mind of the latter that Mr. Whichelo fell into a strong fit, and his lady became alarmingly ill. Upon Mr. Whichelo recovering they determined to return to Brighton, their native town, to pass the remainder of their days, but the change of fortune had such an affect on Mrs. Whichelo that in a few hours she was a corpse. The sorrowing husband, on Tuesday last, brought over the body of his wife in one of the General Steam Navigation Company's vessels, for burial in the Brighton churchyard.

GREAT NORTHERN RAILWAY.—We have great pleasure in announcing that it has been definitively settled that the great Caledonian Railway will proceed from Lancaster by way of Kendal to Carlisle; and that the London and Birmingham Railway Company have come to a resolution to promote it by every means in their power. The several engineers are now upon the line, making such corrections and alterations in the plans as more minute surveys may have shown to be necessary, to be ready to go before Parliament at the earliest period of the ensuing session.

AS a recent sitting of the Berlin Academy of Science, H. Von Humboldt read a long memoir upon the method by which the comparative and average heights of continents might be ascertained. From the calculations of the learned gentleman, it appeared that the average height of Europe was 615 feet, of North America 648 feet, South America 1035 feet, and of Asia 1053 feet. The whole of these calculations were grounded on the assumption that each chain of mountains was to be taken as a bilateral horizontal prism, and that each high level should be considered as a plain, and should be brought down to a comparison with the level of the surrounding country. A careful calculation proceeding on this footing gave as a result that the mass of the Andes chain, in South America, including the whole of the flat portion of the eastern borders, and the beautiful wooded heights uniformly distributed on these plains, and of which the level portion is exactly one-third larger than the upper levels of Europe, is only 486 feet higher than the average height of the latter quarter of the globe.

COURT OF COMMON COUNCIL.—On Tuesday a court was held for the despatch of public business. The principal topic of discussion was the motion for the suspension of the 23rd standing order, which had excited so much interest in the court on the previous week, and which goes to prevent any member of the corporation from being a candidate for any office or place in the gift of the corporation. The office, it will be recollected, to which the motion had reference, is that of High Bailiff of Southwark, and the individual in whose favour the attempt was made to suspend the standing order, is Sir William Heygate, Bart., a very respectable member of the Court of Aldermen. The motion for suspending the standing order was negatived by a large majority, after considerable discussion.—Mr. R. L. Jones brought up the report of the Improvement Committee on the subject of the viaduct proposed by Mr. Taylor to be formed from Hatton-garden to Skinner-street. It expressed the approbation of the committee in general terms of the formation of a viaduct to counteract the nuisance of the acclivities, and admitted the ingenuity of the project of Mr. Taylor. It held out no hope that funds could be speedily found to undertake so vast an alteration, but expressed a fervent wish that the improvement could be accomplished. The expense at which Mr. Taylor estimated the cost of the viaduct was £90,000, and he did not mean to erect houses on any part of it. Mr. R. L. Jones added his hope to that expressed in the report, that the nuisance would be one day removed; but he said the Government must allow the funds for carrying the improvements into effect, for the corporation certainly could not afford to enter unassisted upon so vast an undertaking. Mr. Godson asked Mr. Jones whether he could give a guess at the probable expense of such an improvement as would remedy the existing defects altogether? Mr. R. L. Jones said, that he did not think that the improvement could be accomplished for less than £20,000. The report was then agreed to, and the court adjourned.

THE MARKETS.

CORN EXCHANGE.—The arrivals of English wheat up to Mark-lane during this week have been but moderate, while the demand for that article has somewhat improved, and, in some instances, an advance of 1s per quarter has been obtained for the finest parcels. Only about 2400 quarters of foreign wheat have been received, while the sale was more firm, and the rates had an upward tendency. Barley and malt were a mere drug, at unvaried quotations. Although the supply of oats was large, that description of grain was 1s per quarter dearer. Beans, peas, and flour, without alteration.

ARRIVALS.—English: wheat, 4290; barley, 5850; oats, 650; and malt, 3370 quarters; flour, 6350 sacks.—Irish: wheat, —; and oats, 4800 quarters.—Foreign: wheat, 2380 quarters.

English.—Wheat. Essex and Kent, red, 46s to 55s; ditto white, 54s to 61s; Norfolk and Suffolk, red, 42s to 58s; do. white, 51s to 58s; rye, 34s to 38s; grinding barley, 27s to 29s; malting do., 30s to 32s; Chevalier, 32s to 34s; Suffolk and Norfolk malt, 56s to 62s; brown do., 50s to 54s; Kingston and Ware, 56s to 62s; Chevalier, 63s; Yorkshire and Lincolnshire feed oats, 23s to 24s; potato do., 25s to 26s; Youghal and Cork black, 17s to 18s; do. white, 18s to 20s; tick beans, new, 34s to 36s; do. old, 34s. to 38s; grey peas, 36s to 38s.; maple, 33s to 34s; white, 30s to 35s; boilers, 32s to 37s; per quarter. Town-made flour, 46s to 47s; Suffolk, 36s to 40s; Stockton and Yorkshire, 36s to 38s; per 280 lbs.

Foreign.—Free wheat, 50s to 60s. In Bond.—Barley, 20s; oats, new, 15s to 17s; do. feed, 14s to 16s; beans, 26s to 26s; peas, 23s to 27s; per quarter. Flour. America, 22s to 24s; Baltic, 22s per barrel.

The Seed Market.—For rapeseed and linseed the inquiry has ruled tolerably steady since our last, but in all other kinds of seeds scarcely anything has been done.

The following are the present rates:—Linseed, English, sowing, 48s to 57s; Baltic, crushing, 42s to 55s; Mediterranean and Odessa, 45s to 46s; hempseed, 35s to 40s per quarter; coriander, 10s to 20s per cwt.; brown mustard seed, 10s to 11s; white, do., 10s to 10s 6d; tares, 5s 6d to 6s 0d per bushel, English rapeseed, new, £20 to £23 per last of ten quarters. Linseed cakes, English, £10 to £10 10s; ditto, foreign, £7 to £7 10s per 1000; rapeseed cakes, £5 5s to £6 per ton.

Imperial Weekly Average.—Wheat, 49s 5d; barley, 28s 4d; oats, 18s 5d; rye, 31s 7d; beans, 10s 6d, peas, 33s 7d

Imperial Average of Six Weeks which Governs Duty.—Wheat, 51s 8d; barley, 28s 6d; oats, 18s 4d; Rye, 31s 1d; beans, 32s 2d; peas, 33s 7d per quarter.

Duty on Foreign Corn.—Wheat, 19s 0d; barley, 9s 0d; oats, 6s; rye, 10s 6d, beans, 10s 6d; peas, 9s 0d.

Bread.—The prices of wheaten bread are from 7½d to 8d; of household ditto, 6d to 7d for the 4lb loaf.

Tea.—This market is firm, without any alteration in prices.

Sugar.—The West India market has again ruled firm, and the prices have risen quite 6d per cwt., both privately and by public auction. Bengals have moved off briskly at the commencement of the week, the same may be said as regards other kinds of sugars. The show of samples is by no means good.

Coffee.—Several parcels of coffee have been offered at auction, but they have been mostly withdrawn in consequence of the low bids.

Cocoa.—This article meets a slow sale, at barely late rates.

Pimento.—800 bags have been sold by auction, at previous quotations.

Cinnamon.—The quantity to be sold have gone off briskly, at an advance on those previously offered of from 6d to 1s.

Fruit.—Currants are selling briskly, and most kinds of figs produce a trifling advance.

Metals.—We have nothing new to report in this market, which rules extremely dull.

Oils.—The prices of some kinds of oils are on the advance, with a steady inquiry.

Tallow.—The trade purchase freely of P.Y.C. on the spot at 48s 6d; and for forward delivery 49s.

Provisions.—The Irish butter market continues quet, and prices are unaltered. Foreign butter, of fine quality, is taken off steadily, at full quotations. In other kinds of provisions we can notice no alteration.

Wool.—The imports continue liberal, but the demand is extremly inactive for all descriptions.

Potatoes.—Nearly 3600 tons of potatoes have reached the Pool this week in good condition. The demand rules dull, at from 40s to 70s per ton.

Hops.—The sale for all kinds of hops is still dull, and the duty is called, to-da £160,000.

Coals.—Chester Main, 16s 9d; Killingworth, 19s 3d; Belmont, 20s 3d; Lambton, 21s; Stewart's, 21s 6d; Kelloe, 21s 3d; Adelaide, 20s 9d; Cowpen, 16s 6d per ton. Ships arrived, 11.

Smithfield.—Owing to the large supplies of stock on offer here this week, the general demand has ruled dull, and the rates have suffered an abatement of 2d per 8lbs. Beef, from 3s 2d to 4s 2d; mutton, 3s 4d to 4s 4d; veal, 3s 6d to 4s 4d; and pork, 4s to 4s 10d per 8lbs., to sink the offal.

Newgate and Leadenhall.—These markets have been largely supplied with slaughtered meat, which has sold heavily, at the following prices:—Beef, from 2s 10d to 3s 6d; mutton, 3s 2d to 4s; veal, 3s 6d to 4s 2d; and pork, 4s to 4s 10d per 8lbs., by the carcase.

ROBERT HERBERT.

BRITISH FUNDS.—(CLOSING PRICES.)—FRIDAY.

Bank Stock, 168		India Stock, pm
3 per Cent Reduced, 91¾		Ditto Bonds, 22 pm
3 per Cent Consols, 92¾		Ditto Old Annuities,
3½ per Cent Reduced, 100¾		Ditto New Annuities,
New 3½ per Cent, 101¾		Exchequer Bills, £1000, 2d, 66 pm
New 5 per Cent,		Ditto £500, 66 pm
Long annuities to expire		Ditto Small, 66 pm
Jan. 1860, 12¾		Bank Stock for Opg.
Oct. 1859, 12 3-16		India Stock for Acct.
Jan. 1860, 12 11-16		Consols for Acct. 92¾

SHARES

Bristol and Exeter (p),		London and Blackwall (p),
Edinburgh and Glasgow (50 p), 46¾		London and Birmingham (90 p),
Great Western (65 p),		Ditto Thirds (p), 09¾
Ditto New Shares (50 p), 61¾		Ditto New Shares (p),
Ditto Fifths (4 p), 8		London and South Western
London and Brighton (50 p), 36½		(£44 6s 10d p), 59¾

THE LONDON GAZETTE.

TUESDAY, NOV 1.

WAR-OFFICE, Nov. 1.—Royal Horse Guards: G. E. G. East to Cornet, vice Stuart.

3d Light Dragoons: Lieut. W. Unett to be Captain, vice White; Cornet C. Bowles to be Lieutenant, vice Unett; H. Ellis to be Cornet, vice Bowles.

3d Foot: To be Lieutenants—Ensign R. Crawley, vice Desborough; Ensign H. Smith, vice Thompson; Ensign A. H. H. Mercer, vice Measham. To be Ensign, B. R. M'Dermott, vice Dilkes.

5th Foot: G. Remy to be Second Lieutenant, vice Milman.

6th Foot: Lieut M. Hall to be Captain, vice Anderson; Ensign E. F. Crowder to be Lieutenant, vice Hall: Gent. Cadet G. Armytage to be Ensign, vice Crowder.

20th Foot: Lieut. C. Garstin to be Lieutenant, vice Brock; Ensign W. A. Eyre to be Lieutenant, vice Crespigny; Gent. Cadet E. F. Anstey to be Ensign, vice Eyre.

23th Foot: To be Ensigns—S. Read, vice Rawson; J. D. Malcolm, vice Cotton; T. Mitchell, vice Grant; J. W. Shelton, vice Browne; F. G. Moore, vice Welsh; S. L. A. B. Messiter.

31st Foot: Ensign R. B. Tritton to be Lieutenant, vice Moore. To be Ensigns—W. F. Batt, vice Hart; Charles T. Cormick, vice Law.

35th Foot: Ensign K. R. Hillier to be Surgeon, vice Sillery.

40th Foot: W. R. Goddard to be Ensign, vice Cormick.

44th Foot: Ensign Hackett to be Lieutenant, vice Raban.

47th Foot: Paymaster D. Leith Cox, from the 1st West India Regiment, to be paymaster, vice Frith.

50th Foot: Lieut. S. H. Murray to be Captain, vice Gunton; Ensign F. T. Lister to be Lieutenant, vice Murray; R. M. Barnes to be Ensign, vice Lister.

57th Foot: Ensign J. Morphett to be Lieutenant, vice M'Lachlan; C. G. D. Annesley to be Ensign, vice Thomas.

62d Foot: Ensign K. R. Hillier to be Lieutenant, vice Dane.

63rd Foot: To be Lieutenant—Ensign M. C. Hughes, vice Fowle; Ensign L. Mahon, vice O'Brien.

77th Foot: J. Moore to be Ensign, vice Edwards.

92nd Foot: Brevet Major G. E. Thorold to be Major, vice Brevet Lieut.-Col. Winchester; Lieut. A. N. Campbell to be Captain, vice Thorold; Ensign J. H. Ross to be Lieutenant, vice Campbell.

1st West India Regiment: Lieut. E. H. Bingham to be Adjutant, vice Bush; J. H. Thompson to be Ensign, vice Coen.

Ceylon Rifle Regiment: Second Lieut. W. C. Vanderspar to be First Lieutenant, vice Garslin; J. H. Hamilton to be Second Lieutenant, vice Vanderspar.

HOSPITAL STAFF.—Surg. R. Sillery, M.D., to be Staff-Surgeon of the First Class, vice James Wilson; Staff-Assist.-Surg. R. Allan to be Staff-Surgeon of the Second Class, vice Lister; A. J. Fraser, M.B., to be Assistant-Surgeon to the Forces, vice Allan.

BREVET.—To be Lieutenant-Colonels in the Army—Majors J. Macdougall, E. Ell, D. Ray, and W. L. Dumas. To be Majors in the Army—Captains H. E. Wright, T. Cauch, F. Wollastan, and J. Douglas.

INSOLVENTS.

W. RAYNER and J. RAYNER, Uxbridge, seed-crushers.
W. RAYNER, Uxbridge, surgeon.
J. RAYNER, Uxbridge, chemist.

BANKRUPTS.

E. FENNELL and R. FENNELL, Aldermanbury Postern, London, yar merchants
A. FRICKER, St. Martin's-lane, hotel-keeper.
W. HOPPER, Great Queen-street, Lincoln's Inn-fields, carpet warehouseman
D. LAWSON, Marylebone-street, Piccadilly, woollen-draper.
J. FRANCE, Manchester, cotton manufacturer.
J. J. J. R. J., and C. WOOD, Denby Dale, Yorkshire.
J. P. STARLING, Blakeney, Norfolk, coal merchant.
T. SMITHSON, York, tobacconist.

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 4.

INSOLVENTS.

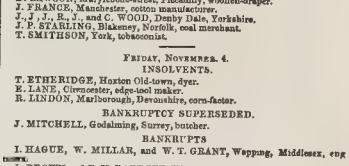
T. ETHERIDGE, Horton Old-town, dyer.
E. LANE, Cirencester, edge-tool maker.
R. LINDON, Marlborough, Devonshire, corn-factor.

BANKRUPTCY SUPERSEDED.

J. MITCHELL, Godalming, Surrey, butcher.

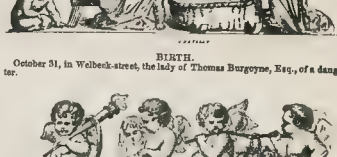
BANKRUPTS

I. HAGUE, W. MILLAR, and W. T. GRANT, Wapping, Middlesex, engineers.
J. BROWN and R. H. BARRETT, High-street-place, White Horse-lane, Stepney, manufacturers of ship-scrubbers.
J. MUDDELL, Freeman's-court, Cheapside, wine-merchant.
J. SORBY, Sheffield, steel manufacturer.
S. DAVIS, Church-lane, Whitechapel, linen draper.
H. MILES, Southampton, woollen draper.
J. HALL, Winsford, Chester, grocer.
S. A. GODDARD and R. HILL, Birmingham, merchant
J. BEAUMONT, Tottenham-court-road, London, surgeon.
W. WRAPSHOTT, Crosby-row, King-street, Southwark, engine r.
H. S. WINTER, Regent-street, milliner.



BIRTH.

October 31, in Welbeck-street, the lady of Thomas Burgoyne, Esq., of a daughter.



MARRIAGES.

On the 15th of October, at the British Embassay at Naples, by the Rev. Charles Lushington, John Bowles Harry, Esq., of Berkeley-square, Bristol, to Jane, daughter of the late Edward Strachey, Esq., of the Bengal Civil Service, and niece to Sir Henry Strachey, Bart., of Sutton Court, Somerset.

On the 3rd of October, at the English Church, Alexandria, by the Rev. J. Winder, in presence of the Consul General and the other Diplomatic Authorities, James Ilbarn, Esq., M. D., per Britannic Majesty's Consul for the island of Cyprus, to Mary, only daughter of Stephen Wooldridge, Esq., of Chichester.

DEATHS.

September 24, of brain fever, at the house of the British Consul at Adelis, in Syria, the Rev. Edward Thomas Daniell, M.A., of Green-street, late reader at St. Mark's Chapel, Grosvenor-square.

October 31, in Mortimer-street, Cavendish-square, Captain Robert Douglass.

On the 26th of October, at Paris, Lieutenant-General Sir Charles Doyle, G.C.H. aged 82.

On the 28th of October, at Hall place, near Canterbury, Lieutenant-Colonel Webb, aged 82 years.

On Sunday, the 30th of October, at Streatham, Susannah, the wife of Mathias Attwood, Esq., M.P.

October 30th, in her 25th year, Charlotte, daughter of Thomas Tegg, of Cheapside.

On Wednesday last at Hampton Court, the Hon Berkeley Paget, one of the Commissioners of Excise, in his 62nd year.

LONDON: Printed by ROBERT PALMER (at the Office of Palmer and Clayton) 10, Crane-court; and published by WILLIAM LITTLE, at 198, Strand, where all communications are requested to be addressed.—SATURDAY, November 5, 1853.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS

No. 27] FOR THE WEEK ENDING SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 12, 1842. [SIXPENCE.

OFFICE 198, STRAND.

LORD MAYOR'S DAY.

THE ninth of November is again arrived, and with it the old heart of London is stirred into fresh activity and life. The spirit of bustle is abroad, and the myriad eyes of the metropolis are turned upon the many forms of pageantry and festival in which the accession of her chief magistrate is celebrated by the "City of the World." Lord Mayor's Day is always a day of mirth and jubilee—but now more than ever so, because it is the anniversary of the birth of our Prince of Wales, gladdens the desert of November like a bright oasis, and sheds warm influences into the bosom of gloomy Winter himself. How shall he withstand the rushing pomp that shall to-day be whirled along her streets, and wafted upon her river—how be cold under the holiday joy of the thousands of sight-seers glistening with the transport of delighted hearts—how shut himself out from those portentous city feeds, which, by a sort of gastronomic printing, emblazon the word "alderman" upon the "corporation" of the outer-man—how resist the champagne, that flushes and sparkles in the rich "Company Halls," when the name of "Albert Edward" is waking echoes under their roof—how freeze beneath that flood of light which, if he leave the banquet-room, he shall find glowing with illumination in every square and highway of the town? No; for once old London—of her own festivity—shall keep old Winter warm.

We have this week chosen to illustrate with something like abundance of embellishments the festival of Lord Mayor's Day, partly to gratify our readers generally, and those particularly who are shut out by distance from the scene, and partly to mark our approval of the event, as one of the good old celebrations of former times, which were conceived in a cheering spirit, and are still redolent of heart-warmth and kindly influences. Moreover, we can find it approbation in a higher sense. If public displays have an effect on public morals—if the incitements of example are powerful to emulate and impress—if books of brigand exploits have made highwaymen, and dramas of housebreaking romance engendered Jack Sheppards—so have Lord Mayor's Day pageants made hundreds ambitious of becoming Lord Mayors, and sown the seeds of enterprise, which has been seconded by industry and good conduct from the remarkable days of Whittington and his cat up through many modern examples, which we shall be happy to find the newly-elected chief magistrate entitled to crown. There is undoubtedly some mummery about all pageantry; but still there is a stimulating spirit in such pageants as these. You generally see a self-elevated man taking a station to which he has brought himself by industry in the pursuit of wealth and honour, and can hardly fail to seize upon the reflection, that what has won fortune and character for him may win them for you also—nay, even for the lowliest of the fellow-citizens who are then crowding upon his path. You regard his position, proud and honourable as it is, as the price which the world pays to steadiness, integrity, activity, and energy; and you know that by these qualities only is it to be gained. Here is a man made first magistrate of a great city irrespective of politics and without reference to rank or birth. He has got on and maintained character, and society demands no more. There is all the elaborate profusion of City pomp, not the classic dignity which is looked for by the isolated eye of taste, but the lavish symbols of riches and glowing pageantry of wealth gathered into procession, and moving with slow and cumbrous gorgeousness over land and water, amid shoutings, gazing, wondering thousands, who delight in its gilded progress and make holiday to see it pass. And all these people leave their homes and occupations to behold the triumph of one (we speak, of course, with general and not personal application) who might once have been in the very humblest of their own crowded ranks; they are there, therefore, not simply to gratify curiosity and open eyes of wonder upon a passing show, but to learn what perseverance and industry will do; and if further they hear general murmurs of approbation, hurried testimonials of respect, a manifestation of personal public attachment and regard, then they may be sure that some virtue must have been blended with the qualities that have won station for their fellow-citizen;—and so inculcate into their own hearts that best and happiest lesson which combines with a desire to be distinguished an ambition to be good. For this sort of public example we can endure a few pathway interruptions, a temporary suspension of labour, and even an occasional congestion of pickpockets. Then, if only for the spirit of good fellowship, there is something to be said in favour of Lord Mayor's Day. Look how the members of the rich companies gather to their annual feast, and form reunions of friendly companionship which affect their trade relations, keep up cordiality in the after interchange of business, hold connexion together, and exert an influence over the whole year. At the head-quarters of festivity—the Guildhall—the newly-elected magistrate becomes the host of ministers and officers of state, and the wealthy old city shakes hands, as it were, with the ruling power of the day. There may sometimes, perhaps, be little cordiality in the grasp between minister and mayor, but there is always good in the feeling by which it is made necessary, to satisfy the community of an unbroken harmony in the jurisdiction of the laws, and of the absence of political feeling from the inauguration festival of a civic chief.

And, even if we refer to the mere show itself, we confess that we cannot grudge the poor of London, the curious crowds, and the thousand happy children, their holiday of wonder and delight. The procession is a gratifying thing enough, and there are elements of laughter as well as display, which help to make the mob wholesomely hilarious. Why envy Gog and Magog the little exercise they get, or shut up their sweet genteel gratitude totally from the public gaze? Why restrain the [illegible] the innocent happiness of the mounted troop? Why refuse a little fresh air to all those gorgeous coats and banners so long left "Entrunk'd in their glory alone"?

Why entomb those marvellously gilded coaches from their annual quadrupedal drag? Why even debar the people engaged in the festival of their little hour of pride—in a word, make any objection to the jubilee procession at all? Yet there are people who think that such celebrations do but gather thieves and stagnate industry, and sting such of the poor as may be nearly starving, with the consciousness that on the Lord Mayor's Day there will be rather lavish expenditure of meat and drink. These, however, are poor meagre feelings to indulge, and are, indeed, but little participated in by the classes with whom they assume to sympathise. We believe there is no branch of the community that would wish to debar the rest of it of any holiday they could enjoy, nor does that sort of morbid misanthropy form any important amount of English feeling. We, therefore, record with pleasure the celebration of Lord Mayor's Day, we honour the friendly spirit which it elicits, we delight in its cordiality and activity, and we reflect its prominent features of interest upon the pages of this journal with a certainty that they will communicate gratification to our readers at large.

So, where the present gleams in splendid sheen,
And soul of civic festival prevails,
We give this toast at once, "God save the Queen,
Live the Lord Mayor, and bless the Prince of Wales!"

ESPARTERO INTRODUCING THE QUEEN OF SPAIN TO HER COUSINS.

Spain, sunny Spain, perhaps of all others the country most favoured by nature, has of late years suffered more severely at the hands of man than any part of Europe. Foreign invasion and intestine broils have kept her at least a century behindhand in the great onward march of civilisation and improvement. Napoleon's career was pregnant with misery for Spain, and her soil became the battle-ground upon which the legions of France were first driven back by the troops of Britain. The brief repose which succeeded the downfal of Bonaparte was destroyed by the death of Ferdinand,—who, procuring a change in the old custom of the country, the Salique Law, which denied the right of females to reign,—set aside the claims of his brother Don Carlos, and bequeathed to his infant daughter a crown which was fated to be literally bathed in Spanish blood ere her brow was ready to receive it. The young Queen Christina has thus been deprived of many of those happy influences so desirable during the time when peaceful education should lay the firm foundation of the future character. Her early years have been eventful ones. Now with the prospect of a diadem,—anon the tide of fortune changes, and victory, gratulation, and hope are succeeded by defeat, disaffection, and dismay. In these contests foreign interference was resorted to, and English blood again manured the fields of the Peninsula. But as the alarms, uncertainties, and reverses of a state of warfare have been the circumstances surrounding the early years of the youthful monarch, it is to be hoped that those lessons, which are often best learned in the school of adversity, will be remembered for future guidance and wise direction. She is now blooming into womanhood, and the time is rapidly approaching when the reins of Government will be entrusted to her hands. She forms the third in this age of Queens—England, Portugal, and Spain being now under female rule—therefore, we thought she might well occupy the pencil of our artist, and the readers of the LONDON NEWS be introduced personally to another of the royal heads which grace our Illustrated Gallery.

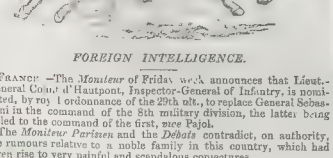
In ESPARTERO we have one of the most extraordinary men of our time. Of obscure birth, of weak and sickly constitution, the youngest son of an almost pauper Spanish family, he has been in succession the unprotected student, the humble volunteer, the military pupil—fed, clothed, and educated by the benevolence of charitable strangers—and the soldier of fortune searching for wealth and honours amongst the forests and savannahs of the New World. Through all these varied scenes has he wrought his way until at length we behold him the actual ruler of the Spanish monarchy.

Baldornero Espartero was born just forty-nine years ago, in a small village of La Mancha, named Granatula. His father was a carpenter in very humble circumstances, barely able to maintain his family of ten children, of whom the present Regent was the youngest but one. Of a sickly constitution, he was unable to follow the laborious occupation of his father, and was placed at school with the intention, if possible, of obtaining his admission into the clerical profession. His eldest brother, who was curé of a neighbouring village, defrayed the expenses of his education. The French invasion, in 1808, found him an humble student, but converted him at fifteen into a military volunteer in the ranks, which filled so rapidly under the influence of that burst of nationality and patriotism which rose in opposition to the hordes of Napoleon. Espartero enlisted in company with many other ecclesiastical students, and, after a year's instruction, was drafted at sixteen in a regiment upon active service. Manifesting a strong liking for a military life, his brother secured for him the patronage of a powerful family in whose service he himself was, and, at their expense, Espartero was placed at a military school. Here he continued till his twenty-third year, when he left the college with the rank of sub-lieutenant. By this time Napoleon had not only been driven from Spain, but had lost the battle which sealed the downfal of his fortunes. Home, therefore, presented no field for active service, and the insurrection in the South American colonies being then at its height, thither went Espartero, having solicited employment under Morillo. He landed at Chili, a soldier of fortune, and from this period began the upward career which has ended in giving him one of the first thrones in Europe.

Espartero's military education gave him great advantages, and the opportunity only was wanting for their display. On the 25th of March, 1817, a forlorn hope was about to attack a fortress in the possession of the insurgents. For this service he volunteered. Beaten back, they still persisted in the attempt to scale the walls, and, seven officers being slain, Espartero was in command. Binding a handkerchief over his brow, he took off his neckcloth, and fixing it on the point of his sword, shouted to his followers, "A hundred ounces of gold to the man who first lays hands upon the enemy's colours." Rushing forward, his men followed their daring leader, and, after frightful carnage, Espartero, with his own hand, hoisted the flag of Spain upon the walls. Promotion followed a career thus commenced. Impetuously brave, he shared the dangers of the men under his command, and by his personal qualities endeared them to him. He returned to Spain a brigadier, and the owner of £80,000, gained chiefly by play, at which his extraordinarily good fortune never deserted him.

An interval of ease followed, during which, in 1825, he married the daughter of a wealthy proprietor, Santa Cruz. This lady is now Duchess of Victory. Upon the death of Ferdinand, in 1833, Espartero at once declared for the youthful Queen, as opposed to the claims of her uncle, Don Carlos. Once more in the field, the good fortune which attended him in America seemed in the first campaign to be gone. Opposed to Zomallacarregui, he appeared at the head of his battalions only to be defeated; but he never despaired, and the tide of war at length turned in favour of the Christinos. To pursue his history, however, would be to write that of the recent struggles in Spain. Don Carlos being at length forced to give up his claim to the throne of his fathers, Espartero obtained the crowning honour of his career. He became Regent,—the director of the destinies of his country.



FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

FRANCE.—The Moniteur of Friday week announces that Lieut.-General Count d'Hautpoul, Inspector-General of Infantry, is nominated, by royal ordonnance of the 29th ult., to replace General Sebastiani in the command of the 8th military division, the latter being called to the command of the first, vice Pajol.

The Moniteur Parisien and the Débats contradict, on authority, the rumours relative to a noble family in this country, which had given rise to very painful and scandalous conjectures.

The Presse has a foolish story about a Spanish brig of war having been sent by the Madrid Government to prevent an act of aggression on the part of the British at Fernando Po. It calls upon the Conservative deputies to support Spain.

The Moniteur Universel of Saturday publishes a royal ordonnance, countersigned by M. Ducnatel, the Minister of the Interior, ordaining that the tables of the last census of the population in France shall be considered as the only authentic returns from the 1st inst. The general result gives the total amount of the population at 34,494,875 inhabitants, living in 363 arrondissements, 2846 cantons, and 37,040 communes.

By the Paris papers of Sunday it appears that the despatches by the Indian mail reached the French capital on that day, and were regarded in political circles of favourable augury for the future.

The Ottoman Ambassador, Reschid Pacha, was received at St. Cloud on Saturday, to present to the King of the French the Sultan's letter, announcing the birth of Prince Abdul-Hamid, second son of his Highness.

The general assembly of the representatives and delegates of various branches of industry met in Paris on Saturday, but the proceedings lose all their interest, now that the Cabinet has abandoned the project of union with Belgium. The assembly appointed a committee to watch its interests, and to draw up statistical reports for the Chambers of the injury likely to accrue from the coalition of custom-houses between the two countries. An address was also ordered to be drawn up for presentation to the Ministry.

The Paris papers of Monday are barren of domestic news, and are mainly occupied with extracting from the Indian papers the same intelligence which appears in our columns.

The Paris papers of Tuesday bring little news. The Presse publishes the annexed correspondence from Egypt:—

"ALEXANDRIA, Oct. 25.—This morning a French brig of war arrived here from Beyrout, which announces that the Druses and the Maronites have risen in a mass; that the most perfect accord exists between them; and that the Turks had retired from all their positions in the mountains, not being able to stand against the population. Artillery had been despatched from Beyrout, but it could not penetrate to the mountains. A caravan from Beyrout had been pillaged by the insurgents, but all the goods belonging to Europeans, Syrians, and Christians, were respected."

The Sud of Marseilles of the 5th has similar intelligence to that given in the Presse's letter.

An extraordinary trial is going on before the Seine Court of Assize of functionaries of the Hotel de Ville, charged with fraud and corruption for a series of years. The trial is expected to last ten days.

SPAIN.—The Eco del Aragon announces that an express had arrived at Saragossa from Madrid, with the Regent's refusal to permit the Infante Don Francisco de Paulo, and family, to pass through the capital on his way to Seville. The Infante is ordered to take the Valencia route to Andalusia.

The attitude of the Madrid editors had induced, it is said, the Rodil Ministry to abandon its projects to restrain the licence of the press.

Senor Gonzales, in a letter to the Madrid Corresponsal, positively contradicts the assertion of the Times, that a treaty of commerce had been concluded by himself, the Regent, Mr. Aston, and General Lenage; and Senor Gonzales adds, that he had negotiated no treaty during his stay in office, and it was not possible for the Regent to have done it, as he was too well acquainted with the constitutional forms of government to act without his responsible advisers.

A decree of the Regent, dated the 3rd of October, promotes Madame Mina to the rank of Grandeza of Spain, as a reward for her services on the night of the 7th of October, 1841, when the Palace was attacked by Don Leon.

The ministerial Patriota declares that the Regent has entire confidence in the Rodil Cabinet; and adds that the negotiations between Spain and the other countries were progressing most favourably.

The Infante Don Francisco de Paulo and his intriguing wife are again at issue with the Regent. Some letters speak of a conspiracy to unset Espartero, and to appoint Don Francisco in his place.

We have received the Madrid journals of the 1st inst., but their contents are barren of interest. The Regent has given a grand banquet to all the members of the Cabinet, at the Palace of Buona Vista, in order, it is thought, to throw discredit on the rumours which have been prevalent of a want of accord between the Ministers.

BELGIUM.—The session of the Chambers was opened on Tuesday, the 8th instant, by his Majesty King Leopold in person, in a speech from the throne. Her Majesty the Queen had arrived at the Palace at Laeken on the previous evening, from St. Cloud. By his Majesty's speech it appears that the treaty with Holland was actually signed on the 5th instant. He also announces that a convention has been negotiated for extending the commercial intercourse between Spain and Belgium. No allusion is made to the proposed customs' union with France.

GERMANY.—The Cologne Gazette of the 1st inst. contains a report that the Grand Duchess Olga, daughter of the Emperor of Russia, was to be united to the Prince of Hesse. "It is probably," adds this journal, "the branch of the house of Hesse which has the prospective of occupying some day the throne of Denmark."

This Princess is the lady fixed upon some months since by some of the London journals as the spouse of the Duke of Bordeaux, Henri Cinq.

We learn from Berlin, in letters of the 30th ult., that the Assembly of the Provincial States, by a majority of 90 against 8, decided in favour of the project to establish a universal system of railroads in Prussia, to connect all the provinces of the monarchy together.

Whilst the fortifications of Rastadc and Ulm are progressing so rapidly, the Baden and Wirtemberg Governments are not the less active in pursuing the projects of railroads, and we understand that the negotiations have been concluded advantageously for both countries.

The Augsburg Gazette of the 3rd instant contains a detailed account of all the circumstances connected with the late revolution in Servia, to prove that it had a national character, and that the movement which brought about the election of Prince Alexander Georgewitch arose from the general discontent, and from the flight of Prince Michael and his advisers.

The Frankfort papers of the 5th announce that the Austrian Government had given its consul at Belgrade orders to quit that town immediately, in order to remove from the "usurping Government" all hopes of being recognised by Austria.

THE EAST.—Letters and papers by the Levant mail of the 1st inst., with dates from Constantinople of the 18th, Alexandria the 17th, Smyrna the 19th, and Malta the 26th ult., have come to hand.

M. Boutenieff, the Russian Minister, had obtained from the Porte a triumph in consulo for the Servian check, by the dismissal of Prince Ghika from the government of Wallachia.

The Sultan had recalled Mustapha Pacha, the Serasskier Pacha, from Syria. Essad Pacha will be installed as Governor of the Mountains.

The news from Persia was quite pacific, and the differences with Turkey were expected to be adjusted speedily.

The Journal de Smyrne of the 19th ult. states that tranquillity was restored in Syria.

Emin Effendi was to leave the Turkish capital on the 18th or 19th ult., bearer of the berat of the Sultan to instal Prince Alexander, the new Hospodar of Servia. Ovares Dadian, director of the powder-magazines in Constantinople, is on his way to this country to purchase various machines, by order of the Ottoman Government.

The Alexandria news of the 17th ult. contains nothing of importance. Freights were low, and the vessels employed very numerous. The Pacha was occupied with his corn sales. The price of grain was low in Egypt, and, if no demand arrived from the British markets, was expected to be lower.

The Austrian frigate Veneto left Smyrna on the 16th for Venice, and the Aurora, Austrian schooner, arrived on the 17th from Tripoli, in Barbary.

The Malta Times of the 25th ult. says:—"The Belvidera frigate left port on the 24th. The Polyphemus will take on to Marseilles that portion of the India mail directed viâ France, immediately on the arrival of the Great Liverpool, expected to-morrow. Yesterday evening the Neapolitan steamer Maria Christina left for Sicily and Naples."

COUNTRY NEWS.

BATH.—MESSRS. HOBHOUSE AND CO.'S BANKRUPTCY.—The commissioners under this fiat sat on Thursday se'nnight, to declare a further dividend, and to receive proofs of debts, which were proved against the joint estate, amounting to £1950 13s. 4d, and the meeting adjourned.

BEVERLEY, Nov. 9.—James Mowld Robinson, Esq. (a Liberal), was unanimously elected the Mayor for this borough for the ensuing year.

BIRMINGHAM, Wednesday.—Aldermen J. James, screw-manufacturer, brother of the popular dissenting minister of that name, was this day elected Mayor of Birmingham for the ensuing year.

BOSTON.—W. H. Adams, Esq., was unanimously re-elected to the office of Mayor.

BRIGHTON.—On Tuesday morning a meeting for the proof of debts took place, at the Town-hall, Brighton, before Messrs. Commissioners Merrifield, Attree, and Cooper, under the fiat issued against Messrs. Wigney. The meeting was held to enable creditors (who had neglected on former occasions) to prove, previous to the new act of Parliament coming into operation, which would compel them to prove in London. Several proofs having been admitted, the court broke up.

Preparations continue in active progress at the Palace for the reception of the Court, but, judging from the alterations, which are considerably more extensive than was at first contemplated, the apartments will not be in readiness for the royal reception for several days. Goods are daily arriving, and the greatest activity is evinced in every department. It is understood at Brighton that her Majesty and her royal consort will arrive on the 21st or 22nd inst.

The take of cod-fish at Brighton has lately been unusually large, fine fish selling at less than one penny per pound.

BRISTOL.—A reward of £50 has been offered for the apprehension of the thieves who committed the extensive jewel robberies at Yorkcrescent, in this town, on the evening of the 29th ult.

CHELTENHAM.—The police case, mentioned in our last, concerning the forgery of a will, and which created considerable noise amongst the highest circles at Cheltenham, was again brought before the magistrates on Wednesday last, when the evidence in support of the accusation having been gone through, the charge was dismissed, the magistrates thinking the evidence not sufficient to warrant them in interfering further in the matter.

DEVONPORT.—Mr. Smith was elected Mayor by a majority of 8 over his competitor, Commander Somerville.

ETON COLLEGE.—On Wednesday morning a fire broke out in the residence of the Rev. Mr. Abrahams, one of the masters of Eton College, but was fortunately got under without any very serious consequences. It appears that Mr. Abrahams, who is a remarkably early riser, was enjoying a morning's walk, and during his absence the servants were alarmed by finding a strong smell of fire; they immediately searched the different rooms, and at last discovered that one of the pupils' rooms was so full of smoke that they could scarcely enter to arouse its inmate; they did so, however, and the young gentleman was providentially rescued from the impending danger. Upon further search being made, they discovered that the fire was under the hearth in the bedroom; upon removing the stone the flames burst out with considerable violence, but were, from its being so fortunately and promptly attended to, got under without any further mischief arising. It seems that the fire must have been smouldering for some time, as two very thick beams were quite burnt away.

FLINTSHIRE.—Hannah Roberts, now under sentence of death in Flintshire for poisoning her husband, has been further remitted by Baron Gurney, from November 5, to the 14th of January next.

KENT.—Some instances of incendiarism have lately occurred in this county, which have given rise to much alarm and anxiety. Last week a barn in the occupation of Mr. Butler, near Upnor, was burned to the ground, a great number of outhouses narrowly escaping a similar fate, which is satisfactorily traced to be the work of an incendiary, as no light whatever had been used on the premises.

LANCASTER.—Jonathan Dunn, Esq., a Conservative, was elected Mayor of this borough.

LAUNCESTON.—The town council assembled to elect a Mayor for the ensuing year, when it fell to the lot (by rotation) of Mr. W. Prockter. That gentleman, however, declined to occupy the chair, and, in lieu thereof, handed to the town clerk £25, to be appropriated for the funds. W. Hughes, Esq., barrister-at-law, was then proposed, and elected unanimously. Mr. J. E. Prockter refused the mayoralty last year and paid a similar fine.

LICHFIELD.—A Liberal gentleman was elected Mayor of this borough.

LIVERPOOL.—At a meeting of the town council held on Wednesday, the 9th inst., Robertson Gladstone, Esq., brother to the Right Hon. William Ewart Gladstone, Vice-President of the Board of Trade, was chosen Mayor for the ensuing year. There was no other gentleman proposed.

MANCHESTER.—A meeting of the proprietors of the Bank of Manchester was held on Monday for the purpose of considering the propriety of dissolving the company. A long and stormy discussion ensued, during which much recrimination took place between some of the directors, but the meeting ended without any satisfactory adjustment having taken place.

The Manchester Zoological Gardens, on which have been expended £20,000, are on the eve of being finally closed, the lessor consenting to cancel the lease, and to forego two years' rent (£1400), on the condition that the proprietors leave the buildings, with the plants, shrubs, &c., in their present condition.

NOTTINGHAM.—A public meeting took place in Nottingham on Tuesday night, to petition the Home Secretary for a mitigation of the sentences of imprisonment passed on the 26 men found guilty of an alleged riot at the last quarter sessions, and to collect a subscription to support their dependent families. Resolutions to carry out both these objects were adopted unanimously.

OXFORD, Nov. 9.—The two senior aldermen whose turn it was, according to rotation, to take the office of chief magistrate for the ensuing year: having each refused to serve on the ground of their being above age, the choice of the council fell on Alderman James Wyatt, carver and gilder.

PRESTON.—We understand that the plans and specifications for the new barracks at Fulwood, near Preston, have at length passed, and received the confirmation of the Honourable Board of Ordnance. They will be on the most magnificent and complete scale, superior to any in the kingdom, to accommodate 2000 men, with stabling for 250 horses.

ROCHESTER.—His Grace the Duke of Wellington arrived at Rochester at eleven o'clock on Wednesday morning, from Apsley House, en route for Walmer Castle. The noble duke changed horses at the Royal Victoria Hotel. He appeared in excellent health and spirits. His grace has taken the marine mansion at Dover, belonging to James Stoddard Douglas, Esq., one of the members for this city, during the time the royal family remain at Walmer. Long before the arrival of the duke a considerable number of people collected round the hotel; amongst the number were a considerable sprinkle of well-dressed ladies and the principal families of the city. Several magistrates were also present. On the Duke of Wellington leaving the hotel he was enthusiastically cheered by the assembled crowd, which the noble duke very graciously acknowledged.

SHROPSHIRE.—A furious affray of stabbing occurred in the neighbourhood of Edgmere, in this county, last week, when two human lives were nearly sacrificed, for which the miscreant is now awaiting his trial in the county gaol. It appears that the parties were acquaintances, amongst whom a quarrel arose on returning, after dark, from Van Amburgh's exhibition; and the prisoner, as if inspired with all the ferocity but none of the nobleness of the animals he had seen exhibited, drew a large clasp knife in the struggle, and stabbed his two friends repeatedly in the abdomen.

SOUTHAMPTON.—Mr. Maye, a moderate Conservative, was elected Mayor of this borough. Mr. Abraham, a member of the Jewish persuasion, was proposed in opposition to Mr. Maye, but the opposition met with little support.

TEWKESBURY.—A most awful and melancholy instance of the uncertainty of life occurred in this town on Saturday last. On that day Mr. William Brown, architect and surveyor, was married in the church, after which the happy pair proceeded to Brighton to spend the honeymoon; he was suddenly taken ill and in a few hours was a corpse. Mr. Brown was secretary to the Tunbridge gas company and also to the commissioners for lighting and watching the town.

WEYMOUTH.—Arthur Wellington Horsford, Esq., a Conservative, was elected Mayor of this borough.

WIGAN.—We have the painful duty to announce the death of R. Thicknesse, Esq., which took place on Tuesday evening, at his residence, Beech-hill, near Wigan. It is rather singular that three gentlemen who have contested and represented the borough of Wigan should cease to exist in the same year, but so it is. Mr. Richard Potter, of Manchester, was the first to pay the debt of nature; then followed Mr. J. H. Kearsley, whose death we recorded a few weeks ago; and lastly, the above-named lamented gentleman.

WOLVERHAMPTON.—Lord Wortesley has lately finished the erection of an astronomical observatory on his estates near this town. It is built in a commanding situation about a field's length from the great Holyhead road, and is fitted up with a variety of suitable instruments.

WORCESTER, Wednesday.—At the meeting of the town council, Alderman John Lilly was elected Mayor, and Alderman William Lewis, Sheriff, for the ensuing year.

A report having gone abroad to the effect that scarlatina prevailed to an unusual extent among the boys at Eton College, Dr. Hawtrey, the head master, has written a letter to the newspapers, stating that the rumour is a gross exaggeration.

A survey is now in progress for a line of railway from Norwich to Cambridge, so as to connect both places with the metropolis by means of the Northern and Eastern Railway. There are several landowners who oppose the scheme.

IRELAND.

CLONMEL.—The Tipperary Free Press contains the details of an inquest held on the bodies of three unfortunate men who were suffocated to death in the county gaol. The deceased were heard to moan during the night, but the turnkeys took no heed of the circumstance. After a long investigation, the jury found that the deceased had come to their deaths on the morning of Friday, 4th of November, 1842, by suffocation, from inhaling carbonic acid gas, when gas escaped into their cell from a tube leading from an Arnott stove.

COLERAINE.—The representation of this borough has lately become vacant in consequence of the promotion of Mr. Litton, the late member, to the office of master in chancery. Some surprise was caused among the burgesses of Coleraine on Wednesday last, by the sudden arrival of the chief secretary, Lord Eliot, who proceeded at once to Somerset, the residence of Mr. Richardson, the high sheriff of Londonderry, a short distance from the town. Next morning his lordship set off for Downhill, the seat of Sir Hervey Bruce, the Episcopalian Tory candidate for the representation of the borough. Rumours were afloat that the object of the visit of Lord Eliot was to pave the way for the introduction of Mr. Smith, the new Londonderry Recorder, as the Government candidate for the borough. Be this as it may, the Presbyterian party feel confident of their ability to return their candidate, Dr. Boyd. Lord Eliot took his departure on Thursday for Londonderry.

DUBLIN.—METAL HOUSES.—Houses composed exclusively of iron and cast metal, the first of the kind ever introduced into Ireland, are about to be constructed in Carysfort-avenue, near Blackrock. The cost of each house is estimated at £1200.

THE LATE SIR MICHAEL O'LOGHLEN.—On Monday a case was brought before the Lord Chancellor, in the course of which mention was made of a decision pronounced by Sir Michael O'Loghlen, when his lordship said—"Mention having been made of the name of the late Master of the Rolls, I cannot omit this opportunity of stating how much I deplore his decease, and how sincerely I sympathise in the general feeling for his loss, and in the admiration entertained for his virtues. His kind disposition and pleasing manners ensured the regard for those over whom he presided; and his great attainments as a lawyer, his practical knowledge, his untiring industry, and, above all, his sound judgment and clearness of perception, demand the regret of all, and in him the judicial bench has indeed lost one of its brightest ornaments. He has imposed a heavy task upon his successor. That successor may not hope (and I dare say does not) to excel the eminent person whose place he has filled; but, by a rare union of like qualities, I have no doubt he will tread in the steps of his gifted and esteemed predecessor."—Sir E. Sugden, while delivering the above brief address, seemed much affected, and a breathless silence prevailed in court.

COMMAND PERFORMANCE.—His Excellency Earl De Grey attended the theatre on Tuesday evening, accompanied by a brilliant suite. His Excellency was rapturously applauded by the audience, which was one of the most numerous and fashionable that has been within our theatre for the past twelve months. The performances, in the comedy of Wild Oats, held the house in shouts of laughter.

WATERFORD.—The Liberals of this county purpose entertaining Mr. O'Connell at a public dinner, at Parsonstown, on the 13th inst.

Mr. G. Dunbar, the new Mayor of Belfast, was the late representative in Parliament for that town. He is a gentleman of proceedingly pleasing and conciliatory manners, and is highly respected.

The steam-mills of James Dennison and Co., at O'Brien's-bridge, a few miles from Limerick, were totally destroyed by fire on Thursday se'nnight. It is scarcely necessary to state that the whole of it, built, has been then burnt to the ground. Messrs. Dennison are insured for £4400 with the North British. The fire is supposed to have been purely accidental.

SCOTLAND.

AYR.—We regret to state that several disturbances have taken place at the colpits in the neighbourhood of Ayr, caused by the turn-outs annoying, intimidating, and, in many cases, assaulting and maltreating the hands newly employed at some of the pits. The consequence of these outrages has been a cessation of labour about most of the pits in the vicinity of Ayr, the men preferring to give up their employment rather than risk their lives. Several of the most active have been taken into custody, and the utmost exertion is being made to secure the others.

BUTE.—Mr. James Stuart Wortley has publicly addressed the electors as a candidate for the seat vacant by the death of the Lord Advocate. "I fully promise," he says in his address, "the best of a sincere and unalterable determination to maintain the fundamental institutions of the country, combined with a ready disposition to the correction of abuses as distinguished from wanton innovation."

THE OVERLAND MAIL.

INDIA, AFFGHANISTAN, AND CHINA.

The despatches in anticipation of the Overland Mail from India to the 1st of October reached town on Sunday night last by express from Marseilles. The intelligence they convey is highly interesting.

The decision of the Government to move, at that place, has given general satisfaction. Generals Nott, at the head of a chosen army of about 7000 men, having left Candahar on the 7th of August, proceeded in the direction of Ghuznee and Cabul, while General Sale, with the remainder of the troops lately stationed at Candahar, marched, without encounter by any obstacle worthy of notice, back, as before stated, to Quetah. In the official report of General Sir George Pollock to the Indian Government, it is stated that the insurgents appeared in small bodies on different hills, but at the route being flanked, they did little mischief, and the baggage, artillery, and treasure reached the head of the pass in safety. Some few camels, however, fell into the hands of the plunderers, and unfortunately the whole of the property belonging to the 3rd Light Cavalry, with the exception of the treasure, was lost. The number of camels killed, or taken away by the enemy, is not known, but it is supposed to be very great. The troops were divided into two columns. The first village already named was entered without resistance, the enemy retiring on our approach. The left column went towards the fort of Mammoo Khail, which was attacked, as Rover, in that quarter, by the main body of the troops. The enemy defended themselves with great bravery, some of their attacks being bold enough to compel our troops to retire a little way, while at another they maintained an advanced position amongst the hills till ordered to withdraw. The fighting lasted five hours. Near the hill the enemy's camp was overtaken and captured, and tents, cattle, and ammunition, with a considerable quantity of provisions, fell into our hands. The Cabul chiefs were said to have fled with 50 or 60 followers. The total of the enemy's force is understood to have amounted to about 3000. They have above 30 killed. Our casualties consist of 7 killed and 49 wounded amongst the latter being Major Huish (26th Native Infantry), and Capt. Raimonds (of her Majesty's 9th Foot) severely; Captain Tait (commanding the 3rd Irregular Cavalry) and Ensigns Robertson (37th Native Infantry), slightly. While our troops were advancing, parties were detached to set fire to the houses and villages, and the force afterwards remained on the ground, employed in cutting down the crops and mulberry trees, to which much value and importance were attached by the enemy. The inhabitants were seen watching from the pine forests far up amongst the hills the ravage and devastation which ensued, and which ceased after resistance had ceased. Our troops everywhere behaved with the utmost spirit and gallantry, and the whole of the arrangements appear to have been eminently skilful and judicious. About 11 o'clock, it is said, were blown up by the accidental explosion of an ammunition mule. The surrounding tribes speedily sent in their submission, and the camp began to be well supplied with provisions. On the 1st of August the force marched from Cabul, being, it was said, likely to be reinforced by 3000 Ghilzies. There were believed to be 2000 or 4000 of the Cabul men in the Hazarack valley, a little off the line of route, who would probably be first cut to pieces, if so, occasioning a detour of 10 miles. This party were said to be strongly posted. They were reserving themselves till we got involved amongst the passes, when they meant to attack us. General Pollock, however, has nicely resolved, it is believed, to take the initiative and dispose of them first. The chief resistance is said to be preparing for us at Boodkhac and Jugdullack, where the gorge is at its narrowest. Peshawur letters of the 26th mention that preparations were being made by the enemy at Teera for the attack of Ali Musjid. Here the usual sickness which prevails at this unhealthy and fatal-fated spot had overtaken our troops.

Among the rumours was one that Akhbar Khan had been seized by the Kuzzilbashes, who constitute a large part on of the inhabitants of Cabul, and who, in order to save the city from destruction, were in the interest of the British alliance, and for that reason also protected the British prisoners. There were many conflicting reports scattered abroad respecting the prisoners, which subsequently proved fabulous. The officers and soldiers have been treated with the harshness, not kept under the restraint that was believed. Colonel Palmer, who was reported to have died of the torture inflicted upon him, is known to be alive and well. The whereabouts of the other prisoners are understood to have been removed to Cabul. "It would not surprise me," said one writer, "if a much greater number than is generally supposed of the officers and soldiers and women have come in to make their salaam to him. Heavy rain and much wind on the 2nd; the thermometer fell 20 degrees."

"Camp, Gundamuck, Sept. 5, 1842.

"On the morning of the 3rd inst. Sale's brigade arrived. This morning Monteath's brigade joined us, and to give you an idea of the scarcity of cattle, the 1st brigade had to send back cattle to assist Sale's brigade, which in its turn sent back cattle to assist Monteath. God knows how we are to manage to carry our things through the Pass, as we are to make our first march to-morrow on Cabul in two divisions. The first division only starts to-morrow, commanded by General Pollock in person."

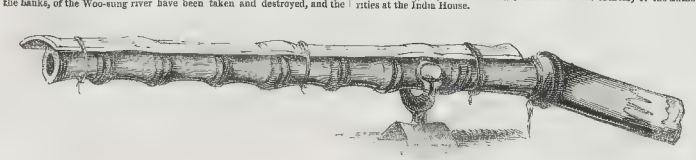
Such of our readers as have not been furnished with a map of the seat of war in India will find an excellent one in our fifth number, which has been already reprinted three times.

CHINA.

Our last news comprised the capture of the city of Chapoo, a large place, carrying on an extensive trade with Japan; and we have now to announce further important successes. The extensive batteries at the mouth, and on the banks, of the Woo-sung river have been taken and destroyed, and the city of Shang-hai occupied by our troops, its public buildings burnt, and its rich granaries, the property of the government, given up to the people. The opposition offered at the entrance of the river was considerable, an incessant cannonade being kept up for two hours ere the enemy showed any symptoms of submission. This engagement took place on the 16th June; and, on the following day, some of the lighter vessels of the squadron advanced up the river, and captured a deserted battery mounting fifty-five guns. The city was taken on the 19th, the Chinese deserting it after receiving two broadsides. The operations were concluded on the 20th, by the capture of two additional field-works, at a place some fifty miles higher up, whither the admiral had himself proceeded, with two iron steamers, for the purpose of reconnoitring.

Two hundred and fifty-three guns (forty-two of them brass) were taken in the batteries, most of them of heavy calibre, and upwards of eleven feet long. The whole were mounted on pivot carriages of new and efficient construction, and it was likewise observed that they were fitted with bamboo sights.

We are here enabled to present our readers with the following sketch of one of these guns, for which we are indebted to the courtesy of the authorities at the India House.



CHINESE GUN WITH BAMBOO SIGHT.

Our casualties were numerous, two men being killed and twenty-five wounded, but confined entirely to the naval arm of the expedition. The enemy are said to have lost about eighty killed and a proportionate number wounded. They served their guns extremely well, and some of the vessels (particularly her Majesty's ship Blonde, and the steamers Nemesis and Sesostris) suffered a great deal from the heavy and destructive fire. The Nemesis' rigging was cut to pieces; an artilleryman belonging to her was obliged to have his right arm amputated at the shoulder joint; another man, belonging to the Pluto, lost both his legs at the ancles, and Lieutenant Hewett, R.M., of her Majesty's ship Blonde, lost his head by a round shot.

It will be remembered that the Nemesis, which is commanded by Lieut. Hall, distinguished herself in a very extraordinary manner, shortly after her arrival in the Chinese waters, by blowing up a number of the enemies' war-junks, which created no little consternation amongst the Celestials. As this event invests the Nemesis with more than ordinary interest, we here present our readers with a sketch of her on the trying and critical occasion to which we allude. The following brief narrative of this steamer's career since her launch may be allowed by way of episode, and will prove not altogether unacceptable. The Nemesis was built by Mr. Laird, of Birkenhead iron-works, near Liverpool, for the Hon. East India Company, and sailed for China in March, 1840, was the first iron steam-vessel that passed the Cape of Good Hope, and the first that appeared in China. Her services there have been since pretty generally known, and the following is an account of the destruction of the war junks illustrated in our engraving:—"Arrangements having been made by Commodore Sir J. J. G. Bremer, K.C.B., &c., for the capture of the Chuenpee forts, and the opposite one of Ty-kok-too, the Nemesis, after disembarking the 37th Regiment Native Infantry, took up an advantageous position under the upper battery of Chuenpee, in company with the Hon. Company's ship Queen, and commenced throwing shell with good effect, lodging many within the walls, thereby enabling the troops to advance, and take possession, which they did in the most gallant style. This accomplished, she proceeded round the point to assist in silencing the lower fort, throwing in grape, canister, and musketry, thereby distracting the attention of the enemy on the sea-side, and giving the troops and some of the Hyacinth's crew, whom we observed scaling the walls, greater facilities for entering, which they speedily did, driving all before them. She then pushed on to attack the war-junks strongly moored at the mouth of a small and shallow river at the bottom of Anson's Bay; and when within 800 yards, commenced a heavy fire of shot and shell on the four largest, which was returned by them. The first Congreve rocket fired by her took terrific and instantaneous effect—blowing up one of the largest, with all her crew. The others being soon silenced, she then despatched her boats, in company with those of her Majesty's ship Sulphur, and one or two others from the Larne, Calliope, and Hyacinth. Junk after junk was boarded and set fire to. The whole, 11 in number, blew up as the fire reached their magazines, and thus were completely destroyed. She now proceeded to a town up the river, much to the astonishment of the natives, and brought away two junks, which were moored to the shore, without firing a shot or receiving any—such was the consternation at her appearance alone at a place only navigable for junks. We understand that the commodore expressed himself much pleased with what the Nemesis had accomplished; and a remark made by Captain Eliot, the Chief Superintendent, that the Nemesis had done the work of two line-of-battle ships, proves that her services have been somewhat important: one shot only struck her, the others falling short or going over. On the 8th January, agreeably to the instructions from the commodore, the Nemesis, in company with two rocket-boats from her Majesty's ship Blenheim, took up a raking position, about 1100 yards distant from the Anung-hoy fort, mounting 100 guns, and commenced throwing shot, shell, and rockets with the greatest effect, which was not returned, from the peculiarity of the position she was enabled to take up from her light draught of water; indeed the enemy could only bring four guns to bear on her, and these were of small calibre. Ten minutes, or thereabouts, after commencing firing, she was recalled by the commodore, he having received a chop from the Chinese, which ended in his hoisting a flag of truce, and ceasing operations for the day." At the taking of Canton, and, in fact, in every engagement in China of consequence since 1840, she has always been distinguished, her light draught of water enabling her to navigate rivers, and run close in shore, when other vessels could not approach near enough to do any service. She has been fortunate in having a commander who combines first-rate skill and seamanship with the greatest bravery, and who never appears satisfied unless he is constantly employed in active service.

THE NEMESIS STEAMER DESTROYING CHINESE WAR JUNKS, IN CANTON RIVER.
(From a sketch in the possession of the Hon. East India Company.)

Letters from Canton, dated the 20th of July, mention that intelligence had there been received of the fleet being at anchor at Kong-soo, in the Yang-tze Kiang (probably the Kaou tchaou of the French maps), on the 4th of July. Kaou-tchaou is some distance above the Great Canal and the city of Ching-kiang-foo, and no great distance below Nankin, and from that position we suppose the entrances of the canal, both southern and northern, to be under the control of the forces, and Nankin at their mercy. "The Imperial Canal, one of the longest and most important of artificial navigations, was constructed by Kobley Khan, and his successors. Virtually, as a line of communication, this canal extends from Hang-chow, the principal city in Che-kiang, to Pekin, the capital of the empire, which is a distance of about 700 British miles. In reality, however, the artificial canal, the Cha-ho, or 'river of flood-gates,' as the Chinese term it, is considerably shorter; it begins to the southward of the Yellow River, where the natural navigation of a lake connected with the Blue River ends, and is carried onward to Lin-tsing, in the north-west of Shang-tung. Thence the navigation is continued by the Eu-ho and Pei-ho to Pekin." "We have thus described the Imperial Canal, not only because it is the grand route for the conveyance of merchandise and the imperial revenues from the southern provinces to the capital, but also because it has been stated that, in case of an attempt upon China by sea, this canal could be easily taken possession of at some point, and the communication between the two parts of the empire cut off." Elipoo has sent to Canton for two Hong merchants and two linguists to go to Soo-chow, and the Canton authorities have consequently ordered Samqua and Howqua's fifth and only surviving son on this errand, with what specific object was not known; the two Hong merchants were to have left Canton yesterday. It was originally intended to have sent Howqua himself, but his great age has at last exempted him from this duty; it is supposed by the Chekiang authorities that the Hong merchants, being accustomed to deal with the barbarians, will be of use to them in their negotiations with the English, although the merchants are aware that on a former occasion Sir Henry Pottinger refused to see them. We suppose they must have obeyed these orders very reluctantly, for, independently of the great expense, and, probably, squeezes to which this journey will expose them (for Hong merchants in the north are rara aves, and the reputation of their wealth will have preceded them), their liberty will be in some danger should they be employed in negotiations, and these terminate differently from what the Chinese authorities expect; in which case banishment to Ele may very likely be the end of their mission. It is said that their being sent is with reference to settling the terms for the ransom of Nankiu. This is, however, we suppose, mere conjecture. According to Chinese reports, the large city of Shang-hai has been taken by the British force, which is said to have from thence penetrated into the country as far as Soo-chow, and taken that town also. Shang-hai is one of the most important seaport towns in the empire, whose trade is said to employ an immense number of junks. We have no arrivals whatever from the north to confirm these reports.

PORCELAIN TOWER AT NANKIN.

The progress and result of the conflict of the 16th of June will be found very fully detailed in the following passages from the official circular of Sir Henry Pottinger, her Majesty's Plenipotentiary:—

"After the necessary delay in destroying the batteries, magazines, foundries, barracks, and other public buildings, as well as the ordnance, arms, and ammunition, captured at Chapoo, the troops were re-embarked, and the expedition finally quitted that port on the 23rd of May, and arrived on the 29th off the Rugged Islands, where it remained until the 13th of June, on which day it crossed the bar, which had been previously surveyed and buoyed off, into the Yang-tze-Kiang river to the point where the river is joined by the Woosung.

"At this point the Chinese authorities had erected immense lines of works to defend the entrance of both rivers, and seem to have been so confident of their ability to repel us, that they permitted a very close reconnaissance to be made in two of the small steamers by their Excellencies the Naval and Military Commanders-in-Chief on the 14th inst.; and even cheered and encouraged the boats which were sent in the same night to lay down buoys to guide the ships of war to their allotted positions of attack.

"At daylight on the morning of the 16th the squadron weighed anchor, and proceeded to take up their respective stations, which was scarcely done when the batteries opened, and the cannonade on both sides was extremely heavy and incessant for about two hours; that of the Chinese then began to slacken, and the seamen and marines were landed at once, under the fire from the ships, and drove the enemy out of the batteries before the troops could be disembarked and formed for advancing.

"Two hundred and fifty-three guns (forty two of them brass) were taken in the batteries, most of them of heavy calibre, and upwards of 11 feet long. The whole were mounted on pivot carriages of new and efficient construction, and it was likewise observed that they were fitted with bamboo sights.

"The casualties in the naval arm of the expedition amounted to 2 killed and 35 wounded, but the land forces had not a man touched. It appears almost miraculous that the casualties should not have been much greater, considering how well the Chinese served their guns. The Blonde frigate had 14 shots in her hull, the Sesostris steamer 11, and all the ships engaged more or less. The loss on the part of the enemy is supposed to have been about 80 killed, and a proportionate number wounded.

"On the 17th of June some of the lighter vessels of the squadron advanced up the Woosung river, and found a battery deserted, mounting 55 guns, of which 17 were brass.

"On the 19th two more batteries close to the city of Shang-hai opened their guns on the advanced division of the light squadron, but, on receiving a couple of broadsides, the Chinese fled, and the batteries, which contained 48 guns (17 of them brass), were instantly occupied, and the troops took possession of the city, where the public buildings were destroyed, and the extensive Government granaries given to the people.

"His Excellency the Admiral proceeded up the river Woosung with two of the small iron steamers on the 20th inst., about 30 miles beyond the city of Shang-hai, and in this reconnaissance two additional field-works, each mounting four heavy guns, were taken and destroyed, bringing the total of ordnance captured in these operations up to the astonishing number of 354, of which 76 are of brass, and chiefly large handsome guns; many of the brass guns have devices showing that they have been cast lately; several of them have Chinese characters signifying 'the tamer and subduer of the barbarians,' and one particularly large one is dignified by the title of the 'barbarian.'

"The Chinese high officers and troops are supposed to have fled in the direction of the cities of Soo-chow, Wang-chow-foo, and Nankin. The same high authorities have made another indirect attempt to retard active operations by an avowed wish to treat, and have also given a satisfactory proof of their anxiety to conciliate by the release of 16 of her Majesty's subjects, (Europeans and natives of India) who had been kidnapped; but, as the overtures were not grounded on the only basis on which they can be listened to, they were met by an intimation to that effect."

The results of this victory have been remarkable. The Mandarins in the two most fertile provinces in China were dreadfully alarmed lest Wang-chow-foo and Nankin should be taken and sacked and the mouth of the Great Canal seized. The approach of the expedition to the mouth of the CANTON.

THE IMPERIAL CANAL, CHINA.

Great Canal, and the dangers that threaten Nankin, would, it was thought, induce the Emperor to make an equitable arrangement; but doubts were still entertained of his being exactly informed of the truth.

Nankin, before its destruction by the Tartars, was probably the largest and most splendid city that ever existed, and it is still considerable, possesses a great deal of trade and many ingenious manufactures, and is regarded as the Athens of the empire.

The efforts of the Chinese authorities to make resistance have hitherto been very great. A proclamation issued by the Emperor in the beginning of June breathes the most decided hostility to the "barbarians," but does not bring of the vast efforts, arms and soldiers. This proclamation, it ought to be remarked, is dated prior to the attack on Shanghai.

NANKIN.

It is worthy of remark that while Russia is described as ready, not only in exciting the Chinese against the past demands of Great Britain, but in assisting them with officers, the United States and France have sent large ships of war to watch our proceedings with that anomalous race, and, as it is openly declared, with the intention of demanding all the advantages that we may obtain by the expenditure of so much blood and money. The American and French ships have not been permitted to enter the northern ports of China, where the English were never let nor permitted to enter.

The intelligence from Canton is not unimportant, it appears, that preparations are again being made for a vigorous defence of the city and province. The Chinese have erected a fort of considerable size, some distance below Whampoa, on a parallel branch of the river, and large quantities of cannon are said to be cast for the use of the Government, at a foundry near the foreign factories at Shamung, which is extensively private property. They have also two rifled pieces of European manufacture for Parsaun guns.

WHAMPOA.

Considerable negotiations have been caused in the city by the news of the horrible system of poisoning. Hong is the Honqua of Sampson and Tait, here to the extent that the Hoonan Tartars, others that I myself know of the well, and that as many as twenty Chinese had died through the fortunate drinking the water. It is necessary, therefore, for foreigners to be much cautious, as, though the Chinese are not numbered victims of this atrocious design, its effects may not be confined to them alone. The greatest animosity appears to prevail between these Tartar troops and the inhabitants of the province of Canton, and several encounters, attended with much bloodshed, have taken place in the neighbourhood.

The American commander, Commodore Kearney, has demanded and obtained from the provincial government compensation for the losses of American citizens during the attack of the British force on Canton, but these gentlemen, it appears, expressed dissatisfaction at the sum received, although it was a larger one than the commodore was at first authorised to claim.

Kidnapping still prevails to a great extent, and many persons, the victims of former injuries, remain in the hands of the authorities, in taking no measures of everywhere made at the request of the unfortunate captives, and the a stringent nature for the release of these unfortunate captives, and the prevention of further outrage, and it has been more than once plainly hinted that this is owing to the lenient condition of the prisoners. It is satisfactory, however, to know that most of them are alive and in safety. When the fleet arrived off Chapoo, it was intimated to General Gough that several persons who had been kidnapped would be delivered up, if the threatened assault were abandoned. This proposition could not of course be listened to; but the desire to conciliate, thus evinced, was deemed a favourable sign, and there can be no doubt that the captives will be preserved, in the hope of gaining advantageous terms by their release hereafter.

The licentious conduct of the Manilla men belonging to the opium vessels has long been a fertile source of annoyance; and recently one of these villains, more daring than the rest, murdered a Chinese on Dane's Island. An explanation of the affair was demanded of the Hong merchants, who called all the foreign merchants together at the Consoo-house, for the purpose of investigation. The result we have not heard; but it is most obvious that if natives of China are allowed to be maltreated and slaughtered with impunity, by parties belonging to vessels which sail under the British flag, the Chinese have some show of justice for terming their outrages on our people warrantable retaliations.

Very little trade, it is said, is now carried on at Hong-Kong; and Macao, apparently, will still be the chief theatre for commercial operations. To show how little good has been done by the partial and most inefficient blockade on the coasts of China, it may be mentioned that the number of Chinese junks which have arrived at Singapore during the last season is greater than in any preceding year.

The Plenipotentiary (who left Hong-Kong on the 13th of June) reached the expedition previous to the operations at Woosung, and most of the ships of war and transports lately arrived from England must likewise have joined the force. Her Majesty's ship Vindictive reached Hong-Kong on the 19th of June, after a ninety-days' passage.

We have no news of importance from Amoy or Chusan; Ningpo and Chinghae have been evacuated, with the exception of a fortified height near the entrance of the river leading to the latter place, where a garrison has been left.

It now appears that Pekin is not the destination of the expedition, at least this year. The towns at the mouth of the great river Yang tze-Kiang, the most magnificent river in China, have been captured by our troops, and the whole force was, by the latest accounts, moving upon the city of Nankin, intelligence of the capture of which was daily expected at Macao—indeed, there were abundance of Chinese rumours flying about Canton, Macao, and Hong-Kong, that it had been taken by our troops.

Nankin being captured, what is to be done next? On this point we are all in the dark. Will the occupation of that city—the southern capital of the empire—lead to a treaty? If not, will our authorities determine on the permanent retention of territory in the central provinces, or a movement on Pekin next year? Will time be attempted to be gained in fruitless negotiations; and if so, will the Plenipotentiary, after the experience of the last three years, allow himself to be duped? Some are of opinion that the occupation of Nankin, by giving us the command of the Great Canal, the artery by which the northern provinces are supplied with food, and placing at our disposal the resources of the flourishing province of Keang-nan, will dispose the Emperor to peace, and obviate the necessity of a visit to Pekin, which, for many reasons, it appears judicious to avoid, if possible. That the Emperor, on our approach to the capital, will betake himself to Tartary is more than possible, and we must then either winter at Pekin or abandon it. To winter at Pekin, a hundred miles from the fleet, would expose the army to no inconsiderable risk. The ships have no secure anchorage in the shallow waters of the Gulf of Pe-che-lee during the winter months; and the rigours of a Pekin winter, from the vicinity of the Tartarian mountains, are well known to be severe.

A very curious edict has been sent, showing, by its altered tone, that the Chinese authorities find it necessary at length to bend to the storm. The following is the despatch

"The English barbarians are now creating disturbances in the provinces of Keangsoo and Chekeang; and day by day their ships are increasing in number, and we are apprehensive that they will, rattike, sneak into other places; we therefore desire to enlighten them by the principles of reason, and clearly to explain to Lean the formidable calamities (they are bringing on the country).

"At present it is difficult to find interpreters. On examination we have found that hitherto the English have reposed the greatest confidence in the Hong merchant Howqua, and we have heard that the said Hong merchant is more than eighty years of age, and we fear he will not be able to come So immediately select either his younger brother, son, or nephew, who are able to hold converse with the foreigners on busin

"Let, after consultation, one or two of these men hasten to Keangsoo with the rapidity of a shooting star; we shall hold ourselves fortunate if a day is not lost. When the said younger brother, son, or nephew, obey the orders and hurry to Keangsoo, they will give lasting proofs of their loyalty, and perform an essential service to their country; and we, the said Governor and General, will certainly make an extraordinary report (to the Emperor)

"We have sent a report to the Emperor at the same moment that we forward this flying despatch. it is absolutely necessary that they be at our command to use as interpreters. There must not be a moment's delay."

But the most remarkable document is a proclamation from the Emperor himself, relative to the management of the affairs of the barbarians. It is dated 5th of June, 1849, and is published in the Pekin Gazette, the official organ of the Chinese Government, which circulates through every corner of the empire, and regulates the tone of public feeling. It gives the Emperor's own version of the cause and progress of the war. He traces it to the "opium flowing like poison into China;" and the idea of the miseries inflicted on his people by these outside barbarians, these robbers, as he styles them, melts his heart, and he exclaims, "What crimes have my people committed that they should be afflicted by such calamities?" The defeat of his troops at the Bogue forts is acknowledged, as also that his "black-haired race on the coast was troubled." The ransom of Canton is merely stated the repayment of the debts of the Hong merchants, six millions of dollars, "a very slight matter, and which he did not grudge." But this remarkable proclamation should be read in extenso. There appears no reason, judging from its contents, to look for any spirit of concession from the Court of Pekin; but it is evident that the voice of truth has at length been allowed to approach the Imperial throne; there is a strange medley of despondency and hope, of intense hostility to the "hated race," to whom the spirits of his troops "are not equal." "Still, if they will do their duty," adds his Majesty, "we can yet exclude the barbarian worthless sprouts, sweeping them into the depths of the wide ocean, and restore to the people of the empire the blessings of peace and tranquillity."

The approaches to the northern capital, which in 1840 were quite defenceless, are now strongly fortified, and vigorous exertions were being made to transfer them "quite impregnable," in order to check all advances of the "rebellious barbarians."

From the month of the Peiho Tientsin has been a place of strong defences, and in the year 1842, at the close of the first war, the Governor of Pechili, the Imperial provincial functionaries to the Emperor, the great importance of still larger fortifications, and has May 31, 1849, appointed Keshen, who had formerly been Governor of the Chekeang army, has ordered them to make strenuous exertions for the erection of foundereies and the casting of cannon, and that the guns be sent with flying despatch to Chekeang. These immense preparations must bear very hard on the imperial treasury; and this is at length made manifest in the official gazettes, three millions of taels having been appointed from it for expenses in Chekeang, and a fourth ordered from the neighbouring provinces.

Further accounts from the northward are looked forward to with great interest.

CANTON—MACAO—HONG-KONG.

The ravages by the March overland mail has occasioned a total suspension of all buildings at Hong-Kong, and most of the foreign community continue at Macao and Canton. Little trade has been carried on at the new settlement in anything but opium, and nearly the whole of that branch of business had been removed to Whampoa, where there was a fine fleet of smuggling vessels—ten or twelve sail in all—bearing the English flag. A Portuguese vessel lately came among them, but, being considered an interloper, was taken and towed out of the fleet. They were on the very best terms with the people, and, to say the least, were let alone by the Mandarins. The factories were still more than half deserted, and some were in utter ruins, and the number of foreigners in Canton did not exceed fifty or sixty. The people were quiet, and offered no molestation to them in the streets. How ever, did not often go abroad, and appeared desirous of keeping clear of business. All this, of course, is prior to Admiral Cochrane's entrance with the river, the result of which is not yet known. The waters in the neighbourhood of Hong-Kong were infested by pirates, some of whom had been captured. Three foreign men-of-war, two American and one French, were in China, and either had proceeded, or were about to proceed, to the northward, to watch our operations there. Captain Campbell, of her Majesty's 55th Regiment, died at Chapoo on the 29th of May, of wounds in the received at the capture of that city, after lingering nine days. The Hong Kong newspaper does not seem much to relish the present rather unfashionable regime of what it calls the "capital of the Anglo Chinese empire." As an inducement to settlers it says that three years' rental of a house warehouse at Macao will suffice to construct an equal accommodation of a stable character at Hong-Kong; and that the charges for landing goods and discharging cargo amount to about one-fourth of the customary rates at Macao.

The Gazette of Tuesday evening contained the official details of the operations of the army in India and China, which will be found collated from a more graphic but not less authentic source in another part of our paper. We are indebted to the kindness of a British officer in China for several spirited and faithful sketches of important and commanding positions in that interesting country, which we this day present to our readers with the China news.

We learn from a report of the progress of the operations at the Thames Tunnel, that this magnificent undertaking is rapidly advancing to completion. The staircase of the shaft on the Rotherhithe side of the river has been finished several days. The entrance for the public from the south side is not expected to be opened before December next.

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK.

SUNDAY, Nov. 13th. 25th Sunday after Trinity.
MONDAY, 14th.—Bryant died, 1850.
TUESDAY, 15th.—Machutus.
WEDNESDAY, 16th.—Dr. Hawksworth died, 1771.
THURSDAY, 17th.—Hugh Bishop of Lincoln.
FRIDAY, 18th.—Rubens born, 1557.
SATURDAY, 19th.—The 26th number of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS published.

THE COLOSSEUM PRINT.

We have now to call the attention of our readers and subscribers to the promised prospectus of our Colosseum Print—a superb and original work of art, pro luced upon the grandest scale—which we pledged ourselves to present to all the readers of the

ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS

who should have punctually subscribed to the paper during the first six months of its existence. The great success which we have achieved now enables us to go to an extent of enterprise that we are sure will more than crown the highest expectations of the public.

THE COLOSSEUM PRINT

derived its title, in the first instance, from an intention of presenting a magnificent engraving of LONDON AT ONE VIEW—to reflect, as it were, a similar grand picture to that so long exhibited at the Colosseum. The better taste, however, of our artists and advisers reminded us that we should thus exclude that wondrous leviathan of our metropolitan architecture,

ST. PAUL'S CATHEDRAL;

and to this important recollection was added a suggestion that a much finer field of what may not inaptly be called "Panoramic glory" was presentable from another lofty eminence of London, which it, however, required official authority to enable us to reach.

TWO SPLENDID VIEWS OF THE METROPOLIS

have been the result of the altered proposition, taken north and south, from the summit of the

DUKE OF YORK'S COLUMN,

by the generous and nobly-granted permission of General Maitland, for himself and his co-trustees, who thus confided to us an exclusive right that stimulated our proprietors to a degree of exertion which they hope will prove worthy of this signal mark of favour they have received. Their

COLOSSEUM PRINT,

which will really be, in its superb dimensions, what the term "Colossal" is in reference to size, will then present two

ORIGINAL ASPECTS OF LONDON.

The upper or south view will comprise all that magnificent sweep of picturesque objects which stretch from the Surrey shores of the Thames, as far as they are visible on the right, to beyond the Tower of London, with its adjacent forests of shipping on the left. The splendid range of manufactories which skirt the river, piercing upward from far far distance to the gazer's eye, until they are closed with, and screened by, the venerable Abbey of Westminster, at once, with its solemn religious grandeur, absorbing mind and sight. But that fine pause of contemplation over, and away travels the eye, using as it were a hand of memory to bring present the old familiar features of the "City of the World." Look at the beautiful range of bridges spanning that river, which, through its waters are but silver, has been designated, for their burthen, the "river of gold." Mark the long lines of streets, the grand public buildings, the spires of old and new churches pointing to the sky, the Monument, the ancient and fort-like Tower, and amid all, and above all, the eternal grandeur of St. Paul's! And these objects are so woven into the picture, that they are not parts of a confused mass, but prominent beauties of such a clear and well-defined architectural panorama as was never before embodied in the forms of art.

THE LOWER OR NORTH VIEW

turns the gazer upon a still more broad and open district of the metropolis. It stretches over the beautiful Parks; includes the Royal Palaces and mansions of our nobility; and, in the finest streets in the world, Regent-street, Portland-place, Whitehall, Trafalgar-square, and the superb gatherings of aristocratic clubs; and, in a word, concentrates within its focus all the palatial magnificence of western London in contrast with the staid and solid grandeur of its commercial regions; endless wealth-accumulation on the one hand, and on the other an expenditure whose latitude seems right startling.

Such are the two sections of the UNRIVALLED PICTURE which we are about to present in all good will to our readers, and now the only question can be [illegible]

ITS UNQUOTED FIDELITY AND TRUTH.

It [illegible] plain terms, a Mirror of the Metropolis, and for its reflection we are indebted to the light of the sun.

M. Claudet was expressly commissioned by us to construct a Daguerreotype [illegible], whereby we have obtained a series of drawings that are as it were "impressions of the city itself," with all the niceties of perspective preserved, and an accuracy of detail never before equalled in panoramic art.

NOTICE.

THE COLOSSEUM PRINT will be ready on New Year's Eve, when all persons will be entitled to receive it who have subscribed for six months from the commencement of the paper, or for a six months previous to the publication of the print, or who pay a six months' subscription in advance from the time of the issue of the plate. This is the clearest and distinct answer to all correspondents who have addressed us on this subject, and is a general guide to the public at large. The engraving is upon so grand and magnificent a scale, that it cannot be finished and a sufficient number printed before the time appointed for publication. Our subscribers have already so increased that the time requisite for printing becomes most important, and any delay that has arisen is attributable only to the necessity for such careful and deliberate arrangement as will make disappointment next to impossible.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

We have received from Mr. Allen, Nottingham, a parcel of books, which shall have our early attention.
"T. C. L." Hall, will get it through his news-agent.
"Rus." Chigwell.—Ditto.
"W. H. B."—All the numbers have been reprinted, and are now on sale. To his other query, Yes.
"S. N."—Certainly.
"F." Winton, must apply to his news-agent. He will have the print.
"G. H. S." Liverpool, may have what he desires without purchase.
"T. E——r."—We are still sleeping on it.
"J. W. S."—No.
Is "Venator," who wishes to know where the hounds meet, a fox who wishes to get away from them?
"A Constant Reader," who inquires the amount of receipts at the theatres, will probably arrive at it by doubling half of what is paid by the public for admission. Or apply to the treasurers for a less definite answer.
"T. O."—Declined, with thanks; and we cannot return unaccepted contributions.
"P. N."—Approbation from Sir Hubert Stanley is praise indeed.
"B. P." Treadgar Square.—Yes.
"W. Burgess."—One of our pre-engaged artists will accompany the Queen's progress to Walmer; the ground is therefore pre-occupied.
"J. W."—Purely gratuitous, except when from regularly engaged correspondents.
"R. N."—Five.
"O. G. M." will certainly have the print.
"Anna C."—The money will be at once obtained on proof either of identity or hand-writing.
"Scrutator."—It has not come to hand.
"Mr. J. Cann," of Brewich, must have six months' papers.
"Q. S."—No; it is justly illegal.
"T. Williams."—The song is copyright, and we decline permission for publication.
"A Subscriber."—Wrappers can be had from any respectable bookseller at trifling expense.
"A Reader."—Out of the question in a newspaper.
"J. L."—Referred to our theatrical reporter.
"Cleo" will find his suggestion attended to.
"A Subscriber," No. 5.—We cannot discuss the question with our correspondent.
"M. A. B." will have the print.
Candahar.—We shall be enabled in our next number to present our readers with a representation of the British force evacuating Candahar.
We have received several letters from the country, complaining of a circular issued by Mr. CLAYTON. All we can say is, that we have nothing to do with such circular, and we have always recommended our friends and subscribers to order their papers of some respectable Bookseller or Newsman in their immediate neighbourhood.

HER MAJESTY'S VISIT TO WALMER CASTLE.—In our next number, and during the continuance of her Majesty's visit to Walmer Castle, we shall give pictorial illustrations of all places and objects honoured with her Majesty's presence and inspection; and we are sure we are giving a sufficient guarantee for the fidelity of our representations, when we state we have secured, on this occasion, the services of that distinguished artist R. Landells, Esq., who furnished the beautiful engravings connected with her Majesty's visit to Scotland.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

LONDON, SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 12, 1842.

A dreadful case of infanticide has been disclosed during the week, of which the details are almost too revolting to communicate in a public print, but they are so far associated with the peculiar channel of their discovery that a question quite new to the journalist has been opened, upon which we are desirous of expressing a brief opinion. The crime, of which we have first to speak, has too dreadfully increased under the operation of the new Poor-law bill, and the number of child-murders which are of occurrence almost promise to denaturalize the community with continued exhibitions of the violation of that beautiful maternal affection and solicitude which the old moralist characterised as of most absorbing power, and as dwelling with most passionate presence in the mother's breast. The sin of human nature finds no source of atonement in any mercy of the law, and the despairing wretch who dreads the vengeance of society, while bearing the fruits of shame, dashes the warm blood of motherhood from her heart, and admits into its emptied channels a stream of depravity that rushes through it with the potency of poison, and with all its withering and agonising pain. The child that should be folded upon a responsive bosom, is hidden in an unconsecrated grave, and the murderess is either punished for discovered atrocity, or followed by unrelenting remorse. The law that thus admits of the worst crime under Heaven being traced to its operation should surely be destroyed, lest it be paraded as an excuse for the enormities that are committed in its dread. The case, however, which is now recorded is too horrible even to bear application to the effect of any human legislation, however cruel or abhorred. It is the periodical murder of six different children by their mother, and their concealment under the earth after death. The facts are as follows:—A woman of the name of Frances Bennett, being dangerously ill, and, as she supposed, at the point of death, confessed in her agony to her own sister, to a policeman named Fowler, and to the clergyman of the parish, that she had murdered successively no less than six illegitimate children, the offspring of an illicit connexion with a man named Yapp, and with him buried them in a place which she pointed out. Search was made, and the skeletons of six infants found; but the woman recovered, and now wishes to disclaim her confession. She and Yapp are in custody, and the case has been once brought before a coroner's inquest, which was adjourned to the following Wednesday, and of which we shall probably soon communicate the result. Now it is out of this fearful circumstance that the social question has arisen upon which we are anxious to comment. The clergyman spoken of deposed just as large an amount of evidence as was disclosed by the policeman and the sister of the murderess; but he knew more, and, on being pressed to divulge all he knew, pleaded his spiritual calling, and that the secrets entrusted to him were, as it were, the inviolate confidence of a spirit on its wing from earth. Now this is an important plea, and a most proper one, unless we greatly misunderstand what is right. The depraved wretch, who may have been saved, perhaps, equally for repentance under divine mercy, as for punishment under divine justice, can hope for no sympathy from the world and society, will doubtless be able, out of the permissable evidence of her confession, to pay her retribution for her crime. But let not the spiritual interpreter of a religion which "urges to the confession of secret sin" be made in the most remote degree the organ of its punishment. The woman was in articulo mortis—she believed her parting confidence to be given to one who might pour on her remorseful soul some ray of mercy to light her spirit out of the world. She was in trust, against all human disclosure, close as in the grave itself, and the dark secret which she uttered should close the lips of her spiritual confidant as close as the grave too. The reverend gentleman has, therefore, properly maintained the sanctity of religious confidence by refusing to disclose it, even in what seems to further the most imperative justice of the law. We hope earnestly to learn that the ends of justice will be furthered in this most lamentable instance of human crime, but not by one syllable uttered by the clergyman who stood at the death-bed of the criminal, with his ear listening at the very door of her soul!

Without being at all ambitious of earning for ourselves the character of either grievance or humanity-mongers, we feel that we cannot properly discharge our duty as public journalists, and at the same time remain silent with regard to the outrages which we daily see perpetrated by the administrators of the law, superiors and subalterns alike, against the precepts of Christianity and the liberty of the subject. Day by day we see the subtle sunossities of the law threaded with the utmost eagerness by zealous and overrighteous ministers of justice, in search of obsolete and arbitrary enactments wherewith to wreak vengeance on the heads of unfortunate delinquents, convicted perhaps of very venial and slight offences, or, if need be, to widen the meshes of the net in order to favour the escape of some lordly knocker-wrencher; but how rarely does it fall to the lot of the journalist to record the merciful interposition of magistrates on behalf of weak, and persecuted, and defenceless humanity, in cases where the oppressor happens to be a state official whether poor-law commissioner, police constable, or parish beadle. It would be a needless act of either courtesy or candour to stop here to acknowledge that there are many bright and praiseworthy exceptions to this sweeping and general condemnation, for it could not be supposed for a moment that we wish to wage indiscriminate warfare against the entire magistracy of England; but who that pays the slightest attention to the public proceedings at police-courts and petty sessions can hesitate to acknowledge that, as at present administered, the British code of laws, so lauded and bepraised, contains one set of rules for the rich and another for the poor. This is a great and a serious evil, which is pregnant with the utmost danger to the constitution, for, as nothing can so much tend to the welfare of a state as a general confidence in the administration of its laws, so nothing can be more pernicious or destructive to the frame-work of society (because stealthy and insidious) than suspicion and distrust. There appears to be on the part of the magistracy generally, a lamentable want of independent firmness and stoical indifference to consequences, and in no class of cases is this weak and vacillating, if not criminal, abandonment of the principles of justice more apparent than in that which arises from the all-fruitful source of misery and litigation, the Poor-law Amendment Act—an act which, wherever it is read as an authority, operates as if by magic to unsex the bench, by depriving its possessors of every spark of manliness and Christian feeling. We are by no means disposed to give a particular application to observations which are meant to apply generally, and as the case to which we are about presently to call the attention of our readers, furnishes one of those many lamentable instances of the cruel operation of the Poor-law Bill to which we have just adverted, we wish it to be clearly understood that we do not attribute to the magistrates in this case any feeling or motive unworthy the high office which they occupy. We relate the circumstances as they stand undeniably on record after a strict inquiry into the facts. The following statement we copy from the columns of the Times journal, whose uncompromising advocacy of the rights of the poor deserves our commendation:—

"Three weeks, only three weeks, since, two little boys, orphans, of the respective ages of 10 and 12 years, "almost perishing from cold and hunger," were taken by the charitable person who discovered them, Mr. Cook, of Vauxhall-road, first to the overseers of St. Margaret's, Westminster, and afterwards to the relieving officer of the West London Union. Both these functionaries peremptorily refused to give any assistance to these unhappy children. They severally admitted the truth of the destitution of these poor little boys, their orphan and defenceless condition, their hunger their cold, and their nakedness; but they disputed between themselves which was the proper party to administer relief. For three days and nights, neither more nor less, were these children bandied about from one to the other of these state establishments—St. Margaret's workhouse, namely, and the West London Union-house;—this much, at any rate, being clear, that if neither of these establishments were bound to relieve, none other was compellable to do so. To three several magistrates did Mr. Cook successively apply, but without effect, the magistrates having no authority; and Mr. Cook then found himself compelled (to his honour be it said that he thought it indeed an obligation) to provide food and lodging for the children himself, and at his own cost, and that for the period of three weeks. By the advice of the Queen-square magistrate he applied to the central Poor-law Commissioners. An investigation of four hours followed; and the result of all this misery and indifference, these applications and refusals, this active and Christian interference on the part of Mr. Cook, this bandying and appealing, is, that the Central Commission, the primum mobile of all this cumbrous machinery, discover, at the end of three weeks, "that the children were improperly refused relief both by the overseers of St. Margaret's, and by the relieving officer of the West London Union." Thus it appears that it took literally three weeks—of unwearied exertion—of going from overseer to relieving officer, and from relieving officer to overseer, and from both to the magistrates, and then from magistrate to magistrate, before the impervious region of central commissioners could be reached or put in motion, and then it was found that there was nothing in the law to deprive those children of their legal claim for charitable support. If there was "nothing in the law" to subject these wretched supplicants to starvation, who so fit to know it as the magistrate? If he did know the law, and feared to act upon it, there can be only one opinion with regard to his conduct. If he did not know the law, the conclusion is obvious."

So much for the Poor Law case; and now, with regard to the recreations in which the police sometimes indulge, in sporting with the personal liberty and comfort of her Majesty's liege subjects, we beg leave to subjoin the particulars of a short case which occurred a few days ago at one of the metropolitan police-offices, and which we copy from the newspapers:—

WORSHIP STREET.—BAIL AT STATION HOUSES. A genteel-looking youth, named Frederick Brown, and a respectable tradesman, residing in White Conduit-terrace, Pentonville, were charged with having let off fireworks in the public highway. The elder defendant admitted having been foolish enough to discharge a cracker, which was given to him by a passenger; but the instant it exploded he was seized by a policeman, who conveyed him to the Hoxton station-house. On being ushered before the inspector he begged leave to send into the next street for a friend to bail him; but the answer he received was, that it was too late, and he was locked up in a filthy cell, where he was obliged to remain until nearly nine o'clock on Sunday morning.—The younger defendant made a similar complaint.—The father of the youth, a respectable person residing in Bartholomew-close, said that he and his wife had been employed the whole night in vainly searching the streets in search of his son, whose mother was in a dreadful state of apprehension in consequence of his absence. He heard nothing of him until between eight and nine on Sunday morning, when a messenger at length arrived from the station-house, to whom he gave half-a-crown for his trouble, without knowing at the time that he had already received a shilling from his son.—Mr. Broughton sent for the messenger, and reprimanded him handsomely for his rapidity; and then added, in reference to the real cause of complaint, on the part of the prisoners, that proper facilities ought to be afforded at station houses for the procuration of immediate bail, in order that respectable persons might be saved the inconvenience and disgrace of being locked up on such trifling charges. He should discharge the defendants, as he considered they had been amply punished for their venial act of indiscretion.

Our space will not permit us the disagreeable gratification of offering a few comments on the whole of these proceedings; but we cannot help saying, that we think the conduct of the police deserves a severer punishment than that which the milk-and-water intimation thrown out by the worthy magistrate as to how prisoners ought to be treated conveys.

METROPOLITAN NEWS.

The speech of the King of the Belgians, at resuming the session o the Chambers, received on Thursday morning, has called forth considerable comment in the commercial circles, chiefly in consequence of the matters omitted. It was generally expected that the breaking off of the commercial treaty with France would have formed the main feature of his Majesty's speech, and the entire avoidance of all allusion to the question has created no small degree of disappointment.

Her Majesty and Prince Albert, accompanied by their royal offspring and suite, left Windsor at eight o'clock yesterday (Thursday) morning by the Great Western Railway, and reached the terminus at Paddington about a quarter before nine. They immediately entered the travelling carriages which were in waiting for them, and proceeded on their journey to Walmer Castle.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.—HOUSE OF LORDS, Thursday.—The Imperial Parliament of the United Kingdom was this day further prorogued until Tuesday, the 13th of December. Shortly before three o'clock, the Lord Chancellor, the Duke of Buccleuch, and Lord Wharncliffe, as Lords Commissioners, took their seats in front of the Throne, when the Lord Chancellor directed the Commons

(who were represented by the officers of the house) to be summoned to hear her Majesty's commission read. Mr. Ley, clerk at the table, and many of the officers and messengers of the house having appeared at the bar, the Lord Chancellor, in her Majesty's name, announced, in the usual form and words, that the present Parliament was further prorogued until Tuesday, the 14th day of December next. His lordship did not add, "then to meet for the dispatch of business." The ceremony only occupied a few minutes.

It is generally expected that parliament will meet for the dispatch of business about the third week in January

We observe with much pleasure that arrangements are being made, on a scale of unusual splendour, for the anniversary Polish ball, which is appointed to take place at Guildhall, on Wednesday next. We shall give, in our next number, an engraving of this truly christian and noble fete, which we hail with a hearty welcome.

AFFAIR OF HONOUR.—In consequence of a dispute at the Union Club House, between Mr. John Poingdestre and Mr. Thomas Carwick, a hostile meeting took place near Kilburn on Wednesday afternoon, when, after an exchange of shots, Mr. Poingdestre withdrew the offensive observation he had made to Mr. Carwick, whereupon Mr. Carwick retracted anything he had said derogatory to Mr. Poingdestre's honour.

Mr. Fox, the Unitarian minister of Finsbury Chapel, delivered to his congregation on Sunday last an eloquent discourse on the life and death of the late Dr. Channing, instead of his usual morning lecture.

On Sunday last St. Pancras new church was reopened for public worship, after having been thoroughly painted and redecorated. A general survey of the whole building has been made, which has led to some slight repairs in the belfry and spire, the former of which is built after the model of the Temple of the Winds at Athens.

It is with great regret we have to announce the sudden death of Sir John Cross, Knt., Judge of the Court of Review, at his house in Whitehall-place. This respected judge had been in the course of Saturday sitting in his court, and disposing of the business of the day. He returned to his house about three o'clock, and shortly afterwards expired from a disease of the heart. Sir John Cross was born in 1768, and was consequently in his seventy-fourth year.

Last week the workmen employed in the erection of the Nelson monument at Trafalgar-square put up the last layer of stone which forms the column of the monument. Their next operations will be to erect the Corinthian capital, on which the cupola will rest which is to form the pedestal for the colossal statue of Nelson. The capital is to be about 13 feet in depth, and the entire remaining portion of the structure will be about 35 feet in height. The monument is not expected to be finished for six months.

On Monday a general assembly of the academicians was held at the Royal Academy of Arts, in Trafalgar-square, when Mr. Thomas Creswick, Mr. John Holmes, and Mr. Francis Grant were elected associates of that institution.

Cabinet Councils have been held frequently during the week at the Foreign-office, at which the whole of her Majesty's Ministers have attended. From the protracted sittings of this important assembly and other indications of activity manifest in the Government offices, it is expected that the approaching session of Parliament will be unusually stirring and interesting. Rumours were afloat during the early part of the week that Earl Spencer's visit to her Majesty was not altogether unconnected with the administration of the Government.

The Attorney-General and Sir John M'Neill transacted business on Tuesday at the Foreign-office.

A deputation of West India merchants had an interview with Lord Stanley on Tuesday at the Colonial-office.

Count de Ste. Aulaire, the French ambassador, had an interview with the Earl of Aberdeen on Tuesday at the Foreign-office.

Mr. J. H. Plunkett, Attorney-General of New South Wales, and Mr. J. Bucheno, Colonial secretary, had interviews with Lord Stanley and Sir James Graham at the Colonial-office on the same day.

The newly-appointed Dean of Westminster, Dr. Turton, was installed on Tuesday, with the usual ceremonies, in Westminster Abbey, during the time of morning service. After the first lesson was concluded the Dean was conducted by Dr. Dakins, Residentiary Prebendary, from the Jerusalem Chamber into the choir, when her Majesty's letters patent were read, and the usual oaths administered to the new Dean. At the termination of this ceremony the Dean was conducted by Lord John Thynne, Sub-Dean, into his stall, and the remainder of the service was proceeded with. There was a very full attendance in the Abbey. The anthem selected for the occasion was, "I was in the spirit," Dr. Blow. It is rather a singular coincidence that the psalms and other services of the day were the very same as those used on the morning on which the late venerable Dean, that vicinity. The petition has already received between 7000 and 8000 signatures.

On Tuesday morning, about two o'clock, a fire, which at one time threatened the most disastrous consequences, broke out in the basement floor of the premises belonging to Mr. Hodder, situate in Gosswell-street; owing to a plentiful supply of water, coupled with the exertions of the firemen and police, the flames were quickly extinguished, but not before considerable damage was incurred.

A young lady was found by a policeman in Tottenham-court-road, sitting on the steps of a door on Tuesday morning last, who is supposed to have escaped from a lunatic asylum.

William Pritchard, Esq., was on Monday last elected High Bailiff of Southwark by a majority over his competitor, Mr. Payne, the coroner, of 87 to 79. Mr. D. W. Harvey was also a candidate, but, much to the dissatisfaction of that gentleman's friends, who doubted the correctness of the decision, the Lord Mayor declared that the two former gentlemen had a greater show of hands than Mr. Harvey, and according to a standing rule the latter was consequently excluded from the contest. Mr. Harvey's supporters, however, tendered 80 votes in his favour.

St. John's Church, Horselydown, was robbed on Sunday morning last of every portable article which it contained.

On Tuesday evening the ninth anniversary of the British Medical Association was held at the British Coffee-house, Cockspur-street, Dr. Webster in the chair. The report of the society was read by the secretary, which stated that a considerable number of new members had been admitted during the past year, and that the affairs of the association were in a prosperous condition. Professor Grant, in an eloquent speech, moved the adoption of the report, which being seconded by Mr. Eales was carried unanimously. R. D. Grainger, Esq., delivered a highly-interesting and eloquent oration, after which, thanks being voted to the chairman, the meeting separated.

On Monday evening a dreadful occurrence took place in the City-road, nearly opposite the dead wall of St. Luke's Workhouse. A gentleman named Pain was proceeding in the direction of Pentonville driving a rather spirited horse, when a youth flung a lighted cracker into the road—the horse shied and plunged violently, and at length darted off. Mr. Pain losing all control over the affrighted animal, one of the wheels of the vehicle came in contact with a gas pillar, and Mr. Pain was pitched headlong on the pavement, the horse also falling heavily to the ground. Assistance was promptly rendered by surgeons and others: no hopes are entertained of the unfortunate gentleman's recovery.

It is stated that Madame Vestris and Mr. Charles Mathews have withdrawn themselves from Drury-lane Theatre, in consequence of a misunderstanding with Mr. Macready.

A special meeting of the shareholders of the Royal Mail West India Steam Packet Company was held on Tuesday, for the election of four new directors, and the gentlemen chosen were Mr. Micaiah M'Cleary, Mr. Charles Mangles, Mr. Henry Nelson, and Mr. John Shepherd, who are all acknowledged to be intimately acquainted with the trade and localities in which the operations of the company are carried on.

Lord Brougham has been several times closeted with the Lord Chancellor in his lordship's private room, at Westminster-hall, during the last few days. Some speculation has been excited as to the nature of the deliberations of the noble and learned lords, it being generally supposed to have reference to the practical working of the recent law reforms.

The corporation of London, having examined into the expenses of managing and carrying on the Naval Benevolent Society, have directed their chamberlain to pay the sum of £100 in aid of the fund appropriated for the temporary and immediate relief of proper applicants.

There is no foundation for the report that Mr. David Pollock is to be appointed one of the commissioners of the insolvent Debtors' Court, in the room of the late Mr. Commissioner Bowen.

The arrangements for regulating the admission of the public to St. James's Park appear to us to be rather anomalous as far as regards the working classes. A few days ago a gentleman's servant in smart dress and carrying on the Naval Benevolent Society, have directed their chamberlain to pay the sum of £100 in aid of the fund appropriated for the temporary and immediate relief of proper applicants.

There is no foundation for the report that Mr. David Pollock is to be appointed one of the commissioners of the insolvent Debtors' Court, in the room of the late Mr. Commissioner Bowen.

The arrangements for regulating the admission of the public to St. James's Park appear to us to be rather anomalous as far as regards the working classes. A few days ago a gentleman's servant in smart dress and carrying on the gatekeeper at the same moment that three poor labourers, in tattered attire, were allowed freely to pass. We really think that this is very harsh and unjust towards servants, and we quite agree with the fair correspondent of a morning paper, who observes in reference to this subject, "it is surely better to ease them degrade the character of those persons on whom our domestic comfort and happiness so much depend, and to whose care our property, indeed our very lives, are in a great measure entrusted."

A very interesting and instructive improvement has been effected in the management of Kensington Gardens in consequence of the Commissioners of Woods and Forests having laudably affixed the names and descriptions to the various shrubs and trees which were planted a few years ago. The labels are of cast iron, [illegible] about a foot from the ground, and are sufficiently large to allow of reading the names at the distance of several yards. In addition to the scientific name the English name is given, the natural order to which the tree or shrub belongs, and year of its introduction into Britain.

THE ILLUMINATIONS.—The illuminations on Wednesday night were, [illegible] of the [illegible] which [illegible] St. Paul's churchyard and one or two [illegible] Regent Circus, Piccadilly, which was adorned with a display of [illegible] Strand and Haymarket were [illegible] and [illegible] Waterloo-place, Pall-mall, and the [illegible] were [illegible] and the Victoria Theatre had the letters [illegible] and the words "Jeffrey." The Italian Opera was not [illegible] all the Haymarket Theatres had the letters [illegible] and [illegible] Strand, and the Adelphi [illegible] [illegible] Lyceum, and the Victoria were [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

LORD MAYOR'S DAY.

The usual civic procession on Wednesday was honoured with a more numerous assemblage of spectators than on any occasion for many years past. The 9th of November, it will be recollected, was the anniversary of the birth of the Prince of Wales; and while the bells of the City steeples rang merry peals, as well in commemoration of that auspicious event as in celebration of the important civic day, those of the metropolitan churches "beyond the walls" responded in many a cheerful round in honour of the first event. The morning, too, was unusually fine, and altogether a Lord Mayor's Show has seldom within the memory of the oldest citizen presented a gayer appearance than that of Wednesday. It is to be deeply regretted, however, that the festive procession did not pass over without a very serious accident to one of the "men in armour," who, it will be seen, fell from his horse near Blackfriars-bridge, and broke his thigh.

At an early hour in the morning the Lord Mayor elect gave a public breakfast to the various civic functionaries, in the Council Chamber, at Guildhall. The procession was formed at a quarter past eleven, and differed in no particular calling for the slightest remark from those of preceding years. The boys of the Marine Society led the way, and were followed by the Goldsmiths' Company, with their various handsome banners, &c.; next came the Company of Tallow Melters, of which the chief magistrate is a liveryman. The various city officers, and the Sheriffs, with the late Lord Mayor and the Court of Aldermen, followed, the procession being closed by the Right Honourable the Lord Mayor elect, in his state carriage, and attended by his chaplain, the sword bearer, water bailiff, &c. The band of the 1st Life Guards with a company of that regiment, and a detachment of the Royal Horse Guards (Blue), were in attendance as usual.

The procession, contrary to the usual custom, proceeded through Cornhill and Gracechurch-street, to the Southwark side of London-bridge, and embarked at the southwest stairs, closely adjoining the range of warehouses belonging to his lordship, and known as the Kent and Sussex Wharf. Here the "silent highway" was witness to another departure from established rule, for some of the barges, in the place, as has been the custom "any time these hundred years past," of being propelled in the true and stately style of civic dignity, viz., by powerful sweeps in the hands of the renowned Thames watermen, were made fast to steamers, and "tugged" up to Westminster. The assistance of the steamers was not unattended with misfortune or vexation. The procession, on nearing Waterloo-bridge, ran foul of a revenue boat, which was capsized, and three of the crew were rescued with considerable difficulty. Immediately after this the state barge ran aground, and, as the tide was unusually low, a quarter of an hour elapsed before she could be got off and brought alongside all that remains of the ancient Cotton Garden, where temporary stairs were erected for the purpose of disembarking. The appearance of the gilded barges on the water, when completely under weigh, was really very grand and imposing, particularly the state barge and the barge of the Goldsmiths' Company, which shone like immense masses of floating gold. One steamer, which had been chartered for the sole use of the perambulating advertisers of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, attracted universal notice by an imposing "salute" of broadsides, with which the civic dignitaries appeared to be highly pleased.

THE INAUGURATION.

PROCESSION BY WATER FROM LONDON BRIDGE.

ENTERING WESTMINSTER HALL.

The procession arrived at Westminster shortly before three o'clock. The administration of the oaths and the customary ceremonies having been gone through, before the Barons of the Exchequer, his lordship, attended by the late Lord Mayor, the Sheriffs, Mr. Alderman Gibbs, and Mr. Alderman T. Wood, proceeded to the several courts of law and equity, where the Recorder, in his lordship's name, invited the Judges to the banquet at Guildhall. The number of persons at Westminster, and indeed throughout the line, was unusually great. The Court of Exchequer, as usual, was the chief point of attraction, and was crowded with elegantly-dressed ladies.

THE RETURN OF THE

CIVIC PROCESSION FROM WESTMINSTER TO GUILDHALL.

His lordship re-embarked shortly after three o'clock, and on arriving at Blackfriars-bridge the procession was reformed, the Stationers' Company taking the first rank. While the procession was being arranged in order on the bridge, the very serious accident above alluded to took place. The man wearing a suit of brass scale armour, who has been accustomed to the same duty on several previous occasions, was observed to have some difficulty in managing his horse, and, before assistance could be rendered, the animal slipped down on its haunches, and rolled over on to its rider, fracturing his thigh in a most dreadful manner. The City Marshal, who was close to the spot, assisted by several police constables, immediately raised the unfortunate sufferer, who appeared to be in the most excruciating agony, and a stretcher having been procured, he was conveyed to St. Bartholomew's Hospital, where the armour was removed and the limb set.

The procession was joined at the corner of Farringdon-street by the Lady Mayoress, and the carriages of several of the nobility, and proceeded in the usual manner to Guildhall.

THE BANQUET.

The Guildhall was more crowded than usual. The hospitality of the Lord Mayor seemed to outrun the accommodation afforded by the hall, great as that is; and at several tables parties were somewhat inconveniently crowded.

Sir R. Peel on his arrival was loudly and cordially greeted.

Any one who has ever attended at these festivals need not be told that few of the speeches are heard with any distinctness, and that the few who do succeed in rendering their sentences audible at some distance from the head table purposely abstain from any allusion to party topics. The character of the speeches on Wednesday did not differ from that hitherto observed—the grand staple of their composition was the veriest common-place. We shall not weary our readers by reporting what must be little else than a reprint of the addresses delivered in former years; but shall give those points in the leading speeches which we think worthy of being noticed.

Amongst the guests were the following:—The Foreign Ministers, the Duke of Buccleuch, the Marquis of Downshire, Earl of Haddington, Earl of Arundel, Lord W. Lennox, Lord J. Russell, Lord Stanley, Viscount Lowther, Lord D. Stuart, Lord Fitzgerald and Vesci, Lord Denman and the Judges, Right Hon. Sir R. Peel, Mr. Goulburn, Sir E. Knatchbull, Hon. H. T. L. Corry, Hon. C. P. Villiers, Hon. W. Baring, Sir G. Clerk, Sir T. Fremantle, Sir H. Meux, Sir J. Easthope, Sir F. Booth, Sir C. Hunter, Sir P. Laurie, Mr. Hume, Sir J. Hensler, Captain Hensler, the Sergeants, Sir T. Wilde, Mr. J. Jervis, several of the Under Secretaries of State, Mr. Walter, the Aldermen, Recorder, &c.

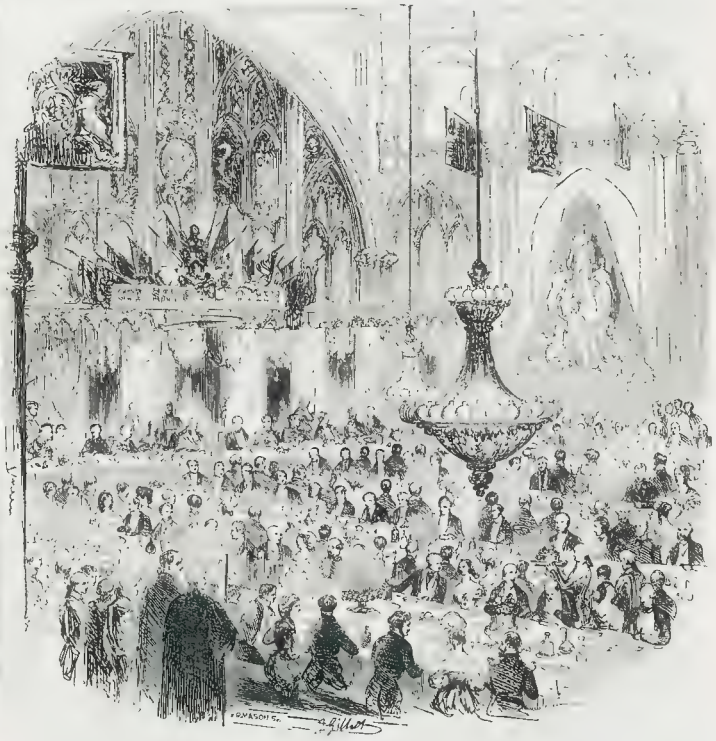
The Lord Mayor, in giving the first toast, "The Queen," dwelt on the talent and energy exhibited by the present Sovereign since she ascended the throne—qualities which were outshone only by her exalted virtues. (Cheers.) Then followed the toasts of "Prince Albert," "The Queen Dowager," "The Prince of Wales." In reference to the last, his lordship observed, that that day being the anniversary of the birth of the Prince of Wales would long be memorable in the annals of the country. (Loud cheering followed this allusion.)

His lordship next gave "The Army and Navy." Colonel T. Wood returned thanks, and acknowledged, on the part of the two services, the joint compliment which had been paid them. He need not say that they were ready, whenever their country called on them, to do justice to any cause in which they might be engaged, and to emulate the great deeds of those who had gone before them.

The Lord Mayor next gave "The late Lord Mayor," who was loudly cheered, and returned thanks in a few words.

The Lord Mayor then proposed "The health of her Majesty's Ministers." (Cheers.) Though he differed from them in politics, he believed they had the interests of the country at heart; and he unhesitatingly stated his belief that there was no man to whom her Majesty could with more safety entrust the administration of affairs than to Sir Robert Peel. (Cheers.)

Sir R. Peel, on rising to return thanks, was loudly cheered. He said, "My Lord Mayor and gentlemen—It is my duty, on behalf of the Ministers of the Crown, and in behalf of those members of the



THE BANQUET AT GUILDHALL.

Government who have the happiness of being present on this occasion, as well as those who have the misfortune to be absent, to return you thanks for the compliment you have just paid us. Our cordial acknowledgments are due to you, my Lord Mayor, for the manner in which you have proposed this toast, and to the company for the manner in which they have accepted it. (Cheers.) Gentlemen, although I am addressing you as Ministers of the Crown, and on behalf of Ministers of the Crown, and although it is difficult to forget altogether the public character with which I am invested, yet I assure you there is no man feels more deeply than I do, on this day and on this occasion, there ought to be a studious abstinence from every political subject which may tend to excite the harshness of party conflict. Whatever may be our differences of opinion on public subjects, and however earnestly, in the exercise of our right of free discussion, we may contend for the maintenance of our own views, yet there is one feeling in which I am sure we all here partake—it is one which in this hall should predominate, and one which shall not certainly be weakened by me—I mean a feeling of pride in the character and reputation of the city of London—(cheers)—of pride in its historical recollections; of pride, above all, in its pre-eminence in point of population, wealth, and commercial importance, over all the cities of the civilised world. (Loud cheers). Studiously adhering to the rule which prohibits an indulgence in party politics, on these occasions, the Ministers of the Crown are here for the purpose of giving their sanction to that happy oblivion of party differences; but yet we might be allowed to promise our cordial co-operation with the municipal and magisterial authorities of the city, in every matter which concerned the interest of the city. (Cheers.) Gentlemen, no man knows better than I do the importance to the public interests of such a co-operation. I have had proofs, within the last few months, when the people of this city were exposed to the danger of disturbance, that there did prevail between the municipal authorities of the city and the executive Government—between those invested with magisterial authority and those responsible for the superintendence of police an entire forgetfulness of party differences, and a warm and earnest concert in devising the best means for guarding against the evils that threatened the community, which greatly conduced to the preservation of tranquility. (Cheers.) I feel confident, from the character of your present chief magistrate—differing, as I do, from him on many political subjects that he will imitate those who have preceded him, and that, when the public interests require such a course, he will cheerfully lay aside all party considerations. I feel confident, also, that—no unimportant point—the character of this city for hospitality and conviviality will not be impaired while he holds the highest office amongst you. ("Hear, hear," and a laugh.) From the part which the Lord Mayor has taken in Parliament on the subject of the general consumption of the country, and from the earnestness with which he brought his knowledge to bear on this topic, I feel the utmost confidence in predicting that, when he lays down his office, the character of the city, for the becoming virtue of hospitality, will not have been tarnished in his hands—(Much laughter.) In returning thanks on the part of her Majesty's Ministers, I hope I shall not, as the head of the Government, be considered as transgressing the rule I have already adverted to, if I assure you that we are not unmindful of the obligations which office imposes. Many may differ from us as to the mode of effecting the objects we have in view. Few can differ from us as to the propriety of those objects. Our earnest wish is to cultivate the relations of peace, and to extend its inestimable blessings in every way consistent with the permanent and comprehensive interests of the country. (Cheers.) The object of our policy is to maintain the lustre of the British arms on every occasion on which an appeal to them may be necessary. The object of our policy is to encourage the demand for labour, and to extend our commercial prosperity. (Loud cheering.) The object of our policy is to maintain the public credit, and that character for public faith which no country can lose without losing also the main foundation of its strength and stability. We shall consider it amongst the most favourable indications of the result of that policy if, in a city so intimately connected with the manufacturing and commercial interests as this is, we shall find its commerce to be in a flourishing state. And with all sincerity I can assure you that, next to the approbation of our Sovereign, and the approbation of our own consciences, we can receive no higher reward for our public services, there can be no greater excitement in our exertions to promote the public interest, than the hope of attaining and preserving the favourable opinion and confidence of the city of London. (The right hon. baronet sat down amid loud cheers.)

The Lord Mayor then gave "The Foreign Ministers."

Mr. Everett returned thanks, but, we are sorry to say, was very indistinctly heard. "Whatever," he said, "may be the merits of this great commercial emporium, the city of London, whose prosperity was felt throughout the civilised world. He heartily responded to the sentiment which the right honourable gentleman had delivered, as to the necessity of strengthening the good understanding which now happily prevailed amongst the nations of the world; and he might, perhaps, be permitted to express his gratification at finding the questions which had arisen between his own country and England recently settled on a foundation equally honourable and beneficial to both.

"The Duke of Buccleuch and the House of Peers" was the next toast.

The Lord Mayor next proposed "The members of the House of Commons." He should not dwell on the merits of that assembly, as he was himself a member of it. He (on that occasion endeavoured to bring many members of it together of different political opinions, but of unquestioned talents and public integrity. His noble friend (Lord John Russell), he was happy to say, was present—(loud and continued cheers)—and the noble lord on his right (Lord Stanley) was equally entitled to be called on as the representative of that assembly, of which they were both such ornaments. (Hear.) As his opinions did not coincide with those of Lord Stanley, he thought it but fair that he should give that noble lord's health in connexion with the toast. He then gave "Lord Stanley, and the members of the House of Commons."

Lord Stanley said that on any occasion he should feel some inconvenience in endeavouring to return thanks for such an assembly as the House of Commons, before an audience so numerous, so respectable, and differing, probably, so widely in political opinions as the present; but the irksomeness of the task was greatly alleviated by the manner in which his lordship had introduced the toast. He was for some time in doubt whether he was intended to be connected with the compliment to the House of Commons, or whether it was not meant that that honour should be reserved for his noble friend the representative of the city of London. And, after all, he doubted whether his lordship, in adhering to the principle of strict impartiality, did not intend that his noble friend and himself should join in a sort of oratorical duet in praise of the House of Commons. (Much laughter.) But this he would venture to say, that although, perhaps, there had not been an entire accordance of opinion between himself and his noble friend, yet, with all sincerity, and from the bottom of his heart, he could assert that none but political differences existed between them, and that friendship was never interrupted which he was always so proud to enjoy. (Cheers.) He held it to be one of the highest boasts of their free constitution, that a free expression of individual opinion and of political differences was held compatible with the most sincere private respect. (Cheers.) He trusted that whilst the House of Commons watched the general welfare of the state, and truly represented its great and complicated interests, the parties into which it was divided would ever remember to give to their opponents the credit for sincerity and good intention that each desired claimed for himself. There were the sentiments of the people whom they represented, and he was sure that that body faithfully reflected, in this respect at least, the views of the constituency. (Cheers.)

The Lord Mayor next gave "The members for the city of London."

After a short speech from Mr. Masterman, who was very indistinctly heard,

Lord John Russell rose, and was received with cheering. He had a due sense of the honour which devolved on him as representative of the city of London, connected as that city was with the history of our most ancient popular municipal institutions, and remarkable as it had ever been for the enterprise of its citizens and the magnificence of its establishments. They had heard that night from high authority the demands which the interests of the country warranted the Government in enforcing. Let him be permitted to say that, whenever the Crown should think it necessary to appeal to the people, there was no people that would respond to that call with greater energy, greater virtue, or greater perseverance. (Cheers.) If it should be our unhappy fate to be involved in the contests of war, no nation could produce more from the naval and military ranks more determined to uphold its honour. And if, as he trusted, it should please Providence to bless us with continued peace, there was no nation that could snatch from us the rewards of its holy victories. (Cheers.) His noble friend had said that though they differed on political subjects there had been no interruption to their friendship. He begged to acknowledge and confirm the truth of that sentiment. (Cheers.) He should always pursue that course in public which his duty pointed out, however painful on some occasions a strict adherence to it might be; but he trusted that the firm declaration of his opinions would never abate or destroy those friendships which were the pride and pleasure of his private life. (Loud cheers.)

Sir R. Peel then gave "The late Lady Mayoress."

His late Lordship returned thanks, and with great naiveté observed, that it would ill-become a man to praise his own wife. (Laughter.) All he should say was, let what she had done speak for her.

This short and pithy acknowledgment was received with much laughter, and the Lord Mayor soon after retired.

"Now countless turbots and unnumbered soles
Fill the wide kitchen of each livery hall;
From pot to spit, to kettle, stew, and pan,
The busy hum of greasy scullions sounds,
That the fixed beadles to almost perceive
The secret dainties of each other's watch:
Fire answers fire, and through their paly flames
Each table sees the other's bill of fare:
Cook threatens cook in high and angry vaunt
Of rare and new made dishes: confectioners,
Both pastrycooks and fruiterers in league,
With candied art their rivets closing up,
Give pleasing notice of a rich dessert."

The following is the bill of fare:—250 tureens of real turtle, containing 5 pints each; 200 bottles of sherry; 6 dishes of fish; 30 entrées; 4 boiled turkeys and oysters; 60 roasted pullets; 60 dishes of fowls; 40 dishes of capons; 50 French pies; 50 pigeon pies, 35 hams (ornamented); 43 tongues; 2 quarters of house-lamb; 2 rounds of beef; 3 rounds of beef; 3 sirloins; 3 saddles of mutton; 3 rumps of beef; 13 sirloins, rumps, and ribs of beef; 6 dishes of asparagus; 60 ditto of mashed and other potatoes; 44 ditto of shell fish; 4 ditto of prawns; 140 jellies; 80 blancmanges; 40 dishes of tarts (creamed); 30 ditto of orange and other tourtes; 40 ditto of almond pastry, 50 (ornamental) baskets; 60 dishes of mince pies; 56 salads. The Removes 80 roast turkeys; 6 leverets; 80 pheasants; 24 geese; 40 dishes of partridges; 15 dishes of wild fowl; 2 pea fowls. Dessert 100 pine-apples, from 2lb. to 3lb. each; 200 dishes of hot house grapes; 250 ice creams; 50 dishes of apples, 100 ditto of pears; 60 ornamented Savoy cakes; 75 plates of walnuts; 80 ditto of dried fruit and preserves: 50 ditto of preserved ginger; 60 ditto of rout cakes and chips; 48 ditto of brandy cherries; 4 dishes of Selim's (Captain Waterton) true Indian curries. The last is quite new to the gourmands of the city, and was much approved.

THE COURT AND HAUT TON.

WINDSOR, Sunday.—The Queen and Prince Albert, and the royal suite and household, attended divine service this morning in the private chapel of the Castle. The Rev. Dr. Richards, of Exeter College, Oxford, officiated. Her Majesty and her illustrious consort enjoyed a walk for some time this afternoon in the Home Park and Terrace.

MONDAY.—This morning her Majesty and his Royal Highness Prince Albert took their usual walking exercise. His Royal Highness Prince Albert, attended by Lord Dunmore, Lord Stanley, and Colonel Wylde, enjoyed several hours' shooting in the royal preserves, near the Flying Barn, at Virginia Water. Lord and Lady Fitzgerald and Vesci arrived at the Castle to-day on a visit to her Majesty. The Princess Royal has been taken her usual airing. Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Gloucester, Lady C. Legge, and the Rev. Dr. Richards took their usual consort and suite walks for some time this afternoon in the Home Park and Terrace.

MONDAY.—This morning her Majesty and his Royal Highness Prince Albert took their usual walking exercise. His Royal Highness Prince Albert, attended by Lord Dunmore, Lord Stanley, and Colonel Wylde, enjoyed several hours' shooting in the royal preserves, near the Flying Barn, at Virginia Water. Lord and Lady Fitzgerald and Vesci arrived at the Castle to-day on a visit to her Majesty. The Princess Royal has been taken her usual airing. Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Gloucester, Lady C. Legge, and the Rev. Dr. Richards took their usual consort and suite walks for some time this afternoon in the Home Park and Terrace.

TUESDAY.—This morning her Majesty and his Royal Highness Prince Albert took their usual walking exercise. His Royal Highness Prince Albert, attended by Lord Dunmore, Lord Stanley, and Colonel Wylde, enjoyed several hours' shooting in the royal preserves, near the Flying Barn, at Virginia Water. Lord and Lady Fitzgerald and Vesci arrived at the Castle to-day on a visit to her Majesty. The Princess Royal has been taken her usual airing. Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Gloucester, Lady C. Legge, and the Rev. Dr. Richards took their usual consort and suite walks for some time this afternoon in the Home Park and Terrace.

TUESDAY.—Her Majesty and his Royal Highness Prince Albert took walking exercise both in the morning and afternoon. The Prince of Wales and the Princess Royal did not leave the Castle during the day. The royal dinner party included the following personages:—Viscount Sydney, Lord Fitzgerald and Vesci, Lady Portman, the Hon. Miss Devereux, Lady C. Cocks, the Hon. Mrs. Anson, the Rev. Dr. Hodgson (Provost of Eton), Lord C. Wellesley, Colonel Wylde, Sir F. Stovin, the Hon. C. A. Murray, Dr. Pretorius, and Lieut.-Colonel Wood.

WEDNESDAY.—Her Majesty and his Royal Highness Prince Albert took walking exercise both in the morning and afternoon. Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent paid a congratulatory visit to her Majesty and his Royal Highness Prince Albert on the anniversary of the birth of his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales. Her Royal Highness remained with her Majesty to luncheon. The following were included in the royal dinner party:—Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent, Viscount Sydney, Lady Portman, Lord and Lady Hardie, Lady C. Cocks, the Hon. Miss Devereux, Lady C. Dundas, Mr. and the Hon. Mrs. Anson, Lord C. Wellesley, Colonel Wylde, Sir F. Stovin, General Wemyss, and the Hon. C. A. Murray. The birthday of his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales was celebrated at Windsor with great rejoicing. In the forenoon the 2nd Regiment of Life Guards, under the command of Col. Reid, and the Grenadier Guards, under the command of Col. Thornton, marched into the Home Park, and fired a feu de joie. The regiments afterwards marched past in review order. In the evening most of the tradespeople illuminated. The following is the programme of the music played by the band of the Grenadier Guards at the Castle:—Selection, Redonde, composed by her Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent, to celebrate the first anniversary of the birth of his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales; Duo, "Quis est Homo," Stabat Mater, Rossini; Welzer, "Homage to his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales," composed expressly by Rudolph Siboldi; Grand March, his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales's, Costa; National Divertimento, arranged expressly by Rudolph Siboldi; Galop, M. S. Labitzky.

The Duke of Sussex and the Duchess of Inverness left Howick, where the Royal Duke had been visiting Earl Grey, on Tuesday. Countess Grey, for Auckland Castle, Durham, to honour the Bishop of Durham and Mrs. Maltby with a visit.

Lord and Lady John Russell, after a residence of nearly three months at Endsleigh, visited the Royal Hon. Henry and Mrs. Labouchere, at their seat near Taunton, and Mr. E. A. and Lady Caroline Sanford, at Nynehead, near Wellington.

Viscount Morpeth joined the Earl and Countess of Carlisle, and the family circle assembled at Castle Howard, on Wednesday last, from town.

The Earl and Countess of Jersey arrived at Ashton Castle, Ayrshire, from Newmarket. The return of the noble earl to Scotland has, we hear, been hastened by the unsettled state of the collieries in the county of Ayr, of which his lordship has recently been appointed lord-lieutenant.

MARRIAGES IN HIGH LIFE.—At St. Peter's, by special licence, by the Hon. and Rev. Francis Howard, John Trant, Esq., of Dover, nephew of Lords Clare, Dunsandle, and Oranmore, and Westmeath, to Sarah Anne, only daughter of Sir Henry Robert Carden, Baronet, of the Priory, Templemore. After the ceremony the happy couple left for Colnebrooke, the seat of Sir Arthur Brooke, Bart. The preliminaries of a marriage between the Marquis of Douglas, the eldest son of the Duke of Hamilton, and a Princess of Baden, have been finally arranged, and it is expected that the ceremony will take place in the course of the present or early in the ensuing month. The ceremony will take place in Germany.

The accounts received in town in the early part of the week state that Viscount Melbourne continues to improve in health.

Lady Humphry Davy left Malta on the morning of the 26th of October, by the French steamer, for Rome. Her ladyship was attended on board by several naval officers, paying a just tribute of respect to the relict of the celebrated philosopher.

Prince George of Cambridge, the Hon. Colonel and Mrs. Anson, Lord Albert Conyngham, Lady Suffield, Colonel and Mrs. Anson, the Hon. Cecil Forester, Mr. Knightley, Lord George Paget, &c., have been staying at Wilsey Park during the last week.

On Wednesday evening the Archduke Frederick of Austria, attended by Capt. Fitzroy, R.N., and accompanied by Baron Lebzeltern, Count Karoyli, Chevalier Kobel, and Capt. Du Ment, in the imperial suite, arrived at Mivart's Hotel, after an extensive tour in the north and Scotland, and a hasty trip through Wales and the midland counties.

The Duke of Wellington left Apsley House on Tuesday morning, shortly before nine o'clock, for Dover, in order to be at Walmer Castle to receive her Majesty, as Lord Warden of the Cinque Ports.

Lord and Lady John Russell arrived in Belgrave-square on Tuesday evening, from Bowood Park, Wiltshire.

Lord Ward arrived at Mivart's Hotel on Monday evening from Himley Hall, the noble lord's seat in Staffordshire.

Sir Henry Hardinge has left town.

Miss Burdett Coutts is entertaining a select circle at Cliefden House, Berkshire.

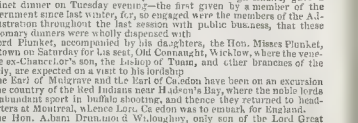
The Earl of Aberdeen, Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, gave a Cabinet dinner on Tuesday evening,—the first given by a member of the Government since last winter, for, so engaged were the members of the Administration throughout the last session with public business, that these customary dinners were totally dispensed with.

Lord Plunket, accompanied by his daughters, the Hon. Misses Plunket, left town on Saturday for his seat, Old Connaught, Wicklow, where the venerable Archbishop of Dublin's son, the Hon. and Rev. Thomas, and other branches of the family, are expected on a visit to his lordship.

The Earl of Mulgrave and the Earl of Caledon have been on an excursion to the country of the Red Indians near Hudson's Bay, where the noble lords had abundant sport in buffalo shooting, and thence they returned to headquarters at Montreal, whence Lord Caledon was to embark for England.

The Hon. Adam Drummond Wedderburn, only son of the Lord Great Chamberlain, comes of age on the 25th of next month, Christmas-day, when the event will be celebrated at Grimsthorpe Castle, where Lord and Lady Willoughby and family have arrived from town.

ACCIDENT TO LORD LONDONDERRY.—The Marquis of Londonderry, when following the fox-hounds on Monday last, fell from his horse at Twizzle Houses, near Stockton-on-Tees, and broke his right arm. His lordship was immediately conveyed to Wynyard Park, where he received surgical assistance.



CHURCH, UNIVERSITIES, &c.

ORDINATION.—At a general ordination holden by the Lord Bishop of St. Asaph, in the cathedral church of his diocese, on Sunday last, the following gentlemen were admitted into holy orders:—Deacons: Brabazon Hallowes, B.A., Lincoln College, Oxford; Henry Parry, B.A., New Inn Hall, Oxford. The letters dimissory from his Grace the Archbishop of York: John Stansfeld, B.A., St. John's College, Cambridge; Henry John Graham, B.A. Priest: Rev. — Lewis, B.A., Jesus College, Oxford.

H. Marquis of Lansdowne has appointed the Rev. Dr. Booth, principal of the College of Civil Law, one of his lordship's domestic chaplains.

The Rev. Robert Twigg, M.A., has been presented by his Grace the Archbishop of Canterbury to the vicarage of Sonning, Berks.

The Bishop of St. Asaph consecrated Bistree new church, near Mold, Flintshire, and the new English church, at Llanwrist, last week. The venerable diocesan is quite restored to health.

The Bishop of London consecrated Noak chapel, Essex, last week. It is a neat structure, and dedicated to St. Thomas the Apostle.

The Queen Dowager has transmitted a liberal sum to cover the deficiency still existing in the funds for the endowment of the new church of St. James, at Wolverhampton. Her Majesty has sent a donation to the fund for the erection of a national school at Hunslet, Yorkshire.

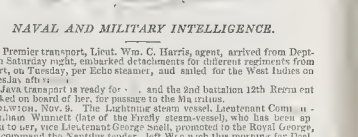
The Bishop of St. David's (Dr. Thirlwall) has given £100, in addition to his previous liberal donation of £200, towards the rebuilding of Aberguwli church.

The Bishop of Barbadoes has, in addition to many other munificent acts, lately presented to the Colonial Church a very magnificent quarter clock, made by Messrs. Rogers, of Whitchurch, Salop.

The Lord Bishop of Chichester, attended by the vicar of the parish, &c., performed the ceremony of confirmation on Tuesday at St. Peter's Church, Brighton, where 466 persons, of whom nearly two-thirds were females, partook of the holy rite. At the conclusion of the ceremony his lordship delivered an impressive discourse. The church was crowded.

THE COLONIAL BISHOPS.—The Bishops of Van Diemen's Land and Antigua, attended by the Rev. Rogers, left town for their extant dioceses in the course of a few days. The three others, who were consecrated last August, have already taken their departure. The Lord Bishop of Barbadoes, Dr. Parry, left on the 15th of September. The right rev. prelate has appointed the Rev. Charles Lawson, M.A., morning preacher at the Foundling Hospital, to the archdeaconry, and has nominated the Rev. William Chamberlain, M.A., to the incumbency of the principal church in the island of Trinidad. Dr. Tomlinson, Bishop of Gibraltar, sailed on the 20th of last month, accompanied by his chaplains, the Rev. Philip Miles, M.A., Fellow of Exeter College, Oxford, and the Rev. Charles Lonsdale, M.A., Fellow of Balliol College. Dr. W. Piercy Austin, Bishop of Guiana, set sail from Falmouth on Thursday last.

The Lord Bishop of Derry has been pleased to appoint the Rev. Dr. Hore to be vicar-general of the diocese of Raphoe, in the room of the Rev. Dr. Stopford, promoted to the see of Meath.



NAVAL AND MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

The Premier transport, Lieut. Wm. C. Harris, agent, arrived from Deptford on Saturday night, embarked detachments for different regiments from Gosport, on Tuesday, per Echo steamer, and sailed for the West Indies on Wednesday afternoon.

The Java transport is ready for sea, and the 2nd battalion 12th Regiment embarked on board of her, for passage to the Mauritius.

WOOLWICH, Nov. 9. The Lightning steam vessel, Lieutenant Commander Wemyss Mackenzie, a handsomely modelled screw steam-vessel, who has been appointed to her, vice Lieutenant George Snell, promoted to the Royal George, and to command the Nautilus tender left Woolwich this morning for Deal, with a large quantity of luggage on board, from Windsor Castle, for her Majesty's use. Master of Ordnance.

GREAT WAR STEAMER.—The Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty have accepted the design of a magnificent war steam-vessel, with propelling engines of 600 horse power, submitted by Mr. Oliver Lang, master shipwright of the Woolwich dockyard, and have ordered that she is to be constructed at the dockyard under the superintendence and superintendence of Mr. Lang. The dimensions of this leviathan of the deep are as follows:—Length between the perpendicular 226 feet; length of keel for tonnage 195 feet 101 inches; breadth extreme 33 feet; depth in hold 27 feet; burthen in tons 1800. To convey an idea of the great size of the war steamer about to be built here it may be mentioned that she will exceed the Trafalgar by 26 feet 6 inches in length of the decks, and by 26 feet 6 inches in the length of the keel for tonnage. The length in head will also exceed that of the Trafalgar by 3 feet 10 inches.

LOSS OF HER MAJESTY'S STEAMER SPITFIRE.—The subjoined is an account of the loss of her Majesty's steamer Spitfire, contained in a letter just received from a captain of the 3rd West India Regiment: "Belize, Honduras, Sept. 17.—This month is to be remembered as the date of the total wreck of her Majesty's steamer Spitfire, about 70 miles from this place, having on board two companies of the 3rd West India Regiment, and fearing that you might imagine me on board, and perhaps lost, I hurry over a few lines previous to the departure of our mail, to let you know I am quite safe, and am happy to say that out of 200 souls but one was lost, a private of ours, and that to rough his own imprudence. The steamer was wrecked on Saturday night last, shortly before eleven o'clock, having struck on a reef, and in less than two hours her hold was full of water, and we expected her to part during the night. Had she done so there was no probability of a single life being saved, land not being in sight, nor did we know exactly where we were. We landed, however, on two islands the day following, two other officers with myself and 115 men on one, where we could obtain neither water nor anything to eat, without sending to the main, nine or ten miles off, we got, indeed, some of each, but not at all sufficient for our wants. We reached this only last evening, and here we found a portion of our baggage, but all complete y ruined."

The 58th Regiment, in the Dublin garrison, have received orders to embark for Liverpool in three divisions, on the 9th, 11th, and 14th inst

The depôt of the 58th Regiment will arrive in Dublin from Longford on the 15th and 16th inst., for embarkation for Glasgow

The depot of the 75th is ordered to Portsmouth, and will occupy Forten Barracks till the arrival of the head-quarters from the Cape, which had not embarked when the last accounts left, owing to the outbreak at Port Natal.

The 7th Hussars, with the 1st Dragoon Guards, are on their way home from Quebec, in the following transports:—Sovereign, Nautilus, Troy, Tyne, and Tanjore, under the charge of Lieut. Richard Ward, agent for transports.

The detachment of dragoons which arrived in Stafford at the time of the opening of the special commission left the town on Tuesday, and marched to Newcastle. The same day the troop of the 2nd Dragoon Guards, under Major Trench, which had been for some time stationed at Newcastle, left that town to join the head-quarters at Nottingham. On the same day a troop of the 3d Dragoon Guards, under Captain Teesdale, arrived at Newcastle from Stafford, where they remain.

Arrangements have at length been completed for filling up the vacant colonelcies occasioned by the decease of the Hon. Sir Galbraith Lowry Cole, and Sir James Lyon. Lieut.-General Sir John Maclean is to be removed from the 1st battalion of the 60th Rifles to the 27th Foot, and to be replaced in the 60th by Lieut.-General Sir Wm. Gabriel Davey; and Lieut.-General Elliee, who lately commanded the western district of Great Britain, is to succeed to the colonelcy of the 24th Regiment.

The usual half-yearly public examination of the officers and gentlemen cadets studying at the Royal Military College, at Sandhurst, took place on Thursday, Friday, and Saturday, the 3rd, 4th, and 5th instant. At the close of the examination the following officers were presented with the usual certificates of qualification:—Captain W. G. Scott, 21st Regiment; Lieutenant C. Capel, 67th Regiment. And the following gentlemen cadets, who had completed their qualifications for commissions, were recommended to his Grace the Commander-in-Chief for appointment to commissions in the line without purchase. Thomas Dundas, Fergusand W. L'Estrange, Henry F. Ponsonby, Leopold Bellairs, Frederick D. Middleton, Richard H. Farrer, Wintringham Jackson, Ormond Fitzgerald, Geo. F. A. Walker, James A. Gordon, Hercules G. H. Rowlason, Arthur W. Palmer, Hon. Francis W. H. Pane, John Brenchley, Melville Brown, Marcus W. de la P. Beresford.

The two companies of the Grenadier Guards which had been appointed to attend upon her Majesty as a guard of honour, during the sojourn of the Court at Walmer Castle left Windsor at an early hour on Monday. The guard of honour consisted of the 1st and 10th companies, under the command of Colonel Bagot.

SHIPPING INTELLIGENCE.

Collisions at Sea.—Several Lives Lost. On Sunday afternoon last the Caledonia steamer, from Hamburg, arrived at Grangemouth, having in tow a vessel called the Louisa, belonging to St. Petersburg, which had been met with disabled, and took possession on board, drifting about the German Ocean. The supposition entertained by the Caledonia's crew upon coming up with the vessel was that she had been a wreck, for her bulwarks were more in, and altogether she was seriously injured about the hull and rigging. Since then it has been ascertained that such was really the case. It happened on the night of the 30th of last month, during a violent gale of wind from the south west, about seven miles off the coast at Orfordness, and the other vessel proves to be the Swedish brig Remanche, belonging to Marseilles. The crew, expecting the vessel would go down, jumped into the long-boat and made for shore, which they succeeded in reaching in safety. They say they shortly lost sight of the vessel, from which they believed she had sank. The value of the Louisa is reported to be at least £4,000.—A telegraphic has been received of the total loss of the barque Jackson, Captain Caithness, belonging to Dundee, which is said to have resulted in consequence of her coming into collision with another vessel on the night of Oct. 29, near the east coast of Gothland, while on her voyage from Liverpool to Dundee. Her crew consisted of twelve individuals, of whom five met with a watery grave, namely, the mate, two seamen, and two boys. The rest saved themselves by the ship's boat.—On Friday week, for an instant, a dreadful collision occurred in the Channel, occasioned by the carelessness of the night. It took place about eleven o'clock, near the Skerries, between the Rev——, schooner, from Truro to Liverpool, and another schooner, named at present unknown. Such was its violence that the former commenced filling rapidly, and there was scarcely time for the crew to save themselves before she went down in sixteen fathoms water. She is insured for £800. On the same day another schooner, named the Hope, was run down near the Calf of Man, South Shields harbour, by the Union, barque, belonging to that port. The latter was driven into the harbour under stress of weather, and the disaster is described to have been entirely accidental. There is some chance of her being saved if the weather moderates.

The schooner Sarah, from Swansea for Waterford, was lost on Friday morning, at Poor Head, county Cork. The crew were saved, and taken into Cork, by the Ann, from Ipswich. The Symmetry, Williams, has sailed from Cork with a cargo of Connaught wool, for Ireland.

The packet ship United States, which sailed from New York on the 13th ult., arrived at Liverpool on Tuesday.

Singular Occurrence. The schooner Edward, Captain Hughes, with a cargo of coal, was lying at anchor off Woodside, in the Mersey. On Wednesday last, the captain and crew having gone on shore, she was driven, in the course of the night, by a fresh north-easterly breeze, seaward. Fortunately, about half-past six o'clock next morning, she was descried by three boatmen, namely, Richard Chapcott, Thomas Fell, and Richard Evans, close to the Formby lightship, and brought back to port. Had these men not fallen in with her she would, it is probable, have been driven on the North Bank and become a complete wreck. Much credit is due to the three boatmen for their exertions in saving the vessel. They will, no doubt, be well rewarded.

Southampton, Nov. 7.—Captain Loney, who commanded the Isis, proceeded immediately to London when landed from the ship at this port. The crew of the Isis were landed here in a deplorable condition, having lost everything but the bare clothes they had on when they were saved. In consequence of the loss of their vessel they will receive no pay from the day they left the last port in her. The value of the Isis was estimated at £90,000, and she was insured in about half of that amount.

Loss of Three Pilots.—Last week three pilots, Richard M'Creevey and two men of the name of M'Keown, went down to the Belfast Lough, on the look-out for vessels, and on Friday morning the boat in which they went out was picked up near Bangor, with her keel turned out. It is supposed that either the boat had been run down by a steam boat, or had been capsized in a squall: the former supposition, it is to be hoped, will prove correct, as there will be then a greater probability of the men having been rescued from a watery grave.

The Avon, one of the new West India steamers, built at Bristol, arrived in Scottish bottom water on Tuesday, she will convey the West India mails of the 19th inst. from this country. The Pacific, a sailing vessel, is expected hourly from Spain, with nearly a hundred head of cattle, the property of the gentleman who has been importing Spanish oxen at this port since the operation of the new tariff.—Three sides of the wall of the new dock have given way, which will delay the opening for a short period. A gentleman from London has examined the wall, and has estimated the expense of repairing the damage at about £25,000.

OUR GRAVE DISCUSSION OF TOPICS OF THE DAY.

(From a Correspondent.)

Guy Fawkes having taken his departure in our last publication, and all the "eminences" who assumed his bedizened habiliments having resumed their natural petticoats and small clothes; every bird of the sapient flock, indeed, having been burned to death in Guy plumage, and since emerged whole from the ashes, as the Phœnix Fire-office would like to see the fire-levelled houses they insure; we are, of course, turned into the channel of running commentary upon other lions of the week, and we will take them for the moment in orderly rotation. We commence with the record of an event which speaks volumes for the condition of public sympathy, and may be dolefully narrated in lachrymose verse:—

A lord of some fame
In the records of blame,
Dubbed Frankfort by name,
Treats with conduct so so,
And quite naughty, you know,
A young belle (bad of heart),
Who is called Alice Lowe.

Now, if this lord had virtue, the world still infers
Of Miss Alice, it wasn't much better than hers;
And, as Alice had none, why the consequence is
That hers was not very much better than his,
Which resolves the whole case to a question of whether They weren't, lord and lady, both bad ones together.

Well, the profligate bean
Soon indicts Alice Lowe,
(Who his mansion bereft
Of what trinkets he'd left);
For the stealing of miniatures, jewels, and rings,
And a fine congregation of similar things,

An art
On her part
Which not pleasing Lord Frankfort,
He very obligingly wished she might hang for't.

But, hanging for theft being abolished, he had transportation in his mind's eye, as well as the regrets of Thomas Hood in his lamentation of

Alice, I believed you true,
And I was blest in so believing;
But till this hour I never knew
That you'd be taken up for thieving.

Alice, however, was tried, and the public got up a fury of execration against the lord for turning round upon his protege upon finding himself robbed. Guilty or not guilty, she became a heroine at once; people almost shed tears at the idea of a young creature so poor and pretty being persecuted; they groaned his lordship out of countenance, and cheered the fair Alice into life the moment that a well-timed fainting fit put the crisis to her acquittal in the court. How far this sympathy was deserved may be guessed by the result. The delicate-minded creature, who was so fond of character or jewels, that she stood a trial for both, and stuck to both with equal fervour, is so overpowered by her feelings that she hires herself for the public benefit as an actress at a minor theatre the very Monday following her trial! Abandoned before, she would now found popularity upon the notoriety of a narrow escape! This is terribly disgusting, and we hope the sympathisers are sick. Guilty or innocent in the case of Lord Frankfort, the public placed their morbid regard upon an undeserving object, and have learnt the lesson that the law had better be allowed to take its course, without the interference of predilections which, if not unjust, are undignified, and, in the present instance, have proved most absurd.

Let us leave this Lowe subject to grapple with the grandeur of the Lord Mayor's Day. Elsewhere we have given it such moral support as cannot fail to elevate it in the scale of future Novembers. And, again, we have illuminated it with most shining illustrations. It was really a most spirited affair. There was a breakfast at Guildhall, which paved the way of all further feasting, and then forth went the procession. Alderman Humphery was quite alive to his interests in taking his new dignity. He did not forget the tradesman or the diplomatist. He passed the procession over London-bridge by his own hotel, and took water (the only hydropathic action of the day) in high spirits (which destroyed the hydropathic action altogether) in the borough of Southwark, among his old constituents—a sort of precaution that will tell in his favour at the next general election, nearly as much as his confession that Sir Robert Peel is about the fittest man to conduct the destinies of a nation (be the opinion ever so true or false) will tell against him with the Radicals who made him M.P.

Well, he was soon upon the bosom of silver Thames, handsomely taken in tow by steamers, and handsomely preceded by the gentlemen "who had board and lodging for the occasion" from the Illustrated London News. Had anything happened to his lordship, our boarders were ready, like Nelson's, and a pretty band they made, to play responses to the "Io triumphe" of the river. But let us give an idea rather of the land procession than the water:—

First came the new police,
Who are clearing away all they can,
And strive
To lead what they very often drive,
The van!
The boys belonging to the Society of Marines,
Not out of their teens;
The skippers of the boats
In their coats;
And the City Marshal's man!

All the Company of Goldsmiths next,
With nobody vex'd;
But the great round shield in its beauty shining,
So as to clear away the fog above,
And enable the sun on clouds to leave off dining,
And catch a glance of himself in its beautiful orb of love,
Burnish'd,
And ready furnish'd
With England's arms, as on their legs the bearers proud did move.

Then came the Tallow-chandlers' Company quick,
Looking as healthy as if they had been living at Hampton-wick;
And being quite as merry every member,
As if it had been Candle-mas, instead of November,
Or, as if their tempers were like candles walking about,
With a consciousness that there was no extinguisher strong enough
No, they were cocksure enough {to put 'em out.
Of being up to snuff!

Next, the Lord Mayor's beadles,
With eyes like needles
That had nobody to thread 'em;
And liveries grand, and shoes that shone proud that such people
Then lots of Water Captains, who seem'd to be {should tread 'em Completely at sea!

Then England's ancient Herald—
(Not my Grandmother,
But another)—
And the ancient knight,
Cap-a-pie, with his armour bright,
Of whom a fellow in plain clothes did not fail
To say that he was like him while he wore a coat of mail.

Then the Sheriffs, Pilcher and Hooper,
Each gay as a trooper,
And the late Lord Mayor,
Who, to take a full view, had left the civic chair,
And the Lady Mayoress, with her coach and six;
And the new Lord Mayor following them all like bricks,
And looking quite bold, and that he had health, and strong,
Among all the beautiful people that did to him belong.

We believe we have cut the procession much shorter than it originally was, which is more the fault of the procession than our own; although we dare say that the procession, on looking at our engraving, will have no reason to complain that we have had the procession cut.

But our printer calls us, and we must prattle no more rubbish; otherwise we might disport nonsense about a thousand and one fables of the day (not the Lord Mayor's Day), that are proving the weakness of society, by breaking its heads at every turn.

THE THEATRES.

COVENT GARDEN.

The Covent Garden manager produced The Tempest on Wednesday night, with a promise to repeat it on Friday, when Miss A. Kemble and Mrs. A. Shaw do not appear. It was brought out a favourite play of Shakspere's in a manner that does it impression, and that fully deserves to be successful. A good spirit pervades the conduct of the performance, and the [illegible] with which it has been produced on the one hand, and the [illegible] of the decorations on the other, fully justify the very hearty acclamations which it received, and merit encouragement for the future. It is not on the acting of the several characters that we need dwell at any length. The Tempest is a play which, of all others, depends less on individual impersonation than on the completeness of the ensemble. Vandenhoff Miranda with an unassuming and maiden-like air. Bartley and Harley are as humorous as ever in Stephano and Trinculo; and Bland, as Caliban, though his action was often ill-suited to his words, evinced a conception of the dogged surliness of the "deformed slave," which was far above that displayed in any late impersonation of the character. Miss Ramforth, an unassuming and interesting Ariel, sang "Where the bee sucks" very sweetly, and fully deserved her enthusiastic encore. She will grow more to the ethereal character of Ariel when she has become more used to it, as she will then lose that appearance of schooling which now pervades her gestures. At the same time we cannot help instancing the rapt attitude of joy into which she threw herself in the last scene as particularly spiritual and beautiful.

We will next week consider the spirit of the whole performance, and the manner of production, with reference to illustration as well as comment.

The Tempest will be repeated twice a week.

THE HAYMARKET.

Grandfather Whitehead, worthy venerable old grandfather Whitehead having taken it into his mind to quit the fogs of the metropolis on Saturday evening last for the purer atmosphere of some provincial localities, the indefatigable lessee was prepared, in some small degree, to atone for his departure by the production of a new piece, by Buckstone, entitled The belle of the Hotel, in which Mrs. Fitzwilliam sustained no less than six different characters with her wonted ability. It is not one of Buckstone's most happy productions, but we suspect that the subject is more in fault than the treatment, for we are heartily sick of Yankee sketches.

THE ADELPHI.

On Monday last was produced at this house a new burlesque ballet, called Alma, which, for burlesque splendour, may be said to rival, if not eclipse, all the former productions on this versatile stage. Madame Proche Giubelei danced most gracefully as a Sylphyde; Weiland was more supernatural, if possible, than ever; Mrs. Grattan, as usual, fascinating; and the mighty Paul Bedford, indescribable in his peculiar fun, made the house roar again at his extraordinary appearance and humorous acting. The piece was splendidly got up.

On the same night a new farce was produced, (another French importation,) entitled Antony and Cleopatra. It exhibited Mr. Wright and Miss Murray to the highest possible advantage in two characters, and, assisted from a masquerade; and although their dialogue is here and there a little coarse, it was impossible to refrain from laughter throughout. The farce was a decided hit.

MUSIC.

Sacred Harmonic Society, Exeter Hall.—On Friday se'nnight this society commenced their performances for the season with Handel's oratorio of Samson. The following was the cast:—Hobbs as Samson; Phillips, Manoah; Leffler, Harapha; Miss Birch, Delila, and Miss Dolby, Micah; and nothing could have exceeded their beautiful performance of this truly sublime musical tragedy. Hobbs sang with most charming feeling, perhaps a little over-subdued for some of the energies of Samson; but by no means would we set this down as a bad fault. Phillips was encored in "How willing my paternal love," which he sang divinely; and Leffler, perhaps, gave "Honour and arms" with more energy than has been heard since the days of Bartleman. Though last, not least, the ladies, Misses Birch and Dolby, performed the little they had to execute with the utmost judgment and taste; and the choruses (particularly "Round about the starry throne," which was encored) were sung with the greatest precision and effect: they sounded mightily in the grand hall. We must not overlook some most judicious wind instrument accompaniments which have been cautiously and tastefully added by Mr. E. Perry to the "Dead March;" they reflect great credit upon his respect for the giant composer's conceptions, and are to be considered more as developments than intrusions. The nail was crowded to excess.

DRAMATIC AND MUSICAL CHIT-CHAT.

Princess's Theatre.—This magnificent house will open on the 26th of December, with an English adaptation of Lucie di Lammermoor, and a ballet on a very extensive scale. The principal singers engaged are Madame Manue. Garcia, Madame Fearon, Messrs. Templeton, Bordini, and Weiss. The choral and orchestral departments will be efficiently filled. Mr. H. Wallack is to be stage manager.

Labiache is again indisposed at Paris; he was forced to retire after his performance of Doctor Bartolo in Il Barbiere. His relapse is considered to be of so serious a nature, that no hopes are entertained of seeing him on the boards again for a considerable time. Quel dommage!

The indefatigable Donizetti, not content with his Linda di Chamouni, is engaged upon another new opera for the Italian Opera House at Paris. Report says the price of remuneration demanded by the maestro is enormous.

ORIGINAL POETRY.

SONNET TO THE MOON.

BY THE AUTHOR OF "MEET ME BY MOONLIGHT."

Sail on, thou pearly barque, through Ocean Heav'n,
Young summer moonlight turn away from me,
A happy course through starry isles is giv'n
To thy fair splendour in that waveless sea!
Why look upon a wretch in sorrow weeping
Over a tomb where all he lov'd lies sleeping?
He would be lonely in his grief, but thou
Dost light him to the stare of curious eyes!
Let a dim vapour hide thy glorious brow,
And leave him to the darkness he doth prize!
Or, like the anguish'd parent bird that flies
Far from her nest to lure the hunter on,
Be thou that bird to me—with kind disguise,
Oh! turn thy beams elsewhere and leave me lone! W.

An Aerial Steam Carriage. This is the name which has been given to a new machine, for which a company has taken out a patent, and which is to convey passengers, goods, and despatches through the air, performing the journey from London to India in four days! and to trave, at the rate of from 75 to 100 miles per hour. Absurd and chimerical as this scheme appears, we understand that a company has been really formed to carry it into operation, and that the patent was formally sealed on the 29th of September last. The believers in the practicability of the undertaking, point to the invention of gas and railway travelling, as reasons why the incredulous should suspend their judgment. In January the machine will be thoroughly organised, and until then we take leave of the subject, and only trust this alleged invention is neither exaggerated nor an Utopian project.

At the recent fair of Mauhourguet, in the Hautes Pyrenees, there was among other exhibitions a travelling menagerie, one of the animals composing which was a fine young lion. Whilst the place was crowded with spectators, the lion escaped from his cage, causing of course great consternation. The owner of the menagerie boldly grappled with him, and in the struggle the lion tore away with his claws a portion of the man's under jaw. On this, notwithstanding his agony, the owner thrust his arm into the lion's mouth, and grasped him by the tongue so firmly, that he fell to the ground. The man having relaxed his hold, the animal returned to the attack, tore his shoulder dreadfully, and would have killed him, if some of the spectators, more bold than others, had not procured a rope and thrown it round the lion so as to prevent further mischief. Notwithstanding the severity of the wounds received by the owner, his recovery is expected.

TABLEAU FROM "THE MISER'S DAUGHTER."

Our readers are already aware that Mr. Ainsworth's romance of The Miser's Daughter has been adapted to the stage by Mr. Sterling, and played at the Adelphi. Having given tableaux from Drury Lane, Covent Garden, and the Haymarket, we now select one from the stage which Reeve and Yates raised into a degree of popular favour, that still attaches to it. The Miser's Daughter, as played at the Adelphi, affords many of Crukshank's etchings vivified—the creatures of the pencil transformed into flesh and blood. The characters shaped from the author's descriptions into ocular acquaintanceship by the artist,—are again moulded—all living, moving, being—upon the stage, by the actor. The temptation was great to select one of these, but our artist has preferred another subject, and we give a group at Ranelagh—the Ranelagh—the scene of the fashionable gaiety of our grandfathers—the then centre of intrigue, revel, and polite dissipation. In the days when hoops were the glory of ladies, and wigs the pride of gentlemen, Ranelagh "burst into fashion." Commencing with morning concerts, it soon afforded evening balls and masques, and eventually midnight became the fashionable hour for patronizing its amusement. Groves, bowers, fairy temples, secluded walks, alternated with promenades lighted by innumerable lamps. The chief building—the Rotunda—was gorgeous yet elegant in its decorations, and gained, not undeservedly, the honour of being the first place of amusement which Europe could boast—a reputation supported by a rapidly varied succession of balls, concerts, and masques. One of the groups is sought to be portrayed at the Adelphi. The scene before the Rotunda—the time 1744. Clowns, giants, quacks, milkmaids, masquers, beaux, and ladies mingle in one motley crowd. Now a Chinese mandarin is particular in his attentions to a Paris grisette; now an old beau, a compound of punctilious politeness and unimpeachable periwig, cultivates the acquaintance of a plainly-dressed milkmaid. Lights, music, grotesque dresses, and pantomimic positions make the scene all bustle and amusement. The characters of the drama mingle in it. Hilda with her fraudful cousin Philip Frewin—the Beau Villiers and his valet Crackenthorpe Cripps—the widow Nettleship and the fair but flirting Thomasine, with her faithful barber Pokerich—the brothers Beechcroft, the one "pleasant, but false," the other "sour, but true"—the round, rosy, and good-humoured Noakle Jukes and the favoured lover Randolph Crew each finds a place and helps to fill up the picture. All join in a dance, which is the moment chosen by our artist to fix them permanently—to make them an enduring memento of a tableau at the Adelphi.

THE WALHALLA.

INAUGURATION OF THE WALHALLA.

MUNICH, Oct. 19.—The 18th of October, the anniversary of the battle of Leipsic, has long been held as a national holiday in all Germany, but, during the twenty-nine years that have elapsed since that memorable day, it may be doubted whether it has ever been more worthily celebrated than yesterday, when the Walhalla, the German temple, was solemnly opened in presence of the King of Bavaria.

The weather could not have been more favourable, and this was rendered doubly agreeable after the fears that had prevailed during the morning, in consequence of some heavy mists and threatening clouds that seemed to announce anything but the delightful day that smiled on our solemnity. The chief feature of the spectacle consisted in the royal procession from Ratisbon to the little town of Donaustauf, situated at the immediate foot of the Walhalla-hill. At the foot of the hill the King was received, and conducted in triumph up to the temple. In the vestibule of the temple his Majesty was received by the Regierungs President of the Upper Palatinate, who delivered an harangue on the occasion, to which the King made a suitable reply, and then the gates of the temple were thrown open. The King and all those who had formed a part of the royal procession then entered, and examined the noble building. In the evening the Walhalla was illuminated without and within.

The different roads leading along the Danube from Ratisbon to Donaustauf were crowded at an early hour in the morning by those who were hurrying to the scene of the solemnity. Till noon the weather continued to look extremely threatening, but suddenly the mists were dispersed, the sun broke forth in all his brightness, and the Walhalla on her mountain became visible to the pilgrims that were hastening to her shrine. Four standards were seen fluttering from the old Stauf burg; they bore the arms of Bavaria, Prussia, Thurn, and Taxis, and the city of Ratisbon.

A succession of triumphal arches had been erected along the whole road, two leagues in length, from the bridge of the Danube to the gate of the Stauf. At the last arch but one, which stood on the boundary between the district (Gerichtsbezirk) of Ratisbon and that of Worder, the magistrates of the latter had assembled to welcome the King. At the last arch the clergy stood drawn up for the same purpose.

All the houses of the little town of Donaustauf were decorated in the most festive manner. All the avenues to the Walhalla were guarded by parties of Landwehr (militia), to keep off the crowds that came pressing from all sides, and many, who were not perhaps entitled to enjoy such a favour, contrived to pass the cordon of sentinels by representing themselves as belonging to the chorus singers who were to assemble within the hall. Some hundreds obtained admission in this way, and participated in the enjoyment of those who were gazing out from the terraces of the Walhalla upon the magnificent landscape below, thronged as it was with thousands of eager and expectant spectators.

A discharge of artillery announced the departure of the King from Ratisbon, and almost immediately afterwards the line of carriages belonging to the royal procession became visible. I hastened down, that I might be a witness of the reception of the royal founder of the temple. At the foot of the hill stood thirty-two young ladies, clad in white, with each a gaily-coloured mantle, her tresses floating freely in the breeze, and a banner grasped in her hand. These young ladies were intended to represent the thirty-two states that compose the German Confederation, and their mantles and banners bore the arms and colours of the several states. At their head stood another young lady, with a golden wreath upon her head, as a representative of Germania. She it was who now moved forward to recite a poem to the King, who, meanwhile, had left his carriage, and was advancing up the mountain. Another of the young ladies stepped forward to present the King with a garland of oak-leaves, while the remainder of the fair party lowered their banners in token of obeisance to the true-hearted German Prince, the hero of the day.

Farther up the hill, and at the foot of the first flight of the steps, another party of young ladies, likewise clad in white, received the King, and presented him stepping forward to thank him, in the name of Bavaria and the city of Ratisbon, for having chosen that spot as the site of the German temple. His Majesty now prepared to ascend the steps. At this moment a chorus of 200 voices, accompanied by wind instruments, and led by the distinguished composer himself, broke forth into the Walhalla song; and, while the four verses were singing, the procession had sufficient time to ascend to the uppermost terrace. The King led the Princess William of Prussia, Prince William of Prussia led the Queen, the Crown Prince led his young consort, to whom he had only a few days before been united; then followed the other members of the royal family, and the rest of the royal party.

Under the portico the procession paused awhile to listen to the eloquent discourse of the Baron zu Rhein (the Regierungs president), who, in the name of Germany, thanked the King for the task he had so gloriously achieved, and at the same time alluded in the happiest manner to a recent festival, that bore no little affinity to the one in which they were then engaged—namely, the festivity in honour of the cathedral of Cologne; in both, the orator trusted, they beheld pledges for the strengthening unity and well-being of Germany.

The King's reply was, "May Walhalla promote the strengthening and the increase of genuine German sentiments! May all Germans, of whatever tribe they be, ever feel that they have one common country, a country of which they have cause to be proud; and may each contribute what he can to its glory!"

When the King had pronounced these words he grasped the golden key of the temple, and, as he touched with it the gate, the thunderous portals flew open, and presented to our astonished view the interior of the sanctuary, resplendent with bronze and marble, with its colossal caryatides, its golden inscriptions, and its white, lifelike rows of busts and statues. The King and Queen, followed by their suite, entered the Pronaos. Again the royal founder of the Walhalla exclaimed, "May the thought of this newly-opened sanctuary promote the strengthening and the increase of genuine German sentiments!"

The chorus singers had meanwhile ascended to the gallery of the Naos, and now broke forth into the Song of the Bards, also composed by Stunz. The King, who immediately on entering the temple had called Von Klenze, the architect, to his side, conversed with him while the choral harmony was performed, and pointed out to his illustrious guests the details of the building, and explained the signification of some of the busts, &c.

The sun had nearly set when the royal party quitted the temple to return to Ratisbon, and when they reached the foot of the mountain the evening had already sufficiently advanced to allow the illumination of the building to commence. The illumination was effected by Bengal lights, and these were successively of three different colours—white, scarlet, and whitish blue. Nothing can surpass the magnificence of the appearance of the noble building when its colossal forms were made visible by these lights.

OCT. 21.—At ten o'clock yesterday evening the King and the royal family returned here from Ratisbon.

On the 19th, the day after the inauguration of the Walhalla, the King laid the first stone of the Hall of Liberation, at Kelheim, on which occasion he expressed himself in the following words: "Let us never forget what preceded the war of Liberation, what brought us into a situation to make that war necessary, nor what it was that gave us the victory. Let us never forget, let us ever honour, the heroes of that war! Let us never sink back into disunion! Germany united will never be conquered!"

At the banquet given by the King on the same day, at Kelheim, his Majesty proposed the following toasts:—"To our common fatherland, second to no other! It begins to feel itself, and will never again let itself be oppressed by the stranger! Deutschland Hoch!"—"To the heroes of the War of Liberation! In this we drink to the health of Prince William of Prussia, and to that of Prince Charles of Bavaria, my brother. To the health of all here and all absent!"—"To the health, not only of the heroes of those days, but also to that of the women who distinguished themselves then! Above all, to the princely German lady, the Princess Wilhaim of Prussia!"

THE CHURCHES OF THE METROPOLIS.—No. XIV.

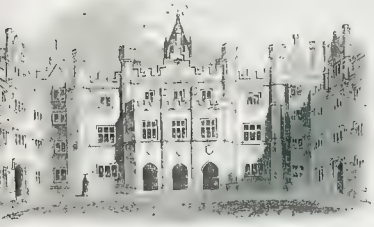
ST. GEORGE'S CHAPEL, REGENT-STREET.

Regent-street may fairly claim the palm from all its continental rivals. "The activity and flush of life," the splendid shops, the well-appointed equipages, the classic buildings, the evidences of wealth, of luxury, of taste, of activity, are unrivalled. The vaunted Palais Royale of the Parisian, or the over-lauded Broadway of brother Jonathan, cannot maintain a comparison with it. True it is, the profusion of its embellishments gave rise to bitter grumblings from those who claim to be the arbiters of what is purely classic; but Regent-street is a mart—a place for trade—a depôt for the productions of the world—as well as a series of architectural structures; and where—where are the solid, useful, and the classically-elegant more successfully combined?

This great metropolitan improvement claims for its originator Mr. Nash, and from his designs most part of Regent-street was erected. St. George's Chapel, however, is not his. In the production of it the designer evidently had in his mind's eye the architectural gem—the graceful masterpiece of Sir Christopher Wren—the interior of St. Stephen's, Walbrook. The intricacy and variety of our countryman's genius have, however, been tempered down by classic rule and model; and the result is, a building highly creditable to its architect, Mr. Cockerill, and to the splendid street in which it stands.

The portico is Ionic, and encloses the pavement; the porch recedes and contains the entrance, which is of antique form and elegant proportions. Each of the two wings supports a turret. The style of these bell-towers is Doric, and nearly resemble the Athenian monument to Thrasyllus. Between and behind the towers is a lofty cupola, in an Italian rather than a Grecian style; and partially glazed for the admission of light to the interior. Fortunately for the general classic effect of the structure, this hemispherical addition is partially concealed, and, seen in connection with the neighbouring buildings, the richly-filled and handsomely-displayed shops, looks like a portion of some Eastern mosque, giving variety to the general effect, though calculated to impair that of the structure to which it belongs.

NOOKS AND CORNERS OF OLD ENGLAND.



SIDNEY COLLEGE, CAMBRIDGE.

"But let my due feet never fail
To walk the studious cloister pale
And love the high embossed roof,
With antic pillars massy proof;
And storied windows richly dight,
Casting a dim religious light."—MILTON.

A visit to our principal Universities cannot fail to awaken an interesting association of ideas; "forgotten generations live again;" and the men who, in by-gone days, have been trained in these venerable halls of learning, to carry forth among their fellows the lights of science, philosophy, and religion, again start into imaginary existence; and, "though dead, yet speak" in words and tones to which we always listen with interest, and sometimes with reverence and delight. The ages in which, for the most part, our colleges were founded were those hasting periods in which private feuds and public insurrections left but little room for the calm studies of literature; wars and devastations, massacres, rebellions, and revolutions, were the ordinary occurrences, diversified indeed; and it may be somewhat embellished by feats of chivalry and tales of romance. It was, as has been well remarked, the age of refined savagery. Philosophy was not to be found in the halls of princes, nor in the castles of their nobles; their ambition was in the field, and their profession was arms. But they had moments of pause and reflection; then they founded religious houses and colleges; and thither, as to a focus, all the scattered rays of the knowledge, and the philosophy, and the literature of those times were drawn; and genius, art, and taste, rude though they might sometimes be, there found an abode.

Cambridge was the seat of a University at a very early period in English history; some antiquarians say so far back as A.D. 630. In the Roman period of their residency it is known there were temples, as in the town; the students in the University, including a room in the college, but in private houses, as is the custom in Germany and Italy. These houses were called Halls, hostles, or inns. Aseglitis studiosorum; several of them were at length deserted, and sunk into decay: others being purchased, in succession, by patrons of literature, and obtaining incorporation with right of mortmain, because permanent rich endowments. Various charters and privileges were granted by successive monarchs; and seventeen colleges have been founded, among which are remains of Saxon architecture, the most perfect examples of the Gothic and some admired specimens of all the Grecian orders. Sidney College (the subject of our engraving) occupies the site on which formerly stood a religious house of that numerous body, the Brothers-in-Grey Friars. This house was founded by Edward the First, but was dissolved, and its property dispersed at the general suppression of monasteries.

The college was founded during the reign of Queen Elizabeth—an era remarkably distinguished for learned ladies and patronesses of literature—by Lady Frances Sidney, Countess of Sussex, aunt to the celebrated Sir Philip Sidney, who was renowned throughout Europe as a poet, a warrior, a philosopher, a politician, and, above all, as "a good man". This illustrious lady bequeathed £5000, besides some other property, for the erection and endowment of the college which now bears her name. The charter of its foundation bears date 1593.

At this college there are nine foundation fellowships, all open to the natives of any part of her Majesty's dominions. Besides the foundation fellowships, there are two founded by Mr. Peter Blundell, appropriated to his scholars of this college; and one fellowship founded by Leonard Smith, the nomination of which is vested in the Warden and Company of Fishmongers. The Blundell Fellowships are tenable for only ten years after the degree of M.A.; but in other respects the fellows have nearly the same privileges, authority, &c., as the Foundation Fellows. A mathematical lectureship, present value £140 per annum, was founded by Mr. Taylor. The lectureship is not tenable with a fellowship, but may be held by a layman. This college has also many valuable exhibitions and scholarships, which the curious in these matters will find fully detailed in the "Cambridge University Calendar."

Sidney College is pleasantly situated, with a beautiful garden and walk, which forms, according to the testimony of one of the historians of Cambridge, the "sweetest retreat for lover or poet in the University."

Among the many eminent men whom the literary history of this college records, as having there acquired that learning and mental discipline which enabled them to become prominent on the theatre of the world, we may mention the stern republican, Protector Oliver Cromwell, who was admitted a fellow-commoner there April 23rd, 1616. In 1628 he represented the town of Cambridge, and some years after took violent possession of it with the Parliamentarian army. Sir Roger L'Estrange, the editor of the first English newspaper, the Public Intelligencer, published in 1660, completed his studies at Sidney College; and Dr. Thomas Wilson, the pious Bishop of Sodor and Man, who died in 1755, and the memory of whose sanctity and many virtues is "in all the churches," was also educated there; several authors who have added to our national stock of poetical and historical literature, but whose works our limits prevent us from enumerating, were likewise graduates of Sidney College.

The reminiscences which buildings of this description are calculated to excite are always of a most interesting character; the early struggles of genius—the persevering acquisition of knowledge—and the gradual development of those intellectual powers, which may hereafter enable their possessors to guide and enlighten mankind by their wisdom, to extend the boundaries of science, to shake a senate, or to rule an empire, are subjects for many a fanciful speculation, and many a pleasing reflection; while the sages of the past still instruct us from the volumes which their learning and philosophy have bequeathed to the world, or, as Sir E. Bulwer has poetically expressed it,

"the wise,
(Minstrel or sage) out of their books are clay,
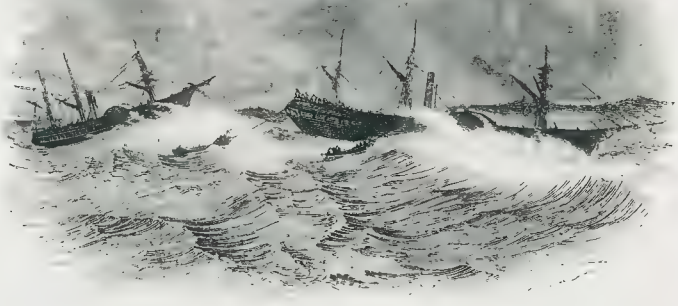
But in their books, as from their graves they rise,
Angels—that, side by side, upon our way,
Walk with and warn us."



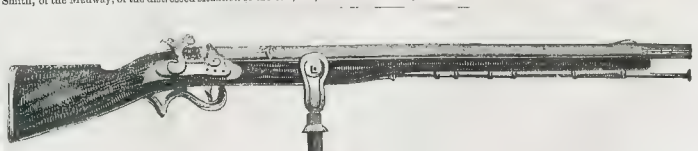
WRECK OF THE ISIS.

LOSS OF THE ISIS.

We last week briefly announced the loss of the Isis, off Bermuda, which intelligence reached us by the Royal Mail steam-packet Medway, which arrived at the Land's End on the 3rd instant, where she was compelled to land the mails, owing to the unusually stormy state of the weather and having exhausted her stock of fuel. We this day present our readers with an authentic sketch of the wreck, and such further particulars of the disastrous occurrence as have since reached us. The Isis (it will be remembered), having been on shore at Porto Rico, was returning to England in company with the Medway, when they encountered a heavy gale with a tremendous sea off Bermuda, way, which arrived at the Land's End on the 3rd instant, where she was compelled to land the mails, owing to the unusually stormy state of the weather and having exhausted her stock of fuel. We this day present our readers with an authentic sketch of the wreck, and such further particulars of the disastrous occurrence as have since reached us. The Isis (it will be remembered), having been on shore at Porto Rico, was returning to England in company with the Medway, when they encountered a heavy gale with a tremendous sea off Bermuda, and it became necessary to abandon the Isis, and remove the officers and crew to the Medway, which, by the aid of the paddle-box boats, was effected with the loss of only one life out of a crew of nearly one hundred persons. After taking the ground the Isis proceeded to Turk's Island, when, from her state, it was deemed most prudent to send her to Jamaica for repairs, the leaks during the passage from Porto Rico having obliged her to keep all her pumps going—and here the passengers protested against proceeding to Nassau in her; accordingly the mails, &c., for Europe, Havannah, Vera Cruz, &c., were removed to the company's steamer Tay, and those for Jamaica carried on in the Isis. The leaks did not materially increase during the passage to Jamaica (51 hours), where she arrived on September 17, and assistance was immediately sent from her Majesty's Dockyard, as well as from the men-of-war then lying at Port Royal. By the 27th of September all the repairs that could be afforded at this port were completed, and a trial trip was made outside the harbour, from the result of which the Isis was deemed sufficiently seaworthy to proceed to sea with the mails. Accordingly she left Port Royal on that day, and arrived at Nassau, N.P., on the 3rd of October, where she was joined by the Medway, and after arrangements were entered into, and the mails and specie transhipped to her, both ships took their departure in company for England, viâ Bermuda and Fayal.

The weather for the first few days was fine, but on the 7th of October a breeze sprung up from the E.N.E., which gradually increased to a gale, with a heavy sea running. From the time of the breeze freshening the leaks increased, and it was found necessary to set all the hand-pumps going, which for a time kept the water under. During the night of Saturday, the 8th, the gale and sea had increased. The ship now became unmanageable, and fell off into the trough of the sea, when the main trysail was set, but from the violence of the wind it was of little use. It was now thought prudent to inform Capt. Smith, of the Medway, of the distressed situation of the Isis, but, from the prompt manner in which the signals had been observed and answered from that ship, all on board had the greatest confidence in the assistance that would be rendered in the event of their being obliged to abandon the Isis, and, therefore, they determined to remain on board while there was a hope of saving her. By this time (eight a.m.) the chief engineer had discovered the cause of the engines stopping, and after much time and trouble they were again set in motion, but only for a few minutes, for the water had gained so rapidly as to extinguish the fires. The ship's company, seeing the engines again stop, went off in a body to know what was to be done with the ship. No hopes now remained, the fires were out, and they were deprived of all means of keeping the water under, which was gaining so rapidly that it was feared she would go down before there was a possibility of leaving her in the boats. The signal of distress was therefore made to the Medway, which was immediately answered, and she bore down to their assistance in the midst of a heavy squall. The life-boats were now with much risk and difficulty got into the water, but from the heavy sea running, and from the ship being now waterlogged and rolling so heavily in the trough of the sea, little hopes could be entertained of saving the lives of those on board, expecting every moment the boats would either be dashed to pieces or swamped alongside. Fortunately at this moment a heavy squall of rain lulled the wind and sea, and by great care and difficulty the boats were hauled under the lee quarter, and the passengers and half the ship's company lowered themselves by ropes into the first, and she was cast off and allowed to drift towards the Medway; the remaining part of the ship's company and officers then lowered themselves into the other boat, and she was also cast off, and the Isis left to her fate.

From the great exertions of Captain Smith and officers of the Medway, and the excellent qualities of the life-boats in so heavy a sea, which no other boats could have encountered with such numbers on board, all were safely got on board the Medway, with the exception of one boy (an apprentice), William Williams, who was unfortunately drowned. The Medway remained as close to the wreck as the violence of the gale would allow with safety, and the following morning, the wind and sea having considerably moderated, and the Isis being still afloat, boats were sent to ascertain if a possibility remained of towing her into Bermuda, about 40 miles distant; but a few moments sufficed to convince them that such an attempt would be useless, as the water was now rushing into the saloon, and the lower deck was already burst up. By noon the ship had sunk so deep in the water as to oblige all the boats to leave her. The Medway kept near the spot until daylight, when it was discovered that the Isis had gone down during the night, a few spars and hencoops, &c., being seen floating on the water, the only remains of this noble but ill-fated ship.



BRITISH SWIVEL GUN.

Having given in our Chinese collection of cuts a sketch of the arms seized by the British forces, we here introduce an engraving of a British swivel wall-piece, which will not be uninteresting to our martial subscribers, of whom, we are happy to say, we have a very numerous list. From two and a half miles to three miles is the common range of the above gun. It will kill at three miles, and is generally used on the tops of forts and elevated stations, ships' boats, &c. It has been in use for the last thirty years by the British in India; but the percussion lock is an improvement added within the last twelve months. In size and weight it is about treble that of the old heavy musket, and about six feet in length. It has been observed that the mountainous passes of such a country as Affghanistan might be rendered perfectly inaccessible by the skilful use of such formidable weapons as these.

In the military stores department, East India House, a number of these fire-arms may now be seen packing up for their destination in India.

There is also a sort of swivel musquetoon very similar to the above, only much shorter and thicker, and the bore towards the top much wider.

LAW INTELLIGENCE.

COURT OF QUEEN'S BENCH, TUESDAY.

Sittings in Banco.

THE QUEEN v. [illegible]

This was a scire facias to repeal a patent which had been granted to the defendant for the manufacture of the backs of instruments used in the cloth trade, and known as cards. The backs of these cards are required to be elastic, and they had always been made of leather; but it was supposed that India-rubber, recently applied to so many useful purposes, might, by being united with some new elastic substance, be formed into something that would equal leather for strength and elasticity. The defendant had invented one made of attaining this end, and in 1834 had taken out a patent for it, but this patent was impeached by some persons as given for an invention not a new invention. At the trial of the cause, before Lord Denman, at the Middlesex sittings after last term, a great many witnesses were called, and the fact that Mr. Faraday had, in a lecture delivered in 1826, mentioned Mr. Hancock's invention, was relied on to show that the defendant's invention was not new. The jury, at that time, returned a verdict for the Crown.

Sir T. Wilde now moved for a rule to show cause why this verdict should not be set aside, on the ground that it was a verdict against evidence.—The Court, after hearing the learned sergeant very fully, granted a rule to show cause.

COLNAGHI v. WARD.

This was an action of assumpsit on a contract, by which, as the declaration alleged, the defendant, in consideration of a sum of money advanced to [illegible] the plaintiff, to enable him to finish the pair of the Duchess of Rich[illegible]ge, to allow the plaintiff the sole right, for 14 years, of printing [illegible] said plate, and the right of receiving a certain portion of profit [illegible] endant pleaded that the contract was not in writing, as required by the statutes of Anne and George II. In this plea there was no allegation that the plate in question had the name and date, as required by these acts. The Attorney-General appeared for the plaintiff, and the Solicitor-General for the defendant. There was a demurrer to this plea, and the case was [illegible] assignment of this sort [illegible] out of publica[illegible] rred without a writing; but the [illegible] ded it on [illegible] in the plea already not[illegible]

HUNT v. HELLS [illegible]

[illegible] from the Bri[illegible] [illegible] claimed [illegible] effects on [illegible] and stock in trade of the p[illegible] en [illegible] mon duty. The defence set up [illegible] was in the statement [illegible] had been occasioned by the wi[illegible] procurement of the plaintiff [illegible] the case was tried before Lord [illegible] [illegible] whether his lordship's directions, [illegible] a rule to show cause why there should not be a new trial granted. He moved on affidavits, which set forth that the defendant's case was first opened, that one day was occupied with that case, and the evidence on that day closed with evidence of a person named Abbott, who declared circumstances of fraud in the statement made to the office by the plaintiff. On the following morning, on entering court, Lord Abinger asked the plaintiff's counsel whether he could contradict the evidence of Abbott. The counsel stated that Abbott's evidence was capable of explanation; but Lord Abinger asking the jury whether they believed Abbott, they answered that they wished the case to proceed. Lord Abinger, however, said that, if they believed Abbott, there must be an end of the case, and the verdict must be for the defendants. The jury, after retiring for some time, said that they did not think Lord Abinger had either then directed a verdict to be entered for the defendants. This statement the learned counsel said was made by him on the authority of the counsel who had led the cause at the bar trial, but he stated in answer to a question from the court, for personal reasons, now declined to move for the rule.—Lord Denman said that the court would consider what course would be the most proper to adopt in this case, whether to hear these facts on the statement of a gentleman at the bar, or to require the verification of them by affidavits.

THURSDAY.

(Sittings in Banco.)

IN THE MATTER OF CAPT. DOUGLAS, A PRISONER.

A writ of habeas corpus had been issued to bring up Captain Archi[illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] charge of [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

ADVERTISEMENTS.

ST JAMES'S HALL, ARE.

GRAND PUBLIC CONCERTS.—THE THIRD CONCERT will take place on FRIDAY EVENING Vember 18, when will be performed, for the first time in London, Spohr's New Oratorio, THE FALL OF BABYLON, conducted by Professor Bennett. The Band and Chorus consist of 500 performers.
Public Rehearsals, 1s., 2s., 3s., 4s.; Gallery, 1s. 6d. Pit Stalls, 6s.; Gallery Stalls, 2s. 6d.
Places may be taken at the Box Office on Thursday and Friday from 11 to 5.
[illegible] 8, Regent street.

THE PRINCIPLE OF ART UNIONS EXTENDED.

THE ROYAL POLYTECHNIC UNION OF LONDON, [illegible] the DIRECTORS of the ROYAL POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTION, [illegible] Lon on extension of the principle of the Art Unions recently established by the sovereign [illegible] to a full and equitable realisation, as well as to works of Art. The facility af- [illegible] Public Rooms, is., 2d., 3d., 4d.; Gallery, 1s. 6d. Pit Stalls, 6s.; Gallery Stalls, 2s. 6d. Places may be taken at the Box Office on Thursday and Friday from 11 to 5. [illegible] 8, Regent street.

[illegible] published, in royal 12mo, price 7s. 6d., cloth,

THE AGE OF GREAT CITIES; or, Modern Civilisation [illegible] its Relation to Intelligence, Morals, and Religion. By ROBERT VAUGHAN, D.D.
London: JACKSON and WALFORD, 18, St. Paul's Churchyard.

THE ROYAL ALBUM, No. 2, will be out on Monday.—The production of this sequel of the Queen's new Album has not with the success [illegible] enjoyed. The prints illustrative of it number are equal in appearance to [illegible] engravings, and must be seen to be appreciated. Order the Royal Album, price 2s., of any [illegible] bookseller, or send one five postage stamps to the publisher, ALFRED CARTER, 4, Somerset-[illegible], Fleet street, London.—Elegant specimens for the trade.

MIDSUMMER EVE. THE NEW ROMANCE.

This day, fcap. 8vo, price 6s.

THE Grand ROMANCE of HISTORY, MIDSUMMER EVE, [illegible] and may be had of every respectable Librarian and Bookseller in the [illegible] to connect early orders for the above work to prevent disappointment.

SCIENTIFIC POCKET BOOK FOR 1853.

Now published, price 6s. 6d., in neat cloth, gilt,

THE LITERARY AND SCIENTIFIC REGISTER, with [illegible] MANAC for the Year 1853, containing [illegible] for Information, Tables, [illegible] A. J. WEALE.
Published by Sir. LOMAXY, 66, Chancery-lane.

CHESS, CRIBBAGE, WHIST, BILLIARDS, AND DRAUGHTS.

EVERY FAMILY'S BOOK OF AMUSEMENTS. Contains [illegible] Playing the above and a variety of other [illegible] and Mode of Amusements. [illegible] of the same.—Spectator.

THE BOOK FOR THE PEOPLE

Now publishing, Fortnightly, in Threepenny Numbers, and Half-yearly, in Half-Crown Parts,

A BIBLICAL DICTIONARY; being a comprehensive Digest [illegible] of the Words and [illegible] Writings with [illegible] Engravings.

[illegible] ready, fcap. 8vo, cloth, price 4s. 6d.; silk, 5s.; morocco, 8s.,

THE ENGLISH WIFE; a Manual of Home Duties. By the Author of "The English Maiden."

[illegible] published, price 6d.,

THE LADIES' HANDBOOK OF REAL NEEDLEWORK. Part I. Plain Needlework, with Engravings, and Specimen Sheet, gilt edges, price 1s.

HARRISON'S GARDEN ALMANAC AND FLORAL CALENDAR FOR 1853. Price 1s.

Just published, price 6d.,

A BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH of the late JAMES MORISON, [illegible] President of the British College of Health. May also be had, New Road, [illegible] Medical Testimonials, Writings with [illegible] Engravings.

[illegible] treatment of Diseases, and that Medicine is a specific [illegible] upon certain and unerring principles, and not an art.
May be had of the British College of Health, New Road, London, and of the Agents for Morison's Pills throughout the country. "Medical Dissenter" Office, 308, Strand, London.

MITCHELL'S ILLUSTRATED and AUTHENTIC GUIDES TO FANCY NEEDLEWORK AND EMBROIDERY, [illegible] CROCHET, and KNITTING, continue to be sent by the Publisher to any address paid, on the receipt of 1s., or postage stamps of equal value in a pre paid letter.
Published by C. MITCHELL, Red Lion-court, Fleet-street.

IMPORTANT TO ALL CLAIMING TO BE GENTEEL.

Now ready, the 56th [illegible], price 4, New Edition for the Season, in which all those changes have been made that fashion and an advancing refinement exacts,

MITCHELL'S AUTHENTIC BALL-ROOM GUIDE.

An excellent and popular work, which the "Court Journal" has [illegible] recommended to be the only safe guide to the ball-room, is sent by the Publisher to any address on the receipt of a pre-paid letter containing [illegible] or postage stamps of equal value.
Published by C. MITCHELL, Red Lion-court, Fleet-street, London.

ESTIMATED SALE SIXTY THOUSAND.

THE MEDICAL TIMES ALMANACK (consisting of Seventy-two Quarto Columns [illegible] will be published on the 31st December, and will contain, in addition to all the useful matter of the best compiled Almanac, an abstract of the last [illegible] Medical Session, [illegible] Lectures, [illegible] Hospitals, [illegible] Medical Schools, [illegible] Medical Societies, [illegible] Lectures, [illegible] Prizes, [illegible] Scholarships, [illegible] Appointments, [illegible] Deaths, [illegible] Births, [illegible] Marriages, [illegible] Medical Bills in Parliament, [illegible] Medical Reform, [illegible] Quackery, [illegible] Public Health, [illegible] Sanitary Reports, [illegible] Epidemics, [illegible] Vital Statistics, [illegible] Medical Literature, [illegible] Reviews, [illegible] Notices of Books, [illegible] Correspondence, [illegible] Notes and Queries, [illegible] Medical Gossip, [illegible] Obituary, [illegible] Medical Miscellany, [illegible] Medical Calendar, [illegible] Tables of Duties, [illegible] Stamps, [illegible] Taxes, [illegible] Post-office Regulations, [illegible] Tables of Interest, [illegible] Tables of Exchange, [illegible] Tables of Time, [illegible] Tables of Population, [illegible] Tables of Mortality, [illegible] Tables of Stamps, [illegible] Tables of Taxes, [illegible] Tables of Duties

POPULAR PORTRAITS.—No. XX.

MR. SERGEANT TALFOURD.

If, as the poet tells us, the steep to Fame's temple is hard to climb, the paths to that proud eminence are fortunately numerous. It seldom happens, however, that a candidate for distinction attains his object by travelling along two or three roads at a time. Mr. Sergeant Talfourd is an exception to the common rule: he has attained distinction in several characters, and deserved it in them all. As a lawyer, he has arrived at eminence early in life; as an orator, he has placed his name on the select list of those on whom nature has conferred the glorious power of giving spontaneous expression to the finest thoughts and feelings; and, as a dramatic poet, he already ranks with the illustrious men of his time. Mr. Talfourd was born at Reading, which town he has more than once represented in Parliament, and was there educated at the celebrated grammar-school conducted by Dr. Valpy. It was here that he first imbibed not only a taste for, but an enthusiastic love of, the drama. Here the enduring truths of Shakspere obtained an influence over his mind, of which the fruit is visible in the addition he has made to the dramatic treasures of our language; and here, too, his education received a tone which coloured his political principles, and has stamped him as a Liberal in public life. His labours as a politician, however, have generally partaken of a literary character; and his struggles in favour of the Copyright Bill indicated how much even in companionship with legislation the cause of genius was associated in his mind. He delivered his great speech on this his darling project in the year 1837. The tone, the style, the illustrative references, were new to the ear of the House. Impassioned eloquence, offering homage in illustrious writers, dead and living, and enforcing the claims of struggling professors of literature upon that property, in "song or sonnet," which the law allowed to be wrested from them, was a topic not likely to attract in such an assembly. Yet with what interest was it listened to! how forcibly were those struck by the argument who had never bestowed a thought on it before! and how important it suddenly become in the eyes of honourable members, whose literary erudition had, since their college days, been confined to Burn's Justice or Hansard's Debates! The speech of Sergeant Talfourd on that occasion was one of the most argumentative as well as imaginative that had been heard for a series of years.

PORTRAIT OF MR. SERGEANT TALFOURD.

It is remarkable, too, that, in his legal profession just as in his parliamentary career, he has always attained for himself the highest distinction in the advocacy of a literary cause. His magnificent defence of the True Sun newspaper in a libel case which he argued in the King's Bench startled all his contemporaries, and reminded them of the inspired orators of days gone by. Professor Wilson, when describing that splendid oration in Blackwood's Magazine, likened Sergeant Talfourd to one of the chivalrous and poetical reformers of old, and remarked that "the arguments which he enveloped in a shining garb put to shame the naked impotence of the Whig Solicitor, and held up to public scorn the abject meanness of that tyrannical this prosecution." Not less real and solid, and scarcely less brilliant, than this was his defence of Tait's Magazine against the action of Richmond in the Exchequer.

The literary productions of Sergeant Talfourd are very numerous and of various merit; for he began to exercise the art of composition when a boy, and has never deserted it yet. The work by which he is best known is the finely thoughtful and impassioned tragedy of Ion. It was upon the judgment of his friends that he resolved first to print it for private circulation, and subsequently to sanction its performance for a single night for the benefit of Mr. Macready.

The genius of that admirable actor was as rightly exercised as his judgment had been, and the one night grew into hundreds. The success of the tragedy, wherever it was acted, was unequivocal, and the name of its author was at once, and by acclamation, enrolled among the category of British poets.

His legal career has been perfectly successful; and there is no doubt that he may achieve, almost independent of party influences, the highest honours of his profession.

THE FASHIONS.

Paris, Rue Chaussée d'Antin, Nov. 9, 1842.

Mon cher Monsieur,—Every lady we now meet, either on foot or otherwise, is warmly clad; and large camails of black velvet, made very full, and trimmed with passementerie, or petisses of velvet or satin, with similar accessories, with capotes of black or green or pansy colour velvet, are quite the rage; the capotes have a flat feather of the same shade, or a bouquet of velvet flowers. A small collar, made entirely of Valenciennes lace; a handkerchief, fastened at both ends by long bows of black velvet; gloves with velvet turn down; velvet boots, made to button; and, furthermore, a beautiful black lace veil, if the hat be of velvet, or of English point lace, if the hat be of white or pale blue satin, compose the fashion of the present day. There cannot be a doubt that the present winter will be a most fashionable season that we have had for many years as every effort is making to give eclat to our warmons. Furs are fully as much used as ever. The compose the distinguished ornament of the cloaks worn in coming from balls and parties. These are made in rose-coloured satin, with trimmings of sable, which material forms the kolinski which surrounds the violet velvet mantle used for morning visits; when the camail is worn on such occasions it is made very large and trimmed with the same material. Flowers are still as much the rage as ever, and, though it would at times be extremely difficult to point out to what botanical class they belong, yet we may safely affirm that anything richer than those made in velvet for bonnets, more light and ethereal than those destined for little dress hats, or more coquetish than the garlands and trimmings of our ball dresses, it would be very difficult to conceive. Lace seems to enjoy a most fashionable predominance in the toilettes of our fashionable belles. We have seen two, and even three, rows of it upon our velvet robes; but, it must be distinctly understood, that, for the trimming upon our stuffs, it must be either Alençon or English. Some most beautiful things of this sort have just come out, and really, upon the whole, I know nothing more graceful or becoming than they are when worn by our women of distinction. For half mourning nothing is considered more correct than the rough stuffs à la sorbienne. We should, in particular, remark one of charming grey pearl-coloured stuff trimmed at the sides with branches of black roses, forming a most beautiful description of half mourning, which is the more useful as it may be worn at any time. Large Cashmere shawls are still worn, and are preferred to be black. Two most superb mantles, which have been just sent to Vienna, have been submitted to our inspection. They are remarkable for the novelty of their embroidery, which is en soutache, interwoven with a pattern embroidered in silk; one of them is executed in white, upon a pale blue ground; the other on white, upon a bright green satin. Both of them are lined with white satin, and are the most elegant things of the kind I have ever seen. I had almost forgotten to mention a very pretty and elegant trifle which I have just met with in the course of my promenade. It is a mantle called an "Armenien," and is really the most piquante original, and, taken altogether, the prettiest toilette that a woman can wear as a walking costume.

HENRIETTE DE B.

THE MARKETS.

CORN EXCHANGE.—During the present week the arrivals of wheat from Essex, Suffolk, Kent, and all other quarters up to Mark lane have been very scanty, owing to which, and the increased attendance of both town and country buyers, the demand for all descriptions has ruled firm, at an improvement in the general quotations of that article, of from 1s to 2s per quarter, and good clearances have been made by the factors. In foreign wheat a large amount of business has been passing, and the rates have risen from 1s to 2s per quarter. The duty has advanced to 20s. Barley and malt have met a very slow inquiry, and previous quotations have been with difficulty maintained. The demand for oats has proved steady, at a rise of 6d to 1s per quarter. Beans have gone off slowly, but peas have improved in value quite 1s per quarter. Flour has had an upward tendency, and its figures must be noted 1s per 280 lbs higher.

ARRIVALS.—English: wheat, 1850; barley, 2380; oats, 1610; and malt, 3070 quarters; flour, 2970 sacks.—Irish: wheat, —; and oats, 1230 quarters.—Foreign: wheat, 1300 quarters.

English.—Wheat, Essex and Kent, red, 46s to 55s; ditto white, 54s to 63s Norfolk and Suffolk, red, 49s to 57s; do. white, 51s to 58s; rye, 34s to 36s; grinding barley, 27s to 29s; malting do., 30s to 32s; Chevalier, 32s to 34s. Suffolk and Norfolk malt, 56s to 62s; brown do., 50s to 54s. Kingston and Ware, 56s to 62s; Chevalier, 63s; Yorkshire and Lincolnshire feed oats, 23 to 24s; potato do., 25s to 26s; Youghal and Cork, black, 17s to 18s; do. white, 19s to 20s; tick beans, new, 34s to 36s; do. old, 34s to 38s; grey peas, 36s to 38s; maple, 33s to 34s; white, 30s to 33s; boilers, 32s to 37s per quarter. Town-made flour, 46s to 47s; Suffolk, 38s to 40s; Stockton and Yorkshire, 36s to 38s; per 280 lbs. Foreign. Free wheat, 50s to 62s. In Bond.—Barley, 20s; oats, new, 15s to 17s; do. feed, 14s to 16s; beans, 29s to 26s; peas, 23s to 27s; per quarter. Flour, American, 22s to 24s; Baltic, 23s per barrel.

The Seed Market.—Linseed and rapeseed sell freely at full prices, but in all other kinds of seeds scarcely anything is passing.

The following are the present rates:—Linseed, English, sowing, 48s to 57s; Baltic, crushing, 43s to 45s; Mediterranean and Odessa, 43s to 46s; hempseed, 35s to 40s; per quarter; coriander, 10s to 18s per cwt.; brown mustard seed, 10s to 11s; white do., 10s to 10s 6d; tares, 5s 6d to 6s 0d per bushel; English rapeseed, new, 30l to 32l per last of ten quarters. Linseed cakes, English, 10l to 10l 10s; do. foreign, 7l to 7l 10s per 1000; rapeseed cakes, 5l 5s to 6l per ton.

Imperial Weekly Average.—Wheat, 48s 7d; barley, 28s 2d; Oats, 17s 8d; rye, 29s 10d; beans, 31s 11d; peas, 34s 4d.

Imperial Averages of Six Weeks which govern Duty.—Wheat, 50s 9d; Barley, 28s 7d; Oats, 18s 2d; Rye, 31s 1d; Beans, 32s 6d; Peas, 33s 9d per quarter.

Duty on Foreign Corn.—Wheat, 20s 6d; Barley, 9s 0d; Oats, 8s 0d; Rye, 10s 6d; Beans, 10s 6d; Peas, 9s 6d.

Bread.—The prices of wheaten bread are from 7½d to 8d; of household ditto, 6d to 7d for the 4lb loaf.

Tea.—The advices from China state that the shipments of tea from Macao up to the 1st of July were 34,600,000 lbs. The public sales are occupying much attention, while, by private contract, a fair business is going at full prices. The stocks of tea in London are now about 28,000,000 lbs.

Sugar.—The demand for each kind of sugar since our last has somewhat fallen off, and rates have experienced a slight depression.

Coffee.—This market has again ruled dull, and the quotations are with difficulty maintained.

Rice.—At auction 800 bags have sold at 9s to 13s per cwt.

Saltpetre.—The demand is good for rough, and 282 bags Calcutta at auction sold at 29s for ½ per cent. refraction, leaving full rates.

Lac Dye.—65 chests of common marks at public sale went at 34d.

Shellac.—This article is in good request, and a small parcel of fine orange has sold at 78s to 78s 6d per cwt.

Tallow.—This description of produce is in demand, but at rather lower prices. 48s 3d to 48s 6d is the value of P. & O. on the spot.

Oils. We have a firm demand for oils, at last week's prices.

Provisions.—The Irish butter market is still very dull, and we quote prices 1s to 2s per cwt. lower. Fine foreign butter, however, is in firm inquiry, and commands 106s to 108s for the best Friesland. Bacon is a mere drug, and the same may be said of lard. In other kinds of provisions we can notice no variation.

Wool.—The imports have been about 400 packages this week. Several public sales are appointed, while the private contract demand is very dull at barely late rates.

Hops.—This article is still very dull, and prices are barely maintained. The duty is called £160,000.

Potatoes.—The weather continues mild for the season, and the supplies of green vegetables large. The inquiry for potatoes is dull, at from 85s to 95s 10s per ton.

Smithfield.—We have had a better inquiry for stock here this week, and fair clearances have been effected at the following prices:—Beef, from 3s 2d to 4s 4d; mutton, 3s 4d to 4s 4d; veal, 3s 4d to 4s 4d; and pork, 4s to 4s 8d per 8lbs., to sink the offal.

Newgate and Leadenhall.—There has been a slight comparative improvement in the general demand here. Beef, from 3s to 3s 6d; mutton, 3s 4d to 3s 10d; veal, 3s 8d to 4s; and pork, 4s to 4s 6d per 8lbs., by the cargo.

ROBERT BERRIAR.

BRITISH FUNDS.—(CLOSING PRICES.)—FRIDAY.

Bank Stock, 172	India Stock, 253½ pm.
3 per Cent Red., 93¾	Ditto Bonds, pm.
3 per Cent Cons., 94	Ditto Old Annuities,
3½ per Cent Red., 100¾	Ditto New Annuities
New 3½ per Cent, 101¼	Ex. Bills, 1000l., 2d., 61 pm.
New 5 per Cent,	Ditto 500l., 1½ pm.
Long Annuities to expire	Ditto Small, 1½ pm.
Jan. 1860, 12 5-16	Indn Stock for Acct., 250
Oct. 1859, 12¼	Bank Stock for Opg. Acct.
Jan. 1860, 12 11-16	Consols for Acct., 94¼

SHARES.

Bristol and Exeter (70 p), 45	London and Blackwall (5 p), 5¾
Edinburgh and Glasgow (50 p), 47	London and Birmingham (— p),
Great Western (65 p), 84	Ditto Thirds (— p),
Ditto New Shares (50 p), 61½	Ditto New Shares (— p),
Ditto Fifth (— p),	London and South Western
London and Brighton (50 p), 35	(£41 6s. 10d. p)

THE LONDON GAZETTE.

TUESDAY, NOV. 8

WAR OFFICE, Nov. 8.—3rd Dragoon Guards: Lieut. F. Garratt to be Captain, vice Campbell; Cornet H. H. Bacon to be Lieutenant, vice Garratt; C. P. Coote to be Cornet, vice Bacon. 6th Dragoons: Lieut. F. Sutton to be Lieutenant, vice Walker. 13th Light Dragoons: Ensign J. J. Lloyd to be Cornet, vice T. D. Lloyd.

1st Regiment of Foot: Cornet T. D. Lloyd to be Ensign, vice J. J. Lloyd. 3rd Foot: To be Ensigns—D. Stewart, vice Smith; A. Fitzgerald, vice Mercer. 7th Foot: Lieut. W. J. T. Walker to be Lieutenant, vice Sutton. 8th Foot: Quartermaster-Sergeant J. Ross to be Quartermaster, vice Aberdge. 9th Foot: Ensign R. Daunt to be Lieutenant, vice Williams. 10th Foot: C. J. Lindsay to be Ensign, vice Ottley. 11th Foot: W. Chalmers to be Ensign, vice Ross. 24th Foot: Lieut.-Gen. R. Ellice to be Colonel, vice Lieut.-Gen. Sir J. Lyon. 27th Foot: Lieut.-Gen. Sir J. Maclean, K.C.B., to be Colonel, vice Lieut.-Gen. Sir G. L. Cole. 30th Foot: Lieut. N. A. Steele to be Captain, vice the Hon. H. J. Pelly. Ensign J. B. Patullo to be Lieutenant, vice Steele. Sergeant-Major S. Sharpe to be Ensign, vice Patullo. 31st Foot: A. Pilkington to be Ensign, vice Tritton. 38th Foot: Ensign W. J. Loftus to be Lieutenant, vice Stawell; S. Robinson to be Ensign, vice Loftus. 47th Foot: G. Armstrong to be Ensign, vice Morphett. 60th Foot: Lieut.-Gen. Sir W. G. Davy to be Colonel-Commandant of a Battalion, vice Sir J. Maclean. 62nd Foot: W. A. Sinclair to be Ensign, vice Hilmer. 63rd Foot: Cornet B. Walronl to be Ensign, vice Kirby; J. Fairclough to be Ensign, vice Walronl. 65th Foot: Lieut. E. Phibbs to be Lieutenant, vice R. Steele; Ensign A. Blount to be Lieutenant, vice Phibbs; T. Benson to be Ensign, vice Blount. 69th Foot: G. H. Evans to be Ensign, vice Hughes. 77th Foot: J. Miller to be Ensign, vice Mahon. 81st Foot: Ensign J. H. Carige to be Ensign, vice Crawley.

MEMORANDUM.—The names and designation of the gentleman appointed to a Cornetcy in the 7th Dragoon Guards, 22nd July, 1842, are Charles Edward Petre, gent., not the Hon. Charles Petre, as previously stated.

Erratum in Gazette of the 1st inst.—63rd Foot: For Ensign M. C. Hughes to be Lieutenant, vice Fowle, dec.; read Hardie.

OFFICE OF ORDNANCE, Nov. 7.—Royal Artillery: Second Captain C. B. Symons to be Captain; First Lieut. the Hon. R. F. Handcock to be Second Captain, vice Symons; Second Lieut. A. Peter to be First Lieutenant, vice Handcock; Second Lieut. A. P. S. Green to be First Lieutenant, vice W. W. Jones.

Corps of Royal Engineers: Second Captain H. P. Wulff to be Captain, vice Kay; First Lieut. W. Robinson to be Second Captain, vice Wulff; Second Lieut. W. Cowper to be First Lieutenant, vice Robinson

Ordnance Medical Department: Temporary Assist. Surg. O. S. Donnall to be Assistant Surgeon.

INSOLVENTS.—B. LAURENCE, Old Broad-street, City, merchant.—T. MURRAY, Bedford-street, Covent-garden, glass-dealer.—J. BELL, Hereford, porter merchant. T. W. PROCTER, Hereford, soda-water manufacturer.

BANKRUPTS.—E. MASSEY and R. LAMBERT, Watling-street, City, warehousemen.—J. B. LUDGE, Gerrard-street, Soho, bath proprietor.—G. J. MARSHALL, Wood-street, Cheapside, woollen warehouseman.—J. LINDON, Plymouth, merchant.—J. G. BURNLEY and J. AUTY, Heckmondwike, Yorkshire, worsted spinners.—J. M. FRANCES, coopert, grocer.—T. A. GODDALL, Epworth, Lincolnshire, chemist. W. TOMKINSON, Stoke-upon-Trent, Staffordshire, wine merchant.—J. CRANBROOK, Deal, Kent, draper.—J. FROSTE and I. ASHLIN, Liverpool, merchants.—J. R. ANDERSON, Manchester, printer

SCOTCH SEQUESTRATIONS.—J. DICKSON, Wattsman, Dumfriesshire, cattle dealer.—J. WALKER, Aberdeen, fancy warehouseman.

FRIDAY, NOV 11.

ADMIRALTY, Nov. 10. Corps of Royal Marines: H. T. Swain to be Second Lieutenant; C. R. Driver to be Second Lieutenant.

WAR-OFFICE.—Nov. 1.—10th Light Dragoons: Lieut. A. Cathcart to be Captain, vice Sir J. G. Baird, bart.; Cornet J. Perrier to be Lieutenant, vice Cathcart. 12th Light Dragoons: Lieut. E. Morant to be Captain, vice E. Vandeleur; Cornet F. M. Mulcester to be Lieutenant, vice Morant; T. C. Mansell to be Cornet, vice Mulcester.

23rd Regiment of Foot: Second Lieut. J. Wynne to be Adjutant, vice Ellis. 44th Foot: Ensign H. H. J. Massy to be Lieutenant, vice Hackett; R. Beauclerge to be Ensign, vice Massy. 97th Foot: Assist. Surg. F. H. Clark to be Assist.-Surg., vice Neville. 77th Foot: Capt. J. Hamilton to be Captain, vice Brevet-Major G. Stuart; Lieut. H. J. White to be Captain, vice Hamilton; Ensign R. H. Crofton to be Lieutenant, vice White; H. K. Carden to be Ensign, vice Crofton. 88th Foot: Lieut. D. Cahill to be Paymaster, vice Roberts. 95th Foot: Assist.-Surg. W. Sall to be Assistant-Surgeon, vice Clark.

Royal Newfoundland Companies: J. C. Martin to be Assistant-Surgeon, vice Ball.

BREVET.—Captain J. Hamilton to be Major in the Army.

ADMIRALTY, Nov. 4.—Corps of Royal Marines: First Lieut. and Adjutant T. B. Murray to be Captain, vice Layton; Second Lieut. J. B. W. Lawrence to be First Lieutenant, vice Gray; First Lieut. J. H. Gascoigne to be Adjutant, vice Grey.

INSOLVENTS.—J. PEARCE, Kennington-cross, coach-maker. W. AYTON, Milton, Kent, brazier.

BANKRUPTS.—E. ROBINSON, Nottingham, printer. R. LINDON, Snapes, Devonshire, corn-factor. T. B. FEHR, Dudley, wine and spirit merchant. R. STEUART, Santa Fe de Bogota, manufacturer of artificial gnanie. S. RAY, Dyer-street, St. James's, bookbinder. R. J. WEBB, Piccadilly, tailor. G. T. KNOWLES, Manchester, cotton spinner. H. CHARLTON, Regent street, milliner. H. BUNDEY, St. Marylebone, builder. G. J. MARSHALL and C. HALL, Wood-street, Cheapside, woollen warehousemen.

BIRTHS.

On Friday, the 4th inst., the lady of Hack Magnus Little, Esq., Manorhouse, Eye, of a son and heir.—At Belgrave-street, the Lady Hennaker, of son.

MARRIAGES.

On Tuesday, at Trinity Church, Regent's-park, David Wilson, Esq., of Colombo, Ceylon, to Sophia, eldest daughter of John Kymer, Esq.—At Munden, Hanover, Frederick, Baron Von Neydeck, to Octavia, daughter of the late Charles Harris, Esq., of Southgate.—At Chesham, Bucks, John Suthery, Esq., of Milk-hall, to Sarah, daughter of Francis Pellatt, Esq., late Ordnance storekeeper at Weedon.—At Dublin, the Rev. Francis Hewson, vicar of Carbery, to Mary, daughter of the late Rev. John Hardy.

DEATHS.

Mr. William Hone, the well-known author of the "Every Day Book" and other popular works, died on Monday last at his house in Grove-place, Tottenham, after a long illness, and much suffering, which he bore with the most exemplary patience. In early life he was celebrated as one of the first satirical writers of the day. We regret to hear that Mr. W. Hone has left, out of a family of twelve children, nine still living, several of whom, with their widowed mother, are almost wholly unprovided for; we understand, however, that some kind friends of the deceased purpose using their endeavours to influence the generous feelings of the benevolent, so as to rescue them from their painful situation.—We regret to announce the death of Vice-Admiral Sir Hussey Burgess Knight, K.C.B., who expired at his seat in Huntingdonshire, on Sunday last. The gallant admiral was a deputy lieutenant of Huntingdonshire, of which county he served as sheriff in 1839. He was in his Majesty's fleet on the 1st of June, 1794. After a short illness, Mr. William Greathead Lewis, aged 52, who for many years was connected with the London press.—At Mancora Point, Bombay, Captain W. E. Sawbridge, of her Majesty's 28th Regiment.—At Cawapore, Captain J. Remington, of the 13th Regiment Hon. Com. Bengal Infantry.—The Rev. Thomas Brooksby, rector of West and South Hanningfield, Essex, magistrate on the Chelmsford bench.—At Bournemouth, the Rev. Dr. Causton, prebendary of Westminster, aged 84.

LONDON: Printed by ROBERT PALMER (at the Office of Palmer & Clayton), 10, Crane-court; and published by WILLIAM LITTLE, at 198, Strand, where all communications are requested to be addressed.—SATURDAY, November 12, 1842.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS

No. 28.] FOR THE WEEK ENDING SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 19, 1842. [SIXPENCE.

OFFICE, 198, STRAND.

BLACK SHEEP OF THE ARISTOCRACY.

Let not the heading to this article startle our readers. We are going to enter into no tirade against that high estate of the empire which has often interposed the most commanding genius and the noblest influences in the guidance of national legislation, which, as a body, is full of honour, chivalry, the pride of ancestry, and a consciousness that its power lies in the exercise of virtue and the maintenance of the dignity of character as well as of birth. We are not going to anathematize the ancient nobility of England with frantic political denunciation or violent personal abuse; but we are about to draw the attention of "the order" itself, no less than of the public, to the defiling tendency of the conduct of certain of its members, whom circumstances of recent notoriety justify us in openly characterizing as "black sheep." The topic which we are about to treat has been eagerly seized upon by leading organs of the public press, which have made such appeals, for the assistance of their contemporaries in its discussion, as we for one will not reject.

There have been of late several trials either in the Law, Bankruptcy, Police, or Criminal Courts, which have never been detailed at length in the columns of this journal (although they formed the stimulating pabulum of excitement for the readers of nearly every other newspaper in the empire), because we are scrupulous of the admission of even the narration of impure circumstances—of tales of questionable morality—of exhibitions of revolting social depravity in whatever guise they may appear. We merely give paragraph notices, therefore, of the trials in question; and, if our remarks now be more general than were our notices then, it is only because we find the task of reprobation more particularly imposed upon us, by the vigorous though unhealthy growth of the wickedness which we would stigmatize and deplore. The four cases to which we have to allude, in the order in which they transpired before the public, involve the names of the Marquis of Hertford, Lord Frankfort, Lord Huntingtower, and the Earl of Chesterfield—

> "Names which, we fear, are dead to virtue's claim,
> And tinge our peerage with the blush of shame!"

The first noble lord is dead, and we would not except to the principle of "de mortuis nil nisi bonum;" we would not break the silence of the tomb, if the will of the deceased had not spoken to society with what has been designated a "a voice from the grave," and led to a litigation which unhappily has dragged its bequeather, as it were from his sepulture, to place him in a light of odious and profligate depravity before the world. His valet was tried for a robbery of the ill-used wealth of the peer, and at his trial, for the purposes of defence, not only figured as the filthy Pandarus to his dishonoured master, but paraded his mistresses in a court of justice to proclaim their own shame and infamy, and to blazon their late protector before the world, who sinned with a reckless and passionate immorality even upon the brink of awful eternity itself. The perusal of that trial was painful as disgusting, and no true aristocrat could contemplate its disclosures without feeling his order degraded, by an insult cast upon the whole moral community, by one of its degenerate sons.

The second case was that of Lord Frankfort de Montmorency, whose conduct displayed the weakness of the fool and profligate, without the common honour or conduct which men, not to say gentlemen or noblemen, are usually shamed by their very manhood to evince. He made his house the home of an abandoned young person, to whom he proffered a profusion of toys and baubles, which that apt scholar in the uses of jewellery was supposed to have increased in a style inconsistent with honesty; and upon her leaving his lordship, and not leaving the trinkets, he arraigned her at the Old Bailey for theft, without care for the exposure of his own profligacy, folly, and meanness, but in the cowardly spirit of a petty and, as it turned out, impotent revenge. The woman was acquitted purely through the false sympathy which her persecution had called up, and because her accuser had been execrated for the deed. Her conduct since has proved that she has no shame in her, but it does not render the figure of Lord Frankfort less contemptible—less to be denounced for the blending which it exhibits of dissoluteness and brutality with crime. His lordship is a married man, and has two living families, one legitimate, one the reverse!

The third case we have to name is that of a foolish, reckless, and half-debauched young nobleman of the name of Huntingtower, who has been figuring most disgracefully in the Bankruptcy Courts:—a British nobleman made bankrupt, as a horse-dealer, and brought up time after time from a prison to undergo examinations, of which almost every second question bears the aspect of an insinuation of fraud! These insinuations his lordship may be able to reject, but he cannot disprove his wanton embarkation into disreputable schemes, his foolish plunging into abandoned companionship, his wholesale waste of patrimony, property, and respectability, and the final obloquy, disgrace, and ruin which have covered him at every turn of a career that has hardly yet passed the bounds of boyhood! What an example to the young, the chivalrous, and aspiring among the middle classes—what a covering of shame and sorrow for the mantling blushes of our younger and more virtuous nobility! Lord Huntingtower is too clearly a victim, but not more of the crimes of others than of his own.

The last of these melancholy exhibitions is presented in a case in which the name of the Earl of Chesterfield stands prominent. A Count Bathyany purchases some attractive wanderer from the paths of virtue with an annuity of three hundred pounds. The annuity is settled, and the woman, with the characteristic ingratitude of vice, deserts her protector at the expiration of one month—leaves him for some other profligate—but clings to his annuity with a constancy beyond dispute. The count, "on the ground of immorality," seeks its restitution in a court of law, but is told that he does not come there with clean hands, and therefore cannot have redress. The count is well punished, although we cannot help regretting that the woman is not well punished also. However, it came out that one of the trustees for the payment of the annuity—for the confirmation, in short, of the purchase of the woman—was the Earl of Chesterfield, who, by his copartnership in the affair, does not assume a position very much above that of pander to his friend the woman, or his friend the count, for we hardly know at which door to charge the alliance. Is not this another degrading picture? Does it not bring your lord of "fashion without virtue" into contempt? We find the following paragraph in Wednesday's Herald:—"The Earl and Countess of Chesterfield and family are expected to leave Chesterfield House to-morrow on a continental tour." So, Lord Chesterfield is married!—and what must his "countess and family" think of such occurrences as these? His ancestor who taught politeness in his letters inculcated more worldliness than morality, but he at least preached a strict observance of the decorum of society—injunctions not publicly to outrage the world.

Now, all these four cases are remarkable and obtruding arguments in favour of cleansing the aristocracy, by a virtuous exclusion, on the part of the more lofty-principled majority, of the contamination of these "black sheep" from any other than their own depraved society. Let there be no tainting of the blood and honour of the more pure nobility, by the in-rushing of such polluting streams as these, and then, in proportion as the public learn they are degraded, they will cease to identify them with an honoured and an honourable class. As it is, the aristocracy hardly vindicates its own dignity by permitting any association whatever of its better with its most unworthy scions. Neither, we believe, is it done to the extent imagined. We do not think that either Lords Frankfort or Huntingtower are admitted into the "circles of grace." Lord Hertford, perhaps, was rather self-exiled from them than excluded; and we fancy that the Earl of Chesterfield would hardly be allowed to pass their boundary if he had not the passport of a wife! Let not the public, then, fix the shame of these persons upon the higher classes of society as an order; but rather cry out indignantly against the vile practices of the few, as likely to touch with their stigma the lives and characters of the many.

SCENE FROM THE GRAND POLISH BALL GIVEN AT GUILDHALL, ON WEDNESDAY, THE 16TH INST.

For description see page 439.

We have only room further to remark, that the danger of such examples of vice as we have recorded is increased to a tenfold amount of mischief from the fact of the rank and station of the transgressors; their very elevation makes their acts the more appalling, and what a more common villain might conceal under a mean and foul obscurity either contaminates or is execrated when blazoned on the nobleman's shield. It has been admirably remarked by a morning contemporary,

"That while Mr. Stanhope the debauchee would be contemptible, Lord Chesterfield the profligate is dangerous; Mr. Morres might pursue his brutal career without deeply injuring public morals, but Lord Frankford de Montmorency's vices are contagious; Mr. Seymour could have filled his princely mansions with strangers without character much worse, but the Marquis of Hertford's life passed in the company of prostitutes degraded his order. Mr. Tollemache might have rivalled Tattersall in horse-dealing, and outwalked the West Middlesex Insurance in obtaining money from other people, without attracting more than passing mention in an insolvent debtor's report, but Lord Huntingtower has scandalised the whole body of the aristocracy by his excesses. When a particular race of men are set apart for the performance of certain important duties in the state, the reputation of the order, the purity of the body, the fitness of the race must be maintained; if it be not, the charm is broken, the substance is gone, the mere skeleton remains. It is not a rich, dashing, gay, and fashionable aristocracy that is wanted; much less is an association of gambling, sporting, drinking, bric-à-brac, annuity-selling, and libidinous nobles to be endured; the times demand and will tolerate nothing less than a peerage distinguished by moral, intellectual, and social superiority—noblemen who know their duties and knowing perform them—men who will not sacrifice the interests of their country to the prosecution of an amour or neglect their parliamentary habilities to attend a Newmarket meeting—men who recognise the dishonour of squandering and extravagance, and the criminality of getting into debt."

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

FRANCE.—The Paris journals of Saturday are more than usually barren of political news. Most of them have long articles on the announcement of the Presse, that the protocol for the ratification of the treaty of 1841 for the right of search has been closed. The Courrier Français declares that this alone will not satisfy the French nation; and that, as the English Government has, by its recent treaty with the United States of America, recognised the practicability of the suppression of the slave trade by other means than those provided for by the treaties of 1831 and 1833 with France, it is the duty of the French Government to demand their revocation, and the adoption of a treaty on the same bases as those which have been agreed upon with America. According to this journal, however, it is impossible for M. Guizot, after having declared that there is a moral obligation on France to respect those treaties, to demand their suppression, and therefore it recommends that M. Guizot should retire from office.

Our Paris contemporaries still devote a considerable space to discussion on the project of a commercial union with Belgium, but concur in regarding the project as abandoned—an opinion strengthened by the absence of all allusion to it in the speech of the King of the Belgians on opening the session of the Chambers. The Constitutionnel publishes a letter from St. Petersburg, asserting that a formidable conspiracy against the Emperor of Russia has been discovered in the army, and that several officers implicated in it have been arrested. The hasty return of the Emperor to his capital was, it is said, caused by this event, and not, as stated in some of the journals, by indisposition. It appears that some difficulties have arisen in the negotiations between the French and English post-offices on the subject of the proposed new postal regulations; and that there is not so much liberality in the propositions of the French post-office, as to the way in which the arrangements shall be carried into operation, as some of the Paris journals have pretended. It is believed, however, that after some delay a satisfactory understanding will be come to on these points.

General Cass, the late American minister at Paris, left that city on Saturday on his return to the United States through London. Mr. Ledyard, the son-in-law of General Cass, remains in Paris as the American Chargé d'Affaires. Lord Brougham was received by their Majesties the King and Queen of the French on Thursday evening.

The Paris papers of Monday contain no other news of importance than the article of the Messager of Saturday evening, confirming the account given several days ago, by the Presse, of a rising in Syria, the particulars of which will be found elsewhere, under the head of Levant Mail.

The Constitutionel, assuming that the revolt has become general, takes occasion to comment upon the policy of the Whig Cabinet in depriving Mehemet Ali of the government of Syria, and contends that the only way of tranquillizing the country is to bestow the government upon him or upon a member of his family.

One of the military Paris journal states that the standing army in France is to be reduced to 60,000 men, and that two officers are to be suppressed in each company. This is an old project, but it was generally understood to be abandoned.

The French papers of Tuesday are filled with the trial of the delinquent employés of the Seine prefecture.

It is reported in the American circles at Paris, that the object of General Cass in retiring from his post as Minister of the United States was to comply with the wishes of his friends at home, who are desirous of proposing him as a candidate at the next vacancy for the office of President. The Mémorial announces that M. Martin, the Minister for Public Works, had approved of the contract entered into with Messrs. Sherwood, of London, for the execution of the first section of the railroad from Paris to the Belgian frontier. The works will, therefore, be commenced without delay.

SPAIN.—The Madrid Gazette of the 6th inst. contains an animated defence of the projets, motives, and actions of the Regent, in reply to the accusations brought against him by the opposition journals. The Castellano gives a sad account of the ravages caused at Seville by the storm of the 29th ult. Three houses, it says, were thrown down by the wind, a child was killed, and many persons were seriously injured. At the cathedral several of the beautiful painted windows were destroyed. On the coast of Andalusia several vessels were driven ashore and their crews drowned. At Cadiz many of the vessels in the port are stated to have been much damaged, and on land large trees were torn up by the roots.

The advices from Madrid are of the 8th instant, but they add nothing to the news of the previous dates. The Gazette publishes a decree of the Regent, appointing Senor Alvaro Gomez Becerra, President, and Senors Corchado and Neocchea Vice Presidents, of the Senate during the ensuing session.

GERMANY.—It would appear by a letter from Hanover, 7th inst., in the Prussian State Gazette, that the recent accounts, in some of the German journals, of the King of Hanover having been attacked with serious illness were unfounded. The letter announces the return of the King to his capital from his palace of Rotenkirchen, in perfect health.

The Frankfurter Journal states that, by a late Russian ukase relating to the trade between Prussia and Poland, no more transit duties are to be paid, and the differential duties on sugar and coffee are abolished.

The Post Ampt Gazette of Frankfort states from Warsaw, that, since the treaty respecting the extradition of deserters has ceased to be in force between Prussia and Russia, the troops on the frontiers of the latter country have been so much augmented that at every 500 paces a picquet of three Cossacks is placed; and these picquets hold a communication every verste (three quarters English mile) with a post of 18 men commanded by an officer.

The Helvetie states that the Austrian Government has ratified the treaty concluded with Lucerne on the subject of a daily post between Milan and Basle, by Mount Saint Gothard. According to the Bidgenosse, however, this ratification is only conditional; the Austrian Government requiring Lucerne and the other cantons concerned to carry gratuitously from the frontier of Tesino to Basle all letters coming from Lombardy, and destined for France and Germany.

The Frankfort Gazette states, that since the expiration of the treaty between Russia and Prussia for the surrender of deserters, the Russian garrison on the frontier had been strongly reinforced, so that it was impossible to travel five hundred yards without meeting a patrol of Cossacks.

HOLLAND.—THE HAGUE, Nov. 14.—We have just received accounts from Java to the 9th of July. They state that the English ship Kilmaurs, Captain Smith, which left Batavia on the 14th of April, was met a few days afterwards by the American ship Sumatra, Captain Silver. The wife of Captain Smith, who was brought to Batavia by that ship, declared that the crew, led by the first pilot, had mutinied, in consequence of which the captain and two boys were missed from the vessel on the 20th of April, in the morning. These three persons were taken on board his Majesty's ship the Arant, and brought to Batavia; meantime the ship Kilmaurs has been brought into Anjer by the first pilot in a very leaky condition.

AMSTERDAM, Nov. 14.—We are informed on good authority that the Marine Department has given notice to the authorities concerned that his Imperial Highness the Archduke Frederick of Austria will not visit Holland this year.

BATAVIA, July 6.—On the 23rd of May, soon after seven o'clock in the morning, several severe shocks of an earthquake were felt at Buitenzoy, which did some damage to the Palace and house of the Resident.

THE LEVANT MAIL.—Malta papers to the 6th inst. have come to hand. They contain accounts from Constantinople to the 27th ult., and Alexandria to the 26th. The letters from Constantinople do not mention any fact of importance, except that the accounts from Persia are very pacific, and that the troops of both countries have consented to withdraw from the frontier. The news of the fresh insurrection in Syria had not reached that city at the date of our advices. The Malta Times of the 6th instant does not publish the letters which it has received from Constantinople, but states that they announce intense progress by Russia in the Councils of the Porte. The Malta Times publishes a letter from Alexandria, Oct. 25th, confirming the accounts already given of the insurrection in Syria, and containing some other intelligence, which, although not altogether new, is not without interest. It says, "The operations of Mehemet Ali and his son Ibrahim Pacha for some months past have induced a general belief that their country, considered in an agricultural point of view, would next year be productive of an immense crop; but, instead of this, the scale has turned in a very unexpected manner, that probably for years to come Egypt will feel the effects of the scourge that has recently visited it. The manner in which to account for what we have just stated is founded upon the loss of about 80,000 oxen, that have died of an epidemic peculiar to this country, the Nile continuing to increase at a period it generally decreases, which has done and will do much damage; and the state of the finances being in so dilapidated a position, at a time when the troops are wanting a year's pay, and the improvements of the country, undertaken by Mehemet Ali, must before long call for millions of dollars. His Highness Mehemet Ali is not expected to return to Alexandria before the ensuing spring. Ibrahim Pacha is in Lower Egypt; his loss in oxen was very considerable."

By letters from Beyrout, dated Oct. 19th, it would appear that this country seems doomed to constant change, and no reliance nor dependence can be placed on the calm which ever and anon shows itself. Unless the powers who support Mehemet Ali set the old Emir Beschir from the seat of government, and in lieu thereof to place the Sultan, who has never yet been able to govern it, take upon themselves to quell the ferment which now agitates the country, there will be no end to rapine or to bloodshed. It is not the Christians alone who have taken up arms on this occasion, but the Druses also. These two sects, formerly at enmity together, have now united in one common cause, and formed a close alliance. The Albanians have succeeded in arousing all the worst passions of the Syrian people, and on the 12th ult. they were attacked, as was the Turkish brigade quartered at Tripoli. At Ebden, a place a little above the town, a pitched battle was fought, and the Druses and Maronites beat off their enemies, with a loss in killed, wounded, and prisoners of 500 men, including many Arnauots. The Turks, accompanied by the Albanians, are famous-looking fellows, but showed the white feather when brought to the point against the mountaineers, hardy in every sense, and more than a match in the art of war for their more northern rulers. On the 17th ult. a party of regular Turkish troops on their way to this place from Damascus, about 50 in number, were attacked at a khan called Hussien, by the Druses, and beaten, the Turks throwing down their arms, and taking to a precipitate flight. The whole population along the coast is actuated but by one resolution—that of throwing off the yoke of their new rulers, and every preparation for a coming struggle is showing itself. The Turks are also preparing, but to the Syrians their efforts appear futile. The English and American families living in the mountains reached Beyrout with the greatest difficulty, and that after having obtained the favour of the Druse chiefs.

The Malta Times, in noticing the receipt of letters from China relative to the state of trade there, says, from Hong Kong, June 30th—"The sales of opium, which were pretty considerable some time since, have almost totally ceased, owing to the brisk trade now carried on in the drug at Whampoa, and the change of the monsoon will show whether junks from the northward will take their cargoes there or not. All kind of trade since the sale of the prizes has been, and is, daily decreasing. The Chinese are now as poor as rats, the dollars they had laid out to erect houses, and the same may be said of the few European residents here; they are all sellers, none buyers, unless the articles be almost given to them, and then you cannot imagine the difficulty of getting the money."

AMERICA.—By the arrival of the London line-of-packet ship Quebec at Portsmouth, papers were received on Wednesday morning at the North and South American Coffee-house from New York, of the 21st ult., being two days later than those brought by the England to Liverpool. They announce the arrival of the Britannia steamer outwards with the mail, but the accounts from England appear to have had little influence one way or other on the commercial or money markets.

The chief subject of discussion is the failure of the mission appointed by the United States Government to negotiate a loan in Europe. The New York Herald states that, on the first arrival of the agents in London, some of the leading houses seemed disposed to give them a favourable hearing, but on consultation they arrived at the conclusion that, if they took the loan, it must be on their own account; that they would find it impossible to dispose of any part of it; that public opinion would be against them, and the press would attack them; consequently all connection with it was declined.

On the question of the currency the state of Tennessee is about to try a bold experiment. It appears that a bill is before the Senate to authorise the state bank and its branches to issue post notes to the amount of two millions of dollars, payable in 12 and 18 months, without bearing any interest. These notes it is purposed to make receivable in payment of the public duties and debts due to the bank, and a penalty is to be imposed on all persons paying them or receiving them for a less amount than what they profess to represent.

There are very unfavourable accounts of the tobacco crop in Virginia, some of the statements rating it at not more than half the average quantity. These statements appear, however, to be so loose that they require further evidence before they can be relied upon.

ARRIVAL OF THE BRITANNIA.—By the Halifax steamer Britannia, which reached Liverpool on Wednesday after an unusually boisterous passage of fifteen days, we have received news of considerable interest from Mexico and Texas. The Mexicans have encountered a degree of resistance from the Texians which they do not seem to have anticipated. The accounts are, however, are so conflicting, each party giving its own version of the occurrence, that it is next to impossible to form a definite opinion in regard to them. The report in the New York Commercial Advertiser, which is evidently ex parte, describes the Texians as having obtained a signal triumph. The Houston Star estimates the number of Mexicans who have fallen at 400 or 500. The United States, always avowedly favourable to the Texians, has offered to mediate between the two countries, and the Mexican ambassador has been presented to the president with the view of obtaining his interposition.

The news from Canada is highly favourable to the policy of Sir Charles Bagot, notwithstanding the opposition it has had to encounter, having so far realised his most sanguine anticipations. The Colonial Cabinet has been formed; its members are—R. B. Sullivan, President of the Council; S. B. Harrison, Secretary, C. W.; J. E. Small, Solicitor General, C. W.; D. Daly, Secretary, C. E.; L. H. Lafontaine, Attorney General, C. E.; J. H. Dunn, Receiver General; F. Hincks, Inspector General; H. H. Killally, President of the Board of Works; A. N. Morin, Commissioner of the Crown Lands. The House of Assembly, consisting of eighty-four members, are said to be almost unanimously in favour of the government. The Canada journals announce the deaths of Sir John Caldwell, late Treasurer General of Lower Canada, and of Colonel Cameron, of the 79th Highlanders.—The Coldstream Guards are on their way to England, in her Majesty's ship Calcutta, Captain Reed.

UNITED STATES.—The news from the United States is very uninteresting. Mr. Bennett, editor and proprietor of the New York Herald, has advertised his establishment for sale, as he is going, he says, to London, there to establish a paper, "to defend and explain American interests," which he thinks have been greatly misunderstood. The above paper of the 31st ult., says that it is the intention to make New York the port of arrival and departure for the Boston and Halifax steamers, touching at the latter place as at present, and that the alteration takes place early in the spring.

COUNTRY NEWS.

BRIGHTON.—Her Majesty and the Court are expected at Brighton on the 22nd instant, but no specific orders to that effect have been received at the Palace.

The late boisterous weather has had the effect of thinning the fashionable population, but the town is still very full of company.

Lord and Lady Colville are among the latest arrivals at Pegg's Royal York Hotel. The Countess of Rothes has arrived at the Norfolk Hotel, on a visit to Lady Mary Leslie. Lady Milton is among the arrivals.

THE THEATRE.—Mr. and Mrs. Charles Kean have entered into a third engagement with the managers of the Brighton Theatre, commencing on Tuesday night. Mr. Kean played Macbeth and Mrs. Kean Lady Macbeth. On Wednesday evening they appeared in The Rose of Arragon. During the whole of their engagements they have been playing to excellent houses. It is a fact that the managers reckon upon the engagement of Mr. Kean as the only means of enabling them to go through the season.

BERKSHIRE.—INCENDIARY FIRES.—On Saturday evening last, about half-past six, a fire was discovered in a shed on Severne Barn Farm, situated eight miles from Reading, on the Bath road, which resulted in the destruction of a vast extent of property. The farm, it appears, is in the occupation of Mr. W. Perrin Brokesbrow, and belongs to General Dickson. Shortly after the labourers had left their work on the above evening, the alarm of fire was given, and in a few minutes the shed already alluded to, the end of which is immediately adjacent to the road, was enveloped in flames, entirely consuming the building and its contents, including five fat hogs. From the shed it communicated with the outhouses adjoining, which, with several hay and wheat ricks, were speedily ignited. Before the arrival of the engines, the large barn (which, at the time, was full of corn) was in full blaze. The fire continued to rage with unabated fury throughout the night, and, despite the exertions of the immense concourse of persons, the flames could in no way be suppressed. At a late hour on Sunday night the fire had somewhat abated, having, indeed, consumed the whole of the property, with the exception of one or two wheat-ricks. The extent of damage occasioned, of course, must be immense. That the fire is the act of an incendiary there is not the slightest doubt; but at present no clue has been discovered likely to lead to his apprehension. Mr. Brokenbrow, the occupier of the farm, was very generally respected in the neighbourhood by his brother agriculturists and agriculturists. We understand that he reduced the wages of his labourers about a fortnight since.

BOLTON.—A dreadful fire took place in this town on Tuesday night last, at the mill of Messrs. Hazleden and Co., Spa-lane, which involved the destruction of property to the amount of £5000, which was fortunately insured. Happily no lives were lost.

BRISTOL.—A special meeting of the Great Western Steam-ship Company was held at the offices of the company in Bristol, last week, Robert Bright, Esq., in the chair, when it was resolved that the vessels of the company should resume her station in the spring, unless in the meantime she could be advantageously sold; that the Great Britain should be completed and fitted out for sea; and that a loan of 20,000*l.* should be raised for that purpose. The reporters for the newspaper were excluded from the meeting.

During the past week dividends have been declared upon the separate estates of Daniel Wade Acraman of 2*s.* in the pound, and of William Edward Acraman and Alfred John Acraman of 6*d.* each in the pound. The sum of £8000, the purchase-money of the pictures of Mr. D. W. Acraman, remains in the hands of the assignees, till the superior Court shall have decided whether it belongs to his private estate or to the estate of Mr. W. E. Acraman.

COCKERMOUTH.—The report which was prevalent last week, to the effect that Mr. Horsman intended to resign the representation of this borough, turns out to be wholly unfounded.

DOVER.—On Friday week the Duke of Wellington presided as Lord Warden of the Cinque Ports, at the annual Harbour Sessions, for the transaction of business connected with the harbours and districts under the control of that court. It was four o'clock before the court rose. In the evening the noble warden and assistants dined together, as is customary every year, at the Ship Hotel, the entertainment being of a sumptuous description. The Earl of Guildford, the Right Hon. Sir Edward Knatchbull, and Sir Brook Bridges, Bart., were among the guests. The party broke up about eleven, shortly after the duke had retired.

HULL.—There has been a considerable increase in the importations of foreign cattle to the port of Hull, during the past week, by the steam-vessels from Hamburg. The William Darley arrived on Sunday, with twenty of the finest imported here since the opening of the trade, the passage having been made in less than thirty hours from land; and the cattle being all comfortably housed on deck, they were landed in good condition. On the following day the Hamburg arrived with thirty-three oxen and two cows; as did also the Rob Roy, bringing eighteen oxen. The Emerald Isle, on the same day, brought eight cows and two calves from Rotterdam. There have been also two arrivals in foreign galliots; the Bernard en Elise, with thirty horned cattle, from Thisted, and the Christiana Maria, from Harlingen, with thirty-seven pigs, and upwards of four hundred geese and ducks.

A DOTHEBOYS HALL.—Four youths, very indifferently attired, applied at the Hull police-office on Saturday last, for assistance to enable them to get to London. On being questioned by the Magistrate, they stated that they had run away from school, at Winton, near Kirkby Stephen, in Westmoreland, kept by Mr. Twycross, in consequence of ill-treatment. They all stated that they were not half fed, nor allowed to write to their friends, except what the master dictated. They had walked from Winton to Selby, and thence had taken the packet to this town. One shilling and sixpence was the whole sum they could muster on setting out upon their journey, but they had received assistance from the authorities of several places at which they halted. A lodging-house keeper said she had kept the applicants for three nights; they had remained in the house during the day, and had conducted themselves in an orderly manner. She thought that half-a-crown would not more than compensate her for what she had done for the lads. The Mayor ordered 3*s.* to be given her from the poor-box. The Magistrates then subscribed towards defraying the expenses of the youths to London, and the deficiency to be provided from the poor-box. The Mayor also said he would go down to the agents for the London packet which was to sail that afternoon, and make the best bargain he could for their passage. The boys had gone by way of Ripon.

LEAMINGTON.—The Rev. Dr. Hampden, Regius Professor of Divinity at Oxford, who is staying at Leamington, preached on Sunday last to crowded congregations at Milverton Chapel in the morning, and St. Mary's Church in the afternoon, in aid of the funds of the Church Missionary Society, which received a very considerable augmentation after the learned professor's eloquent discourse.

The Rev. Dr. and Lady Louisa Marsh left Lansdowne House, on a visit to the Marquis of Anglesey, at Beaudesert.

The latest arrivals include Viscount and Viscountess Milton, Viscountess Valentia, Lady Stafford, the Bishop of Limerick, Mr. and the Hon. Mrs. Henegage, Dowager Lady Langford, Lady Young and family, Sir James Baird, Bart., Sir Thomas and Lady Gooch, Sir Robert and Lady Adair, Dowager Lady Kinloch, Sir James and Lady Williams, the Hon. Lady Champagne, Major-Gen. Riddell, Captain Ramsay, Captain Kinloch, Captain Crosbie, Dr. and Mrs. Pearson and family, the Rev. Frederick and Mrs. Stuart, Mr. and Mrs. Ambrose Isted, Mr. and the Misses Backhouse, &c.

LIVERPOOL.—The new Bankruptcy Act having come into operation on Saturday last, at eleven o'clock on that day the Court for the Liverpool district was formally opened, in the grand jury-room of the Sessions House, before the Commissioners, Mr. Shortt, Q.C., and Mr. Charles Phillips, Q.C., and afterwards adjourned until Monday next, the 21st inst.

Daniel O'Connell, Esq., M.P., arrived at Liverpool on Tuesday night last, from Dublin, in order to be present at the annual dinner of the Catholic Benevolent Association, it being announced that he would take the chair.

MERTHYR.—A poor girl named Anne Rees, who acquired considerable notoriety some time since as a "female sailor," died at Merthyr a few days since, in consequence of injuries received by her clothes catching fire whilst asleep.

OXFORD.—Mr. Sheriff Hunt, of Oxford, was honoured with an interview by his Imperial Highness the Archduke Frederick of Austria on Sunday last, and was gratified with hearing from the Archduke a full account of his son Midshipman (now Lieutenant) Hunt's heroic conduct at Sidon; his Highness, with Major Maronivich (one of the suite), having been eye-witnesses of the gallant race between the English midshipman (Mr. Hunt, of her Majesty's ship Stromboli) and an Austrian officer, Signor Cuinto, to be the first to plant their respective country's colours on the walls of Sidon, and which was noticed in Commodore Napier's despatches at the time, as having been gained by the former, and for which he has since been so honourably promoted to a lieutenancy.

PLYMOUTH.—MYSTERIOUS CIRCUMSTANCE.—On Friday week, between six and seven o'clock in the evening, John Burt, a deaf and dumb lad, went to the Lambhay Point to observe the state of the weather, it being the intention of his master, the skipper of a trawler, to go to sea the next morning should the weather be favourable. After remaining there a short time, he returned in a very agitated state, and by his gestures and entreaties induced a boatman to go back with him to the Point, explaining by the way in a manner intelligible to those who know him that some person had jumped overboard. The boatman, however, could perceive no indication of such an event, and this caused still more distress to the poor boy. He afterwards informed his father, an honest fisherman, that while standing on the Point he observed a strange young man, about twenty years of age, in a retired part, apparently undoing until his pocket should be inverted. The stranger then took his watch from his waistcoat pocket, observed the time, replaced it, and, first gazing intently on the moon, thrust his hands firmly in his side pockets, ran down the slope, jumped on a low wall, and fell face downwards on the steep rocks, upon the edge of which the wall is built. The boy Burt immediately leaped upon the wall, and clambering down the rocks, went half into the water, and was just in time to seize the man by the collar of the coat. The suicide, whose forehead and cheeks were bleeding profusely, gnashed his teeth at his intended preserver, and endeavoured to compel him to desist from further his humane endeavours, lest his own life should be forfeited in the contest. The stranger sank near the rocks, and rose again out of reach, sank once more, and then disappeared. He was dressed in a peaked cap, with a leather strap beneath the chin, a short coat, and black trousers, and wore a silver guard to his watch. Boatmen have been since employed creeping for the body, but hitherto without success; and, from the inequality of the ground, it is not likely to be recovered until the tides fall, off.

STRATFORD-UPON-AVON.—On Tuesday morning a rick of straw belonging to and standing in a farm in the occupation of Mrs. Hannah Greensill, of Worley-town, in the parish of Crannock, Staffordshire, was maliciously set fire to and destroyed. A reward of 10*l.* is offered for the apprehension of the offender or offenders.

SOUTHWOLD.—As a salute was being fired from the corporation battery on the Gun-hill, on Wednesday week, in honour of the natal day of the Prince of Wales, one of the guns went off while the charge was being rammed down, when James Martin, aged 29, belonging to the Coast-guard, was unfortunately killed on the spot.

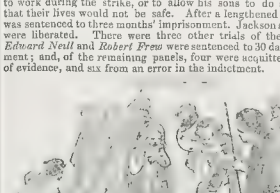
STOCKTON.—POISONING OF A FAMILY.—On Friday week the wife of a labouring man, named Prest, went into a druggist's shop in Stockton to purchase sixpenny worth of laudanum. On being questioned as to what use it was to be applied, she replied it was for a person who knew how to use it. When her husband went home in the evening he found all his family (his wife and three children) in profound sleep. With some difficulty he got his eldest daughter awakened, and suspecting that all was not right he called in medical aid. The stomach-pump and other means were used for a considerable time without effect, and about two o'clock on Saturday morning a little boy, nearly three years of age, expired in great agony. From the information obtained from the eldest child it was found that the unfortunate woman had mixed the laudanum with rum, a portion of which she herself took, and gave the remainder to her offspring. The poor woman, who has recovered from the effects of the poisonous draught, has since made several attempts to strangle herself. The other children are nearly recovered. An inquest was held over the deceased child, on Saturday, and the jury returned a verdict, "Died from the effect of laudanum administered by the mother, whilst in a fit of temporary insanity."

UXBRIDGE.—DREADFUL ACCIDENT.—On the afternoon of Saturday last an accident occurred in the neighbourhood of the village of Harefield, about five miles from the town of Uxbridge. It appears that, for some days, a number of labourers had been employed in excavating chalk in a pit near the village, for the purpose of its being burned into lime. In digging for that purpose it was necessary that a portion of the cliff should be undermined, which was done in the course of Saturday, and about four o'clock in the afternoon, while the men were still employed in completing the operation, a slip took place without any previous warning, and two of the workmen were buried under a cone of chalk, weighing, it is computed, upwards of twenty tons. Their names were William Barnes and John Taylor.

WARWICKSHIRE.—On Monday information reached the head-office of the metropolitan police that in the early part of the preceding week a barn, outbuilding, two large barley-ricks, bags of barley, a rick of hay, and numerous farming implements, all the property of Mr. Thomas Newbold, of Bulbenhall, in the county of Warwick, farmer, had been maliciously set on fire and consumed. A reward of 210 guineas is offered for the apprehension and conviction of the offenders; and the same reward, together with her Majesty's most gracious pardon, will be given to any one, not being the person who actually set fire to the premises, who will impeach his accomplice or accomplices.

SCOTLAND.

AYR.—Last week considerable excitement was observed amongst the large body of turn-out colliers, assembled in front of the County Buildings, awaiting the trial of the parties implicated in the late disturbances at Whitletts, which the yeomanry was called up the previous week to suppress. They were, however, in no respect disorderly. The first case called was that implicating Alexander Tinsey, William Jackson, and Elizabeth M'Clung or Frew, charged with having, on the night of the 28th of October last, entered the house of James Caddis, Garden-street Content, bankman in Mr. Gordon's employment, and threatening him, at the peril of his life, to continue to work during the strike, or to allow his sons to do so, otherwise that their lives would not be safe. After a lengthened trial, Tinsey was sentenced to three months' imprisonment. Jackson and M'Clung were liberated. There were three other trials of the same kind. Edward Neill and Robert Frew were sentenced to 30 days' imprisonment; and, of the remaining panels, four were acquitted from want of evidence, and six from an error in the indictment.



THE COURT AND HAUT TON.

Their Royal Highnesses the Duke and Duchess of Cambridge, and the Princess Augusta of Cambridge, visited the Duchess of Gloucester on Tuesday afternoon at Gloucester House, Park Lane. The Duke and Duchess of Cambridge were afterwards present at the performance in the Haymarket Theatre in the evening.

The Duke of Wellington gave a grand dinner on Wednesday evening at Apsley House to his Imperial Highness the Archduke Frederick of Austria, and the noblemen and gentlemen of his suite. Baron de Moncorvo, the Portuguese Minister; Baron de Cetto, the Bavarian Minister; M. Dedel, the Netherlands Minister; Baron Brunow, the Russian Minister; Count Kielmansegge, the Hanoverian Minister; the Earl of Aberdeen, and a select party were present to meet his Imperial Highness.

Lord Wharncliffe, Lord President of the Council, left town on Wednesday morning on a visit to Sir Robert Peel, at his seat, Drayton Manor, Staffordshire; also did Sir George Clerk.

ROYAL BETROTHMENT. The Carlsruhe Gazette of the 10th inst. announces officially the betrothment of the Princess Maria of Baden, daughter of the Grand Duchess Dowager Stephanie, to the Marquis of Douglas, son of the Duke of Hamilton, with the assent of the Grand Duke

On Tuesday the Countess of Blessington entertained at dinner the Duke de Grammont, the Comte de Grammont, the Earl of Chesterfield, Viscount Castlereagh, Sir Gardner Wilkinson, Mr. Landseer, Mr. Tasserence, &c.

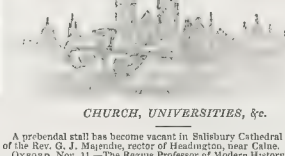
Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Gloucester entertained at dinner, on Friday, the 13th inst., their Royal Highnesses the Duke and Duchess of Cambridge, and the Princess Augusta of Cambridge, attended by Lady Augusta Somerset, Count Kielmansegge, Lady Charles Somerset, Sir Samuel Higgins, and the Hon. Captain and Mrs. Augustus Liddell.

The Duke and Duchess of Beaufort and the youthful Ladies Somerset, at the close of the hunting season, are expected to proceed on an extended continental tour.

Lord and Lady Canning are still on a visit to the Marquis and Marchioness of Waterford, at Curraghmore, and are expected to remain in Ireland until the end of the month.

PRINCE ALBERT OF PRUSSIA.—A Berlin letter of the 8th inst. in the Courrier Francais, says: There is much talk here of the rupture of the marriage between an august personage, a member of the Royal family, and his wife, the sister of the King of the Netherlands. The grave are various rumours as to the cause of this event, which has, unhappily, been rendered too popular by the indiscretion of some persons in Court. It is hoped that the affair may be arranged without further publicity, but that will be very difficult."

The Duke of Wellington left town on Thursday morning for his seat Strathfieldsaye.



CHURCH, UNIVERSITIES, &c.

A prebendal stall has become vacant in Salisbury Cathedral by the death of the Rev. G. J. Majendie, rector of Headington, near Caine.

OXFORD, Nov. 11.—The Regius Professor of Modern History, Dr. Cramer, has resigned the office of public orator in the university; and the Vice-Chancellor has fixed the 24th inst. for the choice of his successor. The electors are the members of convocation.

On Monday last the Archdeacon of Surrey (Wilberforce) held his annual visitation in the church of St. Saviour's, Southwark. After the usual service, and an appropriate sermon by the Rev. J. G. Weddell, minister of St. George's, Battersea, the archdeacon delivered his charge, which embraced the usual interesting topics.

ORDINATION.—At a general ordination, holden in the palace, Bromley, on Sunday morning last, by the Lord Bishop of Rochester, the following gentlemen were admitted into the holy order of the priesthood:—Of Oxford: Rev. Thomas Woodhouse, B.A., Balliol College, Oxford. Of Cambridge: Rev. John Young Hughes, B.A., St. Catharine's Hall; Rev. Samuel Dorn, B.A., St John's College; Rev. Charles Smart Caffin, B.A., Gonville and Caius College; Rev. George Kember, M.A., Queen's College.

The Rev. Thomas Robinson, M.A., Lord Almoner's Professor of Arabic in the University of Cambridge, and late Archdeacon of Madras, has been elected Morning Preacher of the Foundling Hospital.

The Arc bishop of York will hold an ordination at Bishopthorpe Palace on the 18th December.

DIOCESE OF LINCOLN.—The Rev. Michael Hutton, B.A., Curate of Saxby, Leicestershire, has been appointed to the rectory of Scotton, Rutlandshire.

The Rev. Robert Ainsworth, B.A., late assistant minister of St. Peter's Church, Walworth, has been appointed to the incumbency of Shillis, and Ludford Magna, Lincolnshire, on the presentation of the Bishop of Lincoln.

The Master and Fellows of St. John's College, Cambridge, have nominated the Rev. C. Colson to the vicarage of Great Hormead, Herts.

DIOCESE OF SALISBURY.—The rectory of Broughton, near Caine, Wilts, has fallen vacant by the death of the Rev. George John Majendie, clerk, B.D., the incumbent, who was also rural dean for the deanery of Avebury, and a prebendary canon of Salisbury Cathedral. There are four other prebendary canonries vacant in the above cathedral, at the disposal of the Lord Bishop of Salisbury, as well as the presentership of the cathedral, which latter dignitary has also had the void several months, by reason of the death of Dr. Fisher, the late master of the Charter-house School.

DIOCESE OF WORCESTER.—The Rev. Frederick Cowle, M.A., has been instituted to the vicarage of Leek Wootton, Worcestershire, on the nomination of Lord Leigh.

DIOCESE OF CARLISLE.—The Rev. S. Irton Fell, M.A., of Queen's College, Cambridge, incumbent of Marple, has been appointed by Samuel Irton, Esq., M.P., to the perpetual curacy of Irton, and the perpetual curacy of Brigg, both in the county of Cumberland.

The Archbishop of York will hold an ordination at Bishopthorpe Palace on the 18th December.

UNIVERSITY OF OXFORD.—The Hon. William George Grey, M.A., and the Rev. Hugh Evans, B.A., have been elected to fellowships in this university.

At a congregation held at Oxford on Thursday, Nov. 10, John Frederick Stanford, M.A., Christ College, Cambridge, was admitted ad eundem.

The Bishop of Gloucester and Bristol, Viscountess Beresford, Lady Mildred Hope, Marchioness of Lothian, Lady Forbes, Lord John Manners, and the Hon. Algernon Herbert have come forward with donations to the subscription-fund for the restoration of the Round Church at Cambridge, one of the most venerable and interesting monuments in that city.

OBITUARY.—On the 4th inst., the Rev. Thomas Brooksby, rector of West and South Hanningfield, Essex, and senior magistrate on the Chelmsford bench for 33 years. At Great Chart, Kent, in his 91st year, the Rev. Thomas Waite, D.C.L., rector of that place, for many years chaplain to his Royal Highness the Duke of Gloucester. The Rev. Joseph L'Oste, rector of Polsworth and Caster St. Edmund's, aged 79. The Rev. Wm. Thompson, perpetual curate of Halstock, Dorset, aged 61. At Axminster, aged 65, the Rev. Wm. Wilis. Aged 76, at Cottishall-hall, in the county of Norfolk, the Rev. James Ward, M.D., formerly fellow of Queen's College, Cambridge, and senior chaplain at the Presidency of Bengal. At Warwick, in the 37th year of his age, the Rev. Digby Michael Bourne, youngest son of the late Robert Bourne, M.D. In his 86th year, the Rev. John Eddy, M.A., 54 years vicar of Toddington, Gloucestershire, and 53 years rector of Whaddon, Wilts. The Rev. Samuel Pugh, of Brilsey vicarage, Herefordshire. Aged 80, the Rev. Thomas Colley, 43 years a clergyman in the diocese of Tuam.

EVERY BODY'S COLUMN.

AUTUMN.

(By the Author of "The Cathedral Bell," &c.)

The woods assume their robes of russet hue,
Amber'd, or brown'd, or sanguine'd, in the sun;
For flaming leaves the moisten'd ground bestrew;
The pheasant drops, and hunting is begun.
Again, the healthy ploughman turn the soil;
The threshers wield their cheerful-sounding flail;
The thatchers crown the stack, the hedgers toil,
And weighty hives for honey-ing is avail.
His early breadths the watchful farmer sows;
Fodder and fuel swell his teeming hoard;
Their hardier flowers the gardens still disclose,
And fruits that keep—now clear'd, and pick'd, and stor'd.
Cider and wine-press with their wealth o'erflow,
October ale is brew'd, and hearth-fires newly glow.

Peter Aretino, a native of Arezzo, who lived in the sixteenth century, was famous for his satirical writings, and so bold as to carry his invectives even against sovereigns. In an epitaph written for him by an Italian wit it is observed, that he satirized every one but his Maker, whom he spared only because he did not know him.

It is related in "Collins's Peerage," that a certain unmarried lady once dreamed of finding a nest containing seven young finches, which in the course of time was realised by her becoming the wife of a Mr. Finch, and the mother of seven children. From one of these seven descended the present Earl of Winchilsea, who still retains the surname of Finch.

When Sir Walter Scott visited Maria Edgeworth in Ireland, Mr. Lockhart tells us that he was mildly remarked by his illustrious relative for a remark he had made, and in the following words:—"I fear you have some very young ideas in your head. Are you not too apt to measure things by some reference to literature—to disbelieve that anybody can be worth much care who has no knowledge of that sort of thing, or taste for it? God help us! what a poor world this would be if that were the true doctrine! I have read books enough, and conversed with enough of eminent and splendidly cultivated minds, in my time, but I assure you I have heard higher sentiments from the lips of poor uneducated men and women, when every-day sport of pure yet gentle heroism under difficulties and afflictions, or speaking their simple thoughts as to circumstances in the lot of friends and neighbours, than I ever yet met with out of the pages of the Bible. We shall never learn to feel and respect our real calling and destiny, unless we have taught ourselves to consider every thing as trivial in comparison with the education of the heart." Thus wisely, and thus kindly, did this good great man ever speak when the homely family of mankind was his theme; and yet he was not without his sore trials, arising out of popular virtues, and prejudice, and ignorance, but he knew that, when the heart was right, the knowing more or less was of comparatively little consequence.

ECLIPSES, 1843.

In the year 1843 there will be two eclipses of the sun and one of the moon, the latter only of which will be visible to these parts. This eclipse will be a partial one, and will occur on Wednesday the 6th of December

CHINESE SUPERSTITION.

It is one of the popular errors of China, that courage is in proportion to the quantity of gall in the gall bladder; and the common expression for saying a man is destitute of courage is to say he has no gall. A bully, and a swaggerer will excuse an act of cowardice by asking if you think he has got a gall bladder as big as a firkin. They also imagine that they can increase the quantity of gall in their own system by eating the gall of another. The executioner steeps rice in the gall of the criminal, which he sells in grains. This does not seem to be a superstition peculiar to the Chinese, for Shakspere makes Hamlet say—

"It cannot be but I am pigeon liver'd,
And lack gall to make oppression bitter:
Or ere this I should have fatted all the region kites
With this slave's offal."

PRODUCTIVE LABOUR

A countryman sowing his field, two poet fellows riding that way, one of them called to him with an insolent air, "Well, honest fellow, it is your business to sow, but we reap the fruit of your labours." To which the countryman replied, raising his hand to his neck, "Very likely you will, for I be sowing hemp."

Died lately, aged 108, at Rumney Iron Works, Mrs. Joyce Jones, regretted by all who knew her. She was the mother, grandmother, great-grandmother, and great-great-grandmother of 105 children. Her youngest son is living, and is 73 years old. She lived 80 years in Dowlais, the six last years of which in the grand-daughter, Mrs. Watson, Merrd Castle Inn, Rumney. This extraordinary woman lived in four Kings' and one Queen's reign. She possessed her faculties and an extraordinary memory to the last, and used to amuse and instruct the juvenile branches of her family with the then chronicled history of the American outbreak, the French revolution, the glories and deeds of Wolfe, Washington, Bonaparte, Nelson, and Wellington.

AUSTRIA AND POLAND.

Austria is decidedly the least criminal of the powers among whom Poland was divided. In the first place, it was not without hesitation and reluctance that she acceded to the nefarious project. Secondly, she had nothing to do with the second partition, and, thirdly, at the Congress of Vienna, she declared herself ready to renounce her share of that spoil, and joined in the efforts made by Lord Castlereagh and Talleyrand to obtain the re-establishment of Polish nationality. It is difficult to say which of the two other powers was the more criminal. If the idea of the dismemberment did not originate with Frederic the Great, it was at least the first that itself fell from the lips of Catherine, Frederic at least spake upon that hint to others, whereas Catherine framed that hypothesis into a practical scheme of partition, urged it through his brother Prince Henry, then resident at St. Petersburg, upon the Russian Empress; and when the latter, with more regard for the sense of the iniquity, and a delicacy in no unscrupulous a person, to what unaccountable, refused to be the first to suggest the plan to the Austrian Court, himself undertook that respectable and honourable office. The part played by Prussia under Frederic William II. in the second partition was still more base than before. She and encouraged the Poles to reform their constitution, in opposition to the views of Russia; she proffered them her alliance, pressed them subsidies; abandoned them, leagued against them, and despoiled them. Fraser's Magazine.

THE FIRST DAY OF TERM

John Whiddon, a Justice of the King's Bench in the first year of Queen Mary, was the first of the Judges who rode to Westminster hall on a horse, for before that time, in the days of the Plantagenets and the Judges of their Courts, gives a description of the manner in which Walsey rode to Westminster hall, on his mule, "trapped all in crimson velvet, with a saddle of the same, and gilt stirrups." The costumes of the Judges in ancient times having been very various, for certainly and uniformity in them there was a solemn decree and rule made by a little Judges of the Courts at Westminster, bearing date the 4th June, 1638. It was subscribed by all the Judges of those Courts, appointing what robes they should thereforth use, and at what times. As a further item of antiquated legal gossip, it may be mentioned that in the olden times, even the height of a gentleman's beard was regulated by statute. In a Parliament of the Inner Temple (that is, a meeting of the members of that Inn), held 3rd May, 1st and 2nd Philip and Mary, there was a decree made that no fellow of that house should wear his beard above three weeks' growth, upon pain of twenty shillings forfeiture. Like all species of liberty, the liberty of the bar is greater in the present day than in those "good old times."

PARIS OCCUPIED BY THE ALLIES IN 1814.

